7. Ye shall ask what ye will—They who abide in Christ, keeping His commandments and constantly partaking of His nature, desire nothing which is not in His will to bestow, and their asking is always in full submission to His will. It shall be done unto you—Through abiding in Christ, they have the assurance of answered prayers. 8. Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit—The earthly husbandman rejoices when His vineyard produces good fruit in abundance, and he naturally feels that his skill and labor are being rewarded. The Lord is glorified in the abundant spiritual fruit which Christians bear. He manifests His pleasure by giving His approval to them. So shall ye be my disciples—Abiding in Christ and bearing much fruit are conditions of discipleship. These conditions are not to be thought of as hard. They are not. The natural result of being vitally joined to Christ is the bringing forth of much fruit. An infinite honor is conferred upon us when Jesus accepts us as His disciples. 9. As the Father hath loved me, so have I loved you—This is a marvelous statement of the measure and the quality of Christ's love for us. It is true, warm, personal, seeking our best good, unfailing. When we wish to know how much Jesus loves us, let us remember how much the Father loves His only begotten Son.—Peloubet. There can be no stronger expression of Christ's love for His followers than this. This should be a constant comfort to us, whatever may be the trial or perplexity from which we suffer. Continue ye in My love—"Abide ye in My love."—R. V. The same Greek word is used here as in v. 7.

III. Kinds of fruit (vs. 10-16). 10. If ye keep my commandments—This is a condition of continuing in Christ's love. Jesus continues to use the relation which exists between the Father and himself to illustrate the relation existing between himself and his disciples. Jesus was submissive to the Father. It was his meat and drink to do his will. It must be the first duty of the disciples to be fully and constantly obedient to Christ's commands. 11. These things have I spoken—Jesus had a definite purpose in using the illustration of the vine and the branches and enlarging upon it. This verse is the conclusion of the illustration. That my joy might remain in you—He desired that his disciples should have constantly the same joy in doing his will that he himself had in doing his Father's will. Although within a few hours of the cross, yet Jesus speaks of his joy. His was the joy that came as a result of complete self-abandonment for the good of others. It was the joy of perfect faith in God and loving communion with him, and the disciples were to have the same kind of joy. Might be full—Outward circumstances would not favor the fulness of joy, but the joy was to abide in them. This joy was to increase with the years. This was to be a blessed fruit of abiding in Jesus. No earthly joy is at all comparable with it. 12. That ye love one another, as I have loved you—Jesus loves his followers as the Father loves him, and they are to love one another in the same manner, up to the measure of their ability to love. 13. Greater love hath no man than this, etc. In rare instances men have laid down their lives for the sake of their friends and out of love for them. The value of the thing sacrificed is the measure of the [illegible]. Jesus laid down his life for his [illegible]. 14-16. The friends of Jesus are they who keep his commandments. He is taking his disciples into the intimate relations of friends, exalting them from the condition of servants.

Questions.—On what occasion did Jesus give the discourse upon the vine and the branches? Who are represented by the vine? Who by the branches? What is the purpose of pruning? How does this process apply to Christ's disciples? What are the conditions of fruitfulness? What course is taken with those who do not abide in Christ? What fruits do Christians bear? What is the measure of Christ's love for his followers?

PRACTICAL SURVEY.

Topic.—Christian Identity.

I. Obtained by union with Christ.

II. Distinguished by Christlikeness.

I. Obtained by union with Christ. The Master's discourse had relation to the new position of the disciples which would be caused by his departure. They were in danger of unfaithfulness and apostasy. Jesus sought to fortify them. He set forth clearly by illustration the genuineness of the permanent spiritual union between himself and them which could be severed only by their failure to comply with the conditions he taught them. One of the fruits of this union with Christ would be in their lives patience under discipline; another, the spirit of dependence upon Christ. That sense of dependence would in no way paralyze human energy, but rather become the source of its power. Apart from Christ they would be like unto dead branches. "I am the vine" was a general truth. "Ye are the branches" brought each individual disciple into connection with that truth. Any attempt to rely upon themselves meant total failure. Union with Christ was the animating principle of all true obedience, giving spiritual life and vigor to the soul, and quickening all its powers into activity for the glory of God. Jesus declared himself to be the object of his Father's love and to be able to love as God loves. In that affection he exhorted his disciples to abide. Jesus existed as man to reveal the full glory of eternal love. It was his commandment to his disciples to imitate his love. He stamped it with his authority. It was an appeal to their gratitude and affection. This last and great commandment. He had treated them as friends, by unfolding to them, as far as they were capable of apprehending it, the whole truth respecting the wonderful communication which he had come from heaven to make and the wonderful work he had come to earth to perform in the economy of salvation. Jesus had selected and appointed them to a great, important, salutary work, their success in which was secured in answer to believing prayer. In the singular blending of friendship and command there were involved absolute submission and closest friendship. As the season of separation drew near, Jesus sought to set before his disciples the responsibilities and opportunities of friendship. He pointed out to them the source of happiness and revealed to them by precept and example the path of piety and the only path of real joy. His own joy was fulfilled in that of his disciples as theirs must be in their Master's. The perfection of their joy was Jesus' chief concern. Their greatest good was inseparably connected with his highest glory.

II. Distinguished by Christlikeness. The Christian type of character is one rooted in the divine love. Leaving his little flock in the world, Jesus gave them no other instructions for their mutual relationship than to love one another as he had loved them. Brotherly love has the highest service, realizes the highest good. It unites Christ's disciples, honors him and blesses the world with the most beneficent influences. Communion with Christ secures Christian conduct. His "words" must abide as principles of life and action. When Jesus said to his disciples, "Go and bear fruit," or, "Go and reproduce your Master's life in your own," he laid hold of two great forces that mould all human society, influence and example. A Christlike life is the strongest manifestation of God to the world. It is the greatest human influence to bring men near to God. Not by disciplining others so much as developing in themselves more and more the distinctively Christian qualities, could the disciples bear fruit and thereby glorify God. The sight of the highest form of manhood is the instrument by which the world shall be converted, by the grace, beauty, variety and ripeness of Christian character. Fruitfulness in their lives was to consist in a holy character and life and in benevolent and Christlike labors for the welfare of their fellow men. Pruning is one of the methods of culture for all fruitful disciples. It includes all the means that are necessary for development.—T. R. A.

* * *

WAR HAS SERIOUS EFFECT ON TEA MARKETS.

Although the far-reaching influences of the war have added enormously to the cost of tea, the recent advance of five cents a pound in the price of "SALADA" only means that you will now get eight cups for a cent instead of nine, and then you get that unique flavor, absolutely unchanged.

* * *

"The great problem in this country," said the grimly serious citizen, "is the question of supply and demand." "That's right," replied the fan; "every year I'm scared for fear there won't be enough world series tickets to go 'round."—Washington Star.

SUNDAY AT HOME

EXAMPLE.

We scatter seeds with careless hand,
And dream we ne'er shall see them more;
But for a thousand years,
Their fruit appears,
In weeds that mar the land,
Or healthful store.

The deeds we do, the words we say,
Into still air they seem to fleet,
We count them ever past;
But they shall last—
In the dread judgment they
And we shall meet!

I charge thee by the years gone by,
For the love's sake of brethren dear,
Keep thou the one true way,
In work and play,
Lest in that world their cry
Of woe thou hear.
—John Keble.

I KNOW THAT MY REDEEMER LIVETH.

If, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son, much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by his life. This man, because he continueth ever, hath an unchangeable priesthood. Wherefore he is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them.

Because I live, ye shall live also. If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable. But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept.

The Redeemer shall come to Zion, and unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob, saith the Lord. We have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his grace. Ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, from your vain conversation received by tradition from your fathers; but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot.

VESUVIUS AND THE CATACOMBS.

In the field of mechanics there are two kinds of power, latent and kinetic. Vesuvius illustrates the latent, the catacombs the kinetic. One is explosive, the other is attractive. Until the year A. D. 79 the volcanic origin of Vesuvius was unsuspected. On the 24th September of that year an eruption began, with the sudden appearance of an immense black cloud, which rose from the mountain, accompanied by an explosion that blew off the top and rained a mass of ashes, lapilli and mud on the towns and cities of that region. Pompeii was buried under twenty feet of ashes, and Herculaneum was covered by a torrent of mud. Three subsequent eruptions have been terrible, and in 472 ashes were carried as far as Constantinople. Vesuvius is always burning, but only occasionally in eruption. In the forties the present writer had the privilege to see it daily for a month—in the day a cloud hung over it, in the night a shaft of fire like a mighty lance pierced the heavens, leaving one to wonder as to the reserve of fire down below.

And now let us take the reader a little further inland, to Rome, the old city of many memories. It may take some searching among the tangled brush to find the mouth of the cave, the rocky vestibule to these silent halls where the Christians hid from the fierce persecution of bloodthirsty men. Here they found cover, they worshipped, they buried their dead. The monuments may be seen, the inscriptions may be read today. "She rests in peace." "He sleeps in Jesus." Rest your tired feet and listen; there comes up, not the rumblings, the detonations of Vesuvius, but the throbbings of a mighty heart, which beats to the music of the morning stars. The gunpowder and glory men will scatter your bones, the sweet kinetic, spiritual impulse will put you in contact with the heart of Divine Fatherhood.

This power is independent of time and numbers and human hostility; independent of principalities and powers and spiritual wickedness in high places. This power is silent, invisible, and constant, it is organic, total, vital, evangelical. It does not always mean the form of symmetry, but it carries the spirit of reconciliation. It transcends the vicissitudes of time, the dislocations of history, the frailties of even prophets, and the infidelity of the chosen race. It is quiet, it means God's word to man, not spoken, but done, by a Saviour who spoke very little of it, and less and less as He drew near to the doing of it. It means the

Matchless deed achieved,
Determined, dared, and done.

This power goes forth conquering and to conquer. "Jesus conquers the world not so much by what He said, divine as that is, but by what He was. Others had uttered beforehand almost His teaching, but He exhibited to man a soul greater than all teachers, a soul whose divine sweetness and power have been the main human uplift through all these later ages."

H. T. Miller.

* * *

Bravery Analysed

The discussion on courage, as developed by the war and as manifested by individual soldiers under fire, has drawn some interesting contributions from Dr. Charles Richet, of the French Institute.

Dr. Richet is of the opinion that fear and courage must be considered separately; that the former exists in certain temperaments alongside the latter; that a man may be unable to control the terrifying effect of a dangerous situation upon his physical faculties and yet stand his ground in the face of almost certain death through the exercise of his will. These men he considers the bravest of all.

Considering the whole war, taking into account the atrocious features that have developed here and there, and with all allowance made for occasional weaknesses, Dr. Richet considers that the soldiers have shown heroism which justifies great pride on the part of the present generation, in spite of the belief before the great conflict that intellectual development with progress in science, letters and arts, while ennobling the mind, had diminished personal courage.

The question was frequently discussed as to whether the delicate and subtle culture of later years was not going to produce a tame spirited and effeminate generation, preferring well-being to arduous effort, and incapable of comprehending the beauty of sacrifice. It is exactly the contrary that has been demonstrated, according to Dr. Richet; the most cultivated and refined of the young men of France and Great Britain have been those who have shown the greatest bravery.

Never, even among the heroes of antiquity, in the time of Leonidas, Spartacus or Hannibal, according to Dr. Richet, was there seen so much of this kind of abnegation and so much tranquil self-sacrifice, supreme courage, as in the present conflict.

As to the men who are naturally brave and take supreme risks without requiring an effort of the will to overcome fear, Dr. Richet gives different reasons, the first of which is that some of them do not believe in danger; they imagine that they are invulnerable—that they have a lucky star; others are surrounded by a sort of optimistic fatality that gives them a feeling of security. In other cases those naturally brave men, even when they believe in danger, are not intimidated by it, because they have in their own minds already made the sacrifice of their life; once that conclusion reached, to die or to be wounded is something that does not torment them.

Others, and perhaps the great majority, are neither those indifferent to death nor those who believe in their lucky-star; they are the men who see before them other more powerful motives than that of death, such as: the Fatherland, sense of duty, of honor, renown of the regiment, ambition to earn praise or promotion, pride at being admired by one's comrades, and shame at being taken for a coward. In nearly all these cases the idea of death and danger disappears and the soldier is brave without effort. He forgets every risk he is taking in the presence of the image that he has in his mind.

In the constant habit of bravery all notion of danger finally disappears, as in the case of aviators, most of whom the first time they are in the air have a sensation of fear in spite of all reasoning. After a certain number of ascensions the physical manifestations of apprehension disappear: to be transported in the air by the speed of the motor seems to them to be the simplest thing possible, and certain pilots have declared that they felt themselves in greater safety seated in their aeroplanes in the air than when riding in a motor car.

The hardened [illegible] of African campaigns, habituated to all the risks of war, were naturally more stolid under fire than young recruits who had seen nothing of military life but the barracks and the manoeuvres, and yet, according to the Abbe Moreaux, even these seasoned men, in the presence of the new and formidable dangers of scientific warfare, showed no more fortitude than the young recruits who had had only a few months of preparation before facing the enemy.

* * *

What Salonika Expedition Has Achieved in War

Paris, France.—Writing in La Victoire, M. Andre Cheradame has taken the opportunity provided by the capture of Bagdad to insist upon the importance of the Salonika expedition, which alone, he declares, has rendered possible the success of the British in Mesopotamia.

For anyone whose eyes are not sealed, he writes, it is clear that if the British have been able to take Bagdad it is because the Allies are at Salonika, and because our presence there has necessitated the retention of a considerable portion of the Turkish effectives in the Balkans. The taking of Bagdad is, therefore, a fresh demonstration of the usefulness of the Salonika expedition. So useful is it that despite the [illegible] errors of [illegible] committed, and although the benefit realized from the Balkan front is very slight in comparison with what it might have been—since if we had made the Salonika-Belgrade thrust in time and in the condition desired the war would have been over long ago—the presence of the Allies in Macedonia still has numerous advantages.

In order to [illegible] these [illegible] on the eve of the great military events of 1917 let us suppose for a moment, for the sake of argument, the evacuation of Salonika to have been effected: a step of which, of course, there can be no serious question. In that case, then, a successful Roumanian-Russian offensive by way of Roumania would be almost impossible. Without Salonika, as Admiral Fournier recently explained to Le Matin, Greece would become an [illegible] military redoubt and a naval base of incomputable strength, especially for offensive operations on the part of numerous flotillas of submarines. "The Mediterranean, in fact, would be entirely untenable for the navies and the commerce of the Allies. As for the Serbians and Roumanians, the evacuation of Salonika would entitle them to consider themselves abandoned and betrayed. What [illegible] regards the Italians the abandonment of the Balkans [illegible] their hopes of a part of the heritage of Turkey. Supposing, then, that Berlin should offer, as she probably would do, the Trentino, temporarily at least, to the Government at Rome, in return for leaving the coalition, it would not be the official Socialists of Italy and the Giolittians who would oppose a bargain of that kind.

Now these diverse political consequences upon the evacuation of Salonika would be [illegible] at the same time, for they [illegible] would entail for the Entente the loss or at least a considerable diminution of the Roumanian, Serbian and Italian effectives which now, by virtue of their [illegible] in Central Europe, are preventing the Germans from concentrating all their available effectives on the western front alone.

On the other hand, it is certain that no mistake would be made strategically, not only by remaining at Salonika, but by reinforcing the Balkan front. If the Allies create a great offensive in the west, the morale of the Turco-Bulgarian-German troops in the Balkans will be profoundly impaired, especially after the taking of Bagdad. Then an offensive to the north of Salonika, combined with a Russian-Roumanian attack on the Danube, might develop rapidly with enormous results; hence it would be necessary to have the means for that offensive accumulated beforehand along the Monastir lines. Since, however, in war everything must be foreseen, it may be argued that if our offensive in the west did not yield the results expected, our presence in the Balkans, in very solid force, would diminish the moral importance of the check thus experienced and would continue to prevent the enemy from concentrating all his Balkan [illegible] against the west.

Finally we must at all costs prevent the [illegible] offensive that the Germans are preparing against Russia. It is [illegible] for our allies, but it is also [illegible] to our own interest, for [illegible] the Russians it will be our turn. Now very heavy pressure in the region of Monastir alone can upset von Hindenburg's plans against Russia. In short, as M. de Chappedelaine, a Deputy who recently returned from Salonika, has rightly declared, "the eastern front is still vulnerable; despite the time lost we should profit [illegible] the [illegible] in his armor."

Bagdad is [illegible], M. Cheradame [illegible] a very important [illegible] Salonika has [illegible] values, but the chief of these [illegible] Salonika permits of reaching Belgrade, the strategic centre of the world war. When the Allies [illegible] at Belgrade then, indeed, Pan-Germanism will not only have been stabbed, but cut in two and the integral defeat of the Germans will be imminent.

HAD WEAK HEAR

COULD NOT WORK

COULD NOT SLEEP.

Many women are kept in a state of fear of death, become weak, worn and miserable and are unable to attend to their household, social or business duties, on account of the unnatural action of the heart.

To all such sufferers Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills give prompt and permanent relief.

Mrs. J. Day, 254 John Street South, Hamilton, Ont., writes: "I was so run down with a weak heart I could not even sweep the floor, nor could I sleep at night. I was so awfully sick sometimes I had to stay in bed all day as I was so weak. I used three and a half boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and I am a cured woman to-day, and as strong as anyone could be. I am doing my own housework, even my own washing. I doctored for over two years but got no help until I used your pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

* * *

MEZZOTINT.

In Great Demand Again—Its Origin Obscure.

[illegible]

* * *

Little Mildred—What does "B. A." stand for, mamma? Mamma—Bachelor of arts, my dear. Little Mildred—And what is a bachelor of arts, mamma? Mamma—Any bachelor who is trying to stay in the bachelor class, darling.—Indianapolis Star.

There is plenty of room at the top, but [illegible] would be to look around for the fire [illegible].

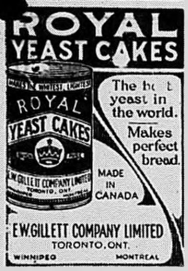
HAD INDIGESTION.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS CURED.

That grand old remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, has been on the market for over forty years, and we [illegible] any fear of contradiction, that there is not another medicine on the market today that can compare with it for the cure of all disturbances of the stomach.

Mrs. S. Tyron, [illegible], Ont., writes:—"I am writing to say that I have used your Burdock Blood Bitters. For a long period I suffered with indigestion, and nothing I took ever gave me any relief only for a short time. I bought several bottles of B. B. B. from our druggist, Mr. Gullis, and can honestly say I can eat or drink anything I want without experiencing any bad after-effects. I may say that it is the only medicine I ever got any relief from."

Burdock Blood Bitters is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.



ROYAL YEAST CAKES

The best yeast in the world.

Makes perfect bread.

MADE IN CANADA

E.W.GILLETT COMPANY LIMITED
TORONTO, ONT.
WINNIPEG MONTREAL

FARM AND GARDEN

GARDENING AND PLANTING HINTS.

As the season for planting garden stuff is drawing near—and as this year more than ever, owing to high cost of food, every available feet of land will be utilized for garden truck—it is well worth now to carefully study the conditions, soil, care, etc., needed to have good results.

Beans require a soil of known fertility. All varieties of beans, excepting the lima, can be set out as soon as the first danger of frost is passed. Lima beans need a warm soil, and must not be planted until there is settled warm weather. Wax beans should be thinned out to one foot apart; pole beans to three feet. Supports must be provided for the tall varieties. While cultivation must be shallow, at the same time it should be thorough.

Beet seed may be sown from early spring to the middle of late summer. As with beans, the cultivation must be shallow. Thin to nine inches.

Cabbage calls for plenty of moisture and organic plant food. It may be set in the hot bed and transplanted in the open after the soil has become warm. et plants from one and a half to two t apart.

The cultivation of the cauliflower is the same as with cabbage. The outside leaves should be tied over the top, as soon as large enough, to blanch the heart.

As soon as the ground can be worked, carrot seed may be sown. A sandy soil is best. Thin to nine inches. Cultivate shallow.

Plant cucumbers on hills, six feet apart, during the latter part of May. They can be started under glass. Fertilize soil around the hill.

A rich, sandy soil is best for egg- Start in hotbeds. Transplant ing summer. Thin to two and a f or three feet. Cultivate as long possible.

ohlrabi seed may be sown in hot or in the open. Frequent tillage is ntial. Thin to about one foot.

ttuce may be forced under glass planted in the open early in spring. ility and cultivation required for t results. Thin to eight inches.

uskmelons do best in a light, rich n. Plant in open in warm weather. t in hills or drills. Thin to about feet. Fertilize in hills, leaving two nts in the hill. Continue cultiva until the vines become injured.

nions need a rich soil, well supplied h humus. Grown from seed or sets, ated in open ground, or transplant from hotbeds about middle of April. b and cultivate freely.

Sow parsley seed early in spring. n to six or eight inches. A moist tile soil is best.

Sow parsnip seed early in spring, as e plant needs a whole season to ature. Light soils are best. Thin to out seven inches.

For best results, sow pea seed early. cool and moist soil, with plenty humus, is required. A fall crop may planted in August. Plant seed five six inches deep; cover an inch or wo at a time. Tall varieties have to supported.

Pepper seed need a soil that is warm, ow, moist and fertile. Do not plant fore the weather is positively warm. ow plants about one and one-half et apart.

Rhubarb and rutabaga; same as lrabi.

Spinach needs a soil that is moist fertile, with plenty of organic ter in it. Give constant cultivation. Thin to six inches.

Start squash under glass, or plant in open hills in warm weather. Thin to two or three plants to the hill. Cultivate as for cucumbers. Space hills six or seven feet apart.

Sow sweet corn in drills. Thin to 10 or 12 inches. Cultivate as for field corn.

Tomatoes need warm weather. Start under glass, or indoors and set out about June 1. This plant thrives on a variety of soils. Space at about three feet in row. Clean cultivation required.

Turnips do best in a soil that is st, moist and fertile. Sow in early ing or late summer. Thin to five inches. Cultivate reasonably.

Watermelons need warm weather, a soil that is sandy and well supplied with humus. Apply fertilizer to the hill. Cultivate same as for muskmelons. Space the hills at about six apart.

FARM NEWS AND VIEWS.

It may be lime instead of more fertilizer that your timothy needs. Test the soil.

The Japanese plum tree should be shaped like the peach. Other plums, apples and pears should be formed as follows: If the tree is an unbranched one-year old, having a single whip, simply shorten the whip two and a half or three feet in height. If the tree is well branched, cut out its central leader above the branching system to give an open centre. Shorten back the branches which remain one-third to one-half their former length.

An experienced horseman says that horses should be watered previous to feeding. There is a difference of opinion so far as this practice is concerned, but it stands to reason that since water does not require digestion, it would be much better to let them have their drinking water previous to feeding, and thus enable the digestive system to work more leisurely in preparing the grain and roughage for assimilation.

Cream which has the proper ferment in the morning may have quite another flavor in the afternoon. Churn when the cream is ready. Acids which produce fine flavors are short lived.

The man who has perfect patience with his horse is a rare specimen of humanity. Few of us have patience enough but that we forget at times, lose our temper and abuse a poor, dumb brute. The young horse you may be trying to teach sometimes needs to be shown, and it requires much patience. The man who gets his temper up at once and goes at it rough will always come out loser in the game.

If the milk is bitter when it comes from the cow, the trouble is generally with the feed, perhaps old dry weeds of the winter pasture. Or it may be the cow is expected to be fresh soon, and needs to be turned dry. However, if the milk turns bitter after it stands a day or two, which is usually the case, it is caused by bacteria. Because it is so cold, the milk turns bitter instead of souring. The remedy is to clean up—scald every milk vessel and see that no dirt gets in the milk. If you don't have a "starter" of bacteria in the milk it certainly will not turn bitter.

For oats the Connecticut station advises the following: Apply before sowing one or two tons of ground limestone, according to the condition of the soil, and 300 to 400 pounds of acid phosphate per acre. This application is for land that has received an application of manure during the previous season. On the soils that are not so good, make the following applications: One to two tons of ground limestone, 250 pounds of acid phosphate.

As a top dressing for grass the following is recommended by the Connecticut experiment station. One hundred pounds of nitrate of soda, 200 pounds of acid phosphate to the acre. If sod is nearly all timothy, more nitrate and less acid phosphate can be used.

Currant worms can be kept in check by a thorough spraying, as soon as they appear, with Bordeaux mixture containing from two to three pounds of arsenate of lead to 50 gallons of the mixture.

Good, unbleached hardwood ashes contain from 4 to 5 per cent. of potash and 30 per cent. of lime, and are the only means the farmers have of obtaining potash for the needs of their crops, since the war prevents importations of potash salts from Germany.

Farmers who burn wood in their stoves should carefully save all the ashes, protecting them from the weather, and secure from whatever source possible on the farm all the ashes that can be obtained. Brush heaps, stumps and all waste materials should be burned and the ashes utilized.

RAILROADS ARE MANUFACTURERS

A recent issue of The Way-Bill, published by the Traffic Club of Chicago, contains the following concise but pointed exposition of the American transportation problem, which seems to apply equally well to Canadian railways. "Railroads are manufacturers. It is a commodity in which they specialize. It is the only one they produce. There are some who insist that theirs is a 'service' and not a commodity. Whichever you choose to call it, it is made by the railway company out of raw materials and labor. The raw materials, which, through competent management and labor, are fashioned into transportation, are roadbeds, rails, ties, cars, locomotives, machinery, general supplies and terminal facilities. For fifteen years the cost of all these raw materials, as well as of labor, has been steadily advancing, and it is still rising. For fifteen years the price at which railroads have been compelled to sell their transportation has remained practically the same. There have been increases here and there, but, generally speaking, rates have not risen much above the level of fifteen years ago. A box car fifteen years ago, cost about $500. To-day it costs, approximately, $2,000. The rate on grain carried in the box car from Chicago to New York has decreased. This illustration can be multiplied by tens of thousands. In spite of the increased cost of producing transportation, do we expect the railroads to furnish not only the same, but better quality, and more of it, at rates which have not been allowed to keep pace with business development? It can't be done."—Railway Age Gazette.

◆◆◆

Kiddie Koats

Pleats.
Silk barrels.
Long lines, too.
Large collars.
Hooded collars.
Tasselled collars.
Belts and sashes.
Novelty and straight-away pockets.

◆◆◆

Tired Being Pleasant.

Virginia, a debutante, came in from a month's visit to friends. Dropping into a chair she sighed in satisfaction and involuntarily exclaimed, "Oh, I am so glad to be at home."

Her sister looked up inquiringly.

"Didn't you have a good time, Gin?"

"A good time! Yes," she responded, "a glorious time, but I am so tired having to be pleasant."—Judge

NERVOUS DISEASES IN THE SPRING

CURED BY TONING THE BLOOD AND STRENGTHENING THE NERVES.

It is the opinion of the best medical authorities, after long observation, that nervous diseases are more common and more serious in the spring than at any other time of the year. Vital changes in the system after long winter months, may cause much more trouble than the familiar spring weakness and weariness from which most people suffer as the result of indoor life, in poorly ventilated and often overheated buildings. Official records prove that in April and May neuralgia, St. Vitus' dance, epilepsy and other forms of nerve troubles are at their worst, and that then, more than any other time, a blood-making, nerve-restoring tonic is needed.

The antiquated custom of taking purgatives in the spring is useless, for the system really needs strengthening, while purgatives only gallop through the bowels, leaving you weaker. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the best medicine, for they actually make the new, rich, red blood that feeds the starved nerves, and thus cure the many forms of nervous disorders. They cure also such other forms of spring troubles as headaches, poor appetite, weakness in the limbs, as well as remove unsightly pimples and eruptions. In fact they unfailingly bring new health and strength to weak, tired and depressed men, women and children.

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

◆◆◆

BRITAIN'S EFFORT HISTORY'S MARVEL

One of the most eloquent tributes paid by a neutral writer to the part Great Britain is playing in the war is contained in a recent issue of the Boston News Bureau, which is reproduced in the Wall Street Journal. The writer says that all the wonders of the world, ancient or modern, fade when compared with what Britain is doing to-day. A commercial nation of not 50,000,000 people suddenly summoned to arms where no arms existed has produced a bigger army than history ever before recorded, and a war machine in Europe that for wealth of shell, explosive and war power is the amazement of the Germans. Britain has done in thirty months what Germany took thirty years to do, and she has done it more thoroughly and on a vaster scale. Without an English aeroplane engine capable of circling her own islands, she has vanquished the boasted Zeppelin and is the mistress of her own skies. With submarines by the hundred threatening her coast defences and her food supply, she has swept all oceans, bottling the German fleet, with the exception of an odd raider like the Moewe and the vessel that is now preying upon merchantmen in the South Atlantic. She has made, the writer says, "the English Channel her multiple-track ocean railway to France, with no loss by Zeppelin or submarine; fought in Africa, at the Canal, the Dardanelles, grappled with the Turk and the Bulgar, changed generals and admirals in command, changed Cabinets; fed the armies of France, maintained the armies and the Governments of Belgium and Serbia, and altogether advanced three thousand millions of dollars, or three times the national debt of the United States, to her war allies."

This is admittedly some considerable achievement for the so-called haberdashers of the Thames. While the United States has been trying to find out how to make military rifles in quantities and has unfilled orders for them amounting to hundreds of millions of dollars, England has been making rifles by the million for herself and her allies, cannon by the thousand, boats and coats by the million for herself and her allies, and what seems to the News Bureau writer most wonderful of all, she has done all this, is doing it, and is prepared to go on doing it while her manufacturing, her trade relations and her overseas commerce remain unimpaired. She has grabbed, he says, the trade of the world, so that her enemies are struggling on half rations with food, rubber and metal supplies cut off from the outside world except as new territory is taken. This combination of war and trade achievement by Great Britain was never before dreamed of. Two years ago nobody imagined that the war cost to Great Britain would be more than five or six billions; today it is twice that amount, and Great Britain is preparing to double it again.

Each achievement seems to be the supreme marvel until the next one is considered, but the greatest wealth of Britain after all was in her national spirit. The British lion was regarded as a mere money-bag of trade and a whelp of the seas before the war began. The Prussians could calculate upon the wealth of Britain in gold, take toll of her guns and her men. Outside of her wealth and her navy she was considered of no account. There was no way by which they could calculate upon the soul of the nation. Speaking of that soul which has been waked by the war, the News Bureau says: "It is fighting mad to-day and getting madder every minute. The stigma and insults to credit and honor from Washington only increase the resolve of her people and their faith in the invincibility of the righteous cause. For this they are willing to pledge everything in sacrifice for justice upon the altar of their battle lines. To what martyred souls come back this heritage of noble spirit only the historians of the future may attempt to answer." It is this spirit which is the deadliest enemy that Germany has to reckon with to-day.

But with the spirit and with the wealth that has staggered the world something yet remains, if an explanation of Britain's tremendous output of war munitions is to be given. Twenty-five years ago the machinery of England stamped out the coinage of many nations and made the cannons for many others. She was the ordnance maker of the world. Then Germany loomed as her rival, and by means of Government bounties, cheaper labor and English free trade she finally put many an English industry out of business, and only in the manufacture of her great naval guns did England retain her old supremacy. But the foundations in metal workers and the old factories in this business had not wholly disappeared when the war storm burst, and it was upon these almost forgotten foundations that British spirit and British wealth reared anew her old metal industries and transformed them into munition plants. This is not, as the writer says, a fight between armies. It is a struggle between nations, and in England every man, woman and child is devoted to only one object, the winning of the war.

The writer calls attention to the fact that this is not merely a struggle between the finance, the metal and the soldiers of two rival groups. It is also a struggle for economic existence in order that the fighting forces may be increased. Germany was the first of the belligerents to realize that war-power might be increased by cutting out luxuries; but England has grasped the fact and she is prepared to go as far as Germany or even farther in denying herself anything whose consumption might delay the end of the war. The British people are organizing in clothing, food, drink, the discarding of unnecessary comforts, increase in the energies and hours of labor and the mutual burdens of all forms of taxation. And the nation will be better for it after the war. As Lloyd George said, the nation has been in training. Whatever the war debt of the Empire is when the fight is over, it will be easily dealt with by people who have learned the lessons that the English people are learning and who will not forget the lessons; yet the writer quoted says that while the world is coming into a new civilization, the people in the United States appear to have little comprehension of the issues and the economic results that must inevitably flow therefrom.—Mail and Empire.

◆◆◆

IN GALLOWAY.

Trip Through Picturesque Moorland Country of Scotland.

Mile upon mile of moorland, broken only by steep and stony bluffs down whose rugged sides pour rivulets golden brown from their source among the peat mosses, and swelling in times of spate to raging torrents—this is Galloway. In the distance the Kirkcudbrightshire hills stand out in clear blue masses, varying in tone from moment to moment with the changing lights and shades. You can see the shadows of the clouds chasing the sunlight along the heather, changing its surface from clear amethyst to deep purple, while here and there a clump of bracken already turning to gold catches and holds the light.

Cairns of stones mark the higher points of the moor, which is intersected with lonely made motorless walls. Villages are rare, but tiny whitewashed homesteads are dotted about here and there. In the air is an undefinable scent, something acrid and sharp, and you suddenly realize that this is the essence of the moors—bog-myrtle, and burning peat. Something faintly white is moving on the hillside. It is a flock of sheep, and if you make your way nearer, through the waist-deep heather you will see the shepherd's dog, small, eager and alert, rounding them up among the rocks. There is a rush and a whirr, and a cock grouse gets up almost under your feet and lumbers heavily away crying, "Go-back, Go-back, Go-back!" If he only knew it you are quite as much startled as he, at the encounter.

Through it all runs, if you can apply the word to such a progress, the railway. The train stops at numerous little stations. Why not? Since there is plenty of time, and the guard enjoys a "bit crack" with the station-master. One is a market town, and the station is crowded with farmers—bearded brown men, with alert gray eyes looking curiously light in their bronzed faces, each with his sheep dog at his heels. The conversation ended, the train continues on its way, emerging at length beyond the moors into the cultivated lands, where white farmhouses stand sentinel over numbers of small round haystacks and fields of corn are yellowing for the harvest. Here one sees villages, each with its broad main street on which face neat cottages with spotless doorsteps, where the women stand knitting when the day's work is over. Flaming banners of scarlet tropaeolum clothe the regular outlines of the houses, and the children play in the wynds which open out of the main streets. But the true Galloway country is the moorland with its peat bogs and moss-hags, its quiet loch frequented by wild duck and teal and its great stretches of heather where the plover and curlew call to one another, and crickets sing for hours among the tussocks of coarse grass. Then, as evening falls, the scent of the bog-myrtle steals more strongly into the air, a good pure fragrance, not easily forgotten; the clear outlines of the hills are blurred by a soft blue haze, the call of the birds grows fewer and less frequent, and the moorland is quiet.—Christian Science Monitor.

◆◆◆

MAKES HARNESS STRONG & TOUGH

EUREKA HARNESS OIL makes harness strong and tough.

This mineral oil not only takes dirt off but keeps dirt out. It fills the pores of the leather.

That is why a harness treated with Eureka is tough, pliable, shiny and new looking.

THE IMPERIAL OIL COMPANY
Limited
Branches Throughout Canada

THE Poultry World

BREEDING FALLACIES.

(Robert Armstrong, in Buffalo News.)

In the minds of many who raise chickens and other fowls there is but one idea and one kind of breeding—that of mating males and females, regardless of type, strain, variety, nearness of relationship. Needless to add, that such matings sooner or later—usually sooner—prove of little value to their owner and are finally completely discarded. It is nature's way of eliminating the [illegible]

To be precise there are the following methods: "in-breeding," line-breeding, "out-crossing" and "cross-breeding"—and—shall we say—the breeding of all sorts [illegible]

HOW TO START.

[illegible]

BETTER WAY THIS.

A better way to introduce new blood is to take two years to do it, and experiment with individuals. Purchase a few hens of the desired strain and mate them to your best males, or secure a couple of suitable cocks and mate them to your best females; then study their offspring for a year, and if satisfactory, mate the new blood to the balance of the flock.

There is no evidence to prove that "line-breeding" induces degeneracy, providing reasonable care is exercised each year in selecting only vigorous breeders, and there is a large number of fowls from which to choose. The danger becomes even more remote if two divisions of the same blood are kept going year after year. This consists of keeping two distinct strains of matings on farm, both of which have common ancestry, but which grow farther apart every year. Every season the males of one line are mated to the females of the other line and vice versa, these lines having been started by mating the best male to the best female, and continuing the second generation by mating the original male to his daughters, or the original hen to the son. Proceeding in a similar manner for the third generation, the original hen to her grandson, which practically eliminates from each line its original respective sire or dam. It is difficult to explain this system of line-breeding in writing, but if you will make a chart of it and get down to actual figures, you will soon see that it is very simple.

Sometimes in the career of every poultryman there is the temptation to cross breeds with a view to improving one of their qualities. In most instances this crossing of two pure breeds is a mistake. The appearance alone of a flock of cross-bred fowls when compared with the pure breeds whence they originated should convince anyone that this is a bad plan.

Sometimes it is profitable to "grade up" a flock of mongrels, such as are found on many general farms, by introducing pure-bred males. Pure-bred males of the same variety should be used year after year, however, and not the males from the offspring of the first cross.

Barn yard fowls are better than none, of course, but why keep mongrels when purebred birds can be had for almost the price of meat?

In selecting males for breeding purposes the first qualities to consider are those in plainest evidence—the general appearance of the birds. Only such specimens should be chosen as meet with the standard requirements of a particular breed. If a bird has a poor comb, wry [illegible]

◆◆◆

HISTORIC NAUPLIA.

First Capital of Grecian Kingdom an Impregnable Seaport.

"It is an interesting coincidence," says a war geography bulletin recently issued by the United States National Geographical Society, "that one of the most important places in Greece where King Constantine's cause has been openly supported by the populace against the Venizelists in their revolutionary movement to force a declaration of war on the side of the Entente Allies is Nauplia, the almost impregnable seaport situated at the head of the Gulf of Nauplia, in Eastern Morea (the district known in ancient times as Peloponnesus).

"The coincidence lies in the fact that Nauplia was the first capital of the modern Kingdom of Greece; it was here that the first Greek President, Ioan Capo d'Istria, a native of the island of Corfu, was assassinated, and it was here that in 1862 a military plot was hatched which resulted in the dethronement of King Otho, thus [illegible] the Hellenes and father of the second son of King Christian IX. of Denmark, who became George I, King of the Hellenes and father of the present ruler.

"Nauplia is a charmingly situated town of some 6,000 inhabitants. It has a salubrious climate, and guide books, regardless of the offence which such praise may give to the rest of the nation, emphasize some of the striking features of the municipality, 'the un-Grecian cleanliness of its streets.'

"Like the neighboring city of Mycenae, Nauplia reached its greatest importance in the era of myth and legend. At the dawn of historical times it had waned in influence and population, and the historian Pausanias, writing in 150 A. D., described it as a 'deserted city.'

"It is probable that Nauplia was founded not by colonists from Argos and Mycenae, the two important ancient cities of the plain, but by settlers who arrived by sea. The very name of the city would seem to suggest this—nauplios meaning seaman—while the lofty, fortified eminence which dominates the harbor takes its name, Palamidi, from the foreign Palamedes, a famous hero of the Trojan war and the inventor, according to the ancients, of the lighthouse, alphabetical writing, the discus, backgammon and dice.

"Throughout the period in which Athens, Sparta, Corinth and Thebes were emblazoning their names on the pages of ancient history, Nauplia's share in Peloponnesian politics was obscured by larger affairs. In the middle ages, however, the seaport once more comes to the fore, and when the crusaders took Constantinople in 1204 the Byzantine governor, Leon Sgouros, attempted to found a Greek monarchy, with his headquarters here. The effort met with failure, but the town remained in Greek hands for several years. It finally passed under the control of the Franks and was made the capital of the duchy of Argos. During this period the feudal system was established in the Morea.

"In the closing years of the fourteenth century both Argos and Nauplia were bought by the Venetians, and 150 years later the latter was given to the Turks, but retaken by the republic of St. Mark in 1686. The Turks were again in control 30 years later.

"Both the Turks and the Venetians labored to fortify the Palamidi, which was eventually held to be a veritable Gibraltar. In their uprising in 1822 the Greeks captured this stronghold, an achievement which greatly encouraged them. Five years later, by the famous victory of Admiral Codrington, in command of a United British, French and Russian fleet over the Turkish fleet at Navarino, Nauplia was relieved at a critical moment in a siege.

"The tragic death of the first president, Capo d'Istria, by gunshot and dagger, at the portal of the Church of St. Spiridion, on Oct. 9, 1831, has been mentioned previously. With the removal of the seat of government to Athens the year following the crowning of King Otho in 1833, and the success of the military plot hatched here against this monarch twenty-nine years later, Nauplia once again disappeared as a date line for historic events until a few days ago, when the King's party made an armed demonstration against former President Venizelos' adherents.

"Nauplia is often visited by tourists not only for its own sake, but because it affords an excellent starting point for excursion to the ruins of Mycenae, which legend tells us was founded by Perseus, whose walls were built by the Lycian Cyclopes, and which was the home of Agamemnon, famous leader of the Greeks in the Trojan war. From Nauplia also it is only a short drive to Tiryns, reputed to be the birthplace of Hercules, son of Zeus and Alcmene; Heraeum, the place at which the leaders of the Greeks swore their allegiance to Agamemnon, and where Kleobis and Biton lay down to their eternal sleep after having taken the places of tardy horses to draw the chariot of their priestess mother, is equally accessible.

Only a short distance from here, too, is the famous Hieron of Epidaurus, celebrated as the seat of the cult of Aesculapius, the god of healing who mythology says was born to Koronis and Apollo on a nearby mountain. To the temple of Hieron was attached a great hospital in which the priests were physicians and which was supported by the lavish gifts of patients who had been cured. The treasury of this hospital was looted on one occasion by the Roman dictator Sulla, who used the money to pay his soldiers.

The harbor castle of Nauplia, whose modern name is Bourtzi, occupies the site of the ancient Acropolis. The steep southern slope of the hill (200 feet high) is covered with a dense growth of cacti."

MOTHERS

REMEMBER! The ointment you put on your child's skin gets into the system just as surely as food the child eats. Don't let impure fats and mineral coloring matter (such as many of the cheap ointments contain) get into your child's blood! Zam-Buk is purely herbal. No poisonous coloring. Use it always. 50c. Box at All Druggists and Stores.

USE ONLY
ZAM-BUK
FOR CHILDRENS SORES

◆◆◆

MAKE WAR ON FLIES

The circular issued by the Co-operative Committee for the Extermination of the Fly, in Philadelphia, is bordered by pictures showing the progress of the fly from its breeding place, feeding on carrion, manure and refuse, thence flying straight to the baby's milk bottle, hovering over the family meal, pausing to take a drink from the milk pitcher and swarming in profusion about the dinner table, then picturing finally the typhoid fever patient, bedridden as a result of the contamination carried by the fly. The circular is headed "If You Don't Kill Me I May Kill You," and reads as follows:

"We all know that flies are a nuisance and a menace to health. We spend our time swatting them. But we all ought to realize that the best time to swat the fly is before it is born.

An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. An hour spent in destroying the breeding places of flies around your home, store or stable will kill more flies than a week of swatting.

Flies breed in filthy, decomposing matter, in garbage that is improperly covered, in manure piles that are allowed to accumulate, in rubbish heaps where vegetable matter is decaying, in old tin cans on lots or ash pits. No decomposing matter, no flies.

"A single fly will produce in a summer season 6,098,720,000 flies, according to Dr. L. O. Howard, U. S. Government expert. If one fly has a progeny of five billion and a half in a summer, how many flies is your garbage can turning out to pester you for months?

"Flies in the dining-room mean nurses in the sick-room.

"A fly in the milk may mean a little child in the grave.

If flies were feared like bad water there would be less typhoid.

HOW TO AVOID PESTS.

"Don't allow flies in your house—screens in the windows may prevent [illegible] on the door.

See that screen doors fit snugly and shut quickly.

Keep your garbage can covered tightly. See that manure is screened, and that it is removed at least once a week.

"Don't eat where flies are tolerated, and tell the restaurant why.

Don't buy foodstuffs from a store infested with flies, and tell the merchant why you will not buy from him.

Go a step further and prevent breeding at all. To do this, sprinkle all possible breeding places with any strong disinfectant or with a fly poison, made by dissolving one pound of laundry soap in one gallon of water, to which add one third gallon of coal oil.

"Sprinkle a little in your garbage can every time you put garbage in it. Sprinkle it on manure piles, rubbish heaps, in old tin cans—where there is decomposing matter. It will absolutely prevent fly breeding."

◆◆◆

Chapeau Motifs.

For spring.
Are motifs flat.
Many are of jet.
Others consist of mock jewels.
Beaded motifs are plentiful and effective.
White wool motifs embroidered in chenille are not scarce.
Wing-shaped motifs predominate and glints of gold enliven the majority.

HAIR GOODS
—FOR—
LADIES AND GENTLEMEN

Mailed at lowest possible prices, consistent with high-grade work.

Our Natural Wavy 3-Strand Switches at $5.00, $7.00 and $9.00 in all shades are leaders with us. Just send on your sample, or write for anything in our line.

GENTLEMEN'S TOUPEES at $25.00 and $35.00 that defy detection when worn.

MINTZ'S HAIR GOODS EMPORIUM
62 KING ST. W. HAMILTON, ONT.
(Formerly Mdme. I. Mintz)

WIT AND HUMOR

WILL POWER.

(Boston Transcript)

[illegible] nieces and nephews don't [illegible] to the slightest thing."

"He must have great will power?"

"You bet he has! He can will $5,-[illegible]"

◆◆◆

NERVOUS, BUT THANKFUL.

(Washington Star)

"What would you do if a situation [illegible] compelled you to fire a [illegible]?"

"I'd be nervous," confessed Mr. Meekton, "and yet I'd be exceedingly thankful [illegible] the gun and [illegible]"

◆◆◆

WHEN HE MISSED IT.

(Puck)

Sparks was talking to Perkins of the latter's recent move to a suburb, and, during the course of his remarks, put the following inquiry: "Sparks, now that you're living in the country, don't you miss the early morning noise and bustle of the city?"

"Yes," said Sparks, "if I miss the 8:13 train."

◆◆◆

LITTLE TO SAY.

(Judge)

"They say money talks."

"It does, but it never says more than two words to me, and they are 'good-bye.'"

◆◆◆

NOT PREFERRED.

(Boston Transcript)

"This world owes every one a living."

"True, but neither you nor I seem to be preferred creditors."

◆◆◆

HIS COMPLAINT.

(Washington Star)

"Your constituents don't seem to agree with some of your remarks."

"No," replied Senator Sorghum. "A whole lot of people never seem to pay the slightest attention to anything I say except when they disagree with it."

MAY IMPROVE.

(Life)

Mrs. Parker—That new cook has learned all my ways.

Parker—Don't worry. She may improve.

◆◆◆

USELESS CHOLLY.

(Boston Transcript)

Cholly—Will you marry me if I stop smoking cigarettes?

Miss Bright—No, Mr. Sappy, I couldn't think of marrying a man who [illegible]

A DRAWBACK.

(Washington Star)

"He speaks several languages fluently."

"The accomplishment must be a source of satisfaction."

"It isn't. He can't think in one language without getting suspicious of himself in several of the others."

◆◆◆

WANTED TO KNOW.

(Puck)

Doctor (at 2:00 a.m.)—Say, what do you mean by pestering at my door like that? What's the matter with you, anyway?

Dissolute—Can't say, doc, I'm sure. That's what I wanna find out.

◆◆◆

FAR-SIGHTED.

(Detroit Free Press)

"Is he farsighted?"

"I should say so. He can see a man he owes money four blocks away."

CHEAPER TIRES.

(Buffalo Express)

Hub—I bought a rubber plant yesterday.

Wife—Oh, good! Then we'll be able to get our tires cheaper, won't we?

GREAT EXPRESSION.

(Puck)

Stickson—They tell me your daughter sings with great expression.

Flickson—Greatest you ever saw. Why, her own mother can't recognize her face when she's singing!

THE DOCTOR'S ADVICE

(Life)

"The doctor says he will let me know in a week whether I am going to live or not."

"And what does he expect you to do in the meantime?"

"He told me to take a complete rest and above all not to worry about anything."

AMBITION HIS RUIN.

(Birmingham Age-Herald)

"If you had any ambition you wouldn't be tramping about the country begging your food," said the hard-faced housewife.

"You do me an injustice, mum," replied the tattered caller. "It was ambition that proved me ruin."

"Indeed!"

"Yes, mum. I made up me mind dat I wouldn't accept a job dat paid me less'n [illegible] a year."

WHY HE WAS TRUTHFUL.

(Louisville Courier-Journal)

"Washington was a truthful man."

"I've got the habit myself now. I think it is the best plan if you marry a widow."

KEEPING HER AGE.

(Yonkers Statesman)

Patience—Isn't it remarkable how she keeps her age?

Patrice—Yes, she hasn't changed it in ten years.

◆◆◆

A 5-YEAR START.

(Louisville Courier-Journal)

"Why won't you marry me?"

"Because I don't love you."

"Why need that matter? We'd simply have a five-year start on half the people in our set."

◆◆◆

INFLATION A DEFENSE.

Easy for the Puffer Fish to Balk Its Natural Enemies.

The puffer fish affords a novel example to the way nature sometimes works to protect her creatures. The many different species inhabit all tropical and other warm seas and certain large rivers. Few of them reach a length of more than two feet.

The peculiar characteristic common to all of them is their ability to inflate themselves with air or water until they become almost spherical in shape. The air or water that fills the abdomen or the esophageal sac is retained by a valve in the throat and can be discharged almost instantly.

A few good sized scup were placed in one of the exhibition tanks of the New York Zoological Society with a dozen puffers about two inches long. The hungry scup at once attacked the puffers, but in an instant every puffer inflated itself so completely with water that it became almost globular. All the scup could do was to knock them about like toy balloons, too big to be swallowed, too smooth to afford any hold for the jaws.

Puffers that become frightened near the surface of the sea and are inflated with air sometimes drift ashore, where they roll along the sands till they die and are dried by the sun and wind. The Japanese make lanterns of their dried inflated bodies, for the stretched skin is as transparent as oiled paper.—Youth's Companion.

◆◆◆

Freshman (to sweet voiced)—See that big fellow over there, he broke three records last week. Sweet Young Thing—Mercy, I wouldn't let him run the phonograph.—Penn State Froth

John Bull used to have the largest merchant marine, but he has now yielded that distinction to Davy Jones.—Charleston News and Courier

The New Series CHEVROLET

FOUR-NINETY

$695
f. o. b. OSHAWA

ECONOMY

The Chevrolet valve-in-head motor is the short road to power so that Chevrolet owners find their gasoline bills very low.

The perfected mechanism means little friction, insuring minimum oil expense.

The lightness and perfect balance of the Chevrolet insure maximum tire mileage.

Electric starting and lighting system, and speedometer are part of standard equipment.

Chevrolet Motor Co. of Canada, Limited
OSHAWA, ONTARIO

WESTERN SERVICE AND DISTRIBUTING BRANCH—REGINA, SASK.

There is a Chevrolet dealer in your locality anxious to give you a demonstration. See him before you buy your 1917 motor car. Write to Oshawa for a new catalogue showing all Chevrolet models

CHEVROLET

Real Facts About Clothes

Why You Should Buy Freely To-day.
Why You Should Buy at Stephans'.

Clothing will be Higher

Everybody knows that about everything is going up in price. Clothing was one of the last things to start upwards. By Fall you will see a large increase in prices—you'll read exaggerated statements about Suits and Overcoats advancing seventy-five per cent. Perhaps they may some time, but not next Fall.

Everything that goes into a suit or overcoat has advanced—the cloth, the linings, the canvas and other interlinings and the labor. We believe that you'll find an advance of twenty-five per cent, perhaps thirty-five,—from the best authorities it won't be more.

Under the circumstances is it not up to you to stock up now and do it at a live store that is not saving their clothing for an advance next fall?

Here's the Important Factor for you to consider—The cloths were bought months ago and made up into suits as we needed them, the price then was very much lower than it is to-day, but our selling price is based on the actual cost and not on to-day's prices. You are therefore getting the full advantage of our buying opportunity and mark too that you are protected here just as usual, our guarantee still goes—satisfactory wear, fast color and latest models.

Perfection and Bachelor Suits
$12.50, $14.50, $16.50, up to $20.00

Dozens of Lovely Lingerie Blouses
New Models of Fine White Voile

You couldn't imagine prettier blouses, all are well made of fine sheer voiles in the newest lines. They're fit for the dressiest person to wear, beautifully trimmed with point edging on collar and down front of waist, 30 to 12 bust.
$1.25, $2.25, $2.50 and $2.75

Stephan Brothers

Just Arrived Lemons, Bananas, Grapefruit, Apples, and Oranges, specials at 15c a dozen.
Soap I have a lot of Soap at the old price of 5c.
Sugar Keeps advancing. Get what you require before it gets too high. I have plenty of the best. (Redpath's)
In Bulk Soda Biscuits, Peanut Butter, Heinz' Pickles, Etc.
Fish Clearing out the Fish at reduced prices.
Potatoes 20 Bags wanted for Cash, at once.

C. PATRICK
PHONE 165 WALKERTON

Seeing the Opportunity and Seizing it are Two Very Different Matters.

Why do we claim the Bacon we offer is the brand of Bacon that you should buy if you want the best?

Because of:—Appearance and Quality: Sure to satisfy: Taste that is just right: Nice Trim and Mild, Sweet Cure.

Nowhere will you find a Bacon that you can eat with greater pleasure and enjoyment.

"A Try—Tells Why"

GOODE & McKAY
PHONE 67 The People's Grocery

The Merry Month of May is Here.

It ushers in the Warmer Weather and makes you consider Summer Clothing.

A Few Interesting Items just In:-

Middy Blouses for Girls. All sizes. Plain white and pretty stripes 50c, 75c, 85c, $1.00, $1 25, $1.50 $2 00.

Middy Suits at $2.75 and $3.25.

Beautiful sheer Voile Waists in the very newest styles, also Silk Crepe Waists at exceptional prices

New Ginghams, Prints, Percales, and pretty Cotton Suitings.

1 yd wide Printed Percale, good substantial Colorings at 20c. and 22c. yd.

Embroideries and Laces

Embroideries are very fashionable this season and we were fortunate in securing early the largest and most complete assortment we ever had. Don't miss seeing our Embroideries and Laces.

For the Wet Weather

Parasols and Umbrellas for Men and Women at $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00 to $5.00 each.

Also up-to-date raincoats for Men, Women and Children. Coats with style and snap and reasonable in price. Come and see.

McBURNEY & CO.

OUR NEIGHBORING TOWNS, VILLAGES AND COUNTRYSIDE

Newsy Happenings of the Week Collected for Our Readers by a Staff of Live Correspondents

CHEPSTOW

Misses Johanna and Mary Spitzig of Kitchener, spent the week end at their home.

Mr. and Mrs. Eli Weiss and family of Walkerton, motored here on Sunday and spent the day at H. Spitzig's.

Mr. Jos. A. Massel was in Toronto and Oshawa on business over the week end.

We understand our cattle-king Chas. Doerr has purchased a new Ford. Charlie's hustling qualities and large sphere of activity demand something speedier than the ordinary means of locomotion. Pedestrians etc. will govern themselves accordingly.

Mr. D. Phelan who has elected to become a practical farmer, as well as serve in the capacity of municipal chief, is conducting experiments with onions and beans, having an acre of each under cultivation. With prices for these commodities sky high, the returns will no doubt warrant the venture.

The persistent beating of carpets is once more rending the atmosphere and suggests busy days for the housewife and a cold sandwich for hubby in place of a steaming dinner.

MILDMAY

Mrs. Nathaniel Hinsperger is in a very low condition at present suffering from gangrene. Gunner "Misch" Hinsperger her son, reported seriously wounded last week, has been operated on and is now on the road to recovery. A telegram was received to that effect on Saturday.

Rev. Geild has been stationed here in charge of the Methodist Church for the coming two months. Rev. Geild is a graduate of the O. A. C., Guelph.

Mr. Joe Filsinger's barn and straw shed on con. 4, were burned to the ground early Sunday morning. Twelve cattle, two colts, and three pigs were burned to death but his four horses were saved. The cause of the fire is rather a mystery.

Mr. Ezra Reuber's driving shed was burned down on Sunday evening due to an explosion of gasoline caused by a lighted lantern. Mr. Reuber's left hand was badly burned and his face was scorched by the flames.

The baseball boys are practising in the park every evening.

A good many of vacant lots which in other years were allowed to produce only weeds are being plowed and this year will be made to produce food as well as weeds.

Mr. Ed. Kalbfleisch and family motored to Wroxeter to visit friends there on Sunday.

OTTER CREEK

Mr. Henry Mockle is visiting his sister, Mrs. Henry Wolfe.

Mr. Wilfrid Miller of Clifford was renewing acquaintances here on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Smith of Ayton were visiting at Mr. D. Gress, on Sunday.

The Misses Minerva and Ismay Miller, Edna Schnurr and Mr. Walter Schnurr of Mildmay were visiting friends here.

A number from here followed the crowd down to Mr. Huber's farm, where an aeroplane enroute for Camp Borden lost its way, and landed down in the wheat field. While the crowd was there viewing the machine, a burst of flames shot out of Mr. Ezra Reuber's driving shed. Then autos, rigs, motorcycles, bicycles and people running, all started for the fire. One man drove so fast that one of his passengers was so frightened that he said he would never drive with him again. The fire was caused by gas escaping from a tank.

BRANT AVENUE

Len. Long started on the cream route first of May.

Herb Chesney of Dunkeld is working for Len. Long for the season.

Farmers are taking full advantage of the good weather. In spite of the backward season most of the farmers are nearly through seeding.

Messrs Wm. and Geo. Austett of Hanover visited their cousin, J. J. Ernest over Sunday.

Fall wheat looks like an almost total failure in this neighborhood.

Joe Abell, the junk dealer ran into misfortune one day last week, on the road, when his wagon which was loaded with old iron broke down. Henry Konkel kindly loaned him his heavy waggon and helped him out of the difficulty.

Harry Denny is drilling a well for Peter Frank.

Jos. Fritz, who is East on a visit to friends here, is visiting at Peter Frank's at present.

PINKERTON

A football has been procured by the boys of the village and vicinity and practicing has started on the village green.

Miss Mettis and Messrs Frank and Clare Donnelly of Toronto are holidaying at their home here.

Rev. Mr. Gale attended the Synod meeting in Brantford last week.

We are sorry to report the illness of Mr. Tom Richardson and hope for a speedy recovery.

Mrs. N. Garland and Mrs. A. Johnston returned from Parkhead this week.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Trotter returned to Toronto where they have secured a new restaurant.

Mr. Alf Fiddis is having a well drilled at his home in the village.

Mrs. J. W. Moffat kindly donated a beautiful cushion to the local Red Cross Society for which the ladies are very grateful.

Lieut. Harold Pinkerton of Walkerton spent Sunday at his home here.

FORMOSA

Quite a lot of seeding is yet to be put in in this neighbourhood. Fall wheat is practically a failure and a good many farmers are planning to plow it in.

Joseph Wrightson and J. L. McKinnon of Bruce Tp. who have taken the contract to repair the steeple of the church, are getting things in shape to begin. It will be quite an undertaking to restore the tower so that it will be just the same as before.

Mr. Mathew Weber who recently sold out and is living with his sons, intends to take a trip to the West this Summer.

The engagement was announced from the pulpit here Sunday morning of Miss Matilda Opperman, daughter of Mr. Anthony Opperman to Mr. Isadore Groeser.

THIS BEATS FICTION

(Continued from page 1.)

gain the shelter of the clouds. Then came the "Archie"—hotter than anything I have ever seen before, three guns giving their entire attention to poor insignificant me. There are no anti-aircraft guns or gunners that can compare with the Huns' and they say they can get a direct hit on any machine at any height in three shots if it does not alter its course. The natural result of course is that we never fly for more than a few seconds without swerving left or right or up or down, and as a general rule we dodge them without much trouble—but with three guns it is different and I was kept pretty busy. My observer stood up in front and motioned to me as each shell burst so that I would know how to steer. As it was they knocked holes in our wings some of them big enough to put your head in. Suddenly it all stopped, and then I knew we were in for some real trouble. I stood up on my seat and looked over the top plane and sure enough, climbing up to us as fast as an elevator in a city office building were four of those hateful little beasts Albatros Scouts, the Germans' newest and fastest single seaters. For the next half hour I was too busy to be scared. Fortunately only the first two Huns attacked us—why, I don't know, unless it was that the other two thought that it was too small a job for them all, and they had every right to think so for the Albatros Scout is practically twice as fast as the machine I was flying.

My observer, the South African I told you about, was right on the job as cool as a cucumber and working his two machine guns as though he were shooting at a bulls-eye in a shooting gallery. One came up under our tail knowing of course that that is our "blind" and defenceless quarter. The other one did half circles around us from one side to the other, and both kept pouring a continuous stream of lead into us at anywhere from ten to fifty yards range. A half dozen or so of the first bullets put our engine out of action and after that of course it was just a case of putting my machine into as many funny positions as possible so as to hamper their aim. I can assure you it was ten times as exciting as any game of croquet you ever played. That ceaseless pop-pop-pop-pop on the right, on the left, behind, underneath—and the corresponding phit-phit phit phit of the bullets as they went past us or pierced some part of the machine never let either of us forget for a moment that there was a war on, believe me. I had no idea that you could do so many things with an aeroplane. I tried them all I think, all my idea being to get that old bus safe on terra firma again. The one thing that put them off more than anything else was a diving side-slip for we lost far more height than the Bosche could in a normal dive. So I think probably three quarters of our descent was made in that position. It's surprising how quickly you can lose height that way. The pitot tube registered up to 180 miles an hour, and when I looked at it, it had gone over the top. At that time I had left my seat and was kneeling on the instrument board in front. My companion was hanging on to some wires or something and managed to keep in the machine somehow.

Thank God none of my controls were shot away and the machine was quite manageable. The Huns followed us down to about 800 feet and then buzzed off—doubtless to report to their headquarters that another British machine had been driven down "out of control." With a little difficulty I got her on an even keel, flattened out and made a safe landing within a few feet of the British third line trenches. Neither of us were hit though I got two bullets through my sheep skin thigh boots, and another came through the centre of the back of my seat which would have caught me between the shoulder blades had I not been perching on the instrument board at the time. The machine and engine were of course shot to bits. I am going to have one of the bullet pierced propeller blades as a souvenir.

THE OFFICIAL REPORT

Copy of remarks attached to combat report of Lt. C. E. Robertson, 2nd Lt. D. H. Duncan of April 13, 1917.

This machine became separated from the Patrol owing to clouds and went over to——— alone, and dropped bombs on———; the machine was then attacked by several hostile machines and was very skillfully brought back to our lines against a strong head wind by the pilot, Lieut. Robertson, who by clever manoeuvres managed to keep off the hostile machines, enable his observer to fire, and save his machine.

I consider that great credit is due to Lieut. Robertson who by cool and clever flying undoubtedly saved his machine and observer.

(Sgd.)———Major,
Commanding No.——Squadron Royal Flying Corps.

+ + +

News About Town

Read the Ads.!

You can save money by reading the Walkerton merchants ads. in this week's Telescope.

Miss Mae Hyslop, returned home from an extended visit to Chatham on Wednesday night. She was accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Milton Grainger and babe, who will spend a few weeks here.

Arrived In England.

Mrs. John Loftus of Riversdale had a letter last week from her son, Pte. Tom Loftus of the 198th Batt'n, Canadian Buffs, stating that he had arrived safely in England.

Back From Mexico

Mr. John Bergman, an old resident of the Formosa neighborhood, has arrived here from Mexico, on a visit to his brother-in-law, Joseph Lindsay. Mr. Bergman has been mining in in Mexico and has not seen Walkerton for twenty years.

Still In England

The 160th Batt'n is still in England and whether it will leave in a day, or a week, or a month is an uncertainty so far as anybody knows from the commanding officer down. A Walkerton officer writing home says that the Battalion had just been inspected by the Duke of Connaught and some other dignitaries.

Moved to Convalescent Camp

Pte. Gordon Hogg, son of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Hogg of Carrick, who is recuperating from an attack of spinal meningitis in England, has been removed to Hastings Convalescent Camp and is now taking physical exercises daily. His sister Marion soon tired of inactivity in England and hopes to do her bit in the capacity of a trained nurse. She has enrolled as a probationer at the famous St. Pancreas Hospital at London, Eng. and is able to see her brother frequently.

+ + +

HIGH SCHOOL EXAMS

(Continued from page 1.)

ing on the farms are "doing their bit" with the following farmers.

Boys.

L. Yack	with	Leonard Christie.
C. Tovell	"	Abram Rowand.
V. Edt	"	Sob. Kirstine.
V. Tovell	"	William Morgan.
L. Bilger	"	Walter Rowand.
N. Pinkerton	"	Dr. Fortune.
L. McConnell	"	John Hogg.
C. Cargill	"	David Thomson.
A. Garland	"	on the farm.

Girls.

E. Bilger	"	S. Lindenschmidt's Mildmay.
A. Pickney	"	at home.
G. Rogers	"	at home.
G. Seigner	"	at home.
F. Taylor	"	J. Findlater's, Ayr.

AN OPEN LETTER TO MR. D. McKERRACHER

Dear Sir:—

I attended a meeting in the Town Hall on Thursday evening of last week called for the purpose of discussing the potato situation in town.

I made a proposition to the gentlemen present, also told my experience as to time of planting and general care of potatoes during the growing period. You were at that meeting also, with your usual display of oratorical emptiness telling how you had looked over this ground and that ground, what was feasible and what was not feasible and so on, but at no stage of the proceedings did you suggest any plan that would involve you with work or money. Then at the close of that meeting you in company with three gentlemen made the remark that "I was crazy." It ill-becomes a man of your calibre to cast a reflection on any man who has a real interest in the welfare of his country. You a man of leisure with an unlimited amount of capital at your command, you who knew of the bumper potato crop in the West and the acute situation here why did you not have two or three cars of potatoes brought in and sell them or give them out on shares or anyway at all to get seed to plant. No, you would rather hang around an elevated real estate office figuring out how best you can invest your inflated munitions profits, or leisurely walk up and down the streets extending the glad hand to the ladies of your acquaintance, telling them how well they look and such like.

You are a singer of some repute, I believe. Perhaps at some time you have sung something like this.

"Nothing in my hand I bring Simply to my money cling."

Yours truly,
Frank Rennie.

Thos. A. Edison's latest invention, known as the New Edison, is the instrument to which the New York Globe refers as "the phonograph with a soul." We cordially invite you to visit our store and permit us to demonstrate that the New Edison is utterly different from any and all talking machines.

R. L. GIBSON
JEWELER - WALKERTON

The Central Grocery

House-Cleaning Needs

Brooms, Scrub Brushes, White Wash Brushes, Soaps, Pearline, Ammonia, Lyes and Dutch Cleanser.

We are offering splendid values in Colemans Cured and Cooked Meats. Enquire for prices.

W. G. Searle
Phone 161 Walkerton

Individuality

THE selection of appropriate mountings for remarkably good Photographic Portraits.

THAT'S US.

FRASER STUDIO

Read the Ads.

JEWELLRY OF ALL KINDS

Watches, Clocks, Cut Glass Silverware and Jewellry of all kinds.

C. A. FOX, & SON

THE PEOPLE'S STORE

Spring and the Home

This is "Spring Drapery" Week

Especially featuring the newest merchandise pertaining to Home furnishings.

The planning and execution of improvements in the Home are always a source of pleasure to home makers.

Curtains and Curtain Nets

Delicate and beautiful pattern in great variety. Remarkable for their durability. Curtains in White, Cream and Ecru.

Curtain Yard Materials

Bungalow and Quaker Nets, plain and figured etc.

Floor Oil Cloths, Linoleums 8-4 and 16-4., Tapestry and Congoleum Rugs.

J. H. APPEL
Phone 53 Walkerton

W. T. PEMBER
Proprietor of
The Pember Store
TORONTO
Is sending his representative, Miss G. G. McLean, who is specially gifted in the art of suiting the ladies and knows their needs.

MISS McLEAN WILL BE AT THE HARTLEY HOUSE, on Thursday, May 17th

with the finest stock of human hair goods for ladies and gentlemen ever exhibited for improving the personal appearance. Toilet preparations for beautifying the complexion. She will take orders for the well-known PEMBER HAIR TREATMENT for invigorating your own hair and preventing it from turning grey.

For ladies, pompadours, transformations, waives, switches, etc. For the Gentlemen, the closest imitation of nature. THE PEMBER TOUPEE and at reasonable prices.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED. REMEMBER THE DATE.

For mail orders write,

The Pember Store,
129 Yonge Street - - Toronto, Ont.

We Specialize in Purchasing and Selling

CITY LOTS AND FARM LANDS in Western Canada

If you have any Lots or Farms that you wish to dispose of, it will pay you to write for further information to

Chas. Beck
Real Estate - Kitchener, Ontario

WALKERTON TELESCOPE

VOL. XLIX, NO. 20 WALKERTON TELESCOPE, WALKERTON, MAY 17th 1917 $1.50 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE

2 for 1 Sale!

You buy one article at the regular price and we give you another of the same article FREE. This applies to all NYAL and PENSLAR Toilet, Medicinal and Veterinary preparations and a big list of everyday requirements.

Thursday, Friday & Saturday May 17th, 18th and 19th.

Extra Special Free For every Dollar or over you spend in this store on May 17, 18, or 19, we will give (on request only) one regular size 25c box Nature's Remedy Tablets.

—SEE BILLS—

Hunter's Drug Store

Drugs and Kodaks Phone 35 C. P. R. Ticket Agency

ONE CENT SALE One Cent Sale ONE CENT SALE

Big One Cent Sale

THURSDAY, FRIDAY AND SATURDAY MAY 17th, 18th and 19th.

EXAMPLE—Buy 1 tube of Rexall Tooth Paste for 25c, we will give you another for one cent. One bottle Rexall Hypophosphites, $1.00; two bottles for $1.01.

SEE Large Bills for many items offered at this unusual Sale

WATCH FOR IT ! WAIT FOR IT !

A. P. Sieveright

The Rexall Store - Walkerton

WALL PAPERS OF QUALITY

The newest effects and a wonderful assortment for the Parlor, Living Room, Dining Room, Hall, Bed Room, Kitchen, at very reasonable prices.

McCrum's

A Harvard Brown Vici Kid Princess Shoe

Made with 7m Champagne Cloth top, and new heel. One of the latest styles for Spring and Summer.

Price $7.00

Ramsey The Shoeman

Our Suits

They make you look good, feel good, and they are made good, no matter what price you pay.

Greys in all shades, plain stripes and small checks; Blues, Browns and Blacks in fast colors. We have them all. Try us for your next suit.

Men's Furnishings

The Newest Summer Styles

In Soft Collars, Sport Shirts, Underwear, Pyjamas, Night Shirts, Hats, Caps, Etc.

G. T. ROURKE

Quality Tailor and Men's Wear.

Phone 166, Walkerton, Ont.

Schools Are Helping

Subscriptions are being taken by the Edith Cavell Bronze Memorial Fund Association of Toronto to assist in erecting a monument to Miss Edith Cavell, the heroine of Belgium. All schools in Ontario are asked to help in this worthy and noble cause.

Hydro Engineer Here

A representative of the Hydro Electric Power Commission has been in town recently taking a valuation of the local power company's street equipment such as wires, poles, transformers etc. Another engineer is expected here shortly to valuate the generating plant.

Wounded In Face

Miss Stella Blough received a telegram from Ottawa on Monday morning stating that her brother, Stanley Roy Blough, had received a gunshot wound in the face. Pte. Blough enlisted at Winnipeg but made many friends in Walkerton while visiting his sister here a year ago last winter.

Wins A Commission

Corp. Chester Bryce, who has been serving with the United States Cavalry on the border, has been recommended for a commission and will be made an officer with the rank of lieutenant. Chester enlisted as a trooper over three years ago at Detroit, and has won promotion step by step. He has two brothers with the Canadian forces Overseas.

Former Walkerton Girl

Mrs. Albert Fennel received on Thursday of last week the sad intelligence of the death of her niece, Miss Edna M. White, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. White of Hartney, Man. formerly of Walkerton. The young lady had been for the past few months teaching at Invermay, Sask. from which place she was removed to a Brandon Hospital in a serious condition from a long standing ailment. Death came to her relief on the 9th of May thus removing one of Hartney's most popular young ladies at the early age of eighteen years. We extend the sympathy of many Walkerton friends to the bereaved family.

SEED POTATOES.

The Department of Agriculture has made arrangements for two cars of Seed Potatoes for the farmers of Bruce County. Both of these are now on the way and should be here shortly. One will be distributed from Paisley and the other from Walkerton, Cargill etc. Parties wishing seed should immediately notify N. C. McKay, Dept. of Agriculture, Walkerton.

BORN

PLAYER—In Walkerton on Monday, May 14th, to Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Player, a son (Douglas Haig.)

Walkerton Markets

(Revised, Wednesday, May 16)

Hay, per ton,	10.00 to	12.00
Oats, per bush,	75 to	75
Wheat " "	2.50 to	2.60
Barley, " "	1.00 to	1.00
Buckwheat "	1.00 to	1.00
Hogs, per cwt,	16.25 to	16.25
Butter, per lb,	35 to	36
Eggs, per doz.	39 to	40

DURHAM STREET ONLY

Will be Oiled This Coming Summer—Council Will Try to do With the Supply on Hand—Saddlery Co. Hands Over Assets

The Town Council had a busy Session on Monday night, being on the job from eight until nearly eleven. The members present were:—Mayor A. P. Johnston, Reeve Robt. Russell, Couns. Rev. J. W. Sanderson, J. McKinnon, A. McCarter, and Sam Vogan.

Caretaker R. K. Sutton asked for the usual extra help at the cemetery during the month of June.—Granted.

A letter from the Agricultural Department at Toronto stated that Walkerton's new Sanitary By-law had been validated by the Department.

The Bell Telephone Co. wrote that on the expiry of the 5 year agreement with the town next May: there will be no more free phones. At present the town has four free phones—Town Hall, Pumping Station; and at Robt. McGregor's, and John Arscott's, for fire alarm purposes.

J. A. McGill, A. J. McFarlane, and a number of other residents of Campbell st petitioned for a sewer. This petition was turned over to the Streets and Sewer Com. for investigation.

Dr. Clapp asked permission to instal a water motor in his residence to pump soft water to the top of the house.—Granted.

Tenders for the supply of coal for the Town Hall were received as follows:—Alex George, $8.60; Alex Ernest, $8.45. Contract was awarded to Alex Ernest.

Thirty-five dollars was voted to the local Preparedness Branch for gold pieces which had been presented to soldiers and nurses.

Cut Down Oiling

Street oil has reached the unheard-of price of 9 cents a gallon. The Council therefore decided not to buy any oil this season. There is enough oil on hand from last year to do the Main Street and that is all that will be done. Any back-street residents who want their streets watered will have to petition the Council. The oil cart will go from the race bridge to Yonge St. on Durham, going up Jackson St. as far as Town Hall only, Colborne St. to the rear of Post Office, and Victoria St. to the first corner south.

By-law No 1149 was passed, authorizing the Mayor and Treasurer to borrow $5,000 from the Merchants Bank to meet current expenses.

Couns. Russell and McKinnon moved that Irwin Bros. be billed for the pasturage of the Fair grounds last year and John Wingfelder for the pasturage at the Bend, and that the price for 1917 be fixed at $25 for the Fair Grounds and $15 for the Bend—Carried.

Chief Ferguson reported that a number of citizens had not put a box in their water closets as required by the new sanitary act. The Chief was instructed to prosecute any parties who did not carry out the terms of the by-law.

Civic Holiday, Aug 6th

August 6th, the first Monday in that month, was named as Civic Holiday.

The Town Scavenger was voted the second 15 per cent instalment of his pay, due May 1st.

Misunderstanding With Fire Chief

Fire Chief George tendered his resignation by letter saying that it was for reasons well known to the Council. It was resolved that Mayor Johnston see the Chief about the matter. It is understood that Sandy has a grievance over the Council going ahead and ordering certain supplies for the fire brigade without consulting him as Chief.

Reeve Russell introduced a motion to close up an old outstanding matter by paying Mrs. P. Heffernan $10 due her from the town for earth taken from her property in the construction of the West End bridge. Carried.

Monday, May 28th, was fixed as the date for holding Court of Revision of the assessment Roll.

Saddlery Back On Town

Sec. W. M. Shaw of the Saddlery Hardware, sent a letter enclosing a resolution passed by the directors at the Annual Meeting offering to turn over the entire real estate, plant, and assets of the company to the town which guaranteed the company's bonds to the extent of $6,500. The latter stated that the Company had taken this step as it had not funds on hand to meet the last three debenture payments and the three years' taxes due.

Want Sewer to Yonge St.

Rev. C. W. Cousens, M. G. Dippel, W. G. Searle, and A. Pengelly appeared on behalf of the Methodist Trust Board asking that a sewer be constructed from the church to connect at Yonge St. It was pointed out that the sewer on Jackson St. is too high to connect up with. The land is 2½ ft. higher at the front than at the back of the building and to connect at Yonge St. would be following the natural fall. The Trust Board wanted the sewer put low enough to drain the cellar and would be willing to pay for the extra excavation. It was stated by someone present that several property owners on the street were also prepared to pay for the extra digging in order to get their cellars drained. The matter was left with the Streets and Sewers committee to take it up with the church official

Made the Supreme Sacrifice

PTE. HOWARD JAMES SCALES

Of Brant Township who was killed in action at Vimy Ridge on April 10

Knitting Factory Wants Loan

The Manager of the Colonial Knitting Co. Elmira, addressed the Council, stating that if the Town of Walkerton would loan him $15,000 on the security of $27,000 machinery and building, he would remove his knitting factory to this town. The old Bindertwine factory would suit his purpose admirably, he said. He was practically forced to leave Elmira owing to the scarcity of female help there. Four factories in that town are short 120 girls. The Council agreed to refer the matter to the Industries Committee for investigation, to report to Council.

Letter from Hydro People

Chief Engineer Gaby of the Hydro Electric Power Commission wrote under date of April 23rd:—Up to the present our attention has been greatly occupied with rush work, a great deal of which has been in connection with supplying power for munitions and other war purpose and consequently we have not had time to give to matters pertaining to supplying Walkerton with Hydro service. We hope however to start an investigation at once which will include a valuation of the Walkerton Electric Light Co's generating plant, which will enable us to determine the proper method of serving your municipality. We have already been investigating the possibilities of supplying power to Municipalities as far west as Kincardine and as far south as Wingham, which will affect the Walkerton rate and we have laid out a proposed scheme of transmission which if found possible to construct, will be very advantageous to your town. Whereas we regret the delay which has taken place in connection with giving you more complete information, we can assure you that every effort will be made to take care of the Walkerton situation at an early date and we hope to be able to formulate a proposition in the course of the next few weeks, which should prove satisfactory

Taking Aviation Course

Russell Hermiston, son of Mr. W. J. Hermiston, and Walter Grainger, son of Mrs. John Grainger, who are taking courses in Aviation at Camp Borden were home over the week end

Seeding About Over

The farmers in this district have been taking advantage of the good seeding weather the past week and are now practically through seeding. The ground was drier this year than last and took the seed better. Late as the season has been it is still two weeks earlier than last year. Fall wheat shows little promise. Farmers around here average possibly only five acres of fall wheat. A good many have ploughed it up and others are sowing in oats and barley.

Last Request.

The Hospital Entertainment Committee, will serve tea in the Town Hall during the afternoon of Tuesday May 22nd, at 10 cents. A supper of tomato, salad, home-made bread, rolls, ice-cream, cake and coffee will be served from 5 to 7 p. m. for 25 cents. This will be the final effort of the present Committee and all friends of the Hospital are requested to attend. A good supper and a good time for all. Don't miss it. Friends of the Hospital will do a great favor by contributing towards this supper. Contributions should be sent to the Town Hall Tues. morning or afternoon. If our friends in the country who will be unable to send their contributions will call Mrs. Loy, phone 21, arrangements will be made to call for same. Home-made baking will be sold during afternoon The drawing for the stove on which chances are being taken will be made at 7.30 p. m.

NEWS ABOUT TOWN

Next Thursday will be Victoria Day.

Stylish pumps at Ramsey's Shoe Store.

For the best farm shoes go to Ramsey's Shoe Store.

Flat to rent. Very convenient. Apply to C. Patrick.

New styles in Regal shoes for men at Ramsey's Shoe Store.

Pte. Lou. Anderson is expected home shortly from Overseas.

Methodist District Meeting will be held at Chesley on May 22nd.

Dr. Hall visited his brother, Rev. J. R. Hall of Sarnia this week.

The Bowling Club has enrolled 8 new members so far this season.

Womans Shoes clearing at $3.50 on the bargain table at Ramsey's Shoe Store.

Mrs. Glave is at St. Catherines attending the Convention of the Methodist Church.

For tired aching feet try a pair of Dr. Reed's cushion shoes, sold at Ramsey's Shoe Store.

Mr. Fred. McCrum, who has been spending the winter here, returned to Galt on Tuesday.

Mr. Wells sr. and Mrs. John Wells of Toronto are visiting at Mr. Henry Watt's, East Ward.

Patterson Bros. have a fine assortment of Hammocks ranging in price from $2.00 up to $7.00.

The Annual Departmental exams in the High School will be held between June 7th and June 29th.

Mrs. Stauffer has arrived home from an extended visit to her son, Mr. Millard Stauffer at Toronto.

The Evangelical Sunday Schools of this district will hold an Institute at Hanover on June 7th and 8th.

Lt.-Col. Weir and Major Moffet of the 160th took a short holiday in Scotland the first week in May.

A woman's patent vamp shoe with grey top is one of the new things. We have them.—Ramsey the Shoeman.

Miss Margaret Friedman of Chepstow spent a couple of days with her friend, Miss Mary Lindsay this week.

Try our self rising flour for bread, no yeast needed. The price will elevate it.—W. G. Searle, Central Grocery.

Mr. Jos. Condy had word recently that his nephew, Sergt. Harold Condy of Toronto, has been seriously wounded in France.

Something new at the old price, Pineapple. Do your preserving now. We have them.—The Central Grocery, W. G. Searle.

Mrs. James Cashanetts who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Kramer in Greenock returned to her in Preston on Wednesday.

Mr. George Yack of Winnipeg, who is home on an extended visit, spent a few days of last week with his cousin Mr. Albert Miller.

Mr. and Mrs. D. McKerracher accompanied Mr. and Mrs. John Chisholm to Chatsworth to spend Sunday with the latters parents.

Mr. A. E. Sharrington is preparing to put in a large tomato crop on the old Coulter place which he bought last week from Mr. Taylor.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Huether and Mrs. Todd sr. motored up from Guelph on Sunday. Mrs. Todd and Mrs. Huether will remain here for some time.

Dustbane will keep the dust from flying, use it when you are housecleaning, we have it in tins or bulk.—The Central Grocery, W. G. Searle.

The Annual meeting of the Brant Ladies Hospital Aid will be held in the Council Chamber on Sat. May 19, at 3.30 p. m. J. A. Rowand Secretary. Treas.

Pte. Charles Whitehead, who enlisted at Calgary in an Overseas Batt., is expected here this week on a visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Whitehead, while on his way East.

Mr. J. W. South announces the engagement of his daughter, Fannie E. to Mr. Sam W. Vogan, only son of Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Vogan, Walkerton, Ont. Marriage to take place early in June.

There is a quality reputation back of Coleman's Premium Hams and Bacon—always dependable because always the same. It will pay you to investigate. On sale at Goode & McKays.

It takes some "Noise" to tell some goods—not Goode & McKays—Their well selected stock sells on sight for their prices are right. Goode & McKay the money saving store, Merchant's Bank Walkerton.

An old man was sent down from Bruce Tp. this week to become an inmate of the House of Refuge. Unfortunately the people who were looking after him up there did not send along the necessary papers to secure his admittance and he had to board at the gaol for a few days until they could be communicated with.

Read the local entitled Last Request.

Miss Helen Bryce is visiting friends in Wiarton.

Sieveright's big sale starts to-day (Thursday.)

Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Ritchie spent Sunday with friends at Hanover.

Mr. W. H. McKay is spending a few days with his sister, Mrs. Ross at Forest.

Mrs. J. J. Moore, a pioneer of Culross, passed away on May 3rd in her 76th year.

Miss Afra Schumacher is home on a couple of weeks' holidays from New York City.

C. P. R. Homeseekers Excursion (Return) to West each week. Tickets and reservations at Hunter's.

North Bruce liberals will meet at Tara on June 7th to nominate a candidate to oppose Hugh Clark M. P.

To get the best values offered in town, read the Walkerton merchants announcements in the Telescope.

The best Coal Oil Stoves to buy is the New Perfection. We have them in 2, 3 & 4 Burners.—S. W. Vogan.

Miss Cecilia Schuurr arrived home from Buffalo Saturday on a visit to her mother, Mrs. Jos. Schuurr sr.

Don't forget the Philharmonic Society Concert to be given on June 12th under the auspices of the Soldiers Aid Tea Room.

The Telescope had a service card dated April 29th from Corp. J. J. Clancy, now of France, stating that he is still on the map.

Think of Two Hot Water bottles (regular $2.00 each; for $2.01—go halves with a friend and each get one for $1.00 at Sieveright's.

Every item is a bargain at Sieveright's One Cent Sale—Don't have your neighbor get ahead of you and then be sorry for the next six months.

Pte. John Douglas, a young soldier, who enlisted with the 71st, was reported on Monday, killed in action. He had previously won the Military Cross.

Chancellor McCrimmon, of McMaster University will deliver his famous lecture, "The Menace of Prussianism to Modern Civilization" at the Baptist Church, Friday night.

The popularity of the leading Grocery is increasing daily. We have an assortment of catsup, jams, jellies, marmalade, canned vegetables, fruits, fancy biscuits. Quality and price will interest every customer. Goode & McKay.

Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Brink, their son, Capt. (Dr.) Claire Brink, who was invalided home from the Front, Mrs. (Dr.) Stewart and Mrs. Hall of Calgary, motored over from Teeswater on Sunday and were guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Appel.

The Quarterly Official Board of the Methodist Church extended an unanimous invitation to Rev. C. W. Cosens to remain as pastor for the coming year. Mr. John McCool was named as delegate to attend District Meeting at Chesley, and L. A. Eedy elected steward vice J. B. Huether removed.

The many friends in town of Mr. Wm. Pryne who went to Brantford recently to take a responsible position as head miller for a large concern will be glad to know that he has more than "made good" in his new position. At the end of the first month, Mr. Pryne was given a pleasant surprise in the form of a twenty-five per cent increase in salary. Mrs. Pryne went down this week to try secure a suitable house which is a very difficult thing to do at present.

Stove For Sale.

Small coal stove for sale. Apply at Telescope.

Girl, Wanted

Apply to G. T. Rourke, Tailor and Men's Wear.

Wool Wanted

Highest prices. Cash or trade. S. A. Rife & Co.

Wanted

Experienced glue room man. Good wages, steady work. R. Truax & Son.

Still in England

The 160th Batt'n has not yet left for France. Up to yesterday, cables were received here by members of the Battalion in England.

Found

On the roadway near Public School a pair of gold rimmed spectacles in leather case. Owner may have same by calling at Telescope Office and pay for this advt.

A Busy Spot

Things are humming at the Walkerton Foundry this Spring. Mr. Ellinghausen has just received further orders for twenty five tons of castings and two tons of plow points.

Dedicate Lodge To-night

A number of local Masons will attend the official dedication of Cargill Lodge A. F. and A. M. to-night. The ceremony will be in charge of Wor. Bro. A. P. Johnston, D. D. G. M.

GETS $1500 ALIMONY

Greenock Farmer's Wife Also Retains Custody of Her Three Children—Mortgage Case at High Court is Adjourned.

High Court sittings were held here this week before Mr. Justice R. F. Sutherland. The case of the Coleridge Estate vs. Davis was adjourned to Toronto to take further evidence. This was an action to recover the amount of a mortgage from Davis, who is a shoe traveller. Miss Coleridge and Davis were partners in the shoe business at Teeswater, and Davis claims that he was holding the property and the mortgage in trust for Miss Coleridge and also that money was due him from Miss Coleridge. Sir George Gibbons of London appeared for the plaintiffs and J. B. Clarke K. C. of Mt. Forest for Davis.

The case of Mrs. Ezekiel Greaves of Greenock who sued her husband for alimony and the custody of her three children was settled after Mrs. Greaves had given her testimony. Mrs. Greaves gets her children, $1500, the piano for the use of the children, and some household furniture. Her husband pays his own costs and $250 of her costs.

Found.

A ladies silver mesh-bag. Owner may have same by calling at the Telescope and paying for this advt.

Farmers!

We can save you money in your plow points at the Walkerton Foundry. Highest price paid for scrap iron.

Walkerton Gives $1045.

Treas. Geo. D. McKay states that the Y. M. C. A. Fund for Walkerton is now complete and totals $1045.12. The fund hovered around nine hundred and eight last week but a welcome $25 from the young ladies of the Tea Room put it over the peak into the four figures and several other small subscriptions came in later.

Whiskey For The Hospital

Residents of Wiarton contributed three cases of whiskey the past week to the Bruce Country Hospital and Ripley citizens one case of a dozen bottles. The whiskey was not purchased for medicinal purposes and it was only after an interview with Licence Inspector Whyte that the needs of the county institution were recognized.

Blown Up By Shell

Pte. William Mortimer who was wounded in France on April 22nd, is now in a military hospital at Newcastle, Eng. doing as well as can be expected. The telegram received by his wife two weeks ago said that he had received gunshot wounds in the head and arms, but he writes home from the hospital that he was blown up by a shell. It was a great relief to his wife and family here to receive a letter from him with the assurance that he was doing well.

Killed at Vimy Ridge

Word has been received by old friends of the family here that W. C. Kent jr (Billy), son of Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Kent, was one of the brave Canadian boys who fell in the storming of Vimy Ridge on April 9th. The family resided here for several years, Mr. Kent conducting the west end flour mill. They are now living at Outlook, Sask. "Billy" was only seventeen when he enlisted with the 128th Batt'n and was the first member of that Western unit to get to the firing line. At the time of his enlistment he was a junior in the Bank of Montreal at home and a thorough favorite in the town.

Cadets Are Praised

The High School Cadets paraded for annual inspection on Tuesday afternoon. The Corps looked smart in their neat blue uniforms and performed the various movements to the entire satisfaction of the inspecting officer, Capt. Barclay of London, who expressed himself as highly pleased with their proficiency. Owing to the absence of 12 cadets on the farm, the Corps turned out less than 30 strong. The officers of the Cadet Corps at present are:—Instructor, Mr. Lamont; Capt., Clayton Fortune; 1st Lieut. Will Ramsey; 2nd Lieut. Wm. Polfuss; Sergeants, Jack Chalmers, Bernie Moore, Grant Hibbert, Louis Batte.

Wife Deserter in Court

An East Ward man who left his wife and family to follow another woman to the city was arrested at Toronto by Night Watchman Swanston on Friday and haled before the Magistrate on a charge of non-support and disobeying an order of the court. A couple of months ago the court ordered him to pay his wife $6 a week and this he had neglected to do. Magistrates Tolton and McLennan who sat on the case, decided that it would not mend matters to send him to gaol and gave him another chance. He claimed that he has secured a position in a munition factory at three-fifty a day and promised to pay up at the rate of ten dollars a week until caught up. A grown-up daughter paid the costs of the court, and the expense of bringing him up from the city, amounting to about $27.

$500 FOR POTATOES

Town Council Will Help Citizens to Get Seed Tubers Through the Local Preparedness League

At a special meeting held Thursday night the Town Council voted $500 to the local Preparedness Branch to supply seed potatoes to the citizens of Walkerton on the following terms: (1) cash down, or (2) payment on Oct. 15th, or (3) payment by one-third of crop. The potatoes, which will be part of the two carloads ordered by Mr. N. C. McKay of the Agricultural Dept. have not arrived yet. They will sell in the neighborhood of four dollars a bag. Messrs D. McKerracher and A. O'Neill are acting for the Preparedness League and about fifty bags have been disposed of on the share plan thus far. Altogether nearly 400 bags or two thirds of a car have been spoken for. The employees of the Knechtel Factory will take a good share of the potatoes, the money in payment being advanced by the Furniture Co. The Company is also giving a good deal of land in the neighborhood of the factory for potato cultivation. Ex-Warden McNab and some friends are putting in several acres of potatoes at the Power House.

Will Leave Colors At Bramshott

Capt. Roy Whitehead, adjutant of the 160th, writes home that on May 3rd, the Battalion would march to Bramshott, a distance of 8 miles, and deposit the colors in the Parish Church to be left there while the Battalion is absent in France. This is considered the most suitable place as four boys of the Battalion who died last winter, are buried in the churchyard there.

Injured In Auto Mishap

Mr. Bob Irwin had several ribs fractured in an auto accident on Tuesday, and his brother Hanks' new Studebaker roadster, which he was driving at the time, was somewhat battered. It happened on the big hill 1½ miles south and 1½ miles west of Formosa, the steepest hill in the Township. Mr. Irwin was driving up the steep incline and not being used to the car got stalled. When he threw on the emergency, the brakes broke letting the car go backwards down the hill. On the way down the car struck a boulder chucking the driver sharply up against the steering gear, the machine taking to the ditch. Mr. Irwin is able to get around with difficulty but is thanking his lucky stars that he got off as well as he did.

Death of Mrs. Havill

Mrs. H. A. Havill passed away at her home, Colborne St. Saturday evening, May 12th, in her seventieth year. She had passed through a long season of ill-health, had been very poorly of late and the end was not unexpected. She expressed the wish that she might live to see the lilacs again in bloom and it seemed hard that one who so loved nature should be taken just before the swelling buds of Spring burst into blossom. Mrs. Havill was a woman of exceptional talent as well as strong and beautiful personality and before failing health limited her activities, she made her influence felt on all sides for good. She adored flowers and the birds, and was a life-long friend and champion of dumb creatures. She was the founder and most active spirit in the Walkerton Humane Society and before Nature Study was on the curriculum, she provided the local schools with literature regarding bird-life and formed the children into Bands of Mercy. She was the champion of ill-treated animals and on more than one occasion, heartless drivers have cringed beneath the lash of her kind but righteously-indignant rebuke. Her kind offices were not confined to dumb creatures. In an unobtrusive way she delighted in helping people who needed help and in spreading happiness and good cheer about her. In the midst of varied activities, she had another hobby which always attracted the interest of visitors at her home, the collection of sea shells. Her large and beautiful collection comprises shells from all parts of the world, including a specially prized case of shells gathered by a friend in the Holy Land. Mrs. Havill, whose maiden name was Mary Lavroch, was born in Montreal. Her late girlhood was spent in Port Elgin where she first met Mr. Havill who was engaged in business there. Forty-five years ago Mr. Havill removed to this town and a month or so later in July, Mrs. Havill came to Walkerton as a bride. Besides her husband, she leaves a family of one son and two daughters who will treasure the memory of a loving and devoted mother. They are:—James, architect of Toronto, Mrs. H. E. Truax, and Miss May, of Walkerton. Private funeral was held at the home on Monday afternoon, conducted by Rev. Wilson, pastor of Knox Church. After the service interment took place at Walkerton Cemetery. The pall-bearers were:—Messrs James Whitehead, D. McKechnie, Ed. Pengelly, R. B. Sheffield, Harry McCrum, Arthur Collins.

CURRENT COMMENT

ANOTHER PEACE SUGGESTION.

The other day Count von Czernin, the Austrian Foreign Minister, announced that the proposal of the Central Powers for a peace conference, made a month or two ago, still hold good. To-day we learn that a meeting of prominent personages will be held in Berlin to promulgate some kind of peace proposals to the Entente Powers. It seems that the Count did not make his peace statement the other day without having the approval of Germany, Turkey and Bulgaria to his proposition. The idea is to hold a conference of all the belligerents, without an armistice, the hostilities to go on while peace discussions are being held.

We have no idea that the Allies will agree to any such proposal. They have already told the Central Powers the conditions on which they can have peace. If they are willing to accept these conditions the war can cease; if not, the war will go on. No doubt, however, they will be pleased to hear any propositions that they may make. But there will be no formal peace conference while German soldiers are in France or Belgium.

Then Germany has now to reckon with the United States. These peace advances come at a time when the Allies are rolling up the German war map on almost all fronts. The Allies now dominate affairs in France and in Mesopotamia and Palestine, and in Macedonia they have an army in reserve ready to strike when the moment arrives. In France, the British and French are pounding the Hindenburg line out of all shape. We are not surprised that the Kaiser is making another peace move. But we do not believe the Entente Powers will treat with him at all when the time comes to talk of peace terms.

WHAT BRITAIN HAS DONE.

There has been from time to time a feeling that Great Britain was not doing her full share of the fighting in this great war. That was especially the case when Verdun was being besieged by the Germans, and when Joffre and Neville were bearing the brunt of the battle alone. That feeling has long since died [illegible] yesterday at the annual meeting of the American newspaper publishers in New York. Mr. N. W. Rowell, the Liberal leader, embraced the opportunity to tell his American audience some thing of what both Canada and Britain had done. Mr. Rowell was able to show his audience that Britain carried a large share of the burden of the war upon her shoulders, and he told it in eloquent and inspiring language that must have deeply impressed those who heard him.

Mr. Rowell welcomed the Americans into the struggle, declaring that "Men like ourselves, from the office, the counting-house, the factory, the workshop and the farm, unaccustomed to bearing arms, have faced the best trained troops of Europe, directed by the most perfect military machine human skill and ingenuity have ever devised, and supported by the most scientific military appliances which modern science and organizing capacity have made possible, for our humanity. And at Ypres, at Festubert, Givenchy and the Somme and Vimy Ridge they have proven their worth, and have laid down their lives for Canada, for Great Britain, for Belgium, for France, and for every lover of liberty the world over." Mr. Rowell's oration was addressed to the citizens of the United States and to them must prove an inspiration.

Sterilizing Wounds.

A system of sterilizing wounds has been successfully applied at the hospital at Compagne under the direction of Dr. Alexis Carrel, has been extended to the American hospital at Neuilly and the American and Belgian hospitals in Belgium. The process as described in the Paris Matin, consists of the complete irrigation of the wound by means of a rubber tube with numerous branches perforated with many small holes. The process of healing is carefully watched, and if the normal healing does not ensue the wound is examined for foreign substances which might inadvertently have been allowed to remain, and irrigated anew. But the removal of muscles or bones not irreparably injured is not practised on the first or second examination as frequently as has been the case heretofore, and in this way parts have been saved which might otherwise have been lost. When examination shows that the wound is aseptic the wound is closed. Experience shows that in a sterilized cavity thus cleaned nature's healing process goes on with a rapidity hitherto unknown. The duration of the treatment is abridged about two-thirds and the number of amputations diminished fifty per cent. In some cases complete healing occurs in one-tenth the time required under ordinary treatment.

Better for Them.

"Turned you down, did you, say? Well, old chap, it's better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all."

"Yes, better, indeed," replied the rejected one. "Better for the post-office authorities, the florist, the messenger boy, the confectioner, a dozen waiters, twice as many taxi drivers, the jeweler, and half the theatres in town."—New York Times.

First Business Man—Senator Skinnum has promised to lend his influence to our plan. Second Business Man—Yes, but when Senator Skinnum lends his influence he generally charges a pretty stiff rate of interest.

"Do their lives blend well?" "Very. She has the gray matter and he has the long green."—The Lamb.

HER HUMBLE LOVER

She is very pale, most brides are pale when the time comes, however roseate they may be at other times—and there is a look in the violet eyes which goes beyond the vision of loveliness that confronts her in the lace-framed Venetian mirror. The dress is a marvel of millinery construction, the veil is a masterpiece of Malines handiwork; the pearls that bloom here and there on her hair, and on the thick satin, are priceless and famous, but in her heart of hearts Signa care for none of them. The two maids sigh into speechless rapture as, on their knees, they bend back and regard her; but she is utterly unconscious.

She sees—not her own bridal-decked loveliness, but the handsome face of the man whom she loves, and who loves her. It is of him she thinks, and if the reflection of her own peerless beauty affects her at all, it is only to putting this question to herself:

"Will he think me beautiful—will he be satisfied?"

Gradually, with slow precision, almost reverence, the maids slip on the pearl and diamond bracelets, arrange the Malines veil so that it covers the figure and transforms it into an apparition lovely enough to ravage the heart out of a man; then they say in a breath:

"You are ready, Miss!"

Signa starts softly and looks at them.

"I am afraid you have had a great deal of trouble," she says.

Lady Rookwell's maid shakes her head emphatically.

"Oh, no, no, miss! It has been a pleasure; and you do look very, very lovely."

"Oh!" echoes a voice at the door, and Laura Derwent enters. "Yes, I knew it! I said so from the first! My dear, you are just one of those few women who really look well in wedding clothes. As a rule women look pitiable, actually pitiable. I don't know whether it's their feelings or the dead-white of the things, but most of them have a red nose; it's a fact, positively. I remember Flora Welby—she was the beauty of the last season, you know, not me—she looked positively ghastly in her bridal costume. The poor thing prayed with tears in her eyes that we would let her have just one dash of color somewhere, just a red rose, or anything, you know, but of course, it was impossible. But you—my dear, you are a vision!"

"You must think I want a dash of color," says Signa. "You will send me away crimson with your flatteries, Laura, dear. The plainest of the plain would look nice in this array of finery."

"And you are—but no matter, as they say in the play; well, they are all ready. By this time I expect Lord Delamere is fidgeting in the vestry, though I suppose that is libel; he wouldn't be out of countenance anywhere, would he? Will you come down now, dear? Some of them have already gone?"

Signa is about to follow, when there comes a knock at the door, and a voice says:

"May I come in?"

The door opens, and in bursts Archie, and amidst the shrieks of the maids he flings himself into Signa's arms, who takes him into her beloved embrace as if the Malines and white satin were indeed nothing better than linen.

"You abandoned child!" exclaims Laura, in a fine frenzy of horrified alarm for the wedding dress. "Signa, don't let him crush you all to pieces like that! Great heavens! he's treading on your veil!"

But Signa only holds him the tighter, and Archie, utterly regardless of the consternation, clings to her and pushes her veil aside that he may kiss the beautiful face.

"I am so glad you have come, dear," she says. "Don't be frightened, Laura, he won't hurt my finery. I was waiting and hoping you would come, dear!"

"I should have been here long before," he says slowly, "but they kept me in the drawing room. I don't believe they wanted me to see you."

"You barbarian, we knew what havoc you'd work," says Laura, trying to drag him away.

"At last I got away, and—but I say, Signa what an awful swell you look: just like a figure on a Twelfth cake!"

"Thanks," said Signa, laughing, but

"Don't you wish you were going to marry her yourself?" says Laura. "Don't dance on her veil, you wicked boy! Do you know how much that cost, sir?"

"What's the matter?" retorts Archie, with lofty superiority. "If it cost a thousand pounds it wouldn't matter. You girls do not know how rich Hector is! You ought to go and stay with him in town. My! You can have just what you like; people treated us like princes—and look here, Signa, he gave me this just for pocket money while he's away, you know," and he produced from one of his numerous pockets a brand-new ten pound note.

"Did he!" says Signa, softly, her eyes beaming as gratefully—and more so—than if he had given it to her. "That was very kind, Archie."

"Kind!" echoes Archie; "I should think he is kind. You'd say so if you'd been with us. We're—or I, rather, because he's been busy—have had no end of a time. I've been to three theatres with the valet; and I've got a pony, which he says I can keep in the Grange stables; and I've got a big St. Bernard, and—oh! no end of things. It is nice to be an earl, isn't it, Miss Derwent?"

"Charming," says Laura, anxiously rearranging the veil and lace which Archie's embrace had disarranged; "the next best thing is to be the earl's wife. Don't you think you'd better go downstairs, my dear young savage?"

"There's no hurry," says Archie, seating himself on the bed and swinging his legs while he stares at Signa; "they're drinking sherry and eating biscuits just like a funeral——"

"Oh, Master Archie!" murmurs one of the maids, reproachfully.

"So they are," he says. "They wanted me to have some, but I knew better. I saw the breakfast laid in the dining-room as I came in, and I'm saving up for that. Mind you give me a big piece of cake, Signa! Hector says that you'll cut it yourself, and he's bought such a splendid knife, with blue stones down the ivory handle, for you to do it with—but I wasn't to mention that, though! I say."

"Well," says Signa, smoothing his curly hair with her white hand, her violet eyes dwelling on him fondly.

"Isn't he a swell, too? He's got a long blue coat and patent leather boots, and a shiny hat——"

"And didn't you hug him and rough his hat?" asked Laura, laughing; "that would make it complete."

"But Hector isn't half as swell as his fellow, the other earl, who is to be best man; he's dressed like the fashion plates in the tailor's shop and he says 'Haw!' after everything."

"He means Lord Clarence!" exclaims Laura, with a mock groan.

"Yes, that's his name; Hector calls him Clarry for short, you know. And I say, Signa, there's the most lovely flowers you ever saw waiting for you in the vestry; there's seven bunches; we bought 'em in Covent Garden last night, and yours is all white. Oh, here they are," he adds, coolly, as a maid brings in a magnificent bouquet of snowy blossoms. "Fine, aren't they? But I am forgetting my message. He told me to say, if I saw you, that I was to give you his love, and tell you to be quick."

"And so you sit and talk for a quarter of an hour and keep us all waiting!" exclaims Laura, laughing indignantly. "Go away. Signa, send him away. There is no more dreadful creature on the face of the earth than a boy!"

Gently but determinedly they bustle Archie out of the room, and the bridesmaids, coming up, surround the bride, and the start is made.

The duchess has already gone, several carriages have followed in the wake of hers, and the bride's carriage now comes up, drawn by a magnificent pair of greys, which my Lord of Delamere has procured at a fabulous price.

A thrill of excitement runs through the richly dressed crowd as Signa puts in an appearance, and her beauty tells upon them more than her magnificent dress and costly jewels.

"Every inch a countess," says Mr. Plembe, emphatically. "Lord Delamere is a lucky man." The duke has offered to give her away. "Though, by George! if I were a single man I'd keep her myself," he remarked more than once this morning and screws himself into a corner of the roomy carriage to make room for the thick satin and fairy-like lace, and the beautiful greys dash toward the church.

"Don't be nervous, my dear," he says, in his fatherly fashion, as the carriage pulls up and the strains of the organ can be heard. "It will soon be over."

"I am not nervous," says Signa, with a faint smile; "but—but I was thinking that if this is a quiet wedding, how trying a grand one must be!"

His grace chuckles.

"You're right, my dear," he says. "I'm of the same mind as the young man who took his sweetheart out for a walk, and when they came to a church said, with an air of surprise, 'Hallo! here's a church—let's get married!' He was a sensible young fellow, but then, you see, he wasn't an earl. If you must marry an earl, why, you must put up with the consequences!"

As they alight from the carriage the choristers' voices can be heard singing an anthem; and Signa, half in a dream, with her hand upon the duke's arm, walks up the path and enters the church, and as she does so she sees a tall, stalwart figure, clad in the conventional wedding garments, standing in front of the altar.

Pale, but calm and self possessed, he stands, his dark eyes fixed on the door, waiting for her. And never till her dying day will she forget the light that flashes in those eyes as they light upon her. Quite in opposition to tradition, he comes a step or two to meet her, and, taking her hands, leads her to the altar, as if he were too impatient to wait.

Then the rector, pale and nervous, begins the service amidst the death-like stillness of the crowded church.

As if in a dream, Signa stands till the pealing out of the organ and the rising of the choir voices proclaim that the service is over, and that Lord Delamere has taken to him self for wife Signa Grenville.

There is the usual flutter of excitement as Lord Delamere, taking her arm within his, leads her down the aisle to the vestry, and the old ladies, who have been for some inscrutable reason crying their eyes out during the ceremony, hastily dry them, and stand up to stare at the young couple.

The vestry is so small that only a few besides the principals manage to crowd in, though everybody is anxious to subscribe his or her name to the register. For years there has not been such a wedding as this in Northwell, and probably many years will roll away before there is such another.

"You sign here, my lady," says the clerk, with a little cough that is an admirable copy of the rector's. "Just on this line, my lady," he has to repeat before Signa can be made to understand that "my lady" means her.

With a little start and a crimson flush she takes the quill and writes her name—the name that is hers no longer.

No sooner has she done so than his grace, who has been edging near her rather suspiciously, takes her hand and with a smile says:

"An old man's privilege, my dear; Delamere won't mind, eh?" kisses her forehead.

Signa, all trembling and blushing, shrinks back a little, but Hector presses her hand, and nods with a bright laugh. Then every one who can get near having written his name, there is a general move to the carriages.

As the brilliant assemblage passes down the lane, lined with children and backed by a large crowd of people in holiday attire, cheer after cheer rises, his grace coming in for a good hearty "hurrah;" but a burst of spontaneous admiration greets Signa and Lord Delamere, and, at a signal from the school-mistress, the children upset their baskets of flowers upon the path, Signa, smiling, with suspicious moisture in her lovely eyes, as she walks to her carriage on Hector's arm, treads on a carpet of white blossoms.

"I'd 'a said it was a waste," growls Whitefield, who had put on his best, and stands amongst the crowd: "a regular waste, if it was for any one else; but she's beautiful enough to walk on flowers all the rest of her days!"

With a clang the steps of the carriage go up, the footmen spring up behind, the grays, who have been chafing their hearts out, dash away for the Villa, followed by a long line of carriages, and for a few minutes Signa and Lord Delamere are alone.

Neither of them speaks; but they look into each other's eyes, and he takes her in his arms and kisses her; perhaps it is better than words at such a moment.

"It ought to have been at the Savoy," says Laura, in an audible whisper, when they are all seated at the breakfast-table, and the gentle clatter of knives and forks and the popping of champagne corks chime in, not inharmoniously, with the chatter of the guests. "It was a splendid wedding. I never saw anything go off better. And as for Signa!" she stops and, smiles across the table at the bride in her white satin and veil—"she was like a vision. When I'm married, I shall look ghastly; white-faced people, with my colored hair, always do."

"Is that the reason one meets so many men in the dumps at times?" says his grace. "I never could understand why you refused so persistently," and he chuckles.

It is a very merry breakfast, and in this affords a strong contrast to the usual bridal meal. Never has Lady Rookwell been in more amusing vein, or his grace in better humor; while Hector—unlike the ordinary bridegroom, who generally looks as if he had strayed into the company by mistake, and heartily wished himself out again—is as full of wit and geniality as he was at Lady Rookwell's dinner party when he made Lady Bumbleby laugh so much.

But presently there comes a pause, and the rector, getting up and looking very much as he does on Sunday in the pulpit, clears his throat, coughs, and begins his speech. It is not necessary to set it down at length. There never was a wedding-speech that ever was worth pen and ink, except that of the "best man" who got up, said "I'm the best man here!" and sat down again; but the rector grew quite pathetic as he referred to his dear Signa, whom he had loved as a daughter, and whose future happiness was his one great wish and care, and almost shed tears when he spoke of the happiness which it afforded him to welcome "his dear young friend" as his nephew. Aunt Amelia actually did shed tears, and Lady Rookwell kept her grim scarcely suppressed. But there was a sudden thrill of expectation when Hector, Lord Delamere, rose to return thanks for the health of the bride, proposed by the duke.

Tall and distinguished, with his handsome face so full of happiness that the haggard lines seem to have disappeared and left him ten years younger, with his broad blue ribbon across his white waistcoat, he looked a worthy successor to the long line of ancestors who had made the name of Delamere famous in the annals of their country.

"My dear friends," he says, "how should a man most fittingly express the love and pride which swell his heart when he hears the good wishes of his friends expressed on behalf of the woman he loves more than life itself! That this is the crowning hour of my life, who can doubt who knows the dear girl I have won for a wife; but I am all unworthy to wear so great a treasure, that all my days will be spent in watching over and guarding it. I can only say, in simple, honest words: I thank you in her name and in my own for your wishes, and in return I trust that one and all may learn the deep and solemn joy which is my lot to-day."

Simply, almost gravely spoken, the words seem to sink into the hearts of all of them, and when the deep, musical voice trembles slightly as he speaks of his unworthiness, there is so much of the pathos of a strong man's remorse for the past, that a sudden film comes over Lady Rookwell's sight, and a tear trickles down her cheek.

As for Signa, she sits half amazed and bewildered by the occasion; it is all so wonderful that she can scarcely realize that he who stands beside her is her husband, and that the solemn words of reverent devoted love are her tribute.

It is an awkward moment, but fortunately Archie steps in to the rescue.

"Aren't you going to cut the cake, Signa?" he says, abruptly, and with a look that tells how hard it has been to keep the question back.

"Ah! the cake, Archie!" says Hector, and he gives Signa the jewelled knife, and drags the enormous cake near to her.

She gets up and plunges in the knife, Archie kneeling on his chair and staring with excitement.

Perhaps it is because she is a little nervous, or feels herself the centre of so many eyes, but her hand trembles, and she holds the knife so awkwardly that it slips, and the keen steel edge cuts her finger. It is the merest trifle of a cut, and no one notices it but Hector, whose eyes are as keen as the knife-blade where his darling is concerned. Without a word he takes up her lace handkerchief and binds it round her hand, and she slips it under the table.

"You have performed your little ceremonial," he says, aloud. "Now I'll do the real work," and he cuts some slices, giving the first, a huge one, to Archie.

Cutting the cake is generally a signal for the retreat of the bride, and already the grays are pawing up Lady Rookwell's neat gravel path.

"Come, my dear," says Laura, and Signa is borne off.

A maid has been engaged to meet them in Paris with Lord Delamere's valet; so that Laura, as she puts it, really has to earn her bread as head bridesmaid; she and her maid are seeing to the packing of the immense Imperial.

The two have begun to divest Signa of her bridal attire, the maid handling the costly garments as if they were something almost too precious to touch. Suddenly Laura, on her knees before the dress, utters a faint cry of alarm.

"My dear! Why, what's this?"

"What?" asks Signa, looking down. "Oh, that!—what a pity! I cut my finger instead of the cake. I didn't know it had done any damage."

"Damage!" says Laura, staring ruefully at three little crimson specks on the otherwise spotless white. "Why, my dear, it has ruined it!"

"Ah!" exclaims the maid, turning her head, and uttering the cry in a hushed voice of horror. "Blood! It's an omen!"

(To be continued.)

She is Always Ready To Tell Reason Why

SHE IS RECOMMENDING DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Miss E. Demers States They Cured Her of Sick Headache and Rheumatism from Which She Suffered for Six Months.

Hull, Que., May 10—(Special)—Cured of chronic indigestion, sick headache and rheumatism, from which she had suffered for six months, Miss E. Demers, of 190 Maisonneuve street, here, gives all the credit for her cure to Dodd's Kidney Pills. She is recommending them to all her friends who suffer from kidney troubles of any kind.

"I am always ready to tell what Dodd's Kidney Pills did for me," says Miss Demers. "I am never without them in the house. My case was one of the worst.

"I had tried several medicines from the doctor and was getting no better when I decided to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I took seven boxes and all my rheumatism, sick headache and indigestion was gone.

"When my father saw how much good Dodd's Kidney Pills had done me he began to take them for kidney trouble. He is better now."

Dodd's Kidney Pills make healthy kidneys. Healthy kidneys strain all the impurities, all the poisons, out of the blood. They are the greatest of all tonics.

Natural Refrigerators.

At Thompson Falls in Western Montana there is a well from which a small current of air constantly flows. In summer the air is at 35 Fahrenheit, which is about that of a scientifically constructed refrigerator.

The owner of the land on which the of tightly fitted lumber over the well, well is found has built a small room which is right beside the house. In this room he keeps all the perishable food that his family uses. His store is not far away, and he built a room in the basement of that building that is connected with the well by an underground pipe. In the pipe there is a damper that can be closed or opened by means of a chain that runs up through the floor to the office above. There he keeps all the perishable merchandise that he has for sale.

The current of air is very nearly constant in temperature, says Youth's Companion. In the winter it is warmer than the outside air, and the storeroom can be used to keep articles from freezing.

No satisfactory explanation of the reason for this current of air has been found. No open passage was encountered when the well was dug, but the current seemed to come from every direction through the gravel at the bottom. At the opening in the casement of the store the force is sufficient to blow a handkerchief held in both hands straight out, and a hat placed at the entrance of the pipe is at once blown out.—Exchange.

Minard's Liniment Cures Distemper.

OFT INVADED ROUMANIA

Ravaged by Macedonian, Roman, Goth, Hun, Bulgar and Magyar.

"Bravest and most honorable of all the Thracian tribes," old Herodotus called the Getae who inhabited the rich land between the mouth of the Danube and the eastern terminus of the Carpathians, capable men with bows and arrows, daredevil riders, but destined within a few short generations after the historian's death to suffer, once the nations began to dream imperial dreams, the penalties of their position. For in the fourth century before Christ, Philip of Macedon, beginning the career of conquest which was to lead his son, Alexander the Great, to the gates of the day on the borders of the Axus and the Indus, found the fertile Dobrudja a prize worth taking, and the alliance of the Getae kings a prime necessity in his campaign against the Scythians of southern Siberia.

He laid siege to their capital, but the early Roumanians, apparently, gave up without a pitched battle, preferring to die in Philip's battle with the eastern areas. But when Alexander marched eastward the Getae made their first essay in the unhappy policy of neutrality—unhappy, because, while they were not forced to yield their independence Alexander's troops burned their wooden towns, and marched at will through their flourishing countryside.

Like the modern Roumanians, offered at one time the bribe of Bessarabia by the entente, these forefathers of the nation found the sweet as well as the bitter in their cup. In the first century of the Christian era their power under their king, Decebalus, had grown so great that the Emperor Domitian himself, worn with other wars, was willing to pay an annual tribute for their friendship and continued neutrality. Not ten years, however, elapsed before Trajan, needing the civilized kingdom as his outpost against barbaric Asia, swept the land twice with his legions, and rendered it for nearly two centuries to come a Roman province. It was during these years that Roman soldiers, settled on the soil in vast numbers by a government which knew how to gain and keep the loyalty of its veterans and their sons, gave to Roumanian life and language the Roman culture which has characterized them to this day.

Scarcely a full century, however, went by without Roumania's becoming once more the battleground. Quadi and Marcomanni from the Austrian forest rushed the frontier in 212. In 217 at last, finding the Roman land more of a hindrance than a help in the solution of the increasingly difficult problem of empire's defence, the legions abandoned it, leaving such colonists and natives as cared to remain behind to the mercy of Roumania's first German overlords.

For a thousand years the tide of war between eastern savagery and western barbarism rushed back and forth across the little land by the Black sea. Nomad tribes of Huns, defeated on the Roman borders in 375, devastated the fields of the discouraged peasants for a century. Then the greatest of the Huns, Attila, swept it again with fire and sword, impressed its husbandmen into his cruel service, on his way to the great battle at Chalons, where the Hun power was finally to be broken. Only for Roumania far from the protection of Frankish-Roman armies, the exodus of these wild men was quite as horrible as their original invasion.

Avars, Bulgarians, Hungarians in their turn through the dark centuries, laid waste its fertile plains, settled for awhile, and passed on their way. Against almost insuperable obstacles something of the old Roman language and culture, something of the old Roman fighting spirit, persisted. No foe of honor ever called the Roumanians cowards. Out of the welter of invasions, revolutions, foreign overlordships, palace murders, ignorance, there appeared at last in the latter part of the thirteenth century the two fairly stable principalities of Wallachia and Moldavia. Wallachia comprising the foot of the boot-shaped figure which Roumania makes in the curves of the Danube on the maps of the day, and Moldavia the leg running up to the Russian border.—Exchange.

Minard's Liniment Cures Garget in Cows.

From Emeric to America.

The name America, as you may know, comes from Amerigo, Vespucci's Christian name. And Amerigo comes from Emeric. One would scarcely expect the name of Emeric, the name of a pious Hungarian prince of the eleventh century, who was made a saint, to take the form of Amerigo in Italian, and of Amery and Emery in English. The name in German, says the Indianapolis News, but little changed from the original, is Emmerich. This obscure Hungarian saint has been a person of consequence in this world, for from his name has come that of this great continent. In the Fifteenth century, in the Italian form of Amerigo, it was bestowed upon an Italian navigator, surnamed Vespucci, and this continent, by a still further mutilation of the name, came to be known as America. When King Stephen of Hungary was choosing a name for his son, he could scarcely have imagined that the name chosen was to be the parent of the word America, and that poor old Christopher Columbus was thereby to be despoiled of a recognition that is far from being compensated for by the term Columbia.

BANISH PIMPLES AND ERUPTIONS

IN THE SPRING MOST PEOPLE NEED A TONIC MEDICINE

One of the surest signs that the blood is out of order is the pimples, unsightly eruptions and eczema that come frequently with the change from winter to spring. These prove that the long indoor life of winter has had its effect upon the blood, and that a tonic medicine is needed to put it right. Indeed, there are few people who do not need a tonic at this season. Bad blood does not merely show itself in disfiguring eruptions. To this same condition is due attacks of rheumatism and lumbago, the sharp, stabbing pains of sciatica and neuralgia; poor appetite and a desire to avoid exertion. You cannot cure these troubles by the use of purgative medicines—you need a tonic, and a tonic only, and among all medicines there is none can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for their tonic, life-giving, nerve-restoring powers. Every dose of this medicine makes new rich, blood, which drives out impurities, stimulates every organ and brings a feeling of new health and energy to weak, tired, ailing men, women and children. If you are out of sorts give this medicine a trial and see how quickly it will restore the appetite, revive drooping spirits, and fill your veins with new, health-giving blood.

You can get these Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A WARY LLAMA.

Museum Man Tells of Hunting at 18,000 Feet Above Sea.

Hunting the llama in the rarified atmosphere which prevails at an altitude of some 18,000 feet is told about by Alfred M. Collins, of Philadelphia, in a pamphlet issued by Wilfred H. Osgood, assistant curator of mammalogy and ornithology at the Field Museum of Natural History, Chicago. The expedition of which Mr. Collins was a member with Lee Garnett Day, of New York, and representatives from the American Museum of Natural History, this city, and the Field museum, went direct to Mollendo, on the coast of Peru, and started inland on a steady climb of mountain ranges until they reached Arequipa, 7,500 feet above sea level, in the early part of January, 1915. Mr. Collins says:

"The next day we proceeded on our way, and at a point 12,500 feet above sea level, called Pampa da Arrieros, we left the train, hearing that at this point the animals we were desirous of getting were to be found. Having finally reached our hunting ground, and with a considerable amount of stored up energy after three weeks' idleness on the steamer, it not being yet noon, we at once made arrangements for mules in order to make a hunt that day.

"After climbing several thousand feet higher, we suddenly came in sight of our game. Dismounting and starting to run after it, we suddenly realized the height at which we had arrived, our hearts beating so rapidly that it became impossible for us to continue. The rest of the day we traveled at a snail's pace after the game, which always kept in a very tantalizing way within sight, but out of range. Finding that it would be impossible for us to come up with it, we decided to return to our mules and go back to camp.

"A sudden downpour drenched us to the skin, and a little later darkness overtaking us, and the chill of night coming on, we suffered intensely from the cold. The great heat of the day, the drenching by the rain, and the sudden chilling of the air brought on all of us attacks of soroche. It was with great difficulty that we were enabled to get back to our rooms in the railroad station and all night long the whole party suffered intensely from chills and fever.

"The next day, and for several days following, we hunted these wary animals and each day becoming more and more accustomed to the altitude, we were able to travel not only greater distances, but at a higher altitude. Upon hearing from the Indians that there was a water hole high up on one of the mountains just below the snow line where game was very plentiful, we planned a hunt with the idea of spending a night at this water hole, believing that just before dark or early in the morning might prove to be the best time to get our game. Hour after hour we traveled, and higher and higher we climbed finding the water hole much farther away than we had supposed and at an altitude which taxed our hearts and lungs to the utmost.

"I will never forget the night spent at this point, 18,000 feet above sea level in a little shelter of stones which had been erected by the Indians, where they watched for game. What was known as a water hole consisted simply of damp soil where, even by digging we could not get enough water to satisfy our own thirst, let alone that of our mules. All night long I was kept awake by the shaking of my companion, who had one chill after another, suffering myself all the time from a most terrific headache and gasping all night for breath. The next morning, as soon as it was light enough for us to see, we hurried down the mountain for several thousand feet, and then, as the sun came up, we fell asleep, exhausted by the experiences of the night. Not only did the altitude affect us, but the air was so dry and the wind on those mountains blew so violently that our faces and hands became badly sunburned. In addition to the entire skin coming off my face four times in ten days, my nose swelled to at least double its size, my lips were badly cracked, and almost constantly bleeding, and my hands were blistered on the palms as well as the backs.

"It is hard to imagine any animals being able to live where there is such a lack of vegetation but these sure footed animals grow fat there. They are seldom hunted by the white men, but the Indians are continually after them making them exceedingly shy and difficult to obtain. While the guanaco and vicugna (llamas) were found on the same mountains, they were never found together. Those that we obtained were shot at long range. A small deer, the guemal, was found on these same mountains, but much lower down, its range not exceeding an altitude of from 12,000 to 15,000 feet while the vicugna and guanaco were found from 14,000 to 18,000 feet.

"Pampa de Arrieros is a small settlement of a couple of dozen mud houses occupied mostly by the workers on the railroad, a church, and a railroad station where we succeeded in obtaining rooms. As it was a meal station we were able to get very good food indeed. We hunted mostly from mule back, but had considerable difficulty in getting fresh mules, as the climbing was exceedingly hard on them and it seems to be against the principles of the owners to feed them any more than what they were able to pick up for themselves, the consequence being that after a mule had been ridden for a couple of days it became so exhausted it was worthless to us.

"The gait of the guanaco is a canter or easy lope, and by bounds they attain great speed. Reddish brown on back and lighter under parts; cool grey tone of head and ears; head held erect, it has the neigh of a horse, neck of a camel, feet of deer and swiftness of the devil! The call is a weird, tremulous sound and half idiotic neigh."—New York Evening Post.

DRS. SOPER & WHITE

SPECIALISTS

Piles, Eczema, Asthma, Catarrh, Pimples, Dyspepsia, Epilepsy, Rheumatism, Skin, Kidney, Blood, Nerve and Bladder Diseases.

Call or send history for free advice. Medicine furnished in tablet form. Hours—10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2 to 6 p.m. Sundays—10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Consultation Free

DRS. SOPER & WHITE

25 Toronto St., Toronto, Ont.

Please Mention This Paper.

Spanking Doesn't Cure!

Don't think children can be cured of bed-wetting by spanking them. The trouble is constitutional, the child cannot help it. I will send FREE to any mother my successful home treatment, with full instructions. If your children trouble you in this way, send no money, but write me to-day. My treatment is highly recommended to adults troubled with urine difficulties by day or night. Address,

Mrs. M. Summers,

BOX 8 WINDSOR, Ontario.

Nicaragua Holds War Record.

Across Nicaragua nature has dug 121 miles of another interocean canal out of a total distance of 168 miles. Uncle Sam has long feared some other nation might buy this strip and build a canal in competition with that of Panama. To prevent this the United States bought on April 11th this year, for $3,000,000, the entire canal route rights across Nicaragua, also a naval station near each end of the possible canal. This and other large American influences are placing the affairs of Nicaragua on a more sound basis. In future, for example, it will be impossible for a miscreant like the recent President Zelaya, nicknamed "The Unspeakable," who had his score of wives and forty-five children, and hundreds of murdered victims to his credit, used to say: "The Nicaraguans understand only harsh measures, and they shall not want for them." During his seventeen years of control, the country went through sixteen wars. Nicaragua's affairs are not ideal yet, but her future is sure, at least, to be brighter than her past.—World Outlook.

Will It Work Both Ways?

Mrs. Brown—The trousers which I have washed for the little one have shrunk so much that the poor child can hardly put them on.

Her Friend—Try washing the [illegible], and he might shrink too.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED — PROBATIONERS TO train for nurses. Apply Welland Hospital, St. Catharines.

LADIES WANTED TO DO PLAIN light sewing at home, whole or spare time, good pay, work sent any distance, charges paid. Send stamp for particulars. National Manufacturing Co., Montreal, Que.

WANTED—CARD ROOM HELP FOR Woolen Mill, Cleaners and Tenders for day and night work. For particulars, apply to the Slingsby Mfg. Co., Limited, Brantford, Ont.

MONEY ORDERS.

THE SAFE WAY TO SEND MONEY is by Dominion Express Money Order.

Canton's City of the Dead.

In Canton, about eighty miles from Hongkong, there is a place known as the City of the Dead. There are small houses, in each of which a corpse is lodged, at the rate of $25 for the first three months and then at a reduced rate until the geomancers employed by the relatives of the dead person decide when and where the corpse shall be buried. Silk or paper lanterns and imitation fruit are hung from the roof. There are screens in each room between the door and the coffin. Tea, fruit and any other of food which the dead person ate when on earth are placed on an altar before the coffin each morning. There are cardboard servants standing to wait on him with pipes or cards or cups of tea. There are also handsome paper females placed to guide his spirit on the way to heaven.

Minard's Liniment Cures Diphtheria.

Dawn.

Somewhere the snipe now taps the drum;
The moth goes fluttering upward in the heath;
And where no [illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited.

Gents,—I cured a valuable hunting dog of mange with MINARD'S LINIMENT after several veterinaries had treated him without doing him any permanent good.

Yours, etc.,

WILFRID GAGNE.

Prop. of Grand Central Hotel, Drummondville, Aug. 3, '04.

MODERN RUSSIA.

The first great military victory of modern Russia was gained on the bloody field of Poltava, when the army of Charles XII. of Sweden was completely defeated by the forces of Peter the Great.

The ambitious and powerful Swedish monarch began his Russian invasion of 1707 at the head of 43,000 well trained veterans, following almost the same route as was chosen by Napoleon more than a century later.

In the first clashes, he was successful, but in pursuing the Russians with such haste and recklessness that the army was soon hopelessly involved in swamps and marshes. Peter reorganized his force and made his stand at Poltava, and the battle fought there on July 8, 1709, ranks among the greatest in history.

The Russian bear, often whipped, now fought ferociously. The Russians overpowered the army of Charles XII. by force of numbers. Charles XII. was wounded before the battle commenced and directed the movements of his ragged and half starved troops from a litter, in which he was carried about the field.

The Russian artillery worked havoc in the ranks of the Swedish king. Charles, with a few men, managed to escape and made his way to Turkish soil, where he found refuge from the wrath of the Czar.

Minard's Liniment Cures Colds, E

A Cause of Drowning.

In swimming under a blazing sun the body is submerged at a low temperature, while the full force of the sun beats on the unprotected head. To add to the obvious dangers of such a state of things the blood is forced into the head by the pumping action of the limbs in swimming. One forcing the arteries in other parts of the body to be overfilled. The consequence is often a violent headache, which may be followed by insensibility. The swimmer sinks and unless help is at hand adds another to the long list of the mysteriously drowned.

Prejudice, like the spider, makes everywhere its home, and lives where there seems nothing to live on.—Thomas Paine.

Spring Days are Joy Days for the man or woman who is wise enough to jump from the heavy foods of Winter to the cereals, fruits and green vegetables of Spring. Two or three Shredded Wheat Biscuits with berries and milk and some green vegetables make a delicious, nourishing meal. Puts the body in top-notch condition for the day's work.

Made in Canada.

FOR THE AVERAGE PERSON

There are some things about the organization of the war time life of a country that seems utterly inexpli-ible. For instance, after 9 o'clock at night in any public place in London one may not buy a packet of cigarettes. If a group of men sitting at a table exhaust their supply a waiter will wheel over to them a little cart aden with cigarette packages and ach one in the party may buy a single cigarette. No amount of plead-g will convince the attendant that e might just as well sell a package a time.

There certainly isn't any ultimate onomy of time or service in this y of doing it. The way people oke, men and women alike, in pub- places doesn't suggest, either, that re is any particular saving of to-co. But it's the rule, under the nce of the Realm act, that legis-e marvel which has put into the s of the War Cabinet a miscel-y of power which frequently are sed in most illogical ways. The prietors of the places seem to be oughly devoted to the strict en-ment of these regulations which le them to make an additional , In the matter of cigarettes, for ice, when they are bought one time the price is hoisted about 50 ent. above the price that would ld on a package basis.

Government has decided that ery tea and coffee shall be im- for an indefinite period, in or- save tonnage. This would not ause a very severe hardship, be- there are preposterously big of both these staples in ry. But the prices of both tea coffee have been steadily mount- up, despite threats of the Gov-ent to commandeer supplies and et them at fixed rate involving a ir and reasonable profit.

one goes to a grocer's shop sugar he will be allowed perhaps much as three or four pounds, pro-d he makes aggregate purchases other articles amounting to 2 shill-gs or 3 shillings. Soda is almost to be had and only in very small antities, a pound or two at a time. explanation of this is that an ntire quantity of soap was des-ed in a munition works fire and losion, soap is getting scarcer all e time, and of course more expen-e too.

A woman going into a shop in the arly evening to ask for some ordin-y black hairpins was told after the ttendant had consulted her wrist atch that it was too late to sell hair-ins. No more vocal or vociferous complaints are heard about any of the ar time deprivations than those which relate to hairpins. Quite a long time ago the further manufacture of these presumably very necessary articles was prohibited. It is insisted that there are plenty in the country, but somehow when one looks at the ladies' coiffeurs he gets the impression that the dear creatures are economizing a bit.

In fact, the shortage of hairpins for the ladies and of barber's shop facilities for the men constitute two of the most universally present evidences of a tendency to revert to barbarism. Barbers are scarce, and hairpins, whether they are scarce or not, are not always handy. The feeling cannot be avoided, as one observes the results, that a nation with an extra day's whiskers on the men's faces and with the women's hair at loose ends is making a bigger sacrifice of the semblances of civilization than it would in cutting out one square meal a day. And, after all, a little consideration will force the conclusion that there is some ground for this. Whoever saw a picture of an anarchist unadorned by a tropical luxuriance of whiskers. If whiskers and anarchy go hand in hand there must be a good reason for it, wherefore the conclusion that a marked tendency to increase the per capita use of whiskers must indicate a corresponding trend away from the established rules of organized society.

One of the curious rules is that which requires a visitor at any of the great public administration buildings to prepare, on entering, a card showing his name, business and the particular person he wishes to meet. This card is submitted to an attendant, who inspects it and hands it back to the caller. He is then free to go about his business—and might scatter devastating bombs all over the place; but betide him if he lose that credential before leaving the building, for he must surrender it to the attendant when he does so. Theoretically at least there is no way to get out otherwise.

NEW BOOKS

A singular personality again comes to light with the publication this month of Mary MacLane's "I, Mary MacLane." The author of this surprising book of self-revelation is a native of Butte, Montana. Fifteen years ago—at the age of nineteen—she published "The Story of Mary MacLane," which at once attracted the attention of the public for its bold, critical self-analysis. The book was in many ways amateurish, but it had unique literary merit, which was not appreciated in this country. It did, however, have an enormous sale, and brought her the money which enabled her to extend her horizon and broaden her experience by travel. For the next eight years she was much in the East, for some time in London and Paris. The old solitary mood was thrown aside, she plunged into a bright world of friendships and eventfulness. She stored up vivid mental images of persons and places, which her keen, merciless intellect was ever at work upon—dissecting, analyzing, interpreting. Fifteen years after the publication of her first book the woman who writes "I, Mary MacLane," is of broader experience, more practised vision, more matured artistic power. A long period of illness which followed closely on the years of travel swept her back to the old introspective self, from which she was able to look out on scenes and people as across a chasm. It gave her perspective. Her book is at once an illuminating and spell-binding analysis of the hidden self of Everyman, and a piercing, satiric comment on the outer aspect of affairs and men.

That psychology is being turned to practical account by big business today is evidenced by the action of the National Cash Register Company, who recently engaged the services of the noted French [illegible], Dr. W. de Kerlor, for a period of several months, during which time he made innovations in their system which have already saved them many thousands of dollars.

Dr. de Kerlor is visiting this country, lecturing on the practical application of psychology to every day life, a subject which he finds the American business man knows very little about. In order to give the public of the United States the sort of information he believes they need in regard to modern psychic discoveries, he has translated from the French, Emil Boirac's "Our Hidden Forces." This book was awarded the Fanny Emden Prize of two thousand francs by the Academie des Science of Paris. It introduces the individual to a remarkable fund of powers and capabilities which he has allowed to remain inert, and which he will be surprised to learn that he possesses.

Among the six "best-sellers" in the United States, as listed by the Bookman in its May issue, Robert Hichens' new novel, "In the Wilderness" (Briggs), stands second. It is heading the list in the Philadelphia Public Ledger's roll of books most in demand in that city; while the Chicago Daily News rates it the third most popular book in Chicago.

POETRY

AN EGYPTIAN GRAVE.

Somewhere in Egypt there is an ancient tomb,
A tomb where one was laid to rest
Two thousand years before the Romans came.
It is as old, old as the Pyramids,
Yet not so old as war.
One night, between the shells, we dug a secret grave,
Trenching the shifting sand—
The land was silver clad below the moon.
For Michael Galligan, the Irish lad,
We dug that grave, the Englishman and I.
We dug it deeper than the shells could tear;
Deep, where the screaming would not break his rest;
Deep where there was no blood.
Down in the hollow dark we struck a vault.
We entered softly in,
Carrying Michael, wrapped in gunny sack;
Our torches glittered in the gloom,
There lay the mummied body of a king,
All wrapped in cloth of gold and thick with gems,
Upon a couch of ivory.
And there was room for Michael, so we laid him there,
Still in his makeshift shroud,
Beside that kingly, still magnificence.
Then we went out and covered up the door
And smoothed the sand.
I wonder what they think, those two,
Lying together in that ancient grave
Somewhere in Egypt.
—Margaret Coombs.

THE AVERAGE WOMAN'S LIFE.

Born,
Bred,
Wooed,
Wed, Worried,
Dead.
—D. G. Hickens.

TEACH US TO LISTEN WHEN WE PRAY.

God never meant that human law should hold
A straw athwart the freedom of His sea,
Warm rain and sun are of His charity.
Kind earth and time and space are gifts of old.
He grieves that virtue can be bought and sold,
That innocence must weep and shame go free,
That little kings forget nobility,
And bravery is counted less than gold.

Our chosen God, Thy teachings we forsake,
"Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done," we say,
The daily bread Thou sendest [illegible] break
But let our wilful feet go far astray,
A trifler of Thy only Son we make—
Lord, teach us how to listen when we pray.
—M. Kingsley Richardson.

THE STAGE

This time it cost Lew Fields $45,000 to cater to his ambition to become a second Warfield and act the star part in "Bosom Friends." Charles B. Dillingham offerd him that sum if he and Joe Weber would head a big musical revue this season, Weber to be paid an equal amount, and the money to be deposited in a New York bank before they started. They could draw $3,000 a week for thirty weeks, he told them, whether the revue was a sucess or a failure.

But Fields is honest in his determination to be accepted as a serious actor, and so he is found playing this simple comedy surrounded by a company that is so expensive there is practically not one chance in ten he can break even on the investment.

The Frohman company will produce three new plays by J. M. Barrie on May 7th in New York — "The New World," "Old Friends," and "The Old Lady Shows Her Medals." The date of the production is the anniversary of Charles Frohman's death on the Lusitania. All the proceeds will go toward establishing an American theatrical war relief fund.

Nazimova is bare-legged and wet when she enters "'Ception Shoals," having swam from her lighthouse home to the yacht where the first act occurs. Though utterly uninformed about sex she is asked to assist at an accouchement on board the boat, and thereafter in the play her ideas of life are largely obstetrical.

Mr. Ade was approached not long ago in the search for some one to dramatize Booth Tarkington's "Penrod" tales. He declined the commission. "If it was good," said he, "Tarkington would get the credit. If it was bad, they'd blame me."

"Within the Law" is a success in Paris, where, however, it was radically revised because of conflict between the lines of the play and some of the French criminal statutes.

"Potash and Perlmutter in the Movies" perhaps will be the name of the next installment of the P. & P. serial. Alexander Carr will return to the role of Perlmutter.

THE FEN COUNTRY.

Stilt-Walking Farmers of the Wash in England.

The events of the last two years have resulted in the bringing into prominence, unexpectedly, of many places and districts. In the actual war zones this has meant that little villages, and even farms and isolated hillocks which, a few months ago, were known only to the people who lived thereabouts or to those who had passed that way, are now better known the world over than many great cities. So it is also with certain districts, far away from the turmoil of actual warfare. They have become famous because they are capable of supplying the pressing need of some belligerent or neutral. Amongst the districts to become thus famed is that tract of lowland which gathers itself about the Wash on the east coast of England, and calls itself the Fens. The cause of its present celebrity is potatoes. Low and flat, seamed by innumerable streams and dykes, the soil of the fen country is peculiarly well adapted for the growing of potatoes, everywhere so much in demand. So so the fen farmer has risen to the occasion and grows them in large quantities.

Yet not so long ago, comparatively speaking, the land was "a wilderness of shallow waters and reedy isles, wrapped in its own dark mist veil, and tenanted only by flocks of screaming wildfowl." Indeed, the story of the gradual reclamation of the Fens is one of the romances, albeit a little-known one, of the industrial history of England. It stretches away back into the remotest times, for there never was a time, as far as any record shows, when men did not engage in some struggle with the waters hereabouts. As always happens in cases where men are thrown much on their own resources, beholden to no authority for help in their struggle against primitive conditions, the people of the fen country have always displayed a remarkable independence of character, from the time of Boadicea, who fought the Romans, and of Hereward the Wake, who fought the Normans, down by way of Oliver Cromwell, who fought the King and the Cavaliers, to the present day. The fenman or "stilt walkers," who passed dry-shod on his tall stilts over marsh and stream and flooded land, was even jealous of his liberties.

Put as to the work of reclamation, it [illegible] ages, the fenland was not [illegible] "a wilderness of [illegible] marsh and water swamp." Here and there, the traveler would come across an island of firmer ground, and on [illegible] about the middle of the seventh century, the monks began to settle. They built monasteries, churches and abbeys, "driving wooden piles for foundations deep into the marshland, and here and there reclaiming from the waters a patch of land for cultivation. And so, in time, the lantern of the great cathedral on the Isle of Ely rose, a landmark midst the marshes; farther north, Boston Stump was built above the waters of the Wash; whilst farther south many an unknown sculptor, cunning at his craft, fashioned the great west front of Peterborough. Northmen and Danes, in their turn, had swept over the country; but here as elsewhere throughout the land, monasteries remained centres of civilization until their dissolution in the reign of Henry VIII.

For a hundred years and more, thereafter, the fen country steadily relapsed into its primitive condition. Abbeys became ruins, and dykes were slowly washed away, whilst here and there and everywhere the waters once again came into their own. Then, in the reign of Charles I came the "adventurers," men who bargained, with authority, to reclaim the land, on the understanding that they obtained the lion's share of acres so improved for themselves. Many failed and lost fortunes in their attempt, but at last the matter was taken in hand by the Earl of Bedford, who drove a bargain with Charles I and his parliament for the reclaiming of a tract of land which is still known as the Bedford level. If he succeeded he was to receive for himself and the thirteen "adventurers" who followed him some 95,000 acres. There is much detail in the story, but finally the earl, or rather his successor, did succeed, in spite of all the protest and even riots by the fenmen, and in 1652, Vermuyden, the Dutch engineer, who had been employed on the work, reported that 40,000 acres of reclaimed land was sown with "wheate and other winter grain." Thereafter the work went on continuously; enterprise followed enterprise; every fresh achievement opened up a prospect for still others; drains, dykes, banks and sluices were made in all directions; and by slow degrees the fenman took unto himself the new order. Today he is an enterprising farmer or farm laborer, and, amongst other things, he grows potatoes.—"Christian Science Monitor."

Chats With the Doctor

(By A PHYSICIAN)

THE USE OF CONDIMENTS.

To the natural taste condiments present little, if any, attraction. The custom of using condiments has its origin in the desire to stimulate the appetite by making food more attractive, and also, in some cases, to bring out the flavor of the food by contrast, and by the use of salt. All piquant sauces, mustard, ginger, pepper, pickles, and spices may be included in the category of condiments. Condiments contain no food value themselves, and are nearly all irritants of varying degrees of strength. Pepper and mustard are well known to cause an intense smarting and discomfort when applied to the external surface of the skin. That they have a similar irritating effect on the inner membrane of the stomach and intestines is naturally to be assumed. The external skin is more nervously sensitive, and therefore the irritating effects of the substances are more easily recognized when applied to it than when they are taken internally; although the tongue is a reliable guide in this matter. Persistent use of condiments will, however, soon cause this organ to lose its sensitiveness, and an important safeguard is thus rendered useless. The taste for condiments once acquired, food loses its interest unless these form an accompaniment, and, as the habit continues, the nerves of the stomach offer less and less resistance, and their function in this respect is lost. Diseases of the liver and kidneys and other intestinal organs often result from the habitual use of strong condiments. Residence in tropical countries where the use of condiments is largely practised is frequently associated with forms of liver trouble.

In the feeding of children all condiments should be avoided. Not only because of the actual ill-effects which accompany their use, but because highly seasoned food being more stimulating, the child will often eat more than is good for him. Also he will gradually grow impatient of plain, unseasoned, [illegible] taken in moderation, should form part of the diet. Vegetables, if well digested, should be taken freely, and, as a rough rule, those which grow above the ground are to be preferred to those which grow beneath it. This does not include the potato. In the preparation of the meals it should be remembered that simplicity, that is to say, the use of only one or two dishes at a meal, is a great aid to digestion. The stomach sometimes fails if called upon to deal with too great a variety of material at once.

DIET IN GOUT AND RHEUMATISM.

[illegible]

Starchy and farinaceous foods are, generally speaking, unsuitable for the gouty, and in any case their quantity should be limited. Sugar, one of the other doubtful articles, may usually be taken with impunity by those who are gouty and fat. Potatoes and bread should both be eaten in some form which required thorough mastication before swallowing, thus the potatoes should be fried in thin slices, and the bread toasted or baked dry in the oven.

Raw fruit should never be eaten at a meal which includes meat. Usually apples and oranges agree best, but the exclusion of strawberries from the diet of the gouty is in most cases quite unnecessary. The idea has probably arisen from the fact that many people are unable to eat strawberries without the appearance of a rash with irritation of the skin, but this rash only represents a personal idiosyncracy, with no reference to any gouty tendency. Such persons should never eat strawberries, whether they are gouty or not.

Alcohol should, in all cases of gout, be excluded from the dietary altogether.

The rules laid down apply in a general way to the dieting of chronic rheumatism, though the restrictions in the later case are, if anything, fewer. Indigestion is the great thing to avoid, while it is important to keep up the bodily conditon. Rheumatoid arthritis, which is occasionally mistaken for and treated as gout, is a disease which needs beyond all things good and nutritious feeding, and the diet should be as liberal and good as the patient can digest.

Coiffures of Studied Simplicity noted more and more

By Peggy Powers

"Fair Tresses Man's Imperial Race Ensnare, and Beauty Draws us With a Single Hair."—Pope.

Though we talk of Marcel waves as one of the crowning features of the new hair dressing, we may think it rather strange when we learn that ivory carved images from tombs as old as 5500 B. C., were found in Egypt. Evidently these are portraits of great ladies who were buried in Abydos. On three of the images the hair hangs long in back, but the top and sides are beautifully as part of that which hangs down the back. These images are supposed to be replicas of the souls of dead and the hair is evidently dressed as when the person was alive; it was a current belief that immortality lasted as long as the tomb was undisturbed.

Fashions may be inspired by old styles, but there are so many modifications and changes that finally there only remains a semblance that one might call "after the style of a certain period," though the coiffures may be taken from the period of 1830 the characteristics then were hardness and stiffness, which in our day is replaced by lightness and irregularity—the latter which is infinitely more artistic.

The new vogue in coiffures is marked by elaboration for dress wear. Dame Fashion's dictum that the hair should be beautifuly waved, in soft, large, loose waves has been heeded. The curling iron should only be hot enough so that the fingers can hold it without being burned. It may take a little longer, but the result is just as pleasing. If the hair is inclined to be curly a wave may be produced by dampening the hair and inserting side combs for a short time.

If your face is long and thin, have your hair puffed at the sides, for it is ever so much more becoming. The one with a high forehead can part her hair and draw it back as full as possible from the sides of the face, while the one with a low forehead should wave her hair loosely and carry it back to the crown of the head, arranging it in a figure eight or a loose coil. The pompadour with its many variations is still with us. But in dressing your hair be careful of the line about the ears. Be sure and take a profile look before being satisfied with the result.

No one fashion prevails. You may wear your hair high or low, as fancy dictates, but every strand must find its place, for no loose locks are tolerated. The hair is kept close to the head in most instances. A style becoming to many has the hair brought high to the top of the head, with a small low pompadour over just one side. The simpler low styles are best liked for day time wear as they are much easier to achieve.

Another facile pompadour style has the hair arranged comfortably on the back with two puffs of wavy hair. These are fastened crosswise and then each is divided in two so you might be deceived in thinking there were two puffs. Ornamental hairpins and barette give both a practical and beautiful finish to this style.

"Mary, Mary, quite contrary," wears her hair parted at the right side and drawn low over the forehead waving about the ears and nape of the neck; then in place of a knot or puffs, on the crown of her head are the most captivating curls, which are turned down instead of up, so that the small ends flutter gently about the head.

There is a compromise hairdress, which, low in front, has the hair high in a knot and may be finished with or without flirtations curls. The huge Psyche knot appears often, and as usual has many devotees.

A simple fashion adapted to evening wear has the hair marcelled, then coiled across the back of the head just above the nape of the neck, with short curls pinned in below the coil. There is no law against adding a few flowers tastefully as a garniture.

The new hair ornaments add infinitely to the charm of the appearance of Milady. Nowadays we see Spanish combs among the new old things. These are usually thrust in at the back or below the puff and coil. A barette or fancy comb is an adequate finish as well as helps keep the stray locks in place. When one wears a barette it may often be more becoming if it is adjusted well up on the hair rather than very low. The new large hats for dress occasions show more of the head than previous seasons, so the ornaments will show to better advantage on the wearer. Now stones to match gowns are the thing, to carry out the definite color scheme of the costume. Garnets, topaz, amethysts, peridots, opals, tourmalines are used to glorify the ornaments.

An inclination toward the Oriental and antique is manifested. The Russian influence is apparent is ornaments as well as hairdressing.

Platinum forms many of the most gorgeous pins, often encrusted with precious gems. Smoked amber, jade and rock crystal are carved, it would seem, by an artist's hand.

Flexible-headed pins and large top combs as well as bandeaux and fillets serve their purpose with the elaborate Psyche knots.

START THE SPRING DRIVE AGAINST THE WEEDS---NOW

A Proper Crop Rotation Should be the Starting Point of Heed Eradication—Early Spring Cultivation Will Save Labor Later—Spraying With Iron Sulphate Effective Against Mustard

Before one can intelligently set about getting rid of weeds it is necessary to know something about their nature and manner of growth. The methods that would be effective in combating one class of weeds would not be effective in combatting another class of weeds.

Annual weeds complete their whole life-history in one year or less. The seed germinates sometimes in the fall but more often in the spring. The plant grows rapidly, produces flowers, ripens and scatters its seeds, and then dies before winter. Wild mustard and wild oats are annuals.

Biennial weeds during the first season of growth produce a tuft of leaves close to the surface of the ground; during the second season a tall stem is produced which bears flowers and ripens seeds, and then the whole plant dies. The life-history is thus completed inside two years. Biennial wormwood and burdock are examples.

Perennial weeds produce flowers and seeds, but after ripening the seeds only those parts of the plant above ground die down, while the underground parts live on for many years. Three types of perennial weeds may be distinguished.

Spot bound—Weeds of this class do not spread rapidly in the ground beyond the spot where they first take root. Their seeds may, of course be distributed over a wide area. Examples are dock and dandelion.

Creeping on the surface—The parent sends out runners in all directions along the surface of the ground, which eventually take root. Examples are silverweed and [illegible].

Creeping below the surface—The parent plant sends out shoots or, in some cases, roots, which travel horizontally at a considerable depth below the surface of the ground. New shoots grow up from these above the surface of the soil and eventually become plants. Likewise, a small piece of the underground shoot an inch or two long is capable of producing a new plant. Field bindweed and Canada thistle are examples.

HOW WEEDS SPREAD.

Weeds may gain entrance to the farm or, if already there, may be dispersed over a larger area in one of the following ways:

As Impurities in the Seed Sown.—Most samples of agricultural seeds contain weed seeds in greater or less amount, which are sown with the useful seeds and thus the weeds may, quite unknown to the farmer, gain an entrance upon his land. The seed sown should be absolutely free from weeds of all kinds, a condition of things which is seldom realized.

By the Agency of Threshing Machines.—The threshing machine should be [illegible] [illegible] plants may be blown over the frozen surface of the snow.

By the Agency of Animals.—The seeds or adherent parts of some plants, such as blue bur and burdock, are provided with hooks by means of which they become attached to the wool of sheep or the clothing of workers on the farm, and in this way may be carried into fields where formerly they did not exist.

By Cultivation.—In some plants, especially those with creeping underground stems, the broken pieces may be carried all over the field by farm implements and thus dispersed over a much wider area than the parent plants originally occupied.

Where the ground has been badly polluted with weed seeds through neglect in former years, the surface should be disturbed to a depth of 2 or 3 inches and the seeds encouraged to germinate either after harvest or in spring. If the land is then plowed deeply the seedlings will be buried and any fresh supply of weed seeds brought up should be encouraged to grow in the same manner and should then be destroyed. A hoed crop should be planted and the spaces between the rows ought to be cultivated regularly throughout the season. When the ground has been badly polluted with weed seeds, some of them may lie dormant for several years and germinate when the soil is again disturbed.

The formation of seeds can be prevented in various ways, such as mowing several times during the season, or cutting the roots with a hoe or spud, or frequent cultivation of the land by horse labor, or by pasturing the ground closely with sheep. Annuals and biennials will eventually die out if the production of seeds is prevented.

Prevention of seed formation will serve somewhat to check the spread of perennial plants, but as they can live for many years and even continue to occupy new ground by the growth of underground shoots, etc., some more thorough methods are required to get rid of them. The implements employed for this purpose should be such as will loosen the soil to such an extent that the weeds can be readily pulled out and collected into heaps, after which they should be burned when dry. It is very important that the underground parts of such weeds as field bindweed should not be broken into small pieces, difficult to collect and liable to be scattered over a wider area. But, however carefully the work of collecting and burning may be done, some of the weeds are sure to be left in the soil and, if not disturbed, will grow again. [illegible]

[illegible] without letting any escape. One of the weed-knife type of implements should be used. The underground parts of a plant are nourished by the green parts above ground, and if the green stems and leaves are destroyed as quickly as they appear the parts below the surface will be starved out and the whole plant will eventually die. This is the only way to eradicate finally such weeds as Canada thistle and field bindweed.

A vigorous growth of some other crop, such as alfalfa, tends to crowd out some of the weeds, and the cutting of the crop several times during the season prevents the weed from ripening its seeds.

SPRAYING TO DESTROY WEEDS

Spraying is effective in destroying some weeds. The substances most commonly used are iron sulphate (copperas or green vitriol), copper sulphate (blue vitriol), common salt and sodium arsenite. Iron sulphate can be used to destroy wild mustard when growing in a grain crop without doing any material damage to the crop. For this purpose a 20 per cent solution is employed, and 100 pounds of the sulphate dissolved in 50 gallons of water will spray one acre. Copper sulphate can be used for the same purpose, a 2 per cent solution being employed (10 pounds in 50 gallons of water per acre). Both these sulphates are poisonous. Sodium arsenite, if applied at the rate of two pounds to 50 gallons of water, will blacken the leaves of Canadian thistle but it is very poisonous and cannot be applied to the thistles when growing among hay or other crops as it will damage the useful plants as well.

Common salt is a useful weed killer to employ in the case of weeds growing on paths or roadsides or waste ground. It should be applied in dry weather at the rate of 125 pounds in 50 gallons of water per acre. Strong solutions of the other [illegible] chemicals may be used for the same purpose.

The control of weeds on the farm requires in a marked degree the two virtues of thoroughness and perseverance. If a farmer goes about it in a half-hearted way, he will never accomplish their eradication. Constant watchfulness is necessary if progress is to be made. If bare fallow is resorted to, it should be possible to get rid of the worst weeds in a single year. But the practice of bare fallow is not a paying one. It is in most cases better to [illegible] the land or take off a crop of hay or grain early in the season and then [illegible] the land bare for the rest of the year, [illegible]—The Canadian Countryman.

HOW ZEPS. HELPED.

Airships Guided Dreadnaughts During North Sea Scrap.

A British authority points out how the Zeppelins served the German fleet in good stead when it encountered the British grand fleet. He writes as follows:

"At 2 o'clock the great German fleet, [illegible] After their Zeppelins had reported the presence of great British forces, they devoted all their abilities to escape meeting with the fleet which they were [illegible] had vanished.

Greens Are Fine Tonic

If you feel that your family needs something in the form of an iron tonic try going to the market instead of to the doctor. Three particularly good vegetables are in market now which, if used freely, will do much toward toning up the system. These are dandelions, spinach and asparagus. As long as they last they should be a part of the menu at least once a week and oftener if possible. They lend themselves to a number of ways of serving so that variety may be given. They are good served plain as vegetables, or in soups, salads and sandwiches.

In addition to their iron content these three vegetables are mildly laxative and diuretic. A good way to get these into the diet of children or others who do not like them as vegetables is to chop them fine and use them in cream soups or vegetable soups. They also may be added to milk sauces that are served on toast or croquettes, omelets and similar dishes.

Dandelions are cleaned like spinach. The amount of their bitter taste may should be blanched by tying them, after cleaning, in a large piece of cheesecloth and plunging into boiling water for five minutes. Then remove, put into cold water for a minute and drain. When they are to be cooked, chop rather fine and cook until tender, which will take about twenty minutes.

A simple and palatable way to serve dandelions is as follows: Cook four slices of bacon in small pieces (there should be about one-half cup), brown in a frying pan and add one cup of bread crumbs. Toss about until light brown and then add two cups of cooked and chopped dandelions, one tablespoonful onion juice, one tablespoonful lemon juice or vinegar, salt and pepper to taste. Heat thoroughly and heap in a mound on platter and garnish with slices of hard-boiled egg. Hot croquettes are good to serve with this dish. Potato balls also form a fine addition. Prepare the potato balls by cooking them in just enough salted water to cover them. When tender season with butter and arrange as a border around the greens. Cheese may be grated over both rice and potatoes to give a more piquant flavor and add a bit more nourishment.

Spinach is good cooked as plain as well as dandelions. [illegible]

Asparagus is a valuable [illegible]

"I can't believe a word that diplomat [illegible]," said the Baron. "And [illegible] believe you," [illegible]. "This truthless warfare is becoming something terrible."—Washington Star.

PALPITATION
OF THE HEART
SHORTNESS OF BREATH
CURED BY
MILBURN'S
HEART AND NERVE PILLS.

Mrs. S. Watters, Matapedia, Que., writes: "I wish to let you know how much good I have received by taking your Heart and Nerve Pills. I was suffering from palpitation of the heart and shortness of breath. The trouble with my heart was caused by stomach trouble.

I had tried all kinds of medicine, both patent and doctors', but I found none relieve me like Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I believe anyone suffering like I did should use them. I only used four boxes and I now feel like a different person."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have been on the market for the past twenty-five years and have a most wonderful reputation as a remedy for all heart and nerve troubles.

Price 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

New Fabrics Nobby, Noisy

To go into the fabric departments these days isn't a shopping expedition, it's a sensation! Never in these days of French fashions were colors so noisy, and really, never were they so nobby and altogether smart, so that even conservatism, or that conservatism fashionable, is appeased.

What do you think, for example, of a blue-barred muslin ground having upon it deeper blue two-inch ducks, which in turn are decorated with seven yellow acorns each. It's some skirting! Beside it is draped a yellow pongee sprinkled with vivid green geometrical puzzles, while next there are fruit and vegetable groups which form motifs on a blue-barred ground similar to that decorated with acorns.

Black foliage, while from heavy somewhat subdued, is really startling on a sea-blue ground of silk poplin. This material is intended for sport frocks.

But perhaps the most striking of any materials meant for sports frocks are those lovely silk and cotton materials which are well-covered with tiny gorgeous birds and miniature [illegible] scapes and [illegible]. Mixed with the two chief motifs is much colorful foliage. Though very gay, the colors are really beautifully "graved" together, so that one hardly stands out separately from the other but gives a charming "whole" effect.

There are [illegible] ones. A [illegible] variety has two and one half inch strawberry blocks upon a beige ground, while another is barred on a bold scale, the bars being of both blue-green and of red orange and forming six-inch blocks upon a [illegible]-white ground.

But the [illegible] are in it with the [illegible] kimono cloths! Whew! You should see 'em. Why, the width of the fabric is hardly large enough to accommodate one motif, and as a consequence a single motif will fairly stretch from shoulder to shoulder in the made-up kimono. These materials, while not all made in Japan, are truly after the Japanese patterns and for the purpose, kimonoing, they are lovely. The color combinations are quite as radical as the designs, and fortunately the prices are reasonable.

Black and white is always the smartest of "color combinations" when it is in style. When it's in, it's very, very in and when it's out, it's outer! This year it's up front.

Coat materials are rich in coloring, but are usually in solid effect unless checked. Apple-greens, corals, golds and the like are popular.

ROMANCE OF THE WEST

Scotsman Who Paddled Far to Bury His Babie.

An [illegible] writes: There is romance in Kildonan churchyard, Manitoba. In 18[illegible] A. H. Murray was the Hudson's Bay Company's factor at Fort Alexander, 25 miles north, where the Winnipeg River empties into Lake Winnipeg. There he brought his Scottish bride. There his son was born. There, after a few short months, the babe died. With the little stark body in a canoe he paddled down to the mouth of the Red River, worked up against the swift current of the river and brought the dead to consecrated ground for burial by the Rev. Mr. Black. Here is the inscription: "[illegible] James Colin Murray, son of A. H. Murray, of the Honorable Hudson's Bay Company's service. [illegible] February 14th, [illegible]. Yea, verily, a token of Valentine's day [illegible] far, far from home and friends."

Better for Them.

"Turned you down, did you say? Well, old chap, it's better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all."

"Yes, better, indeed," replied the rejected one. "Better for the post-office authorities, the florist, the messenger boy, the confectioner, a dozen waiters, twice as many taxi drivers, the jeweler, and half the theatres in town."—New York Times.

COULD NOT SWEEP
BACK WAS SO SORE.

Women are coming to understand that weak, lame and aching backs from which they suffer so much excruciating pain and agony are due to wrong action of the kidneys.

On the first sign of any weakness in the back Doan's Kidney Pills should be taken.

Mrs. L. [illegible], Old Manning Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I take great pleasure in writing you, stating the benefit I have received by using Doan's Kidney Pills. About three years ago I was terribly afflicted with lame back, and was so bad I could not even sweep the floor. I was advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills, and before I had used one box there was a great improvement, and my back was completely cured. I highly recommend 'Doan's' for lame back."

Doan's Kidney Pills are put up in an oblong grey box, the trade-mark is a Maple Leaf, no other genuine.

Price 50c. per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering, direct specify "Doan's."

WALKERTON TELESCOPE
Published Every Thursday
LORNE A. EEDY - PUBLISHER

Phone No. - 48
Phone No. (Night) 146

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

Strictly in Advance $1.50
If not paid in Advance $2.00
United States, paid in advance. $2.00
(50c for Postage)
Great Britain, paid in advance. $1.50
France, paid in advance. $2.50
($1.00 for Postage)
50c additional if not paid in advance

WALKERTON, MAY 17th, 1917

EDITORIAL COMMENT

WHY not start a campaign against excessive eating?

+ + +

SIR WILLIAM ROBERTSON said recently in England that "pessimism is always cowardly. In time of war it is a crime."

+ + +

A MAN in Berlin took three shots at the Kaiser, but missed him. That looks like a strong argument for teaching folks to shoot when they're young.—Guelph Mercury.

+ + +

ALMOST everybody in Canada agrees that in adopting compulsory military service, the United States has a heap of trouble and done the wisest ad fairest thing possible in the circumstances.

+ + +

A Toronto speaker in referring to the food situation: 'Money isn't going to buy food next year, for there won't be any food to buy. You can wear last year's clothes, but you can't eat yesterday's dinner.

+ + +

GENERAL Joffre may be a mighty busy man, but at the same time it would be a good move to have him take a tour through Quebec and tell some of the folks there is a war on.—Guelph Mercury.

+ + +

The Owen Sound Sun suggests that the Public Library Board place such national newspapers as the New York Times and London Times on it's shelves. This suggestion might be adopted by the Walkerton Board too.

+ + +

THE Star Weekly says:—What shall it profit a man to grow his own radishes, if he squanders the value of a whole bushel of radishes on some imported dainty which is served him as a side-dish? Gardening is not an object in itself. The aim is economy in foods.

+ + +

The Vancouver Sun is not alarmed over the cigarette situation, even if Turkey has broken relations with United States. The Sun man has information that there are enough discarded mattresses in New Jersey to make real Turkish cigarettes for many months to come.

+ + +

THE Ontario government has some funny notions. Willing and anxious to spend over a million for government house at Toronto, they are placing a dozen or so tractors in Ontario to help the labor situation. One to every county even is about the same as a man with a wheel-barrow starting in to cart up munition to the front line of trenches in France.—Guelph Mercury.

+ + +

The Owen Sound Sun supports the suggestion of the councillor of that city that the assessment roll should be published. It points out that the rate-payers are partners in maintaining the municipal organization and it is only fair that each partner should have the satisfaction of knowing that he is not required to pay more than his share in taxes through any inequality in the assessment.

+ + +

THE Bracton World complains that not a solitary city-bred "farmer" has yet made his appearance in that section, to help with the spring seeding. Just as well perhaps. After a day or two's experience the Toronto farmers would probably be running for the House of Refuge followed by their employers armed with pitchforks. Otherwise they might be heading for home, imagining themselves to be chased by wild steers.—Orillia Packet.

+ + +

COLLINGWOOD Board of Trade is urging upon the Department of Education the advisability of deferring the fall term for schools and collegiate institutes until October 1st in order that the boys might stay with the farmers and fruit growers during September when labor is of so great value. To make up for the lost scholastic month it was further suggested that the holidays of the year might be curtailed and if necessary Saturdays devoted to school purposes.

+ + +

AUTOCRACY is the desire to boss. The natural man is fond of authority. One of the first impulses of the ordinary child is to boss some other child, and "men are but children of an older growth." We delude ourselves with thinking that we wish to boss, not to please ourselves but to secure the happiness of the one that we rule over. There thus arises two classes, and when a very small class rules a very large class we have an autocracy. When it is agreed that the will of the majority shall rule in a community, large or small, we have a democracy. The decided tendency of the world for the past hundred or two years has been towards democratic rule.—Mount Forest Confederate.

Letters From Overseas

Interesting Messages from England and the Scene of the War by Walkerton Boys in Khaki.

MAJOR (DR.) MALCOLM McKECHNIE.

Mrs. (Rev.) G. C. Rock had the following nice letter from Major McKechnie son of Mr. and Mrs. D. McKechnie, who went to the Front as Medical Officer with a Winnipeg Battalion of Kilties

In the Field,
10—4—17.

Dear Mrs. Rock:—

I received the box from the ladies of the church last week while up in the trenches and appreciated it more than I can say. It was most kind of you to remember me.

It was my first tour in the trenches and as I expected to be up for three or four days instead of two weeks did not take very much with with me, So the socks were very welcome I assure you.

You will have read in the papers how gallantly the Canadians conducted themselves in the recent push. The French people around here fairly worship them. They deserve it all too because they are wonderful.

Not only were they peerless in going over but of all the hundreds of wounded who passed through my post not one complained. Some were cruelly cut up too. They were so cheerful about the success they didn't seem to mind their wounds. This was true of those who were brought in hours after they had been injured, when the first flush of excitement had worn off, after they had lain in shell holes of cold and filthy water, when they were weak from loss of blood and when their wounds were becoming painful. I never dreamed that men could be so cheerful under such trying circumstances.

The chaplains do wonderful work and all the first day and night they were with the wounded and dying. At night our forces had advanced so far they were a long way from supplies of water or provision. But the padres carried water and hot drinks long distances through mud over their knees and did everything they could for the poor chaps.

Then all the way along the line of evacuation they had coffee stalls which supplied the wounded with hot drinks. This was very much appreciated because it was bitterly cold and on the night of the 9th of April we had several heavy snow storms.

The cookies and sweets in the box were appreciated not only by myself but by the other officers who collected around me when I opened the parcel.

I must thank you too for the gift you sent me at Christmas. It arrived in the parcel from home but I neglected acknowledging it for such a long time I was finally ashamed to.

Thanking you again for your gifts and the kind wishes.

I am, yours,
M. A. McKechnie.

+ + +

CAPT. ERIC ROBERTSON.

We publish below the last part of Capt. Eric Robertson's magnificent letter, the first portion of which described his thrilling experience in escaping from a squadron of hostile planes which had surrounded him. The instalment in last week's Telescope took him as far as his escape to the British infantry trenches. He continues:—

Got some "bon" souvenirs in the trenches too, where we spent the greater part of the day—a fine German helmet and a German fuze-plate. The chaps in the trenches—an English regiment—were awfully good to us and insisted on our sharing their bully beef and biscuits and tea. Poor fellows, they have a mighty tough time of it and my one half day spent with them gave me a better appreciation than I have ever had before of how much we are indebted to the infantry in this war. No other branch of the service has to endure anything like the hardships and deprivations that those poor fellows sustain so cheerily.

During the next hour we had the satisfaction of seeing one of our own scouts attack and bring down one of the Hun machines who had been potting away so merrily at us. We left the trench in the afternoon and by one means and another got back to our own aerodrome which of course was a long distance away. We saw ever so many interesting things, which I must not dwell upon too long—a great assortment of artillery of every calibre all booming away to beat the band and no doubt raising a lot of dust on the German side of the line; one of them was a big German gun captured in perfect condition with a large quantity of ammunition; and dead men and dead horses, and all sorts of things left behind by the retreating Germans; and a "tank" with its name painted on it in large letters, "Too-Too," through villages and towns, which I had often seen from the air but never from the ground, all knocked to pieces, truly a sad sight.

My C. O. added some words to our account of our little scrap and sent it in to Brigade Headquarters, and I am sending you a copy of it herewith. You will appreciate the kind things he says more than I do, for you don't realize as I do how little I deserve it. Please don't make a fuss about it because really I didn't do a thing but what the very greenest pilot would have done under similar circumstances.

They have given both Duncan and myself a rest today and I am writing this letter in an officers' club in a town near the aerodrome. It is good to get away from the eternal shop talk of our own mess.

The Canadians are "ace high" now as a result of their brilliant stunt at Vimy Ridges. It was great work and everybody realizes it. Heaps of love to you all.

Yours as always,
Eric.

+ + +

LETTER FROM ALBERT CONDY

Somewhere in France,
April 6th, 1917.

Dear Mother:—

Received your ever welcome letter a few days ago, also the papers tonight, sure was glad to get them. I always give them to Sergt. Henry after I read them as he used to go to High School in Walkerton and knows a lot of the folks there. He is from Southampton. Well we are out for a few days rest and we sure need it. We have made some very successful raids on the German trenches and blew up a lot of their big dugouts. The last raid was great and the General was very pleased about it and said that it was one of the most successful raids ever pulled off and we didn't lose many men either. All in our Co'y. got back safe, just five or six slightly wounded. You will see it the papers about the big fighting going on. I saw Chester Cunningham the other day. He had seen George Hughes but I have never ran across Alf. Tolton yet. Well, Mother, the War news looks a lot better now, doesn't it? We are all looking forward to being back in Canada again. I hope to write to you a little oftener now as the weather is warmer and a fellow can sit around anywhere and write. I have not heard from Harold for over four months. I never see any of his Batt. I think something must have happened or he would have written me or looked me up before now. Well, Mother I hope this finds you all O. K as I am myself so good-bye.

I remain your loving son,
Albert.

+ + +

CORP. HUGH WILSON.

Mrs. L. A. Eedy's young brother, Corp. Hugh C. Wilson, writes from England:—

Dear ——

Last Sunday Serg't. Martin and I walked down to Hythe. Have you ever been in Hythe? We went there particularly to see the famous Crypt that is there. This crypt contains something over eleven hundred skulls and innumerable other bones. The skulls are on shelves, six hundred of them stare at you from both sides immediately you step in the door. The next thing you see is the huge pile of bones piled like wood, with here and there a skull. At the far end of the crypt are five hundred more skulls and by the time you have reached them you feel on quite familiar terms with many of them and are able to examine them closely and note the peculiarities of many. There are numerous signs hung around, asking you to have respect for the dead and not to handle their bones nor write on their skulls with lead pencils.

We left that church about four o'clock and proceeded to walk around the town. We noticed a peculiar bustle and hurry about the soldiers we met and before long we were stopped by a policeman who ordered us to get back to our unit as quickly as possible. We wondered what was the matter. Had the Germans landed in England? Were we threatened with an air-raid or was there an "emergency" need for us in France? When we got back to camp no one could enlighten us except to tell us that a General Mobilization had been called throughout all England. We were ordered to clean our rifles and bayonets and to pack all our earthly possessions. On Monday morning we were each issued 150 rounds of live ammunition and paraded, expecting to march away either for France or at least, for another camp. Then a bitter cold, sleety rain set in and we stood like marble statues, certainly we felt like them, for about two hours. General Ashton inspected us. He is G. O. C. of this district. He could say, "I am O. C. of all I survey," if he wanted to. After his inspection we returned to our huts and remained "ready to fall in at a moment's notice" until afternoon. In the afternoon there was a re-organization of the whole battalion (according to scheme (c). For cases of emergency now, our battalion will be a four company battalion instead of the eight company battalion it now is.

This morning the whole Brigade paraded together for Church. Soldiers are a pious folk you know. During the sermon, which we couldn't hear, one in our Company laughed out loud. The C. S. M. whirled and said, "Holt, man! Don't you know this is church parade?"

Outside to-day it is raining some, snowing some and just now the sun is shining through it all. It'll be lovely walking, I'm sure, for a while now.

LAWN MOWERS & HAMMOCKS

Get your Lawn Mower now before the price advances. We have a complete line which range in price from $5.00 to $10.00.

Finest assortment of Hammocks ranging from $2.00 up.

Watch this space for our big Graniteware Sale coming soon.

PATTERSON BROS.
Hardware Stoves Graniteware

GET YOUR SALE BILLS PRINTED AT THE TELESCOPE

PURITY FLOUR

Milled especially for particular home cooks—those who want:

"More Bread and Better Bread"

11

CANADIAN PACIFIC

Great Lakes Steamship Service
via Owen Sound
STEAMSHIP "MANITOBA" leaves Owen Sound at midnight each THURSDAY (connecting train leaves Toronto 5.25 p. m.) for Sault Ste Marie, Port Arthur and Fort William.
SERVICE via PORT McNICOLL COMMENCES JUNE 2.

Plan Your Vacation Trip Now
POINT AU BARIL
MUSKOKA LAKES
KAWARTHA LAKES
LAKE MAZINAW
FRENCH and PICKEREL RIVERS
RIDEAU LAKES
SEVERN RIVER
are delightful resorts and easily reached via C. P. R.

For WINNIPEG and VANCOUVER
Leave Toronto 6.40 P. M. Daily via 'The Pioneer Route'

Particulars from Canadian Pacific Ticket Agents or
W. B. HOWARD, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, Ontario.

WRIGLEY'S
THE PERFECT GUM

Let us make you acquainted with the new, luscious flavour—

It's all that the name suggests!

Wrigley quality—made where chewing gum making is a science.

Now three flavours

Chew it after every meal

Get it wherever confections are sold

Sealed Tight—Kept Right!

MADE IN CANADA

The Flavour Lasts

HOMESEEKER'S EXCURSIONS
LOW RETURN FARES TO WESTERN CANADA
ONCE A WEEK

Convenient Service. Modern Electric Lighted Equipment
Standard and Tourist Sleeping Cars and Colonist Coaches
For Tickets, Reservations, Literature and Information, apply to
W. E. ATTWOOD, INSURANCE, WALKERTON.
Or write R. L. Fairbairn, G.P.A., 68 King St. E., Toronto.

CANADIAN NORTHERN RAILWAY

THE CANADIAN BANK OF COMMERCE

SIR EDMUND WALKER, C.V.O., LL.D., D.C.L., President
JOHN AIRD, General Manager. H. V. F. JONES, Ass't General Manager

CAPITAL, $15,000,000 RESERVE FUND, $13,500,000

FARMERS' BUSINESS

The Canadian Bank of Commerce extends to Farmers every facility for the transaction of their banking business, including the discount and collection of sales notes. Blank sales notes are supplied free of charge on application.

H. M. LAY, Manager Walkerton Branch.

FIELD SEEDS

Our supply of Field Corn has just arrived. We have different varieties and the seed is excellent.

We also have a good supply of Turnip and Mangle Seed.

Don't forget we are selling Paint at 65c per quart.

S. W. Vogan

Showing a Roof Covered with Brantford Slates in Solid Color.

There is Safety Under This Roof

Have you ever had a fine job of decorating spoiled by a leaking roof? If you have, you certainly are in a position to appreciate the value of a roof that is positively water-proof. Some of the troubles common to wooden shingles to-day are that they are apt to split, warp or blow off as well as leak, soon after they are put on. Years ago they were good, but the quality has since gradually depreciated as the available supply of suitable timber became exhausted.

Brantford Slates have none of the faults of wooden shingles. They cannot rust. They do not allow rain to be driven under them as do metal roofs. They do not require rigid supporting as do the common tile or slate roofs. On the other hand Brantford Slates afford the utmost protection with little weight. They are made on a long-fibred felt "base" which is thoroughly saturated under pressure with asphaltum or mineral pitch. Crushed quarried slate particles are then deeply embedded in the surface of this "base", making it water-tight and fireproof.

Brantford Roofing

Brantford Slates are made in the natural slate colors of green, red, black and grey. The colors never fade and the slates do not require painting nor repairing. These slates are pliable and fit readily around gables and into the angles of any roof. This means a continuous roof without seams or joints. Sparks die on Brantford Slates. When you have these slates "on" you are done with the job. Remember they don't require painting or staining and may be selected to harmonize with almost any exterior color design, and the price is not beyond your reach. We would be pleased to send you samples and our Roofing Booklet.

Brantford Roofing Company, Limited
Brantford, Canada

For Sale by S. W. Vogan

DENTAL

W. B. HALLADAY, L. D. S. D. D. S.
Dentist, Successor to Dr. Corm
Modern methods employed in all den tal operations. Special attention crown, bridge and inlay work. Thr doors east of post office. Visits Ca gill 1st and 3rd Thursday afternoon
each month.

C.L. GRANT, D.D.S., L.D
Graduate of Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario.
Dr. Lount's old stand.
Wisser Block - Walkerto

MEDICAL

DR. BROWN
Diseases of the Eye, Ear, Nose
Throat, Neustadt, Ont. Will be at Queen's Hotel, Walkerton, 1st Frid in each month from 2 to 6 p.m.

W. A. HALL, B.A., M.D., C.M.
Honor Graduate in Arts and cine at Queen's University. Mem
the College of Physicians and
ons. Office and residence on cor
Colborne and Cayley Streets.

INSURANC
FIRE, LIFE,
ACCIDENT,
AUTOMOBILE
GUARANTEE.
MONEY to LOA
REAL ESTATE

Town and Farm Property fo
See my list before making a pu

OCEAN and RAI

TICKETS TO ANY PART
THE WORLD.

I represent the Canadian Nor Railway and all ocean stea companies — English, America
Italian.

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENS

T. E. ATTWOOD
GENERAL AGENT
Walkerton - Ontar

INSURANCE &
REAL ESTATE

Fire, Life, Accident & Health, Plate Glass, and Guarantee Insurance in the best of Companies.

Real Estate—Several desirable residential properties for sale.

Money to Loan, Conveyancing and General Agency. Splendid Mortgage Loan Company Debentures for investment yielding good interest.

GEO. D. McKAY
Office Over Bell Telephone Agency
PHONE NO. - 179

CENTRAL
Business College
STRATFORD, ONT.

Ontario's Best Business College

Students may enter our classes at any time. Commence your course now and be qualified for a position by midsummer. During July and August of last year we received calls for over 200 office assistants we could not supply. Our graduates are in demand. Write at once for our free catalogue.

D. A. McLACHLAN
PRINCIPAL

Spring Styles

AS SHOWN IN OUR Superior Tailored Clothing are covered by one brief sentence "The and cheapest to be had in town."

We'd like to measure you for your spring suit or overcoat.

Hats, Caps, Ties, Shirts, Sweater Coats, all furnishings at Slaughter prices.

WOODMAN & CO.
Next to Vogan's Hardware

The Time
The Place
The Price

NOW is the time, Men, while our range of Spring Cloths is complete.

THIS is the place or ordered clothes. Style and fit guaranteed.

THE PRICE is right and to suit every purse.

T. PYE
Clothier & Furnisher.

WOMEN WAR WORKERS

Young women can render the country real service by preparing to take positions in Business Offices and Banks and relieve young men for war service.

Fifty thousand men will be called up very soon under the Militia Act for home defence. Who will take their places in the Business Offices and Banks? Young women should prepare now at the

NORTHERN
Business College
OWEN SOUND, ONTARIO

Spring Term Opens April 10th. Circular free.

C. A. FLEMING, F. C. A., Principal

PATENTS
PROMPTLY SECURED

We solicit the business of Manufacturers, Engineers and others who realize the advisability of having their Patent business transacted by Experts. Preliminary advice free. Charges moderate. Our Inventor's Adviser sent upon request. Marion & Marion, New York Life Bldg. Montreal: and Washington, D.C., U.S.A.

JUNE
BRIDES

Will find the kind of Wedding Invitations and Announcements they are looking for in the Telescope Sample Book. New and up-to-date styles printed from new types.

.. THE ..
TELESCOPE

GOLD DUST
digs deep after germs

Gold Dust not only cleans but sterilizes.

Soap merely washes over the surface, leaving a greasy film behind it.

Gold Dust "goes to the bottom," and insures absolute purity, and sanitary safety. Why not sanatize your home, as well as clean it?

Soap needs muscle help; Gold Dust does all the hard part of the task without your assistance.

Gold Dust is a good, honest, vegetable-oil soap, to which are added other purifying materials in just the right proportions to cleanse easily, vigorously, and without harm to fabric, utensils or hand.

"Let the GOLD DUST TWINS do your work"

Gold Dust is sold in 5c size and large packages. The large package means greater economy.

Made by THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY, LIMITED, Montreal
Makers of Fairy Soap (the oval cake)

FELT LIKE A NEW PERSON

After Taking Only One Box Of "Fruit-a-tives"

East Side Harbour, N. S.

"It is with great pleasure that I write to tell you of the wonderful benefit I have received from taking "Fruit-a-tives". For years, I was a dreadful sufferer from Constipation and Headaches, and I was miserable in every way. Nothing in the way of medicines seemed to help me. Then I finally tried "Fruit-a-tives" and the effect was splendid. After taking one box, I feel like a new person, to have relief from those sickening Headaches".

Mrs. MARTHA DEWOLFE.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

HOMESEEKERS' EXCURSIONS

MAY 8th TO OCTOBER 30th
Every
TUESDAY
"ALL RAIL" - also by
THURSDAY'S STEAMER
"Great Lakes Routes"
(Season Navigation)

Your Future is in the West

The fertile prairies have put Western Canada on the map. There are still thousands of acres waiting for the man who wants a home and prosperity. Take advantage of Low Rates and travel via

Canadian Pacific

W. B. Howard, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, Ont.

GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY SYSTEM

Homeseekers' Excursions

Round trip tickets to points in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta via North Bay, Cochrane and Transcontinental Route, or via Chicago, St. Paul or Duluth, on sale each Tuesday until October 30th inclusive, at low fares.

Through Tourist Sleeping Cars to WINNIPEG on above dates, leaving Toronto 10.45 P. M., no change of cars, via Transcontinental Route.

Return Limit, Two Months, Exclusive of date of sale. Final return limit on all tickets, December 31st. Berth reservations and full particulars at all Grand Trunk Ticket Offices or write C. E. HORNING, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, Ontario.

ELLIOTT
Business College

Yonge and Charles Sts., Toronto Has a National Reputation for thorough, progressive and advanced educational work. The keen demand for our graduates is proof that it pays to attend our school. Enter any time. Catalogue free.

W. J. Elliott, Principal.

Office
Stationery

For nice Stationery printed from new type at moderate prices. Try the

TELESCOPE

Why not give your boy and girl an opportunity to make their home study easy and effective? Give them the same chances to win promotion and success as the lad having the advantage of

WEBSTER'S NEW INTERNATIONAL

Dictionary in his home. This new creation answers with final authority all kinds of puzzling questions in history, geography, biography, spelling, pronunciation, sports, arts, and sciences.

400,000 Vocabulary Terms. 2700 Pages. Over 6000 Illustrations. Colored Plates. The only dictionary with the Divided Page.

The type matter is equivalent to that of a 15-volume encyclopedia.

More Scholarly, Accurate, Convenient, and Authoritative than any other English Dictionary.

REGULAR AND INDIA-PAPER EDITIONS.

WRITE for specimen pages, illustrations, etc. FREE, a set of Pocket Maps if you name this paper.

G. & C. MERRIAM CO.,
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

POETS' CORNER

A SOLDIER'S SOCK.

Twenty thousand little stitches,
Go to make a soldier's sock,
That's not counting all the hitches,
Nor the moments by the clock.
Forty thousand little stitches,
Then it takes to make a pair.
And it means a heap of riches,
If you count the thought that's there
There's a little wisp of laughter,
Just to keep your spirits gay.
There's a thread of tough resistance,
For t give you strength by day.
There's a filament of firelight,
Stretching out across the sea,
Just to warm in the cold night,
And a glow of cheer to be.
There's a smooth, soft strand of comfort,
Meant to ease the toughest road,
And a friendly common feeling,
That would like to share your load.
Forty thousand little stitches,
Then it takes to make a pair,
And they all are closely woven,
With the atmour of a prayer.

+ + +

THE PUSH

(By N. H. Gubbins, in London Daily Mail)

We've pushed 'em off the "Anker,"
We've pushed 'em off the Somme,
We'll push 'em out o' Belgium
Wiv bayn't an wiv bomb.
We've pushed 'em out o' Bagdad
An' into Palestine,
An' glory to the gen'ral
Who can push 'em past the Rhine!
Now fix yer bay'nits ready,
Now fill yer 'averack
Now take yer chargin' steady,
Now shoulder up yer packs:
Now listen for the whistle,
An' see that you're in line,
An' glory to the gen'ral
Who can push 'em past the Rhine!
Now keep a good alignment,
Just as the rule-book tells,
An' never mind the bullets
An' never mind the shells.
Now, can't yer see 'em runnin',
The dirty 'eathen swine?
O! glory to the gen'ral
Who can push 'em past the Rhine!
An' now we're in the village,
A—chargin' down the street,
A giving okey-pokey
To every 'Un we meet
O Lord! ain't this a birfday?
O! Lordy! ain't it fine?
O' glory to the gen'ral
Who can push 'em past the Rhine!
We've pushed 'em off the "Anker"
We've pushed 'em off the Somme,
We'll push 'em out to Belgium
Wiv bay'nit an' wiv bomb
We've pushed 'em out o' Bagdad
An' into Palestine,
An' glory to the gen'ral
Who can push em past the Rhine!

Town and District

It will pay you to read the ads.

Thrifty housekeepers read the ads.

Aylmer carried hydro by an almost unanimous vote.

Mr. J. Taylor a prominent citizen of Lucknow passed away on May 8th.

Paisley Council is is offering the unused streets of the village to citizens for gardening.

Mr. Andrew J. Fischer, an old Bruce Boy, has removed from Guelph to Moosejaw, Sask.

Rev. Mr. Soule B.A., a Knox graduate, is the new Presbyterian pastor at Southampton.

Mrs. Geo. A. Sutherland of Windthorst, Sask. writes:—I do not care to miss a single copy of the Telescope.

Lieut. J. A. Cronin of the 160th, who has been home from England on sick-leave, left last week to rejoin his regiment.

North Bruce liberals will hold a convention at Tara on May 18 to nominate a candidate to oppose Hugh Clark M. P. P.

Early to bed and early to wake,
An hour or two with the hoe and rake,
Pay your debts, and tell no lies—
Then you'll be healthy, wealthy and wise.

"Going to plant potatoes in your garden this year?" "I thought I would, but when I looked up the way to do it I found that potatoes have to be planted in hills, and our yard is perfectly flat.

Great pianists all remind us,
As at their technique we glance,
That few of them, and these the kindest,
Give the instrument a chance.

Dr. R. E. Clapp moved his household effects to Walkerton last Friday and has taken up residence in the county town. The removal of the Doctor and his family from Mildmay is universally regretted.—Mildmay Gazette.

Mr. Fred McNeil of Rainton, Sask. writes:—We have taken the Telescope from the time it was first edited and have an interest in the town and also in the paper and hope the Telescope in your hands may prove a credit to the town.

The members of the Ladies Aid of the Methodist Church met at the home of Mrs. (Dr.) Clapp on Tuesday evening of last week and presented her with a cut-glass cream pitcher and sugar bowl. Mrs. Clapp, who is leaving this week for their new home at Walkerton, has been an active member of the Ladies Aid for quite a number of years, and her removal is deeply regretted.—Mildmay Gazette.

Lieut. McConnell, who was a recruiting officer here for the 160th, is in England at present, convalescing from injuries sustained recently. He has been in the aviation corps in France, and had his legs crushed in an accident to his machine.

Mr. J. D. McNeil, of the Akron Construction Co. who is planning to visit the old town this summer writes:—I do not know just when I will come to Walkerton. It will be some time in July. Best regards to all the old natives up your way.

The farmers along the banks of the Saugeen river will likely have better fishing in seasons to come as great numbers of fish, pike, pickerel, etc., were seen making through the gap in the broken dam to get up stream to spawn.—Southampton Beacon.

Dr. Lane of Priceville is reported to have sold his practices at Priceville and Flesherton to his partner, Dr. McLean, and intends moving to Toronto. During his stay in Priceville, Dr. Lane was very popular in town and surrounding country. He will be greatly missed.—Durham Chronicle.

There was an exciting time on the hog market in Shelburne Tuesday of last week. A new buyer came along and started bidding up the prices and in some cases $18.00 per hundredweight was paid for the porkers. It is some price, even in these days of high prices. Everybody was happy except the hog-buyers.

Lieut. Les. Huether R. N. writes a friend from London, Eng. that he had a fairly good trip over and afterwards spent a week sight-seeing in old London. H. M. Taylor, of Regina, brother of K. M. Taylor, was a passenger in the boat going over. In London Les. ran across Capt. Harry Zinn, who is now with the Dental Corps.

Although it was reported that the 160th had gone to France, all the latest letters from the boys of the battalion at Whitley Camp say that our battalion is likely to be placed on guard duty on the coast of Scotland. There would be something really romantic about the men of Bruce defending auld Scotia.—Paisley Advocate.

24th At Mildmay

The Carrick Branch of the Bruce Preparedness League will hold a 24th of May celebration at Mildmay.

Will Play Baseball

A baseball league has been organized to include Mildmay, Ayton, Neustadt, and Moltke. A recruiting League would be more to the point in those towns.

School Going Ahead

Reports presented at the Annual meeting of the Methodist Sunday School last Wednesday evening indicate that the school has made some advancement under the Superintendency of Mr. John McCool the past year. Attendance showed an average increase of 7 over the previous year, the average being 67. Missionary givings totalled $65.00 an increase of $15.00. Officers were elected for the coming year as follows:—Supt. John McCool; Associate Supt. W. G. Searle; Sec., H. L. Willoughby; ass't. sec., W. G. Cheshire; Pianist, Clayton Tovell, ass't.-pianist, Miss F. Cunningham.

Would Intern Professor Katz

Ed. Katz, a travelling spectacle man, was badly disfigured by Mr. McKenzie, insurance agent of the town of Wingham, last Saturday. Ed. disputed the news service of German reverses, and McKenzie, being a strong Britisher, gave the German several blows in the face. Katz says he was born in Germany and is not a citizen of Canada. He says he has voted at every election in the town of Listowel, and has enjoyed a large patronage in the spectacle line throughout Western Ontario. The German sympathizer made a mistake in expressing himself. An effort is now being made to locate Katz and have him interned.—Ripley Express.

How Ray Keelan Died

Mr. Henry Keelan of Mildmay received a letter from Signaller Tyrwhitt Kidd last week, telling how his son R. A. Keelan met his death on the field of battle. He writes:—I found two boys of Ray's old section, and I must tell you the truth of our conversation. They told me that Ray had been badly hit by a shell, they thought, and that he had dropped in the charge and that when the stretcher-bearer came to dress his wounds he said "Never mind me, boys, fix up the other chaps, I am done," and then he died, taking with him the respect that a battalion holds for a brave man and surely no man can die a nobler death than to die on the field of battle, with a thought for others, his comrades, and never a thought for himself.

Plant Small Potatoes.

The Department of Field Husbandry of the O. A. C. writes to Mayor Johnston regarding the planting of potatoes as follows: "We have obtained the largest yield and the highest percentage of marketable potatoes from potatoe sets taken from the middle of the potato, when equal size of piece and the same number of eyes (2) were considered. The stem end gave slightly larger yields than sets taken from the seed end. In a year of potato scarcity, such as this, I would certainly plant the small potatoes. Small potatoes taken from a bulk lot do not give as large yields per acre as intermediate or large potatoes, but small potatoes taken from hills where nearly all the potatoes are large would likely yield just as well as the large potatoes from the same hills. It is not generally advisable, in good seasons, to plant the small potatoes from hills where all the potatoes are small."

TOOK AUDIENCE TO FRONT

Lieut. Trivett's Description of Life in Flanders was Most Realistic View of War yet Presented Here.

The illustrated talk on life at the Front by Lieut. Trivett, Y. M. C. A. representative, at the Town Hall last week was a real treat. Lieut. Trivett took his audience in spirit right into the trenches, led them up and down Cow St, Piccadilly, and other fancifully dubbed "avenues" whose names will be immortal in Canadian history. The speaker was one of the boys for twenty-one months, understands everything he talks about intimately, speaks in the cheerful breezy style of the Canadian Tommies, and brings along with him the atmosphere of the Front. It was like a personally conducted tour of the battlefront. The large audience enjoyed the whole thing thoroughly and was brought into more intelligent sympathy not only with Y. M. C. A. work but with all efforts for the welfare of the men on the firing-line.

Mr. David Robertson, president of the Campaign Committee, occupied the chair. Excellent music was furnished by an orchestra composed of: Miss Oberle, Messrs John Korman and C. B. Robinson. Mr. A. S. Royce sang a solo which was much appreciated. At the conclusion of the program a hearty vote of thanks was tendered the lecturer on motion of Dr. Clapp and Prin. Morgan.

RUSTLING FOR RECRUITS

Returned Soldiers are Calling Personally on Eligible Men to Reinforce 160th Batt'n Overseas

Major Nelson who is in charge of the campaign in this district to raise recruits to reinforce the 160th Bruce Battalion, is busy placing recruiting officers at the various points in Bruce, Huron, and North Wellington. The recruiting will be done entirely by returned soldiers, who will call personally on those who are considered likely candidates for Overseas. The recruits are using the information given on the national registration cards and are especially attentive to those eligible young men who did not take the trouble to respond to the government's invitation to fill out their cards.

The work for the present is confined to the town, and recruiting in the rural sections will not be undertaken at all until after harvest.

In Walkerton there are about fifty prospects and each man is being called upon personally. Major Nelson is being assisted in the work by Lieut. Harold Pinkerton, son of Mr. David Pinkerton of Pinkerton, who will have charge of some of the towns on the Southampton line. Sergt. Boyce is working at Walkerton. Sergt. Taggart is at Chesley and Elmwood. Sergt. Mathieson is working at Lucknow and Kincardine.

CHILDREN'S AID

Workers Hold Big Gathering to Discuss Problems—Entertained by Premier

On Tuesday and Wednesday of last week, Rev. D. McLennan, Children's Aid Agent, attended a convention of Agents and Delegates of the Children's Aid Secretary held in Toronto report on the year's work and to discuss ways and means for greater work by way of additions to or subtractions from the Children's Protection Act. The discussions were varied and interesting in the methods of dealing with difficult problems. Mr. McLennan states that there were about sixty Agents and Delegates, all the way from Ottawa to Kenora district and the County of Bruce. On Wednesday a very cordial invitation was extended to the Agents and Delegates to lunch in the House of Parliament and after doing justice to the sumptuous repast, we had the pleasure of listening to a number of addresses of welcome from Sir Wm. Hearst, Prime Minister of Ontario. The Hon. Mr. McPherson, the Hon. Dr. Pyne and others assuring us that anything in the power of the Government that would contribute to a successful issue would be at our disposal. The Premier said there was no greater work than making good citizens out of neglected material and that he felt proud to say that he had the privilege of doing something personal on that line. At the close of the addresses we were all asked to stand and sing the National Anthem, after which we returned to the afternoon session feeling that the lines had fallen to us in pleasant places."

Photographed Lightning

Prof. Borchman, music teacher of Dunkeld, has taken a remarkable photograph of lightning during a recent electric storm. Five distinct flashes are clearly shown. The Professor takes a great interest in photography and has made a fine collection of views.

A Prosperous Year.

Reports of the Methodist Church for the year ending April 30th, indicate that the church's finances have flourished under the first year of Rev. C. W. Cosens' pastorate. Educational givings were doubled, connexional funds doubled, missionary givings increased over ten per cent, and the ordinary obligations fully met. All this is very encouraging especially in view of the many demands that have to be met during war time.

A Good Idea!

RIDE A BICYCLE and Save Money

Ride to work.
Ride for pleasure.
Ride everywhere.
And save money by it.

A HYSLOP BICYCLE is the Bicycle of SATISFACTION
Made in Canada for 28 years.

RIDE A HYSLOP

Manufactured by HYSLOP BROTHERS, Limited, Toronto
FOR SALE BY
PATTERSON BROS. WALKERTON

ART CLOTHES
COOK BROS. & ALLEN LIMITED

THERE'S A STYLE
FOR EVERY ONE
IN OUR SPRING
CLOTHING DISPLAY

The diversity of styles in our Spring displays has but one object—to provide the proper style for every man.

It's an advantage that this store has developed to a remarkable degree—the styles we're featuring number rather a vast total.

ART CLOTHES

tailored perfectly to your individual measure, in any of a variety of new Spring models, of a selection from hundreds of fine durable fabrics, are moderately priced—surprisingly so.

THOS. PYE
TAILOR · WALKERTON

5 sp

We Specialize in Purchasing and Selling CITY LOTS AND FARM LANDS
in Western Canada

If you have any Lots or Farms that you wish to dispose of, it will pay you to write for further information to

Chas. Beck
Real Estate · Kitchener, Ontario

A PUZZLING CASE

"Gentlemen! genelemen!" I said, stepping quickly between the two men, who were now standing opposite to one another, in anything but friendly attitudes; "do not behave like children. Tancred, keep your temper, as all men in your profession should. Signor Ivan will, I am sure, supply us with all information about that cartridge."

"What cartridge, monsieur?"

"That with which Mazzucata was killed!"

"I know nothing about it."

"Do you not?" said Tancred, who had resumed his seat, "then perhaps Kutusoff does."

"I tell you, monsieur, I know no gentleman of that name."

"He tells a very different story."

"Why! what did he say about me?"

"Humph! that doesn't sound as if you didn't know him," said Tancred, delighted at having caught Ivan in a trap; "come, sir, it is of no use your pretending ignorance in this way. You are an intimate friend of Kutusoff, who made that clockwork cartridge, which you placed in the bouquet, with the Black Carnation."

"I didn't, monsieur. I lost that cartridge."

"Oh!" I cried, before Tancred could speak, "then you admit having had that cartridge from Kutusoff."

Ivan stamped with rage at having made this mistake, and tried to nullify his admission in a very clumsy manner, quite unworthy of a presumably acute conspirator.

"I received a cartridge, certainly, from Kutusoff, but I did not receive the cartridge which killed Mazzucata."

"I thought you did not know Kutusoff," said Tancred, ironically. The singer was nonplussed for a moment, and then burst out laughing, in nowise ashamed at having been caught tripping.

"Monsieur l'Avocat, you are an excellent antogonist," he said, good-humoredly; "pray sit down—you also M. Granby, we will talk over this matter, and I will tell you all I know about it; but I warn you, that it will not assist you in any way."

"Well, let us hear your story first," said Tancred, delighted at this unexpected surrender, "we can then judge for ourselves."

"I suppose you know I am a Nihilist monsieur," remarked Ivan, airily, "at least, I assume you do, seeing you know I am a friend of Kutusoff."

"Who is a Nihilist, pure and simple."

"Who is a Nihilist, without being either pure or simple," retorted Ivan, dryly, "he is a man who advocates reform in Russia by violent means, such as bombs and assassinations. I, on the other hand, trust to Time and the advancement of civilization."

"If so, why do you meddle with conspiracies?"

"Because I wish to see reform in Russia within a reasonable time. I am not what you would call a Nihilist, though I get the name of being one of those people who desire the upset of anything. All I wish is to see my dear country with a civilized constitution, and not dependent on the caprices of a despot."

"A very modest desire, truly," said I, ironically, being perfectly well acquainted with this cant of Anarchists, "yet one which cost you dear."

"It cost me exile from my native land," sighed Ivan, regretfully, "and had it not been that I was a singer, I should have been exiled to Siberia."

"Well, you don't seem to appreciate the clemency of the Czar, seeing you now conspire against him."

"Clemency! clemency!" cried the Russian, his eyes flashing at the word "why call it clemency? The Czar has enough sins to answer for without having my death on his shoulders. But it is no use talking to you comfortable English about our troubles—only experience would teach you what tyranny we groan under in Russia. I will say no more on the subject, save that I am desirous of gaining a constitution for the Muscovite Empire, but not by foul means. Kutusoff would stick at nothing to gain what we desire for our native land. I draw the line at secret assassination by means of infernal machines."

"Yet, you are a friend of Kutusoff," hinted Tancred, with a grim smile.

"As you say, I am a friend of Kutusoff," replied Ivan, with cold dignity; "yes, because I know that however misguided he may be, he is a good man who has suffered for the sake of his patriotic principles. Yes, I am a friend of Kutusoff—I honor him. He is a man who ought to occupy a great position."

"Which he certainly will, some day—on the gallows."

"You don't understand, Major Grandby," said Ivan impatiently, "how can you understand, you that have lived in peace and security all your life. But this is not to the point. As you say—as I say, Kutusoff is my friend, and I frequently call on him to discuss the position of Russian politics."

"We are all attention," murmured Tancred, seeing the singer hesitate.

"Well," resumed Ivan, after a pause, "some weeks ago when I called on him, he showed me a new infernal machine. A dynamite cartridge, which looks innocent enough, yet on touching a spring, it explodes. But stay, I will show you one."

He went to his desk, and taking from thence what looked like a roll of white paper bound with brass at either end, held it up for our inspection. I stretched out my hand to take it, but Ivan drew it back with a slight smile.

"Excuse me, monsieur, but I dare not place it in your hands. You might touch the spring by chance, and then we would meet with the same fate as the unhappy singer."

"Ugh!" cried Tancred, pushing back his chair, "what a horrible idea."

"You see this," resumed the singer, pointing to a tiny brass point at the side of the cartridge, "that, if touched, explodes the machine. Therefore, if a careless person grasped the whole cartridge, a catastrophe is bound to ensue. Such was the fate of Mazzucata."

"Then she was killed by one of these devilish machines?"

"Yes, I believe she was."

"Then you know who killed her."

"No, I do not, but I will tell you all, and you can draw your own conclusions from what I say. Kutusoff gave me one of these cartridges to take home and examine. I placed it carefully in a cardboard box to render it innocuous, and put it in my pocket. Then I lost it."

"But where?"

"I haven't the slightest idea. But my impression is that some one picked it up and placed it in that fatal bouquet."

"You have no idea who could have picked it up?"

"Not the slightest."

Tancred and I looked at each other sceptically, at which Ivan became agitated.

"I swear on my honor, Messieurs, that I do not know what became of that cartridge. I lost it; but when or where, I know not. I had nothing to do with the death of Mazzucata."

"If you had, I do not suppose you would speak so openly," replied Tancred, soothingly; "but you must admit circumstances are strong against you. Look here, Signor Ivan, you admit having this cartridge; you say it must have caused the death of Madame Mazzucata; and it was you who presented her with the fatal bouquet; all this looks bad."

"I admit it, Monsieur l'Avocat, I admit it," said Ivan quickly; "but I can explain. I did possess that cartridge, but I lost it, and know not who picked it up. As to my choosing that bouquet on the stage, to give to Madame Mazzucata, I did so at the request of a friend."

"And that friend?"

Ivan paused for a moment, and then turned away his head.

"Can you bear a shock, Messieurs?"

"Yes, yes."

"The friend who asked me to choose the bouquet was Sir Gilbert Tressinger."

CHAPTER XII.

There was a dead silence, lasting at least a minute, during which time I looked at Tancred, who looked at me, and then, by mutual consent, we looked at the man who had made this startling statement.

"I cannot believe that Sir Gilbert is guilty," I said, at length, in a voice which I acknowledge was a trifle tremulous.

"I did not say he was, monsieur," responded Ivan, delicately; "I merely stated that he asked me to pick up the bouquet when it was thrown, and present it to madame."

"How did you know which bouquet to select out of all those lying on the stage?" asked Tancred, reflectively.

"Sir Gilbert sent a note round to me shortly before the opera began, saying he had failed to give Madame Mazzucata a bouquet at her hotel, and would, therefore, throw it to her at the end of the great scene in the third act. He, therefore, requested me to pick up his bouquet and present it to madame, saying, I would recognize it by its white flowers and single black rose."

"Black carnation, you mean," said I, disbelievingly.

"No; a black rose."

"Have you the note, Signor Ivan?" demanded Tancred

"I regret to say that I have not. I tore it up after reading it, and now, all trace of it is lost. But I distinctly recollect the description of the bouquet as being white flowers, with a black rose."

"That, then," said the lawyer, deliberately, "proves Sir Gilbert to be innocent; for all that story of his failing to give Mazzucata the bouquet at the hotel is perfectly true. His bouquet, as described by Phillis & Co., was of the kind you describe. Oh, yes; those flowers he asked you to pick up were perfectly harmless."

"Yet they killed Mazzucata, monsieur."

"Sir Gilbert's flowers did not kill Mazzucata. Those you picked up contained a Black Carnation—not a black rose; and, in the hurry of the moment, you did not notice the difference. All you saw was that the bouquet was white with a black centre, and picked up the fatal bunch which carried the death of the prima donna."

"Then Sir Gilbert did not throw those flowers?" said Ivan, in great perplexity.

"Ah! that I cannot say. But if he did, without doubt, the bouquet was changed, either at the Hotel Europa or at the theatre."

"But who possessed a similar bouquet?"

"A man you do not know, Signor Ivan—Mr. Dallas."

Ivan started, and looked toward Tancred, with an expression of surprise.

"Was that the man who loved madame?"

"Yes," said Tancred.

"Who went down to Lippinton in search of a black carnation?"

"Yes," I said, quickly; "but I did not know he went down there for that flower, though he must have done so, in order to send Mazzucata the bud from Paris."

"Did Mr. Dallas send her a black carnation from Paris?"

"He did."

"Then Maxwell was right," muttered Ivan, under his breath.

"Maxwell!" I cried, with lively interest. "What! did he accuse Dallas of killing Mazzucata?"

"I did not say that," responded Ivan, deliberately, "but he certainly mentioned the name of Dallas in connection with the affair."

"Tell us all about it, signor."

"One moment," cried Tancred, raising his hand to enforce silence, "Signor Ivan, may I ask if you suspected Sir Gilbert to be guilty?"

"Yes," replied Ivan, firmly, "I did. I thought the bouquet I picked up was his—by the explosion of that bouquet madame was killed, and I knew nothing of the substitution of black carnation for black rose as described by Ilma Celinski."

"All that evidence was taken as I can prove," said the barrister coolly; "but if you thought Sir Gilbert was guilty, why did you not denounce him?"

Signor Ivan looked down at the floor and blushed deeply.

"He was to be married to Mazzucata," he said, in a voice of emotion. "I also loved her. I was his rival. Would you have me behave in a mean fashion, and denounce him to the law because he was more successful than myself in gaining the woman we both loved? No! I could not do that; I held my peace."

"Those sentiments do you credit, M. Ivan," said Tancred, dryly, "still they are a trifle weak to account for your silence. It was your duty to bring this criminal to justice if you believed him guilty."

"Others could [illegible] his life and punish him for his crime, Monsieur l'Avocat, so why should I interfere? Had he not been arrested, I might have suppressed what you call sentiment, and brought him to justice, but, as it was, I preferred to keep silence."

"Do you believe him guilty?"

"I do! most firmly."

"Then you are wrong. He is perfectly innocent. How could he have found your cartridge, with which alone the crime could have been committed?"

"Ah, that I do not know."

"You see, therefore, Monsieur Ivan, that there is something in his favor—besides, you suspect another person."

"I suspect another person!" echoed Ivan, in surprise, "no, you are wrong."

"I am not wrong. You hinted at Mr. Dallas."

"Pardon me. I said nothing about my own suspicions; I referred to those of M. Maxwell."

"What on earth has he to do with it?" I asked, quickly, being somewhat weary of this protracted conversation.

"A great deal, monsieur, and as I promised to tell you all, I will do so, but you will be much astonished."

"I have lost the faculty of being astonished of late, Signor Ivan. Every moment brings a fresh surprise."

"Doubtless, but this is the greatest surprise of all."

"What is it?"

"Pray be silent, major," said Tancred, a trifle rudely, I thought, but these lawyers have no manners. "Signor Ivan will, I am sure, prefer to tell his story in his own way."

Thus abjured, I held my peace, though sorely against my will, for I would have preferred to come to the point at once by questioning, without enduring the purgatory of this interminable narration which Ivan now proceeded to inflict upon us both.

"In order to make things perfectly clear," he said, slowly, "I have, to a certain extent, violated my own instinct of delicacy, by telling you of my love for this dead woman. I loved her ardently, not as you cold English love with caution and calculation, with an eye to surrounding circumstances, and a dread of gossip. No, I was devoted to her, I adored her, I worshipped her ardently, and would have laid down my life at her feet had she so desired. Alas! I was unfortunate, and your countryman won her heart. In Paris, I saw a great deal of her, but while accepting my attentions, she contrived to keep me at a distance, by a certain reserve which I failed to break down. At last on the eve of our departure for England, to fulfil our engagements, I told her of my love, how ardently I desired to make her my wife—how her face was constantly before me, and how she filled my life. She heard me to the end, and then, in cold, calm words told me she was engaged to marry Sir Gilbert Tressinger. Those words broke my heart, and she said them."

He struck his hand passionately against the piano, near which he was seated and affected by emotion, was for some moments unable to proceed. We kept silence out of sympathy for his misfortune, and after a pause of a few minutes' duration, he resumed his story.

"How cruel women are! She refused me as a lover, she desired me as a friend, and treated me, with a frank cordiality which I found sufficiently painful—so much so, in fact, that I ceased to see her save when our professional duties brought us together on the stage. I knew that Sir Gilbert was constantly with her, and I could not bear to stand calmly by, contemplating that bliss in which I had no share, so I stayed away from her presence, and strove to crush in my heart this foolish love which was never to bring me happiness or peace of mind. Dante described Hell, but he omitted the worst Hell of all—the Hell of despised desire."

While speaking thus passionately, his eyes blazed as with consuming fire, and great drops of sweat stood on his flushed brow, betraying the agony he felt in thus coldly dissecting the passion which had wrecked his life. Taking out his handkerchief he wiped his forehead, and passed it rapidly over his dry lips, then hastily pursued his narration.

"I heard by chance that Sir Gilbert had gone to Paris, and that night, between the acts of the opera, she sent for me to her dressing room. I was loth to go, but had not strength of mind to refuse. When I came face to face with her, I found it difficult to control my emotion, but she pretended not to notice my agitation, so cruel was she towards one whom she had rejected. At last I grew sufficiently calm to ask her what she desired, and then she told me that she wanted me to go at once to Lippinton."

"To Lippinton!" ejaculated both Tancred and myself, with breathless interest.

"Lippinton, she informed me," resumed Ivan, without noticing our interruption, "is a little village near your town of Harrow, and she gave me instructions how to go down there, which she wished me to do the next day."

"And her reason?" asked Tancred, quickly.

"To see a gardner called Maxwell."

"Great heavens" I murmured, a suspicion entering my mind, which I strove to banish as absurd, "can it be possible?"

"Can what be possible?" demanded Ivan, his quick ears catching my remark.

"Nothing! nothing! a mere idea. Pray, go on with your story."

"When I saw this gardener, I was to say, 'Why have you sent me the Black Carnation,' and await his reply."

"Which was——" I asked, breathlessly.

"Softly, softly, monsieur, let me tell the story in my own way."

I was forced to assent, though I was burning with curiosity, for this new description of the sender of the Black Carnation seemed to draw Maxwell—a rough, uncultured Irishman—into the affair. It was ridiculous, for there could be no connection between a famous prima-donna and an obscure gardener, celebrated though he might be in his own circle as the grower of that curious plant, which was so prominent in the tragedy. Then I remembered Miss Maxwell; her emotion on hearing the name of Mazzucata; her extraordinary resemblance to Mazzucata; and felt that we were on the verge of a great discovery, which would either solve the mystery or deepen it still more. As for Tancred, he preserved a rigid silence, but his eager eyes, the twitching of his nervous fingers, showed that he was as eager as myself.

(To Be Continued).

* * *

The class in spelling was asked to state the difference between "results" and "consequences." One bright-eyed little miss replied: "Results are what you expect, and consequences are what you get."—Country Gentleman.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

Lesson VIII. May 20, 1917.

The Importance of Self-Control.—Temperance Lesson.—Isaiah 28: 1-13.

Commentary.—I. A nation in danger (vs. 1-4). 1. Woe—This is not an imprecation, but a warning. The prophet is foretelling the destruction of a debauched nation. Crown of pride—Samaria, the capital of Israel, was situated upon a beautiful, round hill about three hundred feet in height. It is here spoken of as "the crown of pride." Drunkards of Ephraim—Ephraim is used to stand for the entire kingdom, and the inference is that this was a nation of drunkards. A fading flower—Samaria was a thriving city and beautiful for situation, but the prophet saw it as a lovely flower beginning to fade. The destruction of Samaria and the captivity of Israel were only three or four years in the future. Even then the Assyrians under Shelmaneser were ready to bring about its destruction. Head of the fat valleys—Samaria was surrounded by beautiful, fruitful valleys. 2. Behold—The prophet's message demands attention. The Lord hath a mighty and strong one—The Assyrians were eager to conquer and take possession of Israel, and the Lord would withdraw his protection and permit Assyria to carry out her purpose. The fierceness and destructiveness of the Assyrian army is vividly expressed in the language of this verse. The army is compared to some of the most destructive forces in nature, "a tempest of hail and a destroying storm," and "a flood of mighty waters overflowing." 3. Crown of pride, the drunkards of Ephraim—The city of Samaria in all its beauty and prosperity is spoken of in these terms. The people were revelling in luxury, and drunkenness abounded. The nation was "overcome with wine" (v. 1). Trodden under feet—If the people of Israel had not been under the power of drink, they would have realized their danger and would have been able to defend themselves; but they were blind to their condition and became an easy prey to the Assyrian host. 4. The glorious beauty ..... shall be a fading flower—Samaria is represented as a fading flower in a sightly place. After the Assyrians, as a "tempest of hail" and a "flood of mighty waters," had swept over it, there would be nothing left of its beauty and prominence. The hasty fruit—Some of the fruit of the fig tree became ripe as early as June, when the main crop ripened in August. The "hasty fruit" was the "first ripe fig," and was esteemed a great delicacy, which was eagerly devoured by those who found it. So the Assyrians would eagerly devour Samaria and the land of Israel. Isaiah in his beauty saw this fearful destruction which was only a few years in the future.

II. Help in God (vs. 5-6). 5. In that day—At the time when the kingdom of Israel should be overthrown because of its drunkenness and other forms of wickedness. The Lord of hosts—"Jehovah of hosts."—R. V. A crown of glory—In striking contrast to the "crown of pride." Unto the residue of his people—Direct reference is doubtless made to the tribes of Judah and Benjamin, which constituted the kingdom of Judah. About the time the Assyrians took the northern kingdom into captivity, Hezekiah became king of Judah and instituted important and far-reaching reforms, and the kingdom prospered. It stood for a period of one hundred and thirty-five years after the northern kingdom ceased to exist. It is also doubtless true, as many commentators think, than the prophet saw in his vision the ushering in of Messiah's kingdom and the blessings that would attend his reign. 6. Spirit of judgment—Justice, righteousness. To him that sitteth in judgment—To the ruler of the people. To them that turn the battle to the gate—To those who wage a victorious warfare. The idea is that of driving the enemy back to the gates of the city from whence they came. There is great encouragement to the children of God in these verses. The Lord will be to them a crown of glory and a diadem of beauty, and he will give them wisdom and strength to make them victors over all that would oppose their spiritual progress. He is a tower of strength to the righteous, but to those who persist in a course of rebellion against him he brings punishment.

III. Needed instruction given—(vs. 7-13). 7. But they also have erred through wine—Isaiah turns to the sins of his own people, the kingdom of Judah. He had held up the condition, morally, of the people of Israel, and had shown the coming destruction, as a warning to the people of Judah. He charges them with indulgence in strong drink, which is having its usual effects. It produces weakness of body and mind and is destructive of spiritual life. The priest and the prophet have erred through strong drink—They who should be the moral and spiritual guides of the people were incompetent and wicked. Their views of truth are not clear and they fail to weigh causes justly because they are given to strong drink. 8. Filthiness—The liquor traffic is productive of physical and moral filth. It defiles everything it touches. It pollutes the very air, so that the space about the door of the saloon is foul with the odor of the drink, and the breath of the drinker is nauseating with the fumes of alcohol. It brings its victim below the level of the brute.

9. Whom shall He teach knowledge—The condition described in the two preceding verses shows clearly the need for instruction and warning; but those to whom the prophet spoke resented his words. Was Isaiah talking to them as if they were mere babes? Did they not know what they were doing? 10. Precept upon precept, etc.—It seems that the people were mocking Isaiah in his continued efforts to instruct and warn them. They were thoroughly displeased with him for going over the same thing again and again. They considered it an affront to their intelligence to deal with them as a teacher would with little children. 11. With stammering lips—"By men of strange lips."—R. V. The prophet replies to the scoffers. They would not hear and heed the instructions, and warnings which he gave them, but they would realize the truth when the Assyrians, "men of strange lips" and of a foreign tongue, should break down their haughty northern neighbor. The Lord would speak in judgment if the people would not listen when he spoke in mercy. 12. This is the rest...This is the refreshing—The Lord had shown His people the way of rest from their enemies and of true prosperity. They had known of the great deliverances He had wrought out for them; yet they would not give heed to His requirements and promises. 13. The word of the Lord was unto them and pleaded with them repeatedly by his prophets, but they would not heed their warnings. Then He spoke to them by His judgments, permitting the Assyrians to afflict them until they were "broken and snared, and taken" into captivity.

Questions.—What is the meaning of the word woe as here used? What was the crown of pride? What particular sin was Isaiah condemning? To what does drunkenness lead? To what did the prophet compare the Assyrian army? What hope was held out to the kingdom of Judah? What was the condition of Judah? In what words did the people scoff at the message of the prophet? What would finally overtake the rebellious nation?

PRACTICAL SURVEY.

Topic.—A ruined nation.

I. Depraved by self-indulgence.
II. Deprived of divine blessing.

I. Depraved by self-indulgence. The lesson here is one of united and fearless opposition intemperance and to whatever exposes the people to its ravages. This chapter is the first of a group of representative discourses which deal with conditions existing throughout Israel, all enforcing the same principles. In this instance the prophet Isaiah warned the ten tribes of the coming judgments which were soon after executed by Assyria. Words are scarcely possible with which to express greater sorrow and calamity than are found here describing the prevailing iniquity caused by intemperance. Ephraim in this lesson stands for the kingdom of the ten tribes. The drunkards of Ephraim stand for its dissipated and desolate people. The crown of Samaria stands for its capital city, strong and beautiful. Pride was a sin which generally prevailed. Because of this the prophet boldly proclaimed a woe to the crown of pride. The people were not only overcome but ruined by the use of intoxicants. They sacrificed reason, virtue, conscience to the love of strong drink. The loss of everything desirable overcame them when they lost control of their appetites. In the place of industry, indolence prevailed. In the place of intelligence, ignorance abounded. In place of thrift and comfort, poverty and wretchedness existed. In place of honor and virtue, dishonor and vice held sway until life became almost unendurable. Appetite as a strong giant brought his captives into complete subjection so as to render it practically impossible to cast off his chains. Drunkenness is compared to a combat between man and his habit, in which man is the victim and habit the victor. The figure is of a people laid prostrate and helpless in utter bewilderment, and unconscious as to what would happen to them or their homes or their nation, a condition heart-sickening and hopeless. They were so stricken as to be unsound in judgment, with little or no vision of truth and duty, with no susceptibility to moral and religious impressions, unable to speak intelligently, subject to the miseries of all evil, afflictions and calamities, exposed to contempt, not able to recover themselves. They had no capacity to receive instruction and were prejudiced against it.

II. Deprived of divine blessing. Isaiah was one of the most eloquent men, yet the people resisted his words and objected to him as God's messenger. The word of God commanded their serious attention, which they refused to give, but rather ridiculed it. What really angered those scorners was that the prophet treated them, as they complained, as though they were children and not as masters in Israel. They despised God's method of dealing with them. They were weary of hearing of morality or of having the prophet's warnings applied to the sins and needs of their time. They sneered at the simplicity of the means vouchsafed to the church of Isaiah's time. By their profane contempt of God and his word, they hastened their own ruin. They were to be broken by their enemies, snared in their own policy and taken in Satan's net. The refuge they chose for themselves would utterly fail them. They were to suffer punishment by a continued hardening of their hearts until they were no longer able to understand. The prophet's prediction was fulfilled. Terrible and exact was the retribution that fell on their sin. The literal meaning of the "residue of the people" is that after the pride of the apostate tribes had fallen, they who had remained true to God and to themselves should glory and delight in Jehovah. It was a prophecy blessingly fulfilled. "A crown of glory and a diadem of beauty" are employed as emblems to represent what God regards as the most precious and beautiful ornaments for his people. Such a crown is unfading and imperishable, substantial and immortal, "a crown of righteousness" rightly obtained and rightly possessed. Death has no power over it. God will impart to his faithful "residue" by his grace, that which will be infinitely more desirable and valuable to them than the most costly crown upon earth.—T. R. A.

Paneled Skirts.

My, but top coats are interesting these days! The lines are quaint and youthful even for the eldest, and the colors are positively irresistible. As for the texture of the fabric, there is about most of them a soft, velvety finish that just coaxes one to stroke their "backs."

But besides the comfy woollen fabrics there are those, intended for the warm shore days and even for mountain wear when one is inclined to "fuss" at these vacation haunts, fashioned of satin and silks, among the latter tussah especially. Some of the satin coats are very elaborate, indeed, being embroidered in silk floss or in gold and silver bullion. There are, too, some lovely evening wraps for spring and summer appearing. These are mostly in cape effect. Silk jersey sport coats are a smart left over from last season. Some of the smartest satin coats, by the way, are lined with linen.

Twills and needle cords are found to be popular in the woollens, such as gabardine, serge and poplin. Some of these are in coat dress effect and can be worn as either garment. Nevertheless, the woollens having a softer finish and reminiscent of the winter burellas and velours seem to appeal more to the woman with an eye for the artistic as well as the smart in garments.

There are various novelty woollens and a fair showing of wool jersey.

The majority of the coats have a softness and grace of outline, and yet a simplicity that makes them really wearable morning noon and night, and for this reason many, especially among the younger set, are planning to take but the one coat and [illegible] evening wrap when they go for their summer vacations.

Fighting the Sub. and the Deadly Sea Mine

For many months after the outbreak of the war abroad the submarine mine was a close second to the torpedo in achieving the destruction of all kinds of shipping. Thereafter the mine fell somewhat behind, not because it lacked power to do harm but for two others reasons—first the wholesome dread inspired by the prescribed mined areas and next because of the various expedients adopted by the belligerents to neutralize these subaqueous weapons. Even so, the mine is playing a big part in marine warfare.

It is a matter of record that the Germans got the jump on the British by their prompt and even daring employment of the submarine mine. Within a very short time after the declaration of war Teuton mine planters were operating on the English and Scottish coasts and were busily engaged in sowing these weapons at the very entrances of enemy ports and rivers.

For this purpose it was rather easy then to have recourse to North Sea fishing craft that had all the outward complexion of innocence; indeed, for weeks these boats went about their work well nigh unsuspected. It was only when British battle craft were mysteriously damaged and sunk that the British authorities awakened to their peril.

Even then the belief prevailed that any damage was more or less a matter of sheer chance—chance in the nature of a friendly defence mine that had got adrift. Then the next explanation was that a particulraly daring U-boat commander had managed to get within striking distance, and finally it dawned upon the British coast patrol that enemy mines were being freely planted right under their very noses.

Every fishing boat was then an object of suspicion, and prompt investigation proved in a great many cases that there was ample warrant for this attitude. Neutral trawlers became more and more infrequent in certain of the waters contiguous to the north and east coasts of Scotland and England, and for a time the mine menace was held pretty well in hand.

The resourceful Teutons, however, were not checkmated, and it was only a question of time before they devised a method with which to offset the vigilance of the British coasted patrol. Then the German submarine mine layers got at work. How many of these the Kaiser's experts have built and sent to their fields of service in the waters of the North Sea, especially, is not known. It is safe to say too many of them have been built and despatched upon their missions, and the general character of all of them is probably much akin to that of the UC 5, which was captured and taken into a British port.

By chance a British destroyer discovered the UC 5 on the surface and in distress at some point along the east coast. When summoned by megaphone to surrender the crew of the submarine mustered on deck and held up their hands in token of submission, but curiously before a relief boat could be sent to them they jumped overboard.

The cause of their action was soon explained. Another member of the submarine's complement suddenly appeared upon deck and threw himself into the water and almost immediately afterward there were a number of violent explosions within the UC 5. The last man had exploded bombs which blew holes in the craft. But for prompt action on the part of a British sub-lieutenant, who, protected by gas mask, went dauntlessly down into the injured U-boat, the mine planter would have filled and gone to the bottom in water too deep for her recovery.

As it was she represented a desperate task for her would-be salvors, and it was necessary to secure a couple of mines within the boat that had been set free by the explosions before it was safe to tow the submarine into harbor and to dock her. Upon examination this new order of submarine was found to be charged or laden with a dozen powerful contact mines housed in six vertical wells passing directly from deck to bottom of the craft.

Each well held two mines, one on top of the other, and both were kept in their places by locking devices which could be released from within the submarine. The controlling station for this operation was found to be in the conning tower, so that the commander of the boat with only her periscopes above water could see just where to sow his weapons.

In this way the Germans have been able upon many occasions to approach certain sections of the waters about the British Isles and to plant there mines that have accomplished the destructive work cut out for them. The mine fields controlled by the military authorities, those of the Coast Artillery Corps, are as a rule protected by observation mines or electric contact mines that are made active or inactive by the operation of a switch. That is to say, the vitalizing current comes from a central station ashore, and neither of these types of mines will explode unless the electric current reaches them by way of a submerged cable.

In the case of the contact mine with the current turned on the mine will explode when bumped and tilted over to a prescribed angle. The observation mine, on the other hand, does not have to be touched by the enemy craft, but is subject to the will of an observer on shore.

Observation mines are planted in groups and are laid out in definite checkerboard areas, and each group is set off separately and simultaneously. The observer, by means of range marks or bearings, knows just when the approaching foe reaches any one of these squares, and accordingly the one within which the enemy lies at the moment determines the group of mines to be detonated.

The contact mine, as may easily be understood, does its work where an observer might fail, after dark, and for that reason the electric current is turned on with set of sun and the whole area so sown becomes instantly a menace to friend or foe. It is quite likely that observation mines were employed by the Turks at the Dardanelles, and therefore in approaching (from under water) it was possible for the British submarine B-11 to dive beneath five rows of mines, probably showing their cables aside and tilting the weapons, and then pushing on so that she could rise to the surface and torpedo the Turkish battleship Messudiyeh, which was stationed to guard that very mine field.

Had those mines been of the contact sort, the displacement of their cables would probably have caused their detonation and likewise the destruction of the B-11. Other British submarines succeeded in passing submerged through those Turkish defences, the enemy observers being unable to see the underwater boats. It was the exploits of the submarines at the Dardanelles that disclosed to the British the weak spot in their own mine defences and led a short while afterward to the development of other protective agencies in dealing with the German underwater boats.

Unquestionably the most spectacular part of submarine mining is that in which the weapons are resorted to in open waters, especially in those offshore areas where a defence of that sort is not ordinarily employed.

German mine layers were ready and numerous on August 1 three years ago; and as we now know the Kaiser's navy lost no time in mining the marine approaches to the Fatherland. Not only that, but these craft, in various guises, planted mines over wide areas in the North Sea and in the waters of the British Isles.

The Hague Convention of 1907 among other things provided that "it is forbidden to lay anchored automatic contact mines which do not become harmless as soon as they have broken loose from their moorings"; and it was also prescribed at that time that no unanchored mines should be used which would be dangerous more than an hour after they had been dropped into the sea. The mines in question are self-contained contact mines that are not controlled from any shore or observing station and are well nigh instantly menacing when cast overboard.

Just before the war the Germans, with their usual technical cunning, developed a naval offence and defence mine which could be used either in a fixed position or be planted hastily in water traversed by enemy shipping. This mine is the type which has done such destructive work, and is designed to be fired by an electric battery placed inside of the mine, this battery being inactive until the mine has been submerged and then struck by a passing craft.

The battery elements are dry and are not active until they are bathed in a liquid electrolyte, and this electrolyte is held apart in a glass container. Projecting outwardly from the mine casing are a number of plungers or fingers and when any one of these is driven in by a blow the glass container is crushed and the electrolyte is set free so that it will flow down to and energize the battery. This operation completes the firing circuit and the electric current thus generated sets off the detonator which explodes the mine charge.

The planting of the mine has certain interesting features. These have been described in the Journal of the United States artillery in this fashion:

"The buoyant mine is attached to the anchor by a device locked with a salammoniac plug. The mine and anchor are planted together and both sink to the bottom. When sinking the buoyancy of the mine puts a drag on the rapidity of the sinking of the anchor and insures that the anchor is planted properly to give a maximum holding power.

"The reel containing the mooring rope is fastened to the mine. When the salammoniac plug dissolves the mine is released from the anchor and a part of the firing circuit is closed. The mine then rises slowly, due to the friction of the brake on the reel.

"When the mine rises to the proper distance below the surface of the water the decrease in hydrostatic pressure releases a device on the mine, which clamps the mooring rope to the mine, thus holding the mine at the proper submergence. Ten feet submergence is usually attempted. The mechanism will operate with an error of plus or minus two feet."

The purpose of the salammoniac plug is to keep the anchor and the mine together until the bottom is reached and then to hold them together for a few minutes thereafter. In this way the mine planter has a chance to pass on and out of the way before the mine rises again and becomes a peril to any craft that may hit it. The depth regulating device is an ingenious one and brings into play a positive force that nature provides.

The difficulty, however, is that induced by a heavy seaway, because the mine may be halted in its upward movement by the hollow of a wave and thus set at a depth somewhat greater than the designed one. In a case of this sort a destroyer could pass safely over that mine in moderate weather without fear of striking it, while if the mine rose and adjusted its height agreeably to a surmounting wave it might lie on the surface or so near the surface as to betray its position. The presence of one so exposed would be warning enough to enemy craft.

A development of the contact mine which the Germans have at times employed successfully is one surmounted by a dummy or decoy periscope. The object of this ruse is to invite ramming on the part of a patrolling vessel or even a merchantman when the deceived navigator believes that the chance is good for sending a U boat to the bottom. Of course a vessel attempting to ram that dummy periscope is sure to strike the contact mine and cause it to explode, the result being disastrous to the ramming craft.

This lure has not worked so well latterly because the observer is able in a few moments to establish the fact that the periscope is stationary, and the work of getting the underlying mine out of the way is left to the fairly safe process of sweeping—trawlers linked together by a loop of wire rope doing the work.

In order to deal with both the submarine torpedo boat and the submarine mine planter the British Admiralty has had recourse to defence nets of a novel character. These have been very well described by Rear Admiral William S. Sims. According to this authority:

"We did not find out for a long time what these nets are like and I think it is necessary that it should be understood in order to realize the great danger submarines run in the presence of light surface craft.

"The net is a very light one, made of little wire rope, probably not as big as a lead pencil, probably not more than a quarter of an inch in diameter. The meshes of the net are 12 to 15 feet square. On top of this net are floats and on the bottom are little weights.

"The moment this net—'unbeknownst' to the submarine commander, of course—is in the water in front of him, the floats keep the net on the surface and the weights keep the bottom down and if he runs into it his bow goes down into one of the meshes and the net falls back around him, and it may foul his propeller or may not.

"The net is 300 or 400 yards long, and as the submarine proceeds the floats will trail on the surface, so that even if he dives deeper he leaves these on the surface and his trail is plain and there is no difficulty then in capturing him. He knows when he runs into a net that his capture is practically certain. If he goes down 200 feet the floats of the net are still on the surface."

These nets are used in two ways, either passively at chosen points in guarded waters or they are dropped overboard by patrolling vessels that discover a submerged submarine in motion. It is a fact that even though a submarine be running totally submerged twenty or thirty feet down, it still causes a disturbance at the surface, not a wake in the usual sense of the term, but a type of wave which is easily distinguished from the regular surface waves, and this phenomenon is readily discernible from the bridge of a ship or from a hydroplane

So discovered, a couple of destroyers can easily overtake the submerged submarine and get ahead of it far enough to spread the net right across the path of the unsuspecting U-boat. With that done, the destroyers can trail their quarry and wait patiently until the submarine comes to the surface, as it surely must sooner or later.

To return to the submarine mine. We have so far considered only that so-called offensive type which can be anchored in fairly shallow waters, such as prevail extensively in the North Sea, but now let us take up that kind which can be dropped overboard in much deeper water. This sort is capable of being planted from a speedy ship seemingly bent upon escaping from her pursuers, and her strategy consists in inviting chase while dropping these stumbling blocks right in in the path of her oncoming enemies.

Mines of this sort must cease to be a menace, according to the Hague Conference, at the end of an hour. They are commonly called floating mines or tactical mines.—New York Sun.

BRONCHITIS WAS SO BAD

Coughed Every Few Minutes.

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP CURED HER.

Bronchitis starts with a short, painful, dry cough, accompanied with a rapid wheezing, and a feeling of oppression or tightness through the chest. At the expectoration is a light color but the trouble progresses the phlegm arising from the bronchial tubes becomes of a yellowish or greenish color, and is very often of a stringy nature.

Bronchitis should never be neglected. If it is some serious lung trouble will undoubtedly follow.

Get rid of it by using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. This well-known remedy has been on the market for the past 25 years.

It cures where others fail.

Mrs. Geo. Lotton, Uxbridge, Ont., writes: "I have had bronchitis so bad I could not lie down at night; and had to cough every few minutes to get my breath. I had a doctor out to see me, but his medicine seemed to do me no good. I sent to the druggist for some good cough mixture, and got Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. One bottle helped me wonderfully. I stopped coughing, and could lie down, and rest well at night. I cannot praise it too much."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; 3 pine trees the trade mark; price 25c. and 50c.

Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Servants' Accomplishments.

A Brussels merchant advertised for a servant. One applicant pleased him. The terms and outings were arranged, when the girl asked, "Who washes the dishes?" Taken aback, the merchant asked her to repeat her question. The girl did so without turning a hair.

"Madame washes the dishes, and I dry them," replied the merchant. "Can you play the piano?" he asked.

"No," was the reply.

"Then I am afraid you will not suit," said the merchant. The girl retired with a dignified air. With a politeness which is described as exquisite, she turned to the merchant and said, "To-morrow I shall take lessons at the conservatory, and as soon as I begin to make progress I will call again!" This story is certified as authentic.—Throne and Country.

* * *

It is a condition which confronts us—not a theory.—Grover Cleveland.

The telephone rang and the new maid answered it. "Hello!" came from the receiver. "Hello!" answered the girl timidly. "Who is this?" again came the voice. "I don't know who it is," said the girl. "I can't see you."—Christian Register.

CONSTIPATION

THE COMMONEST ILL.

Constipation is one of the commonest ills of mankind and one too often allowed to go unlooked after until some serious complication sets in.

If the bowels are properly looked after there will be no constipation, jaundice, sick or bilious headaches, heartburn, coated tongue, sour stomach, floating specks before the eyes, etc.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills will keep the bowels regular and cure all liver ills.

Mr. Philip McLeod, Tarbot, N.S., writes: "I suffered from constipation ever since I can remember, and for years had pains in the left side of the back. If I walked across the kitchen floor I would have to sit down and rest. That I think was terrible for a man of 20 years of age. The condition of my system was shown by pimples breaking out on my face. I suffered so much pain and stiffness in my back I am sure my system was full of poison. Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills have entirely cured me.

"I thoroughly recommend them to everybody."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c. a vial, 5 vials $1.00, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

ARM AND GARDEN

N THE APPLE ORCHARD.

British embargo placed upon apples canned fruits containing sugar may serious blow to our Ontario growers, hat will have to be put up with he sake of the Empire. Fruit ng has always been looked upon the most speculative branch of the culture with returns proportionate to risks. Since the great war started has been more than ever true. le the export trade in Ontario fruits not been heavy, it has nevertheless bed much of the surplus crop that otherwise cause glute in our home production now following so upon the demand. Of more impor- to the apple grower, the European take all of Nova Scotia's crop er normal conditions and also the rplus boxed apples from the United tes. If this year a good average crop is harvested in all parts of the continent as appears reasonable to expect, our local markets will have to dispose of all of the fruit that ordinarily goes overseas. A vigorous advertising scheme will be necessary to again introduce our quality fruit to the Canadian consumer, who has not been very well looked after since 1914.

as we all devoutly hope, the embargo is removed before our crop is ready, the situation will be relieved to some extent, though with high ocean rates, congestion of freight traffic, etc., grades and poor varieties are bound be at a decided discount this fall. owers will be taking more than ordinary chances in 1917, but remember the old saying "If you never speculate, you never win."

This year when help is nearly impossible to get, the orchardist may be tempted to give his orchard very little attention. On account of the great prevalence of scab of 1916, it would be poor economy to leave all the spraying out. t the pruning might be done away with this season. Suckers should, if possible, be cut out, a sharp saw being the best tool, in fact the only tool that does satisfactory work. Cut as close to the branch as possible, so that no enlargement will be there after the wound is healed. Many cuts are made leaving a very short stub, and next season there are generally small suckers starting from that enlargement. Many trees are so high that it is almost impossible thoroughly spray them. It would not take long to cut several feet off the of such trees, leaving the thinning to future seasons. Where the trees have been fairly well pruned in the past, they would not suffer if they got no thinning in the branch this year, when labor is so scarce.

Several years ago it was considered that three sprays would keep apples free from scab, and in a normal season this still applies. These sprays would be the dormant, the blossoms and after the blossom had fallen. If the grower of necessity has to cut down labor, and has no San Jose Scale or very few Oyster Shell Bark Lice, the dormant would be the best spray to leave out, but if there are any San Jose Scale, he should surely put on the dormant spray. Last year in part of our Wellington orchard where the dormant spray was omitted for experiment, there were 20 per cent. more apples with scab, though this was contrary to the opinion formerly held by many authorities. The second spray should be put on when blossoms are showing pink. This is an important spray for Scab and Bud Moth. The lower part of the blossoms is the beginning of the apple and the stalk is then as long as it ever is. If a scab starts on the small apple or stalk, it can never be killed with any amount of spray. If on the latter (the stalk), it is more than likely to make it too brittle. When the apple grows the first wind will break the injury stem. For this spray Professor Caesar recommends 1 gallon lime and sulphur (commercial) to 30-35 gallons of water, and from 2-3 lbs. arsenate of lead to 40 gallons.

The third spray should be used when 90 per cent. of the blossoms have fallen. For this spray the same authority recommends 1 gallon commercial lime and sulphur to 35-40 gallons of water and 2 lbs. arsenate of lead to 40 gallons. If a season follows with cool, damp weather, a spray same as the last without the arsenate of lead should be put on two weeks after the blossom application. Have the tower high enough so the tops of the trees can be easily reached. Spraying is often not thoroughly done, part of the tree missed, and in many cases not enough material used. Sometimes at the picking time apples on a branch or part of one are covered with scab, while the other part of the tree is clean. This certainly is caused by missing that part of the tree at one of the sprays. To spray thoroughly one should have a system. Begin at the same part of each tree and finish it, the same plan being followed throughout the row. The sprayer on the ground is more likely to do thorough work by his spray nozzle up and down and walking two or three steps after each up and down movement. If there is sufficient wind to carry the spray, it is not necessary have the nozzle close to the part to be sprayed. Better be four feet or more branch being treated. Large trees, both high and wide, require for the dormant spray about seven gallons of material, second spray eight gallons and third nine gallons to thoroughly wet the tree. Some growers are inclined to return to Bordeaux mixture, claiming they can grow cleaner apples with this material than with lime and sulphur. We do not believe any material can grow apples with fewer scabs than lime and sulphur properly applied. Bordeaux mixture has one advantage, where part of the tree has been missed, it is at once detected and said "touched up." If the lime and sulphur would show more on the foliage, the missed spot could also be gone over. Those who have not received the Spray Calendar for 1917, can get it from the District Representative or from this office.

If the orchard was fall plowed or has a cover crop to plow under this spring and the writer wishes to save labor, he might sow red clover as soon as land can be cultivated. Now that crop [illegible] land. This would take little from the land [illegible] or more. If it is possible [illegible] partially, try a sod strip three feet wide on each side of the bearing tree. This is the most difficult part to cultivate. When no cultivation is done and the land is poor, the apples are likely to be small, but again they will be better colored. It is well known that apples measuring 2½ inches, bright red, will bring more money to the grower than any 3½ inches poorly colored.—Ontario Department of Agriculture Fruit Branch Circular.

NOTES.

A test was made in Monmouth county, New Jersey, to determine the relative value of eyes from different parts of the potato. The yield from the blossom end averaged 19 pounds, from the middle 15 pounds, and from the stem end, 19 pounds, showing 30 per cent. greater productiveness from the seed end than from the stem end. The writer can remember seeing the neighbors chip off the blossom end when they were cutting their seed. The farm demonstrator, Mr. Duryee, has obtained the following results from nine farms where salt was used to test plots. Eight of them report a decrease and one a slight increase. Three hundred and 500 pounds of salt were applied in the row with the fertilizer, according to the directions of the salt company which gave the salt. It checked germination, and during the growing season the salt plots could be easily picked out because the foliage was dwarfed and had a slight yellowish cast. These results are not conclusive. Possibly 150 pounds broadcast just before the potatoes come up would not impair germination and might help the yield.

Horses that have been idle for some time should have a liberal allowance of grain for a few weeks before they are called upon to take part in very hard work.

One of the best things to toughen a horse's shoulders is to bathe them with warm salt water every morning, noon and night.

In nearly all cases mashes should form an important item in the dietary of a sick horse; but in the case of scouring, their use must be barred or at least reduced to a minimum.

Poll evil and fistula are brought on by bruises. Low stables or any obstructions that a horse can bump up against are a menace.

Feeding should be done with a view to the quality as well as to the quantity of the finished product. As dirty mangers or feeding troughs, musty food and strong-scented food have a more or less bad effect upon the milk and butter, too much care cannot be taken to eliminate all such conditions from the feeding of cows.

The cow, the sow and the hen are greater factors for profitable farming than crops without them. The man who depends upon crops without animals will have trouble marketing his crops till his land gets so poor there will be nothing to market. With cows, hogs and hens crops will yield more and the cost of marketing will be less.

GREASE IS GREASE
It may be any old kind but
MICA IS AXLE GREASE
MICA AXLE GREASE
THE IMPERIAL OIL COMPANY
Limited
BRANCHES THROUGHOUT CANADA

FAMOUS PASSAGE.

Straits of Messina Identified as Scylla and Charybdis.

The Straits of Messina, through which the German warships Goeben and Breslau are supposed to have slipped, eluding the eagerly pursuing British Mediterranean fleet at the outbreak of the European war, have again found a place in European despatches as the scene of a naval mishap in which warships belonging to England and Italy mistook each other for enemies after a collision in a fog and proceeded to shell one another. Concerning this narrow lane of sea between the rocky passes of Sicily and the "toe" of the Italian peninsula, the National Geographic Society's recent war geography bulletin says:

"The Sicilian and Italian banks which border the Straits of Messina for nearly twenty-five miles to the east and west are among the most luxuriant to be found in a cruise of the Mediterranean. Magnificent golden groves of lemon and orange and orchards of pomegranates with their brilliant red fruit contrast wonderfully with the flowers of the almond trees, which perfume the whole region.

"The straits are entered from the Tyrrhenian Sea on the north at the narrowest point, the distance between Punta del Faro on the Sicilian shore and the mainland lighthouse on Punta Pezzo being not more than two miles. The whole of the Calabrian coast is thickly sown with villages, some clinging to the beach, while others clamber up the sides of well-wooded hills which culminate in the towering Montalto, rising to an elevation of more than a mile above the sea. Beyond the straits to the southwest looms ever threatening Etna, the highest volcano in Europe.

"The most important city situated on the straits is the once magnificent seaport of Messina, which boasted a population of 150,000 inhabitants before the world's most cruel earthquake of Dec. 28, 1908, tossed nearly 100,000 lives away.

"The harbor of Messina is the largest and safest in the kingdom of Italy, with a depth of more than 30 fathoms. Before the great calamity it was visited annually by more than 5,000 vessels, which brought cargoes of wheat, cotton, wool and hardware, and took away in exchange lemons, oranges, almonds, wines, olive oil and silks. Much of its commerce was and still is carried on with the mainland of the kingdom by means of a ferry line to Villa San Giovanni, only four and a half miles away, while Reggio, the chief seaport on the Italian side of the straits, and also the chief earthquake sufferer next to Messina, is ten miles to the southeast. Ferry boats ply between these points, too. Scilla, Faro, Catona, Pellaro, Scalitta and Gallati are minor towns on the shores of the straits.

"The historical records of Messina and the neighboring settlements contain many accounts of bombardments, raids and piratical descents during the Punic and Roman wars, and ravaging expeditions by Goths, Normans and Saracens, while earthquakes prior to the latest tragedy left their indelible scars from time to time, particularly in 1783. Nor has the plague spared this region. In 1740 Messina alone lost 40,000 of her population by disease, while 114 years later cholera removed 16,000.

"Homer did not accord a definite habitation for his terrible sea creatures Scylla and Charybdis, but mariners familiar with the perils of the rocks on the Italian side of the straits and with the strong eddies near the harbor of Messina saw in the mythical monsters an explanation of such dangers. Scylla was supposed to be a horrible creature with six heads and a dozen feet, who barked like a dog. She dwelt in a lofty cave from which she rushed whenever a ship tried to pass beneath, and she would snatch the unlucky seamen from the rigging or as they stood at the helm endeavoring to guide their vessels through the perilous passages. Charybdis dwelt under a rock only a bowshot away from the opposite shore. The second creature sucked in and blew out seawater three times a day, and woe to the ship caught in the maelstrom of its mouth!

Poets who came after the great Greek bard embroidered the legend to suit their fancy. Ovid, for example, described Scylla as a beautiful daughter of a sea-god who incurred the jealousy of one of the immortals and was changed into a sea monster. A second transformation made her a rock perilous to navigators. Some poets described Charybdis as an old woman who seized and devoured cattle of Hercules, and in punishment for this act the demigod's father, all-powerful Zeus, cast her into the sea, where her appetite persisted, but her taste changed from cattle to ships and seamen.

◆◆◆

No Celestial Explorer.

"Did you ever take any interest in astrology?"

"No," replied the matter-of-fact man. "I can account for all but the hard luck and temperamental peculiarities I came to by conditions right here on this earth."—Washington Star.

◆◆◆

Virtue is its own reward. The wicked are punished in the hereafter, the good generally get it in the neck here.

HOUSE OF HAPSBURG.

For Centuries Dominant Factor in European History.

Of the greatness of the House of Hapsburg, from a historical point of view, there is no end of. Hapsburgs have been dukes and archdukes of Austria since 1282, kings of Hungary and Bohemia since 1526, and emperors of Austria since 1804. They have also been Roman emperors, kings of Spain, and German kings, and in the reign of the Emperor Charles V., when the house reached the summit of its greatness, the Hapsburg dominions spread themselves over some of the greatest and wealthiest states of Europe.

The history of the House of Hapsburg is complicated to the last degree; any just consideration of it would involve the writing of a very large part of European history. Nevertheless, complicated as it is, perhaps no other royal house presents such marked characteristics, or has preserved, through the centuries, a general policy so unchanged and unchanging. In the early days of their history the Hapsburgs were famous for the way in which they increased their possessions by judicious marriages, and they have been famous for this ever since. It was thus that they first obtained possession of Bohemia, and it was thus also that they first obtained possession of Hungary. It was through his marriage with Mary, the daughter and heiress of Charles the Bold of Burgundy, in the fifteenth century, that Maximilian I. obtained possession of the Netherlands and other rich lands belonging to the famous duke; and in many other directions, by the same means and by other means, they added steadily to their inheritances.

The name Hapsburg, which is a variant of the older name Habichtsburg, or Hawk's Castle, was taken from the Castle of Hapsburg, built on the banks of the Aar, not far from its junction with the Rhine, by the bishop of Strasburg in 1020. The Hapsburgs, however, do not begin to come certainly into history until the closing years of the twelfth century. About that time we find one Albert styling himself Count of Hapsburg, and increasing the area of the Hapsburg lands with all the characteristic Hapsburg astuteness. Some seventy years later, a Hapsburg in the person of Rudolph, was seated on the German throne, and thence onwards they were foremost figures in European history.

Amongst the notable reverses incidental to their history in the Middle Ages must be mentioned the revolt of the Swiss. The Swiss people had chafed for many long years under the rule of the Hapsburgs, and the open struggle continued for nearly two centuries. Duke Leopold I. was defeated at Morgarten in 1315, and Leopold III. at Sempach in 1386, and so it went on until the signing of the "Perpetual Peace," in 1474, ended the rule of the Hapsburgs in Switzerland.

It was, however, within a comparatively short time of this reverse that the House of Hapsburg had reached the height of its power. Charles V. was Emperor. He had succeeded to all the hereditary lands to the Hapsburgs, and to the power and prestige which flowed to him as head of the Holy Roman Empire was added the wealth and commerce of the Netherlands, of Spain, and of the Spanish colonies in America. In Italy, he ruled over Sardinia, Naples, Sicily and the duchy of Milan, whilst to large inherited possessions in the Netherlands he added Groningen, Guelderland and the bishopric of Utrecht. At the same time his brother Ferdinand was ruler over the Austrian archduchies and Tyrol, Bohemia, with her dependent provinces, and a considerable part of Hungary. Thus the House of Hapsburg had really only one rival in Europe, and that was the House of Valois France, and it was the Valois that the Hapsburgs measured swords so grimly, some two hundred years later, during the war of the Spanish Succession. The Austrian Hapsburgs fought long and bitterly with Louis XIV. of France for the Spanish possessions of the house, but the Grand Monarque was too strong for them, and, by the peace of Rastatt, Spain passed from the Hapsburgs to the Bourbons.

The next great landmark in the history of the Hapsburgs is, perhaps, afforded by the reason of Maria Therese in the eighteenth century. The story of how her father, Charles VI. tried to secure her possessions; how he issued the famous Pragmatic Sanction, which declared that the Hapsburg monarchy was indivisable, and that, in default of male heirs, a female could succeed to it; how he spared no ingenuity in securing the assent of all the powers to the arrangement; how, immediately on his daughter's succession, many of these powers threw it aside, and clamored to possess themselves of Hapsburg lands, and how Maria Theresa finally triumphed, make up one of the great stories of history.

And so, by way of the treaties of Paris and Vienna after the Napoleonic wars, treaties which were highly favorable to the Hapsburgs, we come to the year 1848 and the accession of Francis Joseph. The rest is the story of yesterday.—Christian Science Monitor.

◆◆◆

The Misguided Friend.

De Chappie—If there's any one nuisance I hate more than another it's a fellow who is always going around introducing people. There's Goodheart, for instance. Bouttown—What's he been doing? De Chappie—The idiot! The other day he introduced me to a man I owed money to, and I'd been owing it so long he'd forgotten all about me. Now I'll have to pay up or be sued.—London Telegraph.

THE BEST MEDICINE FOR LITTLE ONES

Baby's Own Tablets are the best medicine a mother can give her little ones. They are a gentle laxative—mild but thorough in action—and are guaranteed by a government analyst to be absolutely free from opiates and other injurious drugs. Concerning them, Mrs. Auguste [illegible], Sask., writes: "Enclosed find twenty-five cents for another box of Baby's Own Tablets. I find them the very best medicine a mother can give her little ones." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

QUALITY IN CHICKEN MEAT

(Experimental Farms Note.)

Crate feeding on milk mashes will do more to put quality in chicken meat than any other practice. The small portion of the consuming public that have eaten crate, milk-fed poultry have no desire to purchase the range and yard-fattened birds, as there is such a great difference in the quality of the meat of the birds handled under the two different systems.

Crate feeding on milk mashes is a simple process that may be practised on few or many birds. At the Experimental Station for Vancouver Island, slat crates to accommodate eighty birds were prepared, and five birds of an average weight of three and one-half pounds were confined in each section. These birds were fed for a period of fourteen days, and made an average gain of two pounds per bird. The meal mixture used was 60 per cent. wheat middlings and 40 per cent. corn meal. To this meal mixture was added three ounces of salt for each 100 pounds used. The birds were starved for twenty-four hours and given a mild dose of Epsom salts before feeding commenced. They were fed sparingly the first day, and the quantity of food increased at each meal until they were on full feed at the end of the third day. The allotted quantity of meal for each feed was mixed with sour skim milk to the consistency of porridge. Three feeds were given each day at intervals of six hours. Grit was supplied once each week, and chopped green Swiss chard was given daily at noon.

The quantity of the meal mixture and skim milk required for a pound of gain was but one pound, thirteen and a half ounces of meal and three pounds four ounces of skim milk. Valuing the meal at three cents per pound and the skim milk at fifty cents per hundred pounds, the cost of each pound of gain was seven and a half cents.

Starting with three and a half pound thin birds and increasing them to five and a half pounds high quality birds at a cost of fifteen cents each, the five and a half pounds of first quality [illegible] meat was sold for twenty-seven cents per pound, which was an advance of nine cents over the ruling price for the non-specially fed birds. Thin three and a half pound birds were selling at eighteen cents per pound or sixty-three cents per bird. The added fattening weight brought them up to the five and a half pound weight and increased the quality, and value of the original three and a half pounds so they were sold for one dollar and forty-eight cents per bird. In other words, a sixty-three cent chicken was, by the crate milk feeding method, at a cost of fifteen cents, converted into a first quality chicken that sold readily at one dollar and forty-eight cents. Quality in table poultry will win it. Quality in table poultry will lift the industry to the level attained by other competing food products. [illegible] poultry will always be just as hard to sell as cull apples. Try crate milk feeding a few birds for your own table, eat them and you will not want any other kind. Quality will come with you ever afterwards.

NOVELTIES IN FASHION LINES

Some Charming Ideas in the Latest Out

As Seen in Shops Where Women Delight.

This is one of the delightful seasons in shopland—things new and novel crowd the cases and racks, and one is able to discover no end of novelties for her own wardrobe or the furnishing of her home.

NEW FRENCH BLOUSES.

Somehow or other the Canadian woman never wears so many colored blouses as the Parisienne. The French woman perhaps has more of an eye (and liking) for color, and so she wears the most fascinating waists in many different hues. Some new Paris blouses, lately arrived, show this tendency. They are exquisite little affairs, of sheer voiles, or fine batistes or linens, in solid colors, in pretty stripes and the most pleasing figured effects. And to make them more bewitching and the styles, though simple, are lovely! they have wet frills and pipings.

A BRACELET PARASOL

is just what its name implies. My lady uses it as a sunshade, and when not fulfilling this mission wears it as bracelet.

Parasols, like umbrellas, are shorter this year. This new parasol has a short, rather thick ferrule, through which is slipped an enamel-like ring in color to match or harmonize with the cover. By this ring the parasol is carried (upside down, to be sure) over the wrist.

The handles are of shining woods and usually straight. Covers are quite gay, and of bright flowered, striped or plain silks.

NEW SKIRTS.

And separate skirts are very much the fashion just now—are of the prettiest silks imaginable, and as gay or demure as mademoiselle wishes. One lovely skirt was of silk tricotine in an exquisite changeable violet shade Pongee with satin stripes made another skirt, which had a pointed side yoke ending in pleats, and a straight front and back. And among the other newnesses the Poiret blouse skirt is not to be overlooked—it comes in various colors and has an overblouse of the same material as the skirt.

NEW SHOES.

There is a handsome new high-laced boot of deep brown glazed kidskin with a kidskin top in champagne color. It has the proper Louis heel and blind eyelets and is uncommonly good looking.

Black and white footwear continues in vogue and there are attractive button shoes of black kidskin with white kidskin tops and comparatively low heels, which combine common sense and fashion at the same time.

New sports shoes are of dull black calfskin in laced style, with white kidskin tops, and the low, broad heels which this style demands.

Are enormous and far from conservative. Colored stones, especially jade and amethyst, are particularly popular just now. Some have huge drops, others large hoops in addition to the stone at the top. And many stones are covered with dainty gold tracery to make them more elaborate.

NEW HANDBAGS.

With frames for those who are tired of the much-used drawstring style, are of the softest, loveliest Mucha leather. They come in pretty greens, soft tans and grays, and in new shapes and will harmonize with spring gowns and suits.

The New British Army

(New York Tribune.)

On July 1, 1916, the British army had reached the strength in numbers necessary for its task. It had the artillery and the ammunition, but it lacked the training, and the bloody struggle from July 1 to January 1 on the Somme cost the British nearly [illegible] killed and wounded [illegible] year began. [illegible] new officers all had yet to be trained, and the training was [illegible] in the [illegible] of the Somme. Here was the real training school of British armies. [illegible] was to have [illegible] paid for in blood, and out of the furnace has come the army which ten days ago won the most considerable victory on the Western front since the battle of the Marne.

To-day we cannot measure the extent of the British victory. It has already surpassed any British or French achievement in trench warfare. At Loos the British captured some [illegible] prisoners in a few days, [illegible] guns and six or eight square miles of French territory. In the Champagne the French captured 25,000 prisoners and upwards of 125 guns, but their extreme advance was barely two miles, and they were held at the second line of the German defence, which still stand. In six months at the Somme the British and the French together took at least [illegible] prisoners and upward of 150 square miles of territory, but this was the harvest of half a year, won at a price that was staggering.

But in the battle of Arras, in the first week, the British have advanced an average of four miles on a front of 12, and in the centre at least six miles in six days, as contrasted with six miles in six months at the Somme. They have taken nearly 200 guns, many of them heavy, which is the real measure of the German disaster. They have taken not less than 15,000 prisoners, and they have inflicted losses which will be found without a doubt to be far in excess of their own. Above all, they have shown a complete superiority over the Germans, in artillery, in organization and in the semi-open warfare that followed the first dash.

Going back to the German attack upon Verdun, it will be seen that from February 21 to the middle of August the Germans advanced about six miles at the extreme point, where their trenches touched the ditch of Fort du Souville. The British before Arras, and in the face of not less complete defences, have covered an equal distance in six days. At no time after the first week at Verdun was there any chance that the Germans could pierce the French line, but to-day the salvation of the whole German front before Arras depends upon the supplementary defense lines the Germans may have constructed prior to the present battle and far behind their earlier positions. What the Germans sought to do at Verdun the British have accomplished in a measure before Arras. Here is a basis for estimating the technical proficiency of the British army in the new warfare. The blow struck at Arras is already more considerable than the German blow at Verdun. If the British are now stopped as were the Germans they will have achieved more with the new army than the Germans were able to accomplish with the pick of their veteran army 14 months ago.

But we must recognize that the present outlook points rather toward an immense expansion of the British success. We can see that it has already surpassed the old trench battles of Loos, Champagne and the Somme on the Allied side. To-day the comparison must be with the operation of Brusiloff a year ago in Galicia, which opened a breach in Austrian positions and compelled a material shortening of the Austrian lines. There was a time when it seemed as if this victory might compel a general withdrawal along the entire Eastern front. The Central Powers were thrown off their balance, and for weeks their lines swayed backward and forward, as the German line is swaying now in France. Had Brusiloff been able to follow up his victory the Germans and Austrians might have been compelled to leave Galicia and Poland, as the Germans may be compelled now to leave France.

For a certain number of days, and perhaps weeks, the situation before Arras must be considered in the light of last year's Galician campaign. There the Germans were able finally to bring Brusiloff to a dead halt without having to change their main front from Riga to the Pinsk Marshes. Conceivably, Hindenburg will now be able to stop Haig somewhere between Arras and Douai without drawing in his armies to the north or to the south. But it is equally possible that he will fail in his effort, and the whole line in France will go.

This suggests the other parallel, that of Mackensen in Galicia. Two years ago this month, after a very long preparation, Mackensen struck the Russian line along the Dunajec River, pierced all the Russian lines and threw the Russian armies off their balance. The result was a long Russian retreat, in places over 200 miles, the evacuation of Galicia, the loss of Poland, and the final stand between the Pinsk Marshes and the Gulf of Riga. Unless Hindenburg shall now be able to check Haig we may see at no distant time a repetition of the experiment of the Galician campaign of 1915. Any considerable further British advance—beyond Douai, for example, which is only ten miles from the present British front—will mean that the Germans will have to retire on their whole front from the North Sea to the Meuse River. It will mean that they will have to retire under pressure. That they will have to retire rapidly, and that they will be exposed to all the perils of a forced retreat. We shall not know for some days whether this is to happen or not, but it is no longer absurd to view this as a possibility.

In sum, the battle of Arras has already become the biggest incident on the offensive side of the western Allies since the Battle of the Marne. It may prove the decisive battle of the war. It may easily prove the battle which liberates France, and it has unmistakably disclosed weakness in German morale and difficulty in German organization hitherto believed to be impossible.

Two years and a half after their great initial defeats the British have won the greatest victory in their military history, unaided and purely as a result of their success in training new armies and in making new guns. The whole aspect of the western front has changed, and bearing in mind that the Germans are still strong in numbers, in guns and in munitions, it is no less true than they have shown themselves weaker in the defence of one of the strongest positions in Europe than they have shown themselves in defending many weaker positions earlier in the war.

We may not yet say that German morale has fallen to a point which makes defeat certain and near, but no one can read the account of what has happened in the last ten days without finding therein cause for real optimism, both as to the result and duration of the war. The Germans attacked France through Belgium because they believed that even if Britain made this a reason for entering the war they could destroy the French armies before England could bring up forces strong enough to be a real peril. The battle of Arras is the final refutation of this theory. From the battle of the Marne until after the battle of Verdun the French held the line as the Germans believed they could not. With the battle of the Somme the British army began to arrive. With the battle of Arras its work is well in hand. We are entering the British period of the war. The world will never forget what France has done in the last three years, but the final victory has always depended upon the ability of British armies to supply the decisive blow. At Arras the answer would seem to have been written.

◆◆◆

What is a Christian?

What is a Christian? He who does his best
To make this warring world love's dwelling place;
Who rends the veils of greed and self apart
Which hide his brothers from their Father's face,
Who, stumbling oft, yet up the steeps doth plod
And helps wayfarers toward Christ's abiding goal;
By service to his fellowmen till God
Makes his abode within the struggling soul.
Who bears aloft his torch though tears and fears
Obscure it oft and dim with doubt's dismay;
Unmarred by woe, though battle scarred by years
Of toil for peace and human betterment;
The Christian greets life's onset undismayed
And dares death like a Master unafraid.
—New York Sun.

◆◆◆

Early and provident fear is the mother of safety.—Edmund Burke.

GILLETT'S LYE
MADE IN CANADA
For making soap.
For softening water.
For removing paint.
For disinfecting refrigerators, sinks, closets, drains and for 500 other purposes.
REFUSE SUBSTITUTES.
GILLETT'S LYE

Over Hunland In Aeroplane

"Hun Archies! The thrill of bomb dropping! A scrap with Hun fliers! An engine that pegged out over the enemy's lines! Then, a tragedy and flight through a hailstorm with a dead observer! A belated return of the 'missing,' and finally Blighty!"

Such the bulletinized account of a day's "sport" in the British Flying Corps which has recently reached the writer. And the adventure-loving youngster who characterized it as "sport—a bit tragic though it was—in the day's work"—is a squadron commander at the tender age of 18. A year ago he was grinding [illegible] in high school. The change that has given him the fearful joys of young Icarus is obvious in these lines, which are here set down in the terse, breezy yet poignant phrases of the mettlesome British "birdman."

"It all came about like this. We had been having a number of 'dud' days and were all grumblingly resigned to settle down to the winter. Along came a fine morning. All was bustle and aviation.

"A bomb raid was organized and dispatched almost immediately. Ten of us set off—8.15 a.m. Bombs were dropped at 10.20. We were now 15 miles over Hunland. The usual bouquets of Archies (anti-aircraft shells), but none of the 15,000 feet up, so nothing to think about. Turned south to look for some Huns. None seemed forthcoming, so we decided after some babble on the wireless to steer easily for home.

"Hun Archie suddenly stopped. On came 12 Hun machines. We had a fine old stand-up scrap. In the excitement I saw G., my greatest friend, go down. Crashed in flames, on top of a forest. Also two other fellows.

"We sank five Huns. The others drew off and went down. We sent [illegible] for home. As we were just crossing the trenches I noticed a Hun actually trying to cross our line. Of course I went for him thinking that the others were following me. It turned out later I was on my own. Why? I can't tell.

"The Hun, I think, was strafed by me. I followed him over Hunland and was enjoying him go down in clouds of smoke, when—splutter! splutter! kick—bang! My engine had pegged out!

"How I got back I don't know. This I do know, E. H., my observer, was standing up facing me and smiling, when—crump—an Archie shell took the back of his skull clean off. He simply collapsed in the bottom of the nacelle. Luckily, the machine was not badly hit. I landed in a plowed field near.

"I obtained more petrol and flew back to the aerodrome in a hailstorm. Arrived wet through in a dazed condition. Of course, awfully glad to see me. My name had been sent in as 'missing' one and a half hours before. I came down at 3 p.m., lunched, tea eaten and went to bed.

"Next day being 'dud,' I decided to stay in bed. Major came in afternoon and was a bit delirious. Said, after remonstrations from me, he'd send the M. O. (medical officer) up. Jack [illegible] find me next day. It appears he saw me show the day before.

"The M. O. came, took my temp—104.5. In five minutes I was on a stretcher, tearing away to the Casualty Clearing Hospital. Next day, temp. being same, I found myself on hospital train en route for base. Arrived next morning with shivering fit, temp. 102.

"Five days later I was on board hospital ship—Calais! Dover! Blighty! How cheerful! Got into Charing Cross 7.15 p.m. At the gates were some thousand people. I couldn't breathe for flowers and folks trying to shake my hand. This is truth, amazing as it must seem. Wired home same night.

"There are three of us in the ward here. A Canadian artillery officer and a Northumberland Fusilier—both topping chaps. I expect to be able to get up to-morrow for a short time. Feel more or less fit, but a bit dizzy. M. O. says, 'Pyrexia, unknown origin.' Am going to do my best to get home for the New Year."

◆◆◆

A SPLENDID RECORD

No department of the C. P. R. has more care or thought devoted to it than the handling of baggage, for the traveller owes so much of his good temper and comfort to the knowledge that his trunks are handled carefully and delivered on time. The amount of baggage handled on so large a system is phenomenal—no less than [illegible] individual pieces being forwarded during the year 1916. There must have been quite a number of families on the move, for the list includes [illegible] baby carriages. Milk cans form an important element in the work of the baggage department, as in order to ensure the rapid delivery of milk from the farm to the city dweller passenger trains are used. The total number of milk cans forwarded during the year 1916 was 1,162,472.

The most convincing proof of the care with which baggage is handled on the C. P. R. is given in the figures of claims paid on loss, damage, pilferage. Out of nearly eight million pieces of baggage handled, the amount paid on loss was only $1,291.79; on damage only $1,[illegible], and on pilferage only $371.87, the cost to the company in these respect being only five cents per hundred parcels.

This is a record of which Mr. J. O. Apps, the popular general baggage agent of the Canadian Pacific Railway, may well be proud, and is sufficient to show that the so-called "baggage smasher" has been entirely eliminated, if indeed he ever existed, between Digby, N. S., and Victoria, B. C.

◆◆◆

Millinery Whims.

Smart new chapeaus are extremely simple and trimmed with grosgrain ribbon bows.

Leghorn, creamy and yellow in tone, makes some of the smartest sports hats.

Picturesque and beautiful are the large, floppy hats of horsehair and trimmed with roses.

Flyaway wings trim some of the quite stunning sailor hats.

For daytime wear many hats of black lisere straw have facings of Georgette crepe in color.

First Business Man—Senator Skinnum has promised to lend his influence to our plan. Second Business Man—Yes, but when Senator Skinnum lends his influence he generally charges a pretty high rate of interest.

"Do they [illegible] well?" "Very. She has the gray matter and he has the long green."—The Lamb.

WIT AND HUMOR

PART OF IT ANYWAY.

(Judge)

"Wouldn't you like to have her singing beside you in the wilderness?"

"Well, I'm in favor of the wilderness, but I wouldn't care to be there."

◆◆◆

AN OPENING FOR HIM.

(Baltimore American)

"Sir, have you an opening for a smart and energetic young man like myself?"

"Certainly. There's the door just back of you."

◆◆◆

A DISCOVERY.

(Birmingham Age-Herald)

"Professor Jiggs, the famous archaeologist, is said to have discovered half a dozen buried cities."

"Mrs. Jiggs ought to be proud of him."

[illegible] would probably [illegible] for his ability as an [illegible]

A GREAT REASONER.

(Washington Star)

"You must admit that Bliggins is a great reasoner."

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum, "he's a wonderful reasoner. He can decide on what conclusion is favorable to his interests, and then reason a proposition out one way every time."

◆◆◆

A SLIGHT DIFFERENCE.

(Baltimore American)

[illegible]

◆◆◆

SONNY KNEW.

(Detroit Free Press)

"Pa, what is a cabinet?"

[illegible]

◆◆◆

STARTING A LIBRARY.

(Life)

[illegible]

◆◆◆

A DREADFUL FLOOD.

(Judge)

Flora—Did you visit Venice when abroad?

"Yes, indeed. But they were having a dreadful flood when we were there, and everybody had to go around in boats!"

◆◆◆

SMALL.

(Boston Transcript)

[illegible]

◆◆◆

IGNORANT.

(Boston Transcript)

[illegible] Fitznoodle."

"Oh, well, [illegible]

"Every man is entitled to his [illegible]"

"Quite true," rejoined Miss Cayenne. "But in many cases they don't appear to be of the slightest use to anybody but the owner."

MISPLACED KINDNESS.

(Birmingham Age-Herald)

"What are you in prison, my good man?" asked the sympathetic visitor.

"I wanted to do a deed of kindness, mum, but de law didn't see it dat way."

"No?"

"I was told dat a certain millionaire's money was a burden to him an' I tried to lighten his burden."

◆◆◆

A SPECIALIST.

(Boston Transcript)

"Pa, what's a specialist?"

"A man who has discovered which of his talents will bring him the most money, my son."

◆◆◆

INDUCEMENTS.

(Washington Star)

"You always speak kindly of the absent."

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne; "some people's absence is so desirable that I am willing to offer inducements."

◆◆◆

SARCASTIC.

(Puck)

Old Lady—Conductor, why did the train stop before we came to the station?

Conductor—Ran over a pig, ma'am.

Old Lady—What! Was it on the track?

Conductor—No'm; we chased it up the embankment.

◆◆◆

PREPARED.

(Boston Transcript)

Mother—Tom, dear, you'd better get off to the dance this wet night; your rubbers [illegible]

Tom—That's all right, mother; I've got pumps inside of 'em.

◆◆◆

PARTY LINES.

(Buffalo Express)

He (with a political bias)—The fight was waged on party lines.

She—I wouldn't quarrel on a party line. We had one once, and people were always listening in.

◆◆◆

THE DESERVING POOR.

(Puck)

The Skinflint—No, sir; I respond only to the appeals of the deserving poor.

The Solicitor—And who are the deserving poor?

The Skinflint—Those who never ask for assistance.

◆◆◆

HER SHARE.

(Boston Transcript)

The Lawyer—Don't you think $10 a week alimony is a little too much to demand when he's only making $20?

The Lady—No, I don't. That's what I used to make him gimme while I was livin' with him.

◆◆◆

BLIGGINS' ERROR.

(Washington Star)

"Bliggins affects to be a regular caveman."

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne. "But he doesn't carry out the idea. His clothes are sufficiently out of style to be amusing, without being prehistoric."

◆◆◆

THE CAUSE OF IT.

(Yonkers Statesman)

"What's the matter, little girl?"

"Two boys were fightin', and I got struck with a stone."

"That's it; the innocent bystander always gets hurt."

"But I don't know as I was so innocent. I [illegible] what they was fightin' about."

◆◆◆

Their Size.

Lawyer (to deaf witness)—Do you know the plaintiff's pigs?

Witness—Eh?

Lawyer (raising his voice)—Do you know plaintiff's pigs?

Witness—Yes.

Lawyer—How long have you known them?

Witness—Eh?

Lawyer (louder still)—How long have you known them?

Witness—Fed 'em all last spring.

Lawyer—Were they all about a size?

Witness—Eh?

Lawyer (tries on his feet peculiarity and shakes his forefinger at the conclusion of each word at the witness)—Were—they—all—of—a—size?

Witness—Some on 'em wor, and some on 'em worn't.—Exchange.

◆◆◆

It is all right to be prepared for the worst, but don't be disappointed if you don't get it.

Redpath
SUGAR
was a favorite name among the long-forgotten food products of half a century ago, just as it is among the live ones of to-day. Only exceptional quality can explain such permanent popularity.
"Let Redpath Sweeten it."
2 and 5 lb. Cartons—
10, 20, 50 and 100 lb. Bags.
Made in one grade only--the highest!

After Spring Time House-Cleaning then New Curtains for your Windows

Swiss and Scotch Curtain Netts

Charming and New Designs for the Town Home or the Country Residence.

Our stock of Curtain Nets was never bigger nor the designs prettier throughout. It consists of the very newest weaves for the Spring in Cream, Ecru and White and in these shades with pink and blue rose buds and sprays. Colored Sundours in blues, green, old gold and brown. All in suitable widths: Per yard 25c, 35c, 40c, 50c, 65c to $1.25.

Sweeping Clearance of Women's Spring Suits

18 in all consisting of splendid all-wool Gaberdines, Navy Serge, Wool Cords and black Crepe Cloth. The materials are such extra all-wool fabrics and our special clearing price covers barely the cost of making. Some of the styles are a season or so back and the skirts will require some altering but to offset this we are offering these $18.00, $20.00 and $22.50 suits at one especially reduced price of $5.00 each.

New Cotton Underwear For Women

Warmer weather is showing itself; 'twill be here in real earnest all in good time and you'll want to be supplied with such things as:

Women's Fine Ribbed Vests

Short sleeves and no sleeves with fancy lace yokes, 10c, 15c, 20c, and up to 50c and 75c.

Women's fine Ribbed Cotton Combinations

Either "Cumfy" style or with round neck, lace yoke, 35c, 50c, 75c and $1.00.

Men's Rain Coats of Paramatta Cloth and Special Fabrics

We make it a very simple matter for you to find the rain coat that suits you for there is a wide variety of fabrics and sizes. The best of values are still obtainable at low prices in spite of the great advances in cost of fabrics.

Standard Style Rain Coats

Of double texture Paramatta. Cloth in fawn or olive shade. Have full back, cover the knees. Collar fits close. All seams are sewn and cemented. Sizes 36 to 44, $6.00, $8.50, $10.00, and $12.00.

Dressy Tweed Rain Coats

English made Rain Coats; Raglan shoulders; loose easy fitting. Dressy check patterns. Sizes 36 to 42. $10.00, $12.00 and $13.00

Our Special Mole Lined Wind and Waterproof Raincoat. Nothing better was offered in these than what we are selling to-day at $10.00 & $12.50.

STEPHAN BROS.

JUST ARRIVED

TEA

That famous Japan at...................... 35c a lb.
Some choice black tea at ... 50c and 60c a lb.

ORANGES

From 1c each to 50c a dozen

Bananas, Grape Fruit, Pineapples, Lemons and choice Bermuda Onions.

In Bulk Peanut Butter, Heinz' Pickles, Soda Biscuits, at old prices.

C. PATRICK

PHONE 165 WALKERTON

Seeing the Opportunity and Seizing it are Two Very Different Matters.

Why do we claim the Bacon we offer is the brand of Bacon that you should buy if you want the best?

Because of:—Appearance and Quality: Sure to satisfy: Taste that is just right: Nice Trim and Mild, Sweet Cure.

Nowhere will you find a Bacon that you can eat with greater pleasure and enjoyment.

"A Try—Tells Why"

GOODE & McKAY

PHONE 67 The People's Grocery

WANT A NEW SUIT FOR VICTORIA DAY

This is the place and now is the time to get it. Suits for Men and Young Men with style and snap, well tailored throughout.

We have stylish Suits for men at medium prices that will surprise you in this season of high prices. Mixed tweeds and worsteds at $10.00, $12.00, $14.00, $15.00, $16.00, $18.00 and $20.00.

Suits for the small boys with the style and good finish of the men's suits. Single and D.B. Norfolk and Pinchback at $5.00, $6.00, $7.00, $8.00, $9.00, $10.00 and $12.00.

We also make a speciality of suits for bigger boys up to 36 size with good full bloomers and roomy well made coats at $7.00, $8.00, $10.00 and $12.00.

Boys' and Mens' Rain Coats, paramatta and mixed tweeds, comfortably cut, swagger styles $5.00 $6.00, $8.00 $10.00 and $12.00.

"Fitwell" Soft and Stiff Hats, Brown, Slate, Grey, Navy and Black.

"Star Brand" Shirts, new patterns, light and dark stripes and small check effects, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00.

Ties, Collars, Gloves, Underwear, a full line of Gent's Furnishings for Spring and Summer wear.

McBURNEY & CO.

THE PEOPLE'S STORE

BUTTERICK PATTERNS

Shopping Satisfaction

BECAUSE it is the privilege of the public to choose and transfer the favor of their patronage when and as they please, no store can claim that any customer belongs to it only so long as the store satisfies from individual point of view.

It is Satisfaction that you get at OUR Store.

Everything you need or want—and plenty of it.

Prompt service—courtesy—full stocks. Do your shopping here and see how convenient it is.

Butterick Quarterly.

June Fashion Sheets.

Phone 53 J. H. APPEL Walkerton

OUR NEIGHBORING TOWNS, VILLAGES AND COUNTRYSIDE

Newsy Happenings of the Week Collected for Our Readers by a Staff of Live Correspondents

KINLOSS

[illegible] has really come at last. Everyone is busy seeding, a few being through.

We are all glad that our friend Mr. E. Harrison is feeling much better.

Mr. and Mrs. George Herde spent Sunday evening at W. Armstrong's.

A number from here attended Bervie church Sunday night.

The Red Cross held their usual meeting in the afternoon and supper at night. The supper was well attended there being some from our neighboring villages. The proceeds were $7.00. Come again and bring some one else along.

Our Bible Class was well taught on Sunday when Mr. J. Geddes taught first and Mr. Lawson reviewed it.

Those who have attended High School are now at their homes here, the exams being over.

Mrs. D. S. Campbell spent Saturday in Teeswater.

Mr. and Mrs. C. McKenzie were in Lucknow Saturday.

We all enjoyed the coffee which Mr. S. Braden supplied and Mrs. W. Keshe supplied the cream.

A splendid sermon was given on Sunday afternoon on Mother's Day, which makes us realize how we should appreciate our mothers

The war still goes on. That means keep the fingers busy knitting.

Mr. Alex Caskanette had the pleasure of having his mother, Mrs. Joe Caskanette of Preston with him a few days last week.

MILDMAY

On May 8th Mr. Frederick Weiler enjoyed his eightieth birthday. Mr. Weiler is hale and hearty, possessed of all his senses and carries his weight of years very lightly.

Frank Goetz left on Tuesday morning May 8th for Liberty Sask. and will take a situation in his uncle's Mr. E. J. Goetz's store. For the past few months Frank has been clerking for Hunstein and Knechtel.

The following are some of the attractions for Victoria Day in Mildmay, two baseball matches, school children's parade, machine-gun and bombing squad of London, auto parade at 7 o'clock and a concert in the evening.

On Tuesday morning of this week at 7 o'clock in the Sacred Heart church, Mr. John Schneider was united in marriage to Miss Mary Schneider of Noeckerville, Rev. Father Halm officiated. The happy couple will continue to make their home in our midst.

Messrs Peter Reuber, John Schuett and Ed. Wittich motored to Sauble Falls, 9 miles from Wiarton on Friday evening May 11th to secure a catch of suckers, which each spring come up the river to spawn. They succeeded in each getting a nice lot of about 150 to 200.

On Sunday morning Rev. A. W. Geild preached a very appropriate sermon for Mother's Day in the Methodist church.

The Ladies Aid of the Mildmay Evangelical church on Sunday evening gave a pleasant program of songs, solos, readings and addresses which fitted in very nicely with the spirit of Mother's Day.

The baseball boys are making use of the lovely evenings this week tuning up for their game with Ayton on the 24th.

Mr. John Schneider is getting the bowling green seeded this week and it is hoped it will be in shape for the game by August.

Mr. Joe Kunkel is laying the cement foundation of a new house at the rear of the old British Hotel.

Up till lately the farmers have been saying there was not a sufficient growth of grass in the fields to do for the cows without stable feeding. The warm weather the last few days should send the grass blades up faster which will be welcome to the farmer.

Flour at 7.50 per cwt. sugar around $10.00, bread at 20 cts. per 8lb. loaf and eggs at 40 cts. a doz. makes the wage earner do some close calculating to make things come out clear.

Mr. Charlie Biehl of Kitchener, McLaughlin agent in that city, motored to town on Sunday, with his family.

Mr. Bernard Walter of the Elora road has invested in a 1917 Ford touring car, having bought it from the local agents.

CLAMIS

Miss Birdie McLean has returned home from Southampton accompanied by her sister Mrs. Bert Montgomery.

Mr. Symon and Jack Forsythe of Riversdale were week-end visitors at A. Symon.

Rev. D. Allan of Hamilton conducted quarterly services in free Methodist Church last week.

Mrs. R. J. Nesbitt and Miss Dorothy have been visiting relatives at Holland Centre.

BORN—To Corp. and Mrs. Kitchen, on Wednesday, May 9th, 1917, a son.

Reuben Witting of Underwood visited Jack McKeeman on Sunday.

The saw mill here has been sold to Mr. Brammercombe and machinery is being removed away.

Mrs. J. C. McIntyre spent a few days with her friend Mrs. Fitzsimmons of Pinkerton.

Miss Nora C. McNally has returned home from Faculty in Toronto.

BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. James Ferris on Sunday, May 13th, 1917, a daughter.

Rev. H. L. Stillwell of Toronto missionary from India gave a very interesting and helpful address in the Baptist church on Monday evening.

Louis Schnitzler of Cargill is working on J. K. McLennan's barn.

Mrs. C. McDermid lost one of her stables by fire on Tuesday night. All are sorry for her loss.

Mrs. Norman and Jack McLean attended the funeral of her niece, North Line, Kincardine on Sunday.

Miss Dewar of Tiverton was a week-end visitor with Miss Flossie McLennan.

John McKennitt's team ran away on Monday morning with a seed drill breaking whiffle trees, harness and fence.

Mrs. Blue of Paisley is nurse in charge at Mrs. Kitchens.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Woods and family of Lorne sundayed at the Misses Howson.

(Intended for last week)

Mrs. R. McFadden of Toronto was a week-end visitor in this locality.

Pte. James McCormick left on Monday for Edmonton Alberta.

Pte. Wilbert McNally is home from London on a ten days leave.

Miss Ray of Lindsay is a visitor at the home of her nephew, Mr. W. J. Graham.

We regret to report the serious illness of Mrs. W. H. Gilchrist, 2nd. con. Bruce. All wish for her a speedy recovery.

Mrs. Arch. McFadyen, Bdy. West, is very low. Her son Alex of Ohio State, arrived home last week.

In Friday's Casualty List, the name of Gunner Edgar W. Pyke of Toronto, appeared among the wounded. He was severely wounded in the arm and chest and admitted to No. 1 General Hospital, Etaples, on April 23rd. Gunner Pyke is well known here, having spent several months here a few years ago and also visited here since. His many friends hope his wounds are not serious and that he will soon recover.

A number of the I. O. O. F. Brethren from here attended parade and service in Tiverton on Sunday.

Master Hamilton McKinnon has been under the Dr's. care, threatened with appendicitis.

Messrs Ryerson Robertson, Cleve Munro and John R. Cameron, and Messrs Robinson of North Line, and 5th Con. Kincardine were Sunday visitors at Mr. Neil Currie's.

Constable Briggs of Walkerton was in the village on Monday.

Miss Daisy Cronin, visited her brother Lieut. Cronin of Kincardine who leaves on Tuesday morning for overseas.

The Ladies Missionary Society of St. Pauls Church, met at the home of Mrs. James Thompson on Wednesday.

Mr. James Needham, has purchased a new Ford car.

CARGILL

Mr. W. L. Keeling who has enlisted with the Div. Signallers, Toronto, left here on Monday to report for duty.

Miss Juanita Cargill who has been in Toronto returned to her home here on Saturday.

We are pleased to see Mr. John Reaburn around again after his serious illness.

Mrs. Milton Grainger and babe of Chatham and Pte. Walter Grainger of Guelph spent the week-end at the the home of Mr. W. A. Grainger here.

Mrs. Clark of Pickering is visiting at the home of Mr. F. F. Balsdon.

Mrs. R. A. Fowlie is visiting her parents in Whitby.

Mrs. John Clancy visited in Walkerton on Saturday.

BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Parker, Friday, May 4th, a son.

BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Mahoney on Wednesday, May 9th, a daughter.

The Bruce Preparedness League are talking of having a reception in the Foresters Hall on Friday evening for Pte. Alex Thompson lately returned from England.

(Intended for last week.)

Mrs. C. W. Keeling received an announcement last Monday of the diamond anniversary of her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. William Smith of Oak Lake, Man., formerly of Walkerton. They are both enjoying good health.

Mrs. and Miss Kerr who have been visiting at the home of Rev. J. L. Homer returned to their home in Farran Point last week.

Mrs. Ezra Dietrich and daughter Muriel of Chesley are visiting at the home of Mr. Thomas Grice.

Mr. George Welsford spent Sunday with relatives in Paisley.

Dr. F. A. Parker of Wingham spent the week-end at the home of Mr. C. W. Keeling.

Mrs. W. D. Cargill who has been spending a few days at her home here returned to Toronto on Monday.

Mr. Lorne Carr spent Sunday at his home near Glamis.

A few of our young people attended the Minstrel show in Walkerton on Friday night and report a real good time.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Rousseau of the Mansion House, Clifford, spent Sunday at the home of Mr. J. D. Schuett.

Miss Mollie Kyle of Chesley is visiting at the home of her uncle, Mr. W. D. Cargill.

We are sorry to know that Miss Lillian Braun is quite ill with pleurisy. We all wish her a speedy recovery.

Mr. James O'Donnell who has been visiting his sister Mrs. John Clancy, returned to his home in Stratford on Monday.

We are sorry to know that Mr. John Reaburn is seriously ill with pneumonia. His many friends wish him a speedy recovery.

Word was received by Mrs. Henry Sparling from her son Edgar, who was supposed to have been wounded on April 9th saying that he was quite well and came through the battle safely. A letter was also received by Mrs. John Loughleen from her son Willie saying that he came through the battle without a scratch.

MAPLE GROVE

(Intended for last week)

Messrs Leslie Stringer and Jno. Caswell of Kincardine spent Sunday at Mr. Jno. Keyes.

Dr. Fortune of Walkerton made a call to Mr. John Moffatt on Sunday evening.

Mr. Chas. Fitzsimmons is breaking in his new Eel driver.

Gunner James McCormick returned soldier of the Royal Navy C. V. R., visited the burg last week. He left on Monday for Edmonton where he expects to receive his discharge.

Mr. Clarence Reid is engaged with Mr. Jno. Keyes and Mr. Jno. Shaw of Paisley, with Mr. Jno. Bell, both for the season.

Wedding bells are ringing. We hear the echo at Kingarf.

SOLWAY

Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Stroeder from the South Line spent Sunday at the home of Mr. John Stroeder.

Mr. and Mrs. Archie Weir spent the week end with friends in Guelph.

S. S. No 5 was closed a couple of days last week owing to illness of the teacher and some of the pupils.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lambertus spent Sunday at the home of Mr. Jos. Zettler, near Walkerton.

Mr. Anthony Kocher spent Sunday at his home near Deemerton.

Miss Marjorie Weir spent the week-end in Walkerton.

Mr. and Mrs. Dougald McCallum left this week for Toronto, where they will visit friends before leaving for their home in Elbow, Sask.

A meeting of the Red Cross Society will be held in the township hall this Thursday afternoon.

Mr. Jacob Lambertus is visiting at the home of his son here, Mr. Wm. Lambertus.

CHEPSTOW

Miss Mary Graf of Kitchener is on a short vacation to her home.

Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Anstett and babe of Walkerton, Sundayed with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Anstett.

Mr. Wm. Commans who has been nursing an ailment of the ankle for the past two years is undergoing treatment at the Hospital at Walkerton.

BORN—On Monday, May 7th to Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Schmidt, a daughter.

PINKERTON

Pinkerton is to be again represented in the baseball world. This time it is the fair sex of the village who will try to keep up the record of the old town. With the boys kicking football and the girls "slamming" a baseball, this promises to be a lively burg this summer.

Misses Jennie Pinkerton and Hattie Hale spent Sunday with their friend Miss Zeta Clark.

The well-drillers who have been working at Mr. Alf. Fiddis' struck an overflowing well at 60 ft. Mr. D. Pinkerton is also having a well drilled.

Lieut. Harold Pinkerton of Walkerton spent Sunday at his home here.

Mr. Wilmer Donnelly, G. T. R. mail clerk spent a few days at his home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Thompson, Miss Susie and Mr. Thomas of Glamis spent Sunday in the burg.

We are pleased to report that Miss Myrtle Garland who has been ill is on the road to recovery.

FORMOSA

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Alphonse Zettel was saddened by a shocking bereavement on Saturday morning. Their eldest boy, Herbert, a bright little fellow of eight years, attended school on Friday and was hale and hearty. In the middle of the night he was taken sick with convulsions and by seven o'clock in the morning he had passed away. The deepest sympathy is felt by everyone for the sorrowing parents.

Mr. B. Beingessner received a phone message on Tuesday announcing the death the same day at Ripley of his brother-in-law, Jacob Goetz. Mr. Goetz, who was in his 50th year, had been suffering all winter with cancer. He was a shoemaker by trade and for many years lived at Walkerton. He is mourned by his wife, who was Miss Klempp of Walkerton before her marriage, and three daughters. His aged mother lives in Formosa, also two brothers, John and Michael, and his sister, Mrs. Beingessner. Another brother is Will Goetz of Lafayette, Ind. and there are three other sisters:—Mrs. Frank Beingessner of Champion, Alta.; Mrs. John Bauman of Buffalo, and Mrs. Michael Balk of Buffalo. The funeral took place at Ripley.

Farmers are about finished seeding in this neighborhood. The ground was in pretty good shape for the seed this year. Some farmers are plowing up their fall wheat.

NARVA

(Intended for last week)

Mr. Clarence Reid is engaged with Mr. Jno. Keyes for seeding.

Mr. Jas. Needham of the 9th of Kincardine visited his sister Mrs. Robt. Keyes on Thursday.

Our popular teacher, Mr. H. Becking has purchased a new Hyslop Bicycle.

Mrs. Jno. Moffat is, at the time of writing, under the doctors care with a severe attack of muscular rheumatism.

Mr. Wm. Alexander sawed up a nice pile of wood for Messrs Jno. and Geo. Moffatt, last week.

Miss Mabelle Mooney visited with Miss Lila Keyes last Thursday afternoon.

Misses Aggie and Annie Moffat were in the County Town on Monday.

After the usual Arbor Day performance on Friday, the pupils had a pleasant jaunt in a near-by woods, and on their return an enthusiastic game of football.

The Narva Women's Institute will hold their Annual Business Meeting at Mrs. R. Wilson's, 11th con. Greenock, on Wednesd'y May 16th 1917 at 2.30 P. M. All members requested to be present.

HANOVER

Hanover tendered an enthusiastic and affectionate farewell to the local Platoon of the 248th Greys last week as they entrained for Owen Sound. A civic reception, presided over by the Mayor, was held in the Council Chamber.

One man could not enlist in the 248th because he had just bought a horse and another said he could not go as he was going to buy a car." Still another said he had been used to thin-soled boots all his life and could not stand the heavy boots he would have to wear in the Army.

According to the London Military Gazette the name of Lieut.-Col. G. F. McFarland, formerly of the 147th Battalion and since in command of the 8th Reserve Battalion at Shorncliffe, England, appeared among the Canadian officers appointed to command a battalion at the front.

The Local Chapter, I. O. D. E. entertained Lieut. Korman and the members of the Hanover Platoon of the 248th Greys to supper in the I. O. D. E. Rooms.

The 248th Batt'n has been warned for Overseas and expects to move East about May 15th.

Henry Riehl of Bentinck tp. was found in a dying condition in his barn last Sunday evening. Dr. Erde of Hanover was notified, but before he reached the sick man he had passed away. Rumors of foul play in connection with his death were in circulation, but Dr. Ball of Hanover, coroner, who made an investigation on Monday, found nothing to substantiate these rumors. The man had apparently died from natural causes. He had been on the down grade physically for some time, and while he had never consulted a doctor, it is presumed from the symptoms he evidenced that he had suffered from diabetes Deceased was 60 years of age. He leaves a wife and family.—Post.

Pte. Clarence Horlock of Hanover who went overseas with the 147th Greys, writing to his sister, Mrs. Nelson Wagner, from England on April 8th says in part: 'Say I had a surprise last week. I met Harold Young at the depot and spent an evening up at his room. I was pretty near "struck" the morning I saw him. He is second in command of our company and believe me I will have my own way now.

Town of Walkerton

Court of Revision 1917

The first sitting of the Court of Revision for the year 1917 for hearing complaints respecting the Assessment Roll of the Town of Walkerton will be held in the

COUNCIL CHAMBER, TOWN HALL,

Monday, May 28th, 1917

at 7.30 o'clock p. m.

A. COLLINS, Clerk.

May 15th, 1917.

Thos. A. Edison's latest invention, known as the New Edison, is the instrument to which the New York Globe refers as "the [illegible] with a soul." We cord[illegible] you to visit our store and permit us to demonstrate that the New Edison is utterly different from any and all talking machines.

R. L. GIBSON

JEWELER · WALKERTON

The Central Grocery

JAPAN TEA

25c a lb,
5 lbs for $1.00
35c a lb,
3 lbs for $1.00

JAMS AND CANNED FRUITS

Special 2 lbs Prunes for 25c

Get our price on five-bag lots of Flour.

W. G. Searle

Phone 161 Walkerton

IF YOU WANT a good, Reliable Boot. —Try a pair of our Cushion Soles made of solid leather.

FIRST CLASS REPAIRING.

C. PETTEPLACE

Individuality

THE selection of appropriate mountings for remarkably good Photographic Portraits.

THAT'S US.

FRASER STUDIO

JEWELLRY OF ALL KINDS

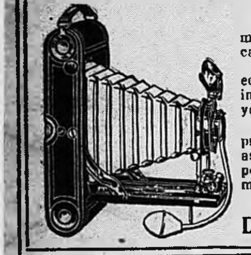
Watches, Clocks, Cut Glass Silverware and Jewellry of all kinds.

C. A. FOX, & SON

WALKERTON TELESCOPE

VOL. XLIX, NO. 21 WALKERTON TELESCOPE, WALKERTON, MAY 24th 1917 $1.50 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE

Kodaks and Cameras



$1.25 to $22 50

Films to fit all makes and sizes of cameras.

Everything needed for the developing and finishing of your pictures.

An illustrated price list for the asking or drop us a postal for one by mail.

HUNTER'S Drug Store

The Rexall Store

A Sunny Disposition

in the morning follows the use of the night before. The mild but sure laxative tablet with the pleasant taste. In neat tins at 15c & 25c.

Rexall Orderlies

A. P. Sieveright

Drugs - Kodaks

WALL PAPERS OF QUALITY

newest effects and wonderful assortment for the Parlor, Living Room, Dining Room, Hall, Bed Room, Kitchen, at very reasonable prices.

McCrum's

A Harvard Brown Vici Kid Princess Shoe

Made with [illegible] Champagne Cloth top and new heel. One of the latest styles for Spring and Summer.

Price $7.00

Ramsey

The Shoeman

Our Suits

they make you look good, feel good, and they are made good, no matter what price you pay.

Greys in all shades, plain stripes and small checks; Blues, Browns and Blacks in fast colors. We have them all. Try us for your next suit.

Men's Furnishings

The Newest Summer Styles

In Soft Collars, Sport Shirts, Underwear, Pyjamas, Night Shirts, Hats, Caps, Etc.

T. ROURKE

Tailor and Men's Wear.

136, Walkerton, Ont.

Off for Front

A contingent of nurses including Miss Annie Ferguson of Montreal left London on Wednesday for Montreal.

Killed By Colt's Kick

Wm. Slestor, a well-known farmer living near Kincardine, died on Thursday as a result of a kick by a colt in the abdomen.

Former Walkerton Girl

A telegram received here yesterday announced the death of Mrs. Jos. Kroetsch (nee Pauline La France) daughter of Mrs. M. La France of Walkerton. Death followed an operation yesterday morning.

Transferred To Windsor.

Mr. J. H. Matson, accountant of the Merchants Bank, was transferred last week to the Windsor Branch. Mr. Matson was here about a year, and was well thought of in the town. He is succeeded here by Mr. J. H. Theaker of Tara.

A Pecular Accident

Mr. John Richardson of Brant reports a peculiar accident to a 10 months old calf. He was driving the animal across the barnyard on Saturday morning when it suddenly fell and broke both its front legs, necessitating its being killed.

Wouldn't Accept Resignation

Word has been received here that the Methodist congregation at Preston has declined to accept Rev. D. A. Walker's resignation. They have extended his leave of absence three months and have arranged for a supply to take his work. As the conference meets next month, this means that Mr. Walker will be the pastor at Preston for next conference year. Mr. Walker's health is still very poor.

Death of Mrs. Himmelspach

Mrs. Anthony Himmelspach, a highly respected resident of the Carlsruhe neighborhood, passed away on Saturday in her 68th year. She had been poorly for some time. The accidental death of her son, who was killed in the field a year ago, was a great shock to her and seriously impaired her health. Besides her husband, she leaves two sons at home, one in the West, and a married daughter in Detroit. Mrs. Himmelspach was a sister of Mr. John M. Rustz of Walkerton. The funeral took place at Carlsruhe on Tuesday.

"Well Done, Walkerton!"

W. S. Clendening, formerly School Inspector for East Bruce, sends a $5 subscription to the Walkerton Y. M. C. A. Campaign Fund. Mr. Clendening writes:—I consider it an honor to be associated with the citizens of Walkerton in their contributions towards the war expenses, as they have done their duty in the present gigantic struggle in such a multitude of ways and with such a right royal spirit. I feel proud of my old home of 35 years, and exclaim "Well done, Walkerton, and well done, Bruce."

Walkerton Markets

(Revised. Wednesday, May 23)

Hay, per ton,	10.00 to	12.00
Oats, per bsh.	75 to......	75
Wheat " "	2.65 to......	2.65
Barley, " "	1 10 to......	1 10
Hogs, per cwt,	16.10 to......	16 40
Butter, per lb,	33 to	36
Eggs. per doz.	39 to	40

MUSTN'T PLAY FALSE

To Our Boys at the Front—People at Home Must Back Them in Every Possible Way

Never has a Walkerton audience had the war situation and the pressing needs of the moment more clearly and emphatically placed before it than on Monday night, when Capt. (Mrs.) Parsons and Capt. Hindson addressed a recruiting meeting in the Town Hall. The speakers came up from London with the idea of helping Major Nelson who is engaged in recruiting reinforcements for the 160th Bruce Batt'n in this district. Unfortunately there were few citizens of military age present and the speakers had to confine their remarks mostly to the "mothers and sweethearts" present.

Mr. John Rowland who presided told the young ladies in the audience in his characteristic style, that young men that were not brave enough to fight would not make good husbands. He praised Premier Borden for introducing conscription and said we ought to have had it a year ago. Conscription of wealth and the appointment of a food dictator should follow too. The rich folks were not doing their share. The reason the Lord made poor folks must have been because He had to get the money out of them to run the charitable and patriotic funds. He had no use for the farmer who refused to sell his wheat at $3.15, and then sang "We'll never Let the Old Flag Fall."

Capt. (Mrs.) Parsons, is a cultivated little woman who hails from "the wilds of New Ontario" as she calls it. She is of Scotch ancestry and inherits the fighting blood of "her men" of preceding generations. She has three grown-up sons, all at the Front. She

(Continued on page 8)

Killed In Action

Word was received in town on Monday that Pte. Jim Carroll of Kincardine, a young man well-known in Walkerton, had been killed in action. Jim had been previously wounded and had only recently returned to the Front from England.

Those Special Sales

Special sales by the local druggists last week livened up Durham St. and brought a lot of business to the town. If more merchants would show similar enterprise the people of this district would be quicker to appreciate the fact that Walkerton is a good town to shop in.

$1000 Mark Reached

The ladies of the Entertainment Committee of the Hospital Aid have emerged triumphantly from their campaign to raise $1,000 for the year ending June 1st. The supper given at the Town Hall on Tuesday night was liberally patronized, over a hundred dollars being taken at the door. The supper was choice, the only indication of hard times being the low price charged. The ladies were delighted with the support the public gave them in their effort and wished the Telescope to express their appreciation to the community for their splendid support throughout the year.

Given Send Off

Pte. Chas. Whitehead, son of Mr. John Whitehead, arrived here on Monday for a few days leave before proceeding Overseas with the Southern Alberta Forestry Co. Charlie has been orange growing in California and from that distant point answered his country's call. On Tuesday evening united to do him honor and he was the people of No. 4 School Section given a royal send-off at his father's home in Brant. The people of the School Section presented him with an address and a handsome signet ring, while the township of Brant gave him a fine address and a gold piece.

Will Oil Streets After All.

The Council's action in deciding not to buy any more street oil this year and to oil only Durham St. was greeted with such violent protests by citizens last Week that Mayor Johnston called a Special meeting and had the Board's decision reversed. Citizens pointed out that the Council should not deprive the back streets of oil, no matter what it cost, so long as the people were willing to pay for it. As each resident pays for all the oil that goes on the street in front of his own property this argument is good. True the town pays for the street corners but they amount to only twenty-five per cent of the total area. The dust that was prevalent the latter part of the week helped to drive the situation home to people. Many folks declaring that they wanted the dust layed no matter what the oil cost, and that they were no more willing to go without oil because it came high, than they were willing to go without bread because the price of flour is up. The Council after listening to remarks by Mr. H. M. Lay and other citizens, decided to go ahead and oil the streets the same as last year, the Council paying one-quarter of the expense as usual to cover street corners. The clerk was instructed to call for tenders for oil from a number of supply houses.

LT.-COL. DR. FRASER

Writes Good Descriptive Account of What He Saw in the Fierce Struggle at Vimy Ridge

The following interesting description of the doings at Vimy Ridge came in a letter from Lt.-Col. (Dr.) Fraser to Mr. Arthur Collins:—

This has been a most eventful week and as I have a few minutes, the first time since Sunday morning last, when I can sit down without something on my mind will take the opportunity of writing you. We will be on the move again in a few hours, so what I write you will probably be very disjointed. You will have read in the papers all about the Canadians taking Vimy Ridge on Easter Monday. I took charge of an advanced station on Sunday. At 5.30 a. m. zero hour on Monday, with one burst of sound the guns opened. There was a flash of flame (new kind of shell) all along the line for miles. Then such a display of fireworks; it was a gorgeous sight. Flares, colored rockets, mines, green and red signals and a golden rain of fire all going up at once. The ground was trembling with the roar of the guns of all sizes, from field guns to 15 howitzers. It was an awful din, just a deafening roar all the time. We could see our fellows going over and disappearing the other side of the ridge. At seven o'clock German prisoners were coming in and soon they were coming in droves, more officers than usual and many more stretcher bearers than usual, a Battalion Commander then a Brigadier Gen. and his staff. They were Bavarians and the officers were rather fine looking but the men were a very mixed lot. We had a great number to carry stretchers from the line and they carried all day long. Thanks to them and the good arrangements, the wounded were never cleared more rapidly and with less congestion. I hid five of them in a dug-out all night and used them next day to help carry down stragglers. They are great workers. There were two unwounded medical officers came through us and I think there were others.—(To be concluded next week.)

Suing C. P. R.

Irwin Bros. have entered action against the C. P. R. to recover damages for the twenty horses which were killed in a railway accident along the North Shore in March.

Will Have Half-Holiday

Mr. C. Patrick says he is going to have a holiday this summer no matter whether the other merchants of the town do or not. Starting June 7th, he will close his grocery every Thursday at 1 p. m. during the summer months. On Wednesday nights he will remain open until 9 o'clock.

Mildmayites Honor Dr. Clapp.

A representative gathering of citizens assembled at the Foresters Hall, Mildmay, on Wednesday evening of last week and presented to Dr. R. E. Clapp, a handsome gold-headed cane suitably inscribed, and to Mrs. Clapp, a beautiful upholstered arm chair. A nice address expressing the high esteem in which Dr. Clapp and his family have always been held in the village, was read by Principal Kidd, while the presentation was made by Dr. Doering. Messrs. J. A. Johnston, Dr. Wilson and others spoke of the loss which Mildmay was sustaining in the removal of the family, and expressing every good wish for their future happiness and prosperity. After a residence of over thirty-seven years in that community, it must be gratifying to Dr. Clapp to know that he has the good-wishes and respect of all his fellow-citizens no matter to what class, creed or political party they may belong.

Our Champion Exhorter

We were not a bit surprised to learn from his own lips on Monday night that Mr. Rowland, who has been developing a "Billy Sunday" style on the recruiting platform, has at last broken into the pulpit. Mr. Rowland confided to his hearers that a few Sundays ago he and Dunc. McKerracher and Frank Rennie had held forth of a Sunday evening from the pulpit of a Presbyterian Church of a neighboring town. Mr. Rowland probably took for his text something about making two onions grow where one had been before, a subject which would easily draw tears to the eyes of the congregation. Bro. McKerracher and Bro. Rennie would no doubt deal with the beauty of brotherly love. Speaking from the platform Monday night. Mr. Rowland went further and gave some pointed advice to the local clergy regarding their pulpit work. He advocated that the local pastors desist for the moment in their efforts to steer pilgrims towards the Pearly gates and preach, "Grow beans, more Potatoes, and then Some!" or words to that effect. Mr. Rowland took off his hat to Premier Borden for announcing Conscription, and certainly struck a responsive chord in the audience when he declared emphatically that there should be not only conscription of manhood, but a conscription of wealth and that a food dictator should be appointed.

NEWS ABOUT TOWN

Victoria Day.

Stylish pumps at Ramsey's Shoe Store.

Pte. Will Anderson was home over Sunday.

A full stock of outing shoes at Ramsey's Shoe Store.

Latest styles in wedding stationery at the Telescope.

For the best farm shoes go to Ramsey's Shoe Store.

Mr. John Lambertus is reported to be very seriously ill.

Snow fell several inches deep on May 27th ten years ago.

Mr. J. J. Schumacher made a business trip to Hamilton this week.

Miss Agnes Obrecht left last week to visit her sisters in Hamilton.

Pte. C. Clarke of Elmwood was reported missing in Monday's lists.

Womens shoes clearing at $3 50 on the bargain table.—Ramsey the Shoeman.

Regal on your shoes means quality in them, new styles at Ramsey's Shoe Store.

For sale—Millet Seed and White field Beans, at the Central Grocery.—W. G. Searle.

Orillia has 140 cases of typhoid fever which have been traced to the milk supply.

There will be a chorus of fifty voices in the Philharmonic Society's concert on June 12th.

Mr. Will Pengelly of Toronto, spent Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Pengelly.

Mr. and Mrs. Weiss and family motored to Palmerston and spent the day with Mr. and Mrs. Jerymn.

Misses Mary Lindsay and Ida Brechler spent the week end with Miss Margaret Friedman, Chepstow.

Misses Reta Weiss and Agnes Ward spent last Thursday the guests of Mr. and Mrs. M. Dester of Cargill.

Mr. F. W. Sieveright, druggist of Toronto, was here a few days last week assisting his brother at his big special sale.

Choice Ontario potatoes for seed, named varieties, guaranteed by grower The Central Grocery.—W. G. Searle.

Raginskin, the new material for women's white shoes. We have them in pumps and high cuts.—Ramsey the Shoeman.

Rev. C. W. Cosens and Mr. John McCool attended District Meeting of the Methodist Church at Chesley on Tuesday.

Conductor Cox of the G. T. R., who runs through Walkerton, took a stroke on Friday while working in his garden at Southampton.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Ranesbottom motored to Hillsburg on Saturday to attend the funeral of Mrs. Ranesbottom's uncle, Mr. Arch. Robinson.

Every housewife is interested in bargains these days. Telescope advertisements tell of the best special values offered in town this week.

Special, Zimmer's flower and vegetable seeds regular 5c a packet, Friday and Saturday 10 packets for 25c, at the Central Grocery.—W. G. Searle.

Sergt. Art Taggart did some good recruiting work at Chesley last week before Conscription was announced, landing five recruits inside of three days.

The Hydro Commission has bought the equipment of the Ontario West Shore Railway, for about $120,000. There were several tenders but Hydro bid the highest.

After all is said and done these are glorious days for the small boy, for does not the merchant stick a gum drop now on the spout of the oil can instead of a potato?

Miss Lizzie Holm, who has a fine position as housekeeper at Dodge Bros. big farm near Detroit, Mich., is home on two weeks' holidays visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Justus Holm.

Walt. Smith, son of Mr. Frank Smith, was one of the first volunteers to sign up to go Overseas with reinforcements for the 160th. Unfortunately he was rejected on the physical examination.

Mr. E. D. Bonnell of the Rexall Store in Owen Sound was here last week assisting Mr. A. P. Sieveright with his One Cent Sale. Mr. Bonnell is an enthusiastic Rexallite and is quite convinced that "If it is Rexall it is good."

Harold Patterson of the Toronto Forestry Co. is home on two weeks' leave recuperating his recent attack of scarlet fever. He is feeling fine now after a six weeks siege of illness and expects to go Overseas, in a few weeks.

Mr. J. B. Huether motored up from Guelph on Sunday, Mrs. Huether returning home with him. Her mother, Mrs. A. Todd, who will spend the summer at her home here, has just returned from a visit to members of her family at Regina and Vancouver.

As we go to press, the air is full of snow.

David Brindley signed up yesterday for Overseas.

Flat to rent. Very convenient. Apply to C. Patrick.

Miss Tilda Cain was home from London over Sunday.

Mr. Partridge of Barrie, visited friends in town this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Walford were here from Hespeler over Sunday.

Mr. Harry Galbraith of Shelburne was a visitor here over Sunday.

We are sorry to report that little Earle Kaufmann is ill with pneumonia.

Mrs. George Lambertus is visiting her son, J. A. Lambertus of Dunkeld for a few days.

Little Miss Edith Reed returned on Friday from a visit to her grandmother Mrs. Reed, at Toronto.

Mrs. W. F. Ross of Forest is spending a few days with her parents Mr. and Mrs. H. H. McKay.

Mr. Frank Wade an old Walkerton boy now, a lawyer in Cleveland, was a visitor in town on Thursday.

Mrs. (Dr.) Stewart of Teeswater and Mrs. Hall of Saskatoon were the guests of Mrs. McPhail last week.

Mr. Norman Hiscox won the coal oil stove which was drawn for at the Hospital Supper, Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Bremner attended the funeral of the late Mr. and Mrs. Harry Parsons at Orillia on Tuesday.

Special

Ginger Snaps, 2 lbs. for 25c., at Patrick's.

Wool Wanted

Highest prices, cash or trade. S. A. Rife & Co.

Organ For Sale

A good second hand organ for sale cheap. Apply at this office.

For Sale

Driving mare, buggy, cutter, harness, etc., for sale.—A. P. Johnston.

Landed at Quebec

Mrs. Lou. Anderson received a telegram from her husband Tuesday night saying that he had arrived at Quebec.

More Parcels To The Front

The young ladies of the Soldiers Aid despatched 75 parcels of soldiers' comforts and eatables to Walkerton boys in the trenches on Tuesday.

Walkerton Recruits

Four Walkerton boys have enlisted thus far with Major Nelson. They are:—Mel. Kain, Hermie Runstedler, Nic McIntee, Bob McGregor.

County Hospital Meeting

The Annual Meeting of the Bruce County General Hospital Women's Aid Society will be held in the Council Chamber on Saturday, May 26th at 4 p. m.

Notice To The Public

The High School will make their last collection of newspapers and rubbers for this term on Saturday, May 26th, and will continue the work after the summer holidays.

Engagement Announced

Mr. W. H. Brown of Chesley, announces the engagement of his youngest sister, Annie Elizabeth, to Mr. William Redford Peterson, of Walkerton, the marriage to take place early in June.

Mildmay Celebration Postponed

The Victoria Day Celebration which was to have been held in Mildmay this Thursday, May 24th, has been postponed until Monday, June 4, when the entire program provided for to-day will be given.

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Schumacher announce the engagement of their daughter, Afra, to Mr. Edward F. Peters, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Peters of New York City, the marriage to take place early in June.

Sergt. Kingsbury Doing Well

Sergt. George Kingsbury is making a good recovery from his wounds in the Royal Infirmary at Leicester, England. That is the reassuring word that came to Mrs. S. Saunders in a letter from the Red Cross authorities last week.

Those Seed Potatoes

A carload of potatoes ordered for Paisley by the local Agricultural Dept. arrived from New Brunswick on Monday and were unloaded the following day. The car of seed potatoes ordered for Walkerton and Cargill left Edmonton on May 12th and are expected here every day. There are about enough orders in now to clean out the car.

Both in England

Mr. C. W. Cryderman had a cablegram last week from his son, Sergt. Wilbur Cryderman stating that he had arrived safely in England from Saloniki and is now in London. A cable from his sister, Miss Ethel, has also been received stating that she has landed in England. Both brother and sister are now in London but it is unlikely that either is aware of the other's presence in the Old Land.

DEDICATION AT CARGILL

Imposing Ceremony Attended by Masonic Brethren From all Points in the District—Short Sketch of Moravian Lodge

An affair which marks an important landmark in the history of Masonry in this district took place at Cargill last Wednesday night. It was the official dedication of Moravian Lodge Hall, the splendid new quarters which are now occupied by the Cargill brethren. The impressive ceremony was conducted by Rt. Wor. Bro. A. P. Johnston, D. D. G. M. of Bruce District, No. 5, acting as representative of the Grand Master. He was assisted by a large staff of officers including the following:—

R. Wor. Bro. A. P. Johnston D. D. G. M. as Grand Master; R. Wor. Bro. W. J. Loughleen P. D. D. G. M. as Deputy G. N. R. W. Bro. F. A. Ryan, Grand Director of Ceremonies; W. Bro. D. McLachlin, Ass't Grand Dir. of Cer; W. Bro. C. S. Stephan, Grand Architect; W. Bro. W. H. McBurney, Grand Senior Warden; W. Bro. Reg. I. Shannon, Grand Junior Warden; W. Bro. W. Diehl, Grand Chaplain; Wor. Bro. W. R. Barnett, Grand Sec.; W. Bro. C. E. Start, Ass't Grand Treas. W. Bro. Bremner, Grand Treas. W. Bro. E. Myles, Ass't Grand Treas.; W. Bro. (Dr.) P. Houston, W. Bro. M. L. Slegler, Grand Sword Bearer; W. Bro. I. Shoemaker, Grand Senior Deacon; W. Bro. L. A. Eedy, Grand Junior Deacon; W. Bro. Geo. Sirrs, Grand Sup't. Works; W. Bro. C. Petteplace, Grand Organist; W. Bros. J. J. Nielle, W. Collins, F. W. Fischer, W. Halladay, Bros. N. C. McKay, M. S. Sparrow, T. Boss, J. A. Green, W. H. Davidson, W. Lustig.

Over a hundred Masonic brethren, including five auto loads from Walkerton, an equal number from Paisley, and members from Chesley, Owen Sound and other points, were present, and had the privilege of seeing one of the most impressive and instructive ceremonies in the Masonic ritual well performed. Afterwards a bountiful supper was served in the banquetting hall on the first floor of the building. This part of the program was looked after by the ladies who certainly did their part magnificently, as they have the reputation of always doing on such occasions.

The Programme

Toast, The King, "God Save the King" Army and Navy, Bro. Cooper, Cedar Lodge, Wiarton; Song, Patriotic Hopper Bros., Grand Lodge of Canada R. Wor. Bro. Johnston, R. W. Bro. F. Ryan P. D. D. G. M., North Huron. Dist. No. 5; Masonic Quartette, R. Wor. Bro. W. J. Loughleen, Wor. Bro. Ziegler, Wor. Bro. R. Fowlie, Bro. G. F. Saunders; Sister Societies, Bro. D. McKerracher, Saugeen; Canada and Empire, Bros. Logie of Paisley and Wor. C. S. Stephan; Ladies, Wor. Bro. Dr. Houston, Wor. Bro. McBurney, Bro. C. Steele of Paisley; Members of Moravian Lodge, Wor. Bro. Fowlie, Wor. Bro. Sirrs, Bro. C. Cliff; Auld Lang Syne.

The new Hall is commodious, well-furnished, and altogether one of the best in this part of the country. The lodge which was organized not so many years ago with a humble beginning has grown and expanded until it is now a real credit to the community, has a live staff of officers, and numbers a large list of the best citizenship of the village and surrounding townships on its membership roll.

Moravian Lodge first met at Eden Grove. The Lodge was formed in the year 1893 on July 19th. Most Wor. Bro. T. Gibson was G. Master, R. W. Bro. White, D. G. Master; R. Wor. Bro., J. J. Mason G. Secy. The following were the Charter members:—Thos. Pinkerton, James Dougan, Thos Hood sr., Jas. McBeth, John Munn, Robert Maxwell, Thos. Chittick, Archibald McArthur, W. J. McKerman. Wor. Thos. Pinkerton was the first W. Master; Jas. Dougan, S W; Thos. Hood, J. W. The majority of the Charter members have passed away. Those that are living as far as

(Continued on page 8)

Memorial Service

Memorial Service for Pte. George Cunningham who fell at Vimy Ridge will be held at St. Thomas Church next Sunday evening at 7 o'clock.

Brotherhood Foots The Bill

A further sequel to Dr. Minifie's visit to Walkerton developed last week when it became known that the Doctor had neglected to pay a bill of $63 at the County Hospital for services to his deceased wife. Mr. John Rowland who had received full assurance by letter from Brotherhood Headquarters at Toronto in January that Dr. Minifie was "alright" and was acting for them, wrote the Secretary of the Brotherhood at Toronto, last week explaining the circumstances and received a reply under date of May 10th: "Dr. Minifie was not employed by us, was simply working temporarily under our auspices. Since the end of March he does not stand related to us at all." The letter added that the Brotherhood executive had decided to pay the Hospital account.

A SUDDEN CALL

Eldest Son of Mr. and Mrs. P. Ritchie Expires in a Moment—Strain From Heavy Lift was Probable Cause

The uncertainty of life was never more impressively illustrated than in the death of Edwin Ritchie, the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. P. Ritchie of Walkerton, who was taken in the very prime of rugged manhood without a moment's notice.

Four of the Ritchie brothers have been farming within a short distance of one another in Saskatchewan and on Saturday afternoon a telegram came from Walter to the father, Mr. P. Ritchie in Walkerton, stating briefly that Edwin had passed away the day before. About the same time a message was received from Robert saying that he was coming East with the body. Particulars of the sad affair were brought by Robt., who arrived with his brothers remains on the late C. P. R. train, Tuesday night.

It appears that Edwin, accompanied by his wife, motored across country on Friday afternoon to see about some fence posts and was about six miles from home when the car got stuck in some sand. He jumped out of the car and while Mrs. Ritchie started the engine, he pushed behind and managed to free the machine. He had been feeling unwell that day, and as the engine was hot, he suggested going to a farm house near by to get some water. When they got to the house he suggested that the engine was perhaps too hot and to let it cool for a few minutes. The lady of the house was a soldier's wife whose husband was at the Front. She took them into a room to show them her husband's picture on the wall. As Mr. Ritchie raised his head to look at the picture he collapsed lifeless on the floor. It is thought that the strain caused by lifting on the car on the road may have caused the rupture of a blood-vessel in the head.

The affair came as the greatest shock to all his family and friends since, as far as was known, he was in the best of health, although necessarily working hard, early and late, owing to their scarcity of help and the many things which required looking after in connection with the thousand acres of land, together with a large quantity of stock, and a threshing outfit.

Edwin, who was the eldest of a family of seven, was 43 years of age, having been born on his father's farm near Enniskillen, on Jan. 5th, 1874. Seven years ago he went west to farm and was highly successful. He was a man of good principles, clear-headed, and industrious, and his taking off in the very prime of life is a heart-breaking blow to the family. Besides his wife, who was formerly Miss Pinkerton of Essex, and a cousin of the late David Pinkerton, of Enniskillen, he is survived by a bright little son, Harold, who is seven years old. Five brothers and one sister survive:—Wilfred of Walkerton, Robert of Tessier, Sask., Janet (Mrs. David Ritchie of Teeswater,) Walter of Delisle, Sask. Hugh Allen of Delisle, Sask; Gordon, on the homestead in Greenock.

His widow and little son, and Mr. Robert Ritchie, accompanied the remains from the West. The funeral was held yesterday afternoon from the parents' home. Rev. Thos. Wilson, pastor of Knox Church, conducted the service, and a large concourse of the old friends from Greenock, Walkerton, and the surrounding country, followed the remains to their last resting place in the family plot at the old Greenock Cemetery.

Will Attend Montreal Meeting

Messrs C. M. Bowman M. P. P. W. D. Cargill M. P. P., Sheriff Jermyn, J. A. Johnston and Joe Thompson of Mildmay, attended an exclusive meeting of the Bruce Preparedness League here last Wednesday. The executive decided to try to get a number of delegates from Bruce to attend the Win-the-War Congress at Montreal this week. Messrs David Robertson and W. M. Shaw will attend, and it is hoped that others from the County will go.

Killed in Auto Smash.

Walkerton friends have deep sympathy for Mr. Peter Bremner in the shocking death of his sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Parsons of Orillia, who were killed in an auto accident near Newmarket on Saturday morning. It appears that Mr. and Mrs. Parsons were driving up a steep hill at a sharp curve when a Metropolitan suburban car from Toronto jammed into their auto. They were dragged 150 feet and crushed to death before the street car had stopped. Mr. and Mrs. Parsons were about forty-five years of age. The former was one of Orillia's most successful merchants, being a member of the Parsons Syndicate, of which Mr. Bremner is also a member, which owns 19 stores throughout Ontario. He was a past master of Orillia Lodge A. F. & A. M. and prominent in Masonic work. An older brother, Robert, was killed in an auto accident near London several years ago.

CURRENT COMMENT

THE U-BOAT MENACE.

There is no use trying to minimize the danger or destructiveness of the German submarines to Allied and neutral shipping. The figures are too conclusive. If it be found impossible to combat the menace, it will only require a certain time before Great Britain is completely blockaded. The Germans are jubilant over the success of the under-sea boats. But the British do not despair of being able to weather this storm in some way. With the combined efforts of the Allies and neutrals in building ships and fighting the submarines, there is hope that the German menace will yet be overcome. Britain will not only build ships, but she will cut down her food rations and otherwise battle with the evil.

So far as Britain herself is concerned, she could get along quite comfortably if she did not have the enormous task of seeing that her allies are supplied with food, coal, steel and other things necessary to the conduct of war. Britain could feed and supply herself from the Dominions with her own shipping. She has enough tonnage to import the 10,000,000 tons of wheat surplus from her Dominions, and her annual consumption is only [illegible] tons. But the burden of the world transportation falls on British shipping, and she looks to the United States to relieve the situation.

British shipping at the end of March showed 22 per cent. in naval and military service. Thirty-four per cent. was under requisition by the Government for the transportation of munitions and other supplies. Twenty-two to 25 per cent. was engaged in transporting grain and foodstuffs. Twenty to 22 per cent. is still free from requisition. There are now only 200 ships in foreign service, carrying jute, rubber, wool and hides from the Far East, Africa and Australia to the United States.

From an article in the New York Sun we learn that there are now 91 German and 11 Austrian vessels in ports of the United States, exclusive of the Virgin Isles, according to the latest count made by the United States Bureau of Navigation and transmitted to the Senate by the Department of Commerce. Under the terms of the joint resolution adopted by the Senate on Monday, each of these ships which was owned at the time it came under American jurisdiction "in whole or in part by any corporation, citizen or subject of any nation with which the United States may be at war when such vessel was taken," may be seized and operated in the service of the United States.

[illegible] this gross tonnage all but 67,817 is of undisputed German ownership. Dr. Karl Helfferich, the Imperial German Secretary of the Interior, told the Reichstag main committee on Saturday that the submarine campaign of ruthlessness had sent 1,600,000 gross tons of shipping to the bottom in two months.

Of the ships now in custody of the Government thirty-one are in New York harbor. The others are distributed among ports on the Atlantic, Pacific and Gulf coast of continental United States. In Honolulu, Porto Rico, the Philippine Islands—twenty-three vessels, ranging from the 10,881 ton Princess Alice, of the North German Lloyd, to the 499 ton Wiegand, of the Deutsche Sudseephosphat, are in the Philippines—and the Elsass, another North German Lloyd boat, having a tonnage of 6,591, is at Pago Pago. These ships are of all sizes, from the 54,282 ton Vaterland at the Hamburg-American pier in Hoboken to the [illegible] at Cebu. Many of them are cargo carriers, and the transportation of the passenger ships into transports or freighters would not be difficult. When the machinery is repaired these vessels will be used in carrying supplies and food to Britain, France and Italy.

Scotch Breakfasts.

Dr. Redgill, in Susan Ferrier's "Destiny," dwells on Scotch breakfasts with gusto. After proclaiming that Scotland in general [illegible] a perfect mass of rubbish" and the cookery not fit for dogs, he adds: "But the breakfasts! That's what redeems the land, and every county has its own peculiar excellence. In Argyllshire you have the Lochfyne herring fat, luscious and delicious, just out of the water, falling in flakes with its own richness, melting away like butter in your mouth. In Aberdeenshire you have the Finnan haddock, with a flavor all its own, vastly relishing, just salt enough to be piquant without parching you up with thirst. In Perthshire there is the Tay salmon, kippered, crisp and juicy, a very magnificent morsel. In other places you have the exquisite mutton of the country made into hams of a most delicious flavor."

Sport Skirts.

Chic.
Color.
Heavy silks.
Shirred tops.
Novel fabric designs.
Real or bluff pockets.

Bother With Brake Bands.

Many cars are fitted with [illegible] metal emergency brake bands and quite often the bands rub against the wheel drums and cause a characteristic scraping sound. The scraping is not only annoying, but it wears brake band and consumes power. To cure the drag and remove the trouble remove the wheel and examine the band. Very often it will be found that there is a bright spot at the point of friction. This point is out of true and should be removed. Where the brake band is inaccessible it may be struck with a hammer enough to spring the band slightly and remove the high spot. Replace the wheel and spin it to determine whether the trouble has been eliminated; if not continue the operation until the band assumes the proper shape.

HER HUMBLE LOVER

"And you're a fool," retorts Laura, turning upon her angrily, while Signa grows pale.

"Pardon, mademoiselle!" murmurs Jeannette, penitently. "It is true I am a foolish one. But"—and she shrugs her shoulders with a faint shudder, "it did startle me. True. In France we say that a stain of blood upon a bridal dress——"

"What on earth do we care what you say in France?" retorts Laura Derwent, vehemently. "You are an idiot! Everybody, do you hear, everybody stains her wedding dress! Go downstairs!"

"Don't be angry with her," pleads Signa, laughing, though her face is still pale. "I am not frightened. What's in an omen? Don't send her away."

But Laura is really angry, and peremptory.

"Yes, she must go. I can do all you want. I hate French women; they are one mass of vanity and superstition. After all has gone off so well, too—without a cloud to dim the sky, or anything. There! you'll say I'm as superstitious as she is! Never mind the stain; you can leave the dress to me. I'll get a brush or something. [illegible] you cut yourself much, dear?"

"Look!" says Signa, holding up her white hand with a laugh. "It's not so deep as a well, or so broad as a church, as Mercutio says—in fact, you can't see it! It was only a scratch, and Hector [illegible] my handkerchief found it directly," and she draws the handkerchief from her pocket. The useless dainty lace trifle looks rather ghastly with the blood stains, and Laura snatches it from her and thrusts it out of sight.

"It's a good thing it is no worse! If you had really cut your hand badly we should all have had a fit! There, [illegible]! I dare say he'll kiss it and make it well!"

"Laura!" with a crimson flush; but Laura has effected her purpose, and got rid of the subject.

"Here is your dress, my dear. Lovely, isn't it? Just what a travelling dress should be. By the way, I found a packet in the dress you took off last night."

"Give it to me!" says Signa, with a start. It was the packet of [illegible] given her to be opened on her wedding day. "It is from Hector," she explains. "He told me to open it to-day," and she tears the envelope apart [illegible], and comes to the window.

Then she utters an exclamation, and Laura, who has been folding the [illegible], comes to her side.

"What is it, dear?"

"I—I scarcely understand," says Signa, pale and troubled. "Read it, dear. It is a deed of some sort, but—but surely it cannot mean what it says!" and she sinks on to the chair with a perplexed face.

Laura, who is not only a professional beauty, but a [illegible] of [illegible] business beneath her [illegible], runs her eye over the deed; it is so short that she can [illegible] in a minute or two; then she utters an exclamation of surprise.

"My dear, you have married a Don Quixote, a man whose standard of honor is really fabulous. There were no marriage settlements, were there?"

"No," said Signa, flushing. "Why should there have been? I was nobody, with nothing; and he—he is an earl! Why should there be settlements? It is enough that he has given me himself and his love!"

"I agree with you, my dear countess," says Laura, with a touch of gravity in her voice. "But see, here are the settlements! By this deed he gives you five thousand a year, and—the Grange, which, it seems, is not entailed."

Signa does not seem surprised, only faintly troubled.

"But why—why?" she demands.

Laura shrugs her shoulders, and looks down on the parchment deed.

"Because he's the most generous of men, my dear," she adds. "You [illegible] they left everything to him, and this is how he fulfils his trust! It is really a good settlement—noble! All this is strange. Listen to this: 'I give these moneys and this said estate to Signa Grenville, for her own absolutely, to do with as she may please. And I desire it to be understood that I bestow the gift whether she become my wife or do not.' That is strange!"

"No!" says Signa, with the tears in her eyes. "Don't you see how noble he is? Even if—if he had died, I should have been mistress of Northwell Grange."

Laura is silent for a moment, then she thinks:

"This is dated six weeks back, Signa! You were mistress of the Grange the night of the ball! My dear, this lover and husband of yours has a knack of doing things that is simply imperial. An emperor could not be more lavish and considerate. Upon my word, you are a lucky girl."

Signa folds the deed, and puts it in her pocket. To her it simply means another token of her lover's care and regard for her, nothing more. That it makes her a wealthy woman, with a vast estate, she does not realize.

Laura induces her change into her travelling dress, and just before the penitent Jeannette knocks at the door, announcing that Lord Delamere is ready to start.

"There, my dear, you are all ready," says the beauty, putting the silver bracelet she had just fastened on Signa's arm, and throwing her arms around her. "And I'm awfully, awfully sorry to get rid of you, though to tell you the truth, [illegible] most extravagantly. I meant to be Countess of Delamere! There, the truth is out, and you must forgive and forget it. My dear, I fell in love with him the first day I saw him! But you'll make a better countess than I should have done, and there is such a thing as fate! Don't keep him waiting, or you'll lose the train, and mind, Signa, you are to write to me! And I [illegible], dear, but, there, you give him [illegible] 'Good-bye!' I am going to kiss you now, because I [illegible]"

"Well," [illegible] Signa, half fearfully.

Laura [illegible] and looks rather [illegible].

"Well, I was going to say, don't expect too much, dear, and let bygones be bygones!"

"I don't know what you mean."

"Well, well!" returns Laura, hastily. "Perhaps I don't mean anything! At any rate, you have got a man who is devoted to you, and be satisfied!"

It is almost the last words she says as she hurries her down the stairs, at the foot of which the guests are all assembled to see the bride off and bid her farewell.

There are tears in Lady Rookwell's eyes as she clasps the slim, girlish figure in her arms.

"Good-bye, my dear, and be happy. Whatever you do, be happy," she whispers.

"Good-bye, Signa!" wails Archie, sobbing. "You won't be gone long; Hector says you'll be back in a month or two," so Signa's arms close round him.

"I trust, my dear child, ahem! that you will be happy," says the rector, unctuously. "Heaven bless you!"

While Aunt Amelia smiles and cries and tries to look as if her dearest child were being torn from her.

At last, so many are the farewells, Hector has to take the arm of his beloved and lead her to the carriage.

They drive off amid a shower of rice and slippers, and scarcely have they disappeared from sight than a horseman comes full pelt to the gate and flinging himself from his saddle, almost falls against Laura, who is standing looking at the cloud of dust raised by the pair of matchless grays.

"Am I—where is she?" he pants, white and breathless.

"Are you? Where is who?" demands Laura, regarding the dusty figure with calm, almost indignant self-possession. "Oh! it is Sir Frederic Blyte, isn't it? I beg your pardon. What is it you want?"

"I want Signa, Miss Grenville!" he pants.

Laura laughs.

"There is no such person," she says. "Signa Grenville disappeared this morning, and Signa Countess of Delamere reigns in her stead."

"Then—then," he gasps, "I am too late!"

"Too late for the wedding, do you mean, Sir Frederic?" she says, staring. "Certainly you are. They have just started for the honeymoon."

"She and—and this man Lord Delamere!" he says, white to the lips.

"Yes! Why not? She was married this morning. You ought to have been here; we shan't have such a wedding in Northwell for ages."

"Too late! Too late!" he groans, and he strikes his saddle with a clinched fist, and his face grows livid with despair. "Too late! Another hour or two and I could have saved her!"

Laura Derwent laughs rather tremulously.

"What are you talking about, Sir Frederic? She married Lord Delamere."

"Yes—— [illegible]! Heaven help her! Oh, the villain, the villain!" And without any further explanation he springs into his saddle and rides away!

So ends Signa's wedding day!

CHAPTER XXVI

"It seems to me that Laura Derwent would rank rather high as a prophet," says Hector.

"What do you mean?" says Signa, looking over her shoulder, as she stands before her looking-glass arranging an opera cloak in the last fashion.

"Why," he replies, with a smile, "that you are going to be a brilliant social success!"

They are in Paris. It is the middle of the early winter season, when the gay city is perhaps at its gayest. They have a little mansion in the Champs de Mars—the best in the place—and are enjoying themselves to the utmost. The honeymoon, which has, strictly speaking, passed, seeing that thirty days have sped by since the wedding at Northwell Church—has been one succession of surprises to Signa. Imagine Aladdin's astonishment and stupefaction at the series of marvels worked by the slave of the lamp, and you have some idea of Signa's sensation, as the power of wealth and rank, such as are now hers, make itself evident. The Delameres have always been a rich family, and Hector has for years spent little more than half his enormous income. Wealth has been to him but an empty symbol, meaning little or nothing; but now it brings him an added pleasure; he can lavish it upon his darling. Nothing is too good or too precious for her. No expense is too great, so that it procures for her a little additional ease; he thinks nothing of ordering special trains, for instance, if by so doing he can make a journey more quickly than by the ordinary ones. Signa has her riding horse, a carriage and pair, and a phaeton with a couple of match horses that are the envy of all Paris. To Signa, the way in which half-sovereigns were treated as sixpences, and sovereigns as shillings, was simply astonishing at first, but she soon grew used to it, used to be treated as a princess of the blood, for whom no homage was too pronounced, no trouble too onerous.

If she chanced to admire a dress or a trinket, the dress or trinket was sure to be sent home addressed to Madame la Comtesse Delamere, until at last she grew almost afraid of admiring anything, even the great fountains in the Place de la Concorde lest Hector should buy them.

Her own income of five thousand a year was already placed, to the extent of one year, in the bank and she held a cheque-book, which perplexed her mightily at first, but which she soon learned to use. It was so delightful to scribble a few words and figures in the oblong book, and to know that the slip of paper was as good as a Bank of England note!

Meanwhile, in addition to her own purchases, Hector's "presents" poured in upon her in profusion, until [illegible] at last she remonstrated.

But he treated her remonstrance with a smile and a laugh of [illegible].

"What does it matter?" he said, taking her on his knee and gently pressing her head upon his breast. "You liked them?"

"Yes, Hector, but—but"—she hesitated—"they must have cost you a great deal of money."

"Not a very great deal," he answered, carelessly and smilingly. "Not so much as you think; and if they did, it would not matter. You see, Signa, as I explained to you the other day, I have more money than I know what to do with; and all these little fancies don't empty the coffers. I am afraid I shan't have the satisfaction of feeling that I have ruined myself for you! You see, my dear, I have not lived up to my income for some half, and this wretched money has accumulated year by year until I have become that odious thing, a millionaire!"

The result of such princely expenditure soon made itself felt in Paris. It soon got noised abroad that Lord Delamere, who had created no little stir in the gay city as a bachelor, had returned with a young bride, and that a stream of gold was pouring from the little house in the shaded avenue into the pockets of the Parisian tradesmen.

All the great people flocked to do honor to the great English lord, and showers of pasteboard rained on the small porter. But it was difficult to obtain admission, neither Hector nor Signa were disposed for much society, certainly not visit paying; and it was always "Madame la Comtesse is not at home." This only piqued the great ladies, and filled them with curiosity so poignant that at last they hit upon the ingenious device of sending the greatest lady in all Paris, the leader of fashion, the supreme head of the [illegible], to call.

When Hector, turning over the card basket one morning at an [illegible] fashion, came upon [illegible] bearing the name and title of the Duchess D'Orme, he looked up with a smile, half amused, half grave.

"So the duchess has called," he said, flecking the card with his finger.

"Yes," said Signa, coming up from the other end of the room, and leaning on his shoulder. "Didn't I tell you? I saw the carriage from one of the upper windows—only a beautiful little victoria, with an English coachman and footman."

"And English horses," he smiled. "Trust her grace for that. She never has anything French, if she can get English."

"Really," said Signa. "Why, then, did she marry a Frenchman?"

He shrugged his shoulders. He might have answered, "Because a certain Hector Delamere would not have her," [illegible].

"And you were out, of course," he said.

Signa laughed.

"Yes, of course," [illegible].

He smiled, then he shook his head.

"What is the matter, Hector? I thought you did not wish us to know any of these people, and I certainly do not wish to for my own part. [illegible] people are [illegible] when we are so happy by ourselves."

He nodded.

"Yes, but I'm afraid we shall have to [illegible] down our flag [illegible] to turn our [illegible] back upon the duchess would be to insult all Paris."

Signa laughed.

"Really? Is she so very dreadful?"

"Dreadful, indeed!" he returned with a smile. "But it is true. A [illegible] from the duchess is like a call from royalty; one must acknowledge it on pain of being ostracised."

"But we have agreed to be perfectly barbaric," said Signa, smoothing the short hair with her white hand glistening with diamonds, [illegible] with Lady Rookwell. "I see what you mean. Matter of course, but it is a nuisance, isn't it? We were so happy!"

"That's just it!" he replied. "Only mortals are happy; the gods are envious and always send a Duchess D'Orme to disturb them. We'd better go round there this afternoon; it's one of her reception days."

Accordingly Signa's victoria, which was if anything a more perfect turnout than the duchess', came round with the pair of grays, and they were driven to the immense pile of buildings which the duchess occupied when she was in Paris. There was a string of carriages in the drive, and the victoria joined the line and had to wait some minutes until it could reach the entrance, during which time the crowd stared at [illegible] so hard that Signa's color rose, and her veil went down.

Hector, who knew what the result of the visit would be, half smiled and half sighed as he [illegible].

"Well!" he thought, "I must be content! I have had her to myself all these weeks, but now the world will insist upon sharing her with me. It is only natural and [illegible], but, the pity of it!"

At last the grays reached the door, and taking her on his arm, he made his way through the hall and up the staircase, crowded with visitors coming and going. Several stopped to exchange a bow or word with him, and all looked with the utmost curiosity at Signa, to some he [illegible] introduced her as he passed on.

The salons were crowded. It was more like a state reception than a lady's simple afternoon at home, and Signa looked round, not a little amused and interested. [illegible] the various celebrities. [illegible] the crowd slowly [illegible], and seeing that there [illegible] chance of paying her respects to the great personage, Hector, with a smile, said:

"Come on, and let us get it over!" and led Signa toward the duchess. Her grace was seated at a small table, surrounded by the most distinguished people in Paris, listening to someone who was relating the last political scandal, with a half amused, half bored expression on her face, when suddenly her eyes, which were wandering from face to face, fell on Lord Delamere. A quick flash came into her eyes and a flash of color into her face, leaving it pale again in a moment, and with ineffable grace she rose and extended her hand.

"Lord Delamere!" she said, "this is a happiness!"

At the sound of the name there fell a momentary silence. Even those still talking with polite interest, but their eyes were fixed on the great English earl and his wife.

"This is really good," said the duchess, as he bent over her hand. "We heard that you were unapproachable." Then her glance turned to Signa, standing calm and self-possessed, and the great lady's color came and went again with genuine admiration and surprise.

"Permit me to introduce you to my wife," said Lord Delamere.

Her grace inclined a little upon Signa, then held out her hand! At this remarkable piece of condescension and affability the crowd of courtiers stared all the harder.

(To be continued.)

MAGIC BAKING POWDER

MADE IN CANADA
CONTAINS NO ALUM

STRAITS OF OTRANTO.

Sailed by Many Great History Making Expeditions.

Across the straits of Otranto, where an Austrian cruiser [illegible]

[illegible] the head of the Adriatic, while [illegible] to the southwest beyond the Ionian sea is the British possession, Malta.

At the beginning of the last [illegible] [illegible]

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited.

Dear Sirs,—This fall I got thrown on a fence and hurt my chest very bad, so I could not work and it hurt me to breathe. I tried all kinds of Liniments and [illegible] did me no good.

One bottle of MINARD'S LINIMENT, warmed on flannel and applied on my breast, cured me completely.

[illegible]

[illegible] Dufferin [illegible]

[illegible]

called in the third century before the Christian era. Espousing the cause of the people of Tarentum, he fought those desperate battles against Rome which gave rise to the familiar phrase "a Pyrrhic victory," used to-day to describe a conflict too successful [illegible] to prove disastrous. It was after Heraclea, where for the first time in history Greeks and Romans were [illegible] the receding forces [illegible] the field where thousands of his soldiers lay dead, exclaimed, "Another such victory, and I must return to Epirus alone." It was on the same occasion that, observing the wounds of all the Romans killed in action to be in front, he mused, "Had I such soldiers, I should soon be master of the world."

Minard's Liniment Cures Distemper.

Why Lightning Rods Are Pointed.

The reason a lightning rod has a sharp point is because a fine point offers no resistance to the discharge of electricity and in order that a cloud may be emptied of it noiselessly and harmlessly. The degree of resistance is in proportion to the surface of the object. If the rod were surmounted by a knob, for instance, the discharge would be violent. But many a lightning rod has received an electrical discharge when the people in the building below were calmly unconscious of the fact. Noncorrosive metal is used for the point of the rod, for corrosion makes resistance. The difference between a point and a ball is shown in discharging a battery. The full charge from a large battery would be received quietly on a metal point, while a moderate charge from a small one would explode violently on a ball. It is said that a full charge may be passed harmlessly through a person's body if received on the point of a needle, whereas the same charge received on a discharger with a ball or knob on the end would mean instant death.

THANKFUL MOTHERS

Mothers who have once used Baby's Own Tablets for their little ones [illegible] They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE WALRUS.

Grotesque Creature Has Strongly Developed Maternal Instincts.

[illegible]

Minard's Liniment Cures Diphtheria.

SCIENTIFIC JOTTINGS.

[illegible]

Since the beginning of the war about 2,000 [illegible] have been shipped from the United States to countries at [illegible].

It is somewhat curious that the places of the [illegible] and the lowest [illegible] in the United States are both in Texas.

There are two and one-half million of freight cars in the United States, and their average life is something about 20 years.

[illegible] mounted on top of his cabin to get a clear view of the curved roadway at that point.

If the hills and mountains of the earth were suddenly leveled and the earth take the shape of a billiard ball it would have a covering of water 9,[illegible] feet deep.

About 25 per cent. of the population of New York State is urban. The State has [illegible] cities in which live over [illegible] of the total population of some [illegible].

Cottage homes for married teachers are being provided by the school authorities of Washington State, with the aspect of making the life of the rural teacher more attractive.

Prunes stored in a California warehouse after a few months became welded into a solid mass, which is attacked with pick and shovel when it is desired to remove them for [illegible].

HAIR GOODS
FOR
LADIES AND GENTLEMEN

Made at lowest possible prices, consistent with high-grade work. [illegible] Natural Wavy [illegible] Switches at [illegible] [illegible] GENTLEMEN'S TOUPEES at [illegible] that defy detection when worn.

MINTZ'S HAIR GOODS EMPORIUM
62 KING ST. W. HAMILTON, ONT.
(Formerly Mdme. I. Mintz).

Minard's Liniment Cures Garget in Cows.

ANTICS OF PURE GLYCERIN.

This Queer Substance Is Endowed With Peculiar Properties.

One of the great advantages of glycerin [illegible]

There is a Message In This Lady's Story

SHE TELLS WHAT DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS DO FOR WOMEN.

She Was Troubled With Weakness And Her Daughter Had Nervous Trouble. Dodd's Kidney Pills Proved the Remedy They Both Needed.

Hamilton, Ont., May 12 (Special).—The story told by Mrs. H. Dickens, of [illegible] street, this city, carries a message of hope to every suffering woman in Canada.

"After my last baby was born," Mrs. Dickens states, "I used to suffer with my back and had no heart to do my work around the home. But I read about Dodd's Kidney Pills, and what they [illegible], so I thought I would get a box and see what they would do for me.

"I am pleased to say that after taking two boxes I found such great relief I would not be without them in the house.

"My daughter, too, had been very weak and run down for a long time. Her nerves got so bad we were afraid we would have her in the hospital. But I am pleased to say she is better through taking Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I never thought Dodd's Kidney Pills could have done such good work and I am telling all my friends about them."

Woman's troubles, or nearly all of them, come from sick kidneys. The cure for them is the old established remedy for sick kidneys, Dodd's Kidney Pills.

HISTORY OF RUBBER.

Indians Used Balls Many Years Ago—Vulcanizing Process.

The average man believes that rubber [illegible]

ISSUE NO.

HELP WANTED

WANTED — PROBATIONERS to train for nurses. [illegible]

LADIES WANTED TO DO [illegible] National Manufacturing Co., Montreal, Que.

WANTED—[illegible] Woolen Mill [illegible] for day and night work. For particulars, apply to the [illegible] Mfg. Co., Brantford, Ont.

WANTED—WOOLLEN MILL [illegible]

MONEY ORDERS

REMIT BY DOMINION EXPRESS Money Order. If lost or stolen you get your money back.

was sometimes used as ballast [illegible] they could get. In some American [illegible]. With the discovery of the vulcanizing process, rubber took on a new value, and the tropics were searched for it everywhere. It was found in the [illegible] of Africa, and gutta percha, a sort of first cousin to rubber, was found in Borneo, and a few years ago a large volume of rubber was found in the Guayule shrub in Mexico.

As rubber grew in value the natives learned to work and devised ways of recovering it from old shoes and other articles into which it entered, and thus reclaimed rubber soon came to equal the new [illegible] volume, and all these varieties [illegible]

For many years the best rubber was that which came from the basin of the Amazon. The people of that [illegible]

A MESSAGE TO WOMEN

If a woman has [illegible]

Mrs. M. Summers, Box [illegible], Windsor

[illegible]try enjoyed a practical monopoly, determined to keep it. Not a seed would they let go out of the country under heavy penalty. In 1876 by means of generous [illegible] here and there, a venturesome Englishman called out of the Amazon 70,000 rubber seeds and that was the start of the great rubber plantations of Ceylon and the Malay peninsula. It was 29 years after these seeds left Amazon before the first [illegible] rubber was ready for the market. Then the total was only [illegible] tons. That was in [illegible]. Last year it was [illegible] tons.

Those who attended the international rubber exhibition held in [illegible] in the fall of 1912 will remember the difference in appearance between Amazon rubber and the plantation [illegible]. The first, cured in the smoke over smouldering palm nuts, was dark colored, while much of the plantation rubber from the eastern [illegible] was cured by the scientific application of acetic acid, was as clear as amber.

Liberator of Roumania.

Michael the Brave, before whose statue at Bucharest the Roumanians [illegible]

Minard's Liniment Cures Colds

By Special Delivery.

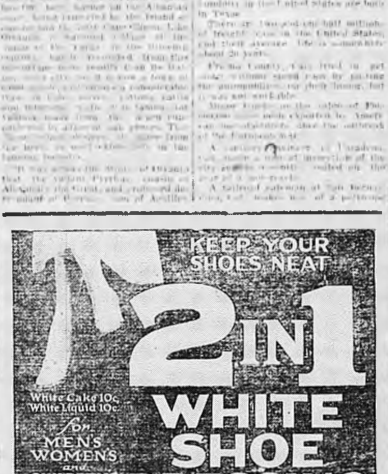
The burglar had just begun his term and was assigned to work in the [illegible] factory. Near him was an oldish man who studied him intently and seemed to be awaiting an opportunity to say something. It was while the [illegible] was at the [illegible] tank.

"How long are you in for?" he whispered.

"Twelve years," replied the newcomer.

The veteran looked around nervously and thrust a letter in the burglar's hand.

"I'm in for life," he said. "Mail this when you get out."



KEEP YOUR SHOES NEAT

2 IN 1

WHITE SHOE DRESSING

White Cake 10c
White Liquid 10c
for MEN'S WOMEN'S
and CHILDREN'S SHOES

F. F. DALLEY CO. OF CANADA LTD. HAMILTON, CAN.

Whole Wheat and Milk—the two most perfec foods given to man. Dieteti experts may quarrel about everything else, but they are agreed on this. The proper combination is Shredded Wheat Biscuit with milk—the greatest amount of protein (the element that builds muscular tissue) for the least money. Two or three of these Biscuits with milk make a nourishing breakfast on which to start the day's work and they cost only a few cents. A boon to the housewife because they are ready-cooked and ready-to-eat. Delicious with berries or other fruits. Made in Canada.

...OR THE AVERAGE PERSON

...om the British headquarters in ...he, a New York correspondent ...s:

...Germans started this war honor... with a gratuitous hatred based ...ar while we were trying to make ...ners for them. Before this war ...'s we shall hate the Germans more ...oughly than ever they hated us, ...not from fear but from contempt. ...spent the last two days on the ...ern end of the battle front work... over new parts of the area recent... ...acuated by the enemy and getting ...se to St. Quentin that its details, ...nly the cathedral but other main ...ings, were clearly visible.

...e passed through an indescrib... scene of desolation, rapine and ...on brutality, but what fills me ... the most rage amid all the havoc ... the ruins of the village and cha... of Caulaincourt. It was a prince... tate, lying in the hollow of a ...stream, and could have no earth... ...trategic value. Before reaching ...village by the roadside is a fine ...ary chapel where on tablets clos... ...he entrances to the tombs one ... the honors of a family the head ...hich is the Marquis of Caulain... ..., Duke of Vicenza. The ladies ...e house were daughters of "very ... very puissant seigneurs," dames ...aiting to Josephine and Marie ...se.

...alf of these stately tablets, with inscriptions, had been wrenched ...of place by the Huns and lay on ...floor, exposing the tombs within. ...could see where the coffin had ...opened and imperfectly screwed ...ain.

...oble seat was the chateau. It ...troyed, every wall, stable, out... ...cottage, as utterly as rage arm... ...h modern explosives could de... Acres of jumbled brick showed ...massiveness of every building. ...nce one looks through a sweep... ...park to a lovely artificial lake. ...e finds fragments of statues of ...ned lion's heads, great vases broken ...d overturned. It fills one with bit... ...anger and contempt.

...rom refugees one hears how each ...essive batch of German officers ... occupied the chateau took off ... they could plunder from the ...less furnishings, tapestries, pic... ...and bric-a-brac. Layer by layer ...l chateau was denuded of every... ...of value, until at last the day ...hen lyddite and torch did their ...work. It is all the same in ...ntry, but none of us who have ...m will fail to remember as ...brutal outrage of all the vio... ...the tombs and the wreckage ...ateau of the family of Chau...

...anges, although a tottering ... still stands, each building, ...e poorest cottage, had been ...ely burned. Of Pocuilly noth... ...ns but some bricks and a ... at the crossroads outside ...lage. The ancient earth ram... ...ermand enclose only acres ... Attilly is non-existent. ...entin looks reasonably intact ...but that is no indication of ...will be when we get in. French ...through civilians say most of ...icles of value were removed ...nce from private houses and ...buildings alike. One wonders ...he final reckoning each individ... ...ief is to be punished and made ...gorge his swag.

...EW BOOKS

...E BRITISH CAMPAIGN IN ...RANCE AND FLANDERS," ...Arthur Conan Doyle. Published ...y Hodder & Stoughton, Toronto, ...2.50.

...s a master writer in England, Sir ...ur Conan Doyle has long and per... ...ntly established himself as one ...y to be heard, even aside from ...numerous successes in the world of ...on. As author, prior to this ...ance of more serious works, in... ...ing "The Great Boer War," he ...manding of more than ordinary ...tion in undertaking what so ...others have, with questionable ...ss, the literal experience of Eng... ...expeditionary force.

...e author has endeavored to com... ...an extraordinary degree of his... ...cal accuracy with interesting and ...ed incidents as they happened in ...fateful year of 1914 after the fourth ...August. As one who had always ...en a public interest in the military ...lopment of his country, and, at ...time, a zealous critic, Sir Arthur ...aimed at giving to those interested ...e result of nigh inconceivable time ...nd study among evidence of war ...events from sources as near first-hand as humanly possible. Therein he has succeeded as far as the reader is ...dge, to a rare extent.

"There is a welcome freeness to the material used which somewhat characterizes the work from many others by less notable writers and which enhances the whole as one proceeds. The author's firm belief that his present story of the unprecedented events of 1914 will, generally speaking, prove true in the test of time seems justifiably based; certainly convincingly so when compared with some free and easy narratives of war conditions which have flooded the market.

The publishers announce the second volume from Sir Arthur's pen, dealing with the affairs of 1915, with the hope of a third volume for the year just ended. The series is bound to add in attraction, and any reader of the initial volume will be doubly anxious to follow the author's account of the progress of the British troops through successive annual stages.

"IN THE WILDERNESS," by Robert Hichens. Published by William Briggs, Toronto. $1.35.

"In the Wilderness" is more than typically Hichens. Displaying therein his passionate love of exactness of detail, yes, of the most minute workings of the human mind, he has given to the English reading public a novel which is destined to take a premier place, not alone among his multifarious productions [illegible] given out with their successive works, but in arraignment with modern fiction in a ultra modern world. Written, as this has been, under certain difficulties, created [illegible] the author's desire to be of some practical service to his country during its vital test, it assumes more than ordinary strength in the eyes of a critic and combined with the splendidly virile characterizations which always appear with vividness in all of Hichens' stories, there is surely some title to its acclaim as a masterpiece.

As in many of his now well known works, Hichens takes the reader to far lands, in this case, to the Orient. His remarkably vivid imagery stands the supreme test in the sense of atmosphere which he gives of Greece, carrying one more to the fascination of early national ideals than to the intimate life of the day, but always with irresistible interest. It is there, amid the morally lethargic life of alien palaces, after English settings, that the author unfolds the destiny of Dion Leith, misunderstood and rejected by his wife, as involved in the worldly experience of Mrs. Clarke, and enthrals the reader with that unusual and clever delineation of character and life, as Hichens alone can portray. His acute power of imagination and penetrating insight of minds, logically human, reaches the zenith in this mastery of setting. By such "In the Wilderness" undeniably becomes ideally Hichens, lacking nothing in piquancy, gaining in attraction and literary richness.

WHY BRITAIN WENT TO WAR, by Sir Edward Parrott. Published by Thomas Nelson & Sons, Toronto.

How often has the man of ordinary affairs, often too busy to take time or trouble to search avenues of authoritative information, longed for a concise, accurate and interesting summary of the great cause which induced the British empire to throw in her lot with the smaller nations of Europe? This volume from the press of Messrs. Nelson & Sons answers this desire. In simple, terse, yet fully explanatory language, it gives a convincing picture of the war, not alone as far as it interests the British nation, but also gives to the reader a portrayal, with charcteristic definiteness, of successive events in the history of other nations involved, more particularly Germany and Serbia. While presumably written for those of more youthful years, the book is one which is more apt to have a noteworthy appeal to the average man.

HIS LAST LETTER.

A soldier boy's last letter (Lieutenant Eric L. Townsend, twenty years old), quoted by C. S. McClure in his forthcoming book, "Obstacles to Peace" (Thomas Allen, Toronto):

Sept. 8, 1916.

Dearest Mother and Father,—

You are reading this letter because I have gone under.

Of course I know you will be terribly cut up, and that it will be a long time before you get over it, but get over it you must. You must be imbued with the spirit of the navy and the army to "carry on." You will still have dear little Donald, who is safe at any rate for some while. If he should ever have to go on active service I somehow feel that his inimitable good luck will bring him through.

You must console yourselves with the thought that I am happy, whereas if I had lived—who knows?

But for this war I and all the others would have passed into oblivion like the countless myriads before us. We should have gone about our trifling business, eating, sleeping, drinking, hoping, marrying, giving in marriage, and finally dying with no more achieved than when we were born, with the world no different for our lives. Even the cattle in the field fare no worse than this. They, too, eat, drink, sleep, bring forth young, and die, leaving the world no different from what they found it.

But we shall live forever in the results of our efforts.

We shall live as those who by their sacrifice won the great war. Our spirits and our memories shall endure in the proud position Britain shall hold in the future. The measure of life is not its span, but the use made of it. I did not make much of my life before the war, but I think I have done so now.

Well, I have talked a lot of rot which must have given you great pain to read and which will not bring you much comfort. I had intended to try and say words of comfort, but that scarcely being possible, it has drifted into a sort of confession of faith.

To me has been given the easier task; to you is given the more difficult—that of living in sorrow. Be of good courage that at the end you may give a good account.

Kiss Donald for me.

Adieu, best of parents. Your loving son,

Eric.

MACLEAN'S MAGAZINE.

The May issue of Maclean's has a [illegible] variety of contributors, including, as they do, Sir Gilbert Parker, Stephen Leacock, Arthur Stringer, [illegible], Hopkins Moorhouse and many others. The feature story this month is that of a Canadian prisoner at Ruhleben. He covers eighteen months in a German prison camp and in a rare and interesting way. There are articles, too, of vital interest to the man of the day, such as review of reviews, the business outlook, etc. All told, the current issue is bound to prove entertaining to magazine readers.

THE STAGE

Sir Herbert Tree's "Colonel Newcome" fell short of its expected success in New York and it will end its brief run this week. Sir Herbert will then return to England. Friday he addressed the young women of Vassar.

George Broadhurst has found a new play in a Hungarian story by [illegible] Foeldes and under the title "Over the Phone" he will present it with Henry Kolker, W. J. Ferguson, Will Deming, and Miss Alma Belwin. It is about a European painter who comes to America to make portraits of rich women and falls in love with one of them.

"The Bird of Paradise" on its third [illegible]

[illegible]

...al, ... a dancer at the opening of Mr. Ziegfeld's Frolic in New York last week. "There is one tango bird who [illegible]," said Will Rogers, introducing him.

A romantic light opera called "Yesterday" is in course of composition by Glen MacDonough and Reginald De Koven, whose last previous collaboration was "The Algerian," in 1894.

There will be no successor to David Montgomery in Fred Stone's [illegible]. "Hereafter I shall work alone," says Mr. Stone. "If I can't do that I'll retire."

THE MOVIES

Pauline Frederick's next Famous Players-Paramount production, "Her Better Self," has been completed under the direction of Robert Vignola and is scheduled for release by Paramount on May 21. In the cast are Thomas Meighan, Alice Hollister, Maud Turner Gordon, Charles Wellesley, Frank De Vernon and Armand Cortez.

[illegible] a photo-drama of [illegible] presented by the [illegible] Features, Inc., opened at the [illegible] Theatre Tuesday night, for [illegible]

Besides the desert, some remarkable views of biblical places are shown. The picture will be released to state rights probably after its New York run.

Geraldine Farrar concluded her grand opera season at the Metropolitan Opera House last Saturday in "Thais," and will leave for the Lasky studios in Hollywood, Cal., where she will commence work on a new spectacular feature to be released on the Artcraft programme. This will be Miss Farrar's third summer spent at the Lasky studios in posing for motion pictures.

Fannie Ward, who was last seen on the screen in "The School for Husbands," will next be starred by the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Co. in "Unconquered," a dramatic story written by Beatrice C. De Mille and Leighton Osmun.

POETRY

THE RIVALS.

Down the west the twilight sun
[illegible]
April in her [illegible] gown
Like a goddess comes to town.
[illegible]
Debonnaire and debonair;
[illegible] for I've a word to say,
When my [illegible] sweetheart, May,
With her bonnet all askew,
Trimmed in ribbons, pink and blue,
From the summer [illegible]
Tosses kisses down to me,
Comes, and drags me by the hand
Down to dandelion land,
Down to pastures bright with wings,
Where the glittering dewdrop swings—
Dry your tears, then don't be hurt—
[illegible] you little flirt.

—Herbert Randall.

LAD, HAVE YOU PUT THE KHAKI ON?

Lad, have you put the khaki on?
War is hell and worse,
But ten hells is worse with the heel
Of War upon your neck.
And ten heavens would be a world
Of nations knit to one.
So will you seek it and not shirk it?
[illegible]
Lad, O lad,
[illegible] lad,
Will you put the khaki on?

—Cale Young Rice.

Symbolic

[illegible]

GROW A HORSE NOT A CRIPPLE

By Not Expecting Three-Year-Old Colts to Do as Much Work as a Mature Animal—Spavin, Cocked Ankles and Other Unsoundnesses Are Often Caused by Working Colts Too Soon.

While it is unquestionably wise to handle colts and teach them to go in harness or saddle, or both, while young, it is a great mistake to expect them to perform the labor of a horse until well matured. There is often too great haste in getting colts at regular work. The general idea is that a colt three years old should at least "earn its keep." This applies to both heavy and light horses. It is not unknown for a man to ask a two-year-old to "earn its board," but fortunately cases of this kind are rare. A three-year-old, or even a two-year-old, will, in many cases, do the work of an ordinary horse, but those who have noted such cases and followed the history of the animal, will have noted that he was "an old horse when he should have been in his prime."

When between two and three years of age, or even at an earlier period, a colt should be handled, and taught to go in harness, but on no account should he be asked to do regular work. A three-year-old is able to do a considerable amount of light work, if intelligently handled, without materially interfering with the prospects of his ultimate utility and value; but the trouble is there are many cases in which he is not "intelligently handled." Take a case of a pair of three-year-olds on a farm. If there be enough horse-force on the farm without depending upon the colts to do regular work of all kinds, and the owner or his son handles them, it is quite probable that no injury will be done; but if horse-force be scarce, and the colts are expected to do the work of a team, and especially if given into the hands of hired help, the results may be different. At three years of age the animal is still a youngster. His bone is not thoroughly formed, nor his muscles fully developed, and even a few days' hard and steady work may so interfere with their development as to do permanent harm.

DANGER OF WORKING IN SPRING

This probably applies more forcibly in the spring than at other seasons. The team, while probably having been trained to go in harness, have had little exercise during the winter, hence are not only undeveloped youngsters, but are unaccustomed to work. Spring seeding commences; a large amount of work is expected to be done in two or three weeks; the hired man goes to the field with his team; he knows that his employer expects him to do a "day's work," and he sets out to do it. And during the two or three weeks this pair of colts is expected to do the work of a matured team, and in many cases they succeed in doing so, but in too many cases it is at the expense of permanently enlarged joints, puffy fetlock joints, cocked ankles, puffy hocks, or other abnormalities.

In other cases there are apparently no evil results, the team remains sound and able to continue its work, which it may be called upon to perform, with more or less regularity, until the next winter, when several months of complete or comparative idleness will be enjoyed, after which, as four-year-olds, it will again be worked 7 or 8 months and still remain sound. Occurrences of this kind tend to verify the idea that a three-year-old should be expected to do a horse's work, but experience and observation teach us that colts that have been used in this way are practically "old horses" while still comparatively young. They do not wear so long as those that have reached maturity before being asked to perform the functions of a matured horse. Hence we claim that, where it can be avoided, three-year-olds should not be depended upon to do much work.

DON'T SPOIL YOUR DRIVER.

The same remarks apply to light classes, whether used for harness or saddle purposes. It requires a very careful man to do any considerable regular riding or driving with a three-year-old, without danger of permanent injury. A man may want a horse to do a little driving, and he can purchase a three-year-old for less than a five-year-old of the same class and quality; or possibly he has a three-year-old. He expects to have to drive only a few miles every day or every week, and he expects to have plenty of time to do it in, hence decides that a colt is quite able to do it without danger of injury; and probably he is if the driving should be only as expected; but so many unexpected things arise which necessitate longer drives and more limited time than was expected, and the colt simply has to go the distance in limited time. This occurring frequently, the colt becomes tired, his gait becomes awkward, he hits his hind or fore ankles, acquires the habit of stumbling, etc., and often becomes blemished or lame. If the roads be hard he is very liable to become permanently lame in the fore feet, cracked on pastern, etc. In fact it is not uncommon for a colt that has done much roading as a three-year-old to be of little value afterwards for any purpose. Hence we claim that he should not be depended upon for a roadster at that age. It is all right to have him as an extra, to do a little light driving, but under no conditions should he be driven a long distance in limited time.

It may be claimed that even though a colt that is worked or driven hard while young, will not remain serviceable to as great an age as under other conditions, that it is profitable to work them when young, as it is too expensive to keep idle horses. This argument may hold good in some cases, but we must consider that where a colt is allowed to work, he may reasonably be expected to remain serviceable for many years longer than the one that was worked too young, and that his service will be more satisfactory, and that while it may, at the same time, seem expensive to keep three-year-olds in comparative or complete idleness, it will pay in the end. Besides the monetary consideration, a man has the satisfaction of knowing that he has not been guilty of overworking or overdriving an undeveloped colt, and that he has given the animal a reasonable opportunity to perform the functions for which he was designed, with comfort to himself and satisfaction to his owner.

WHEN COLT CAN DO HORSE'S WORK.

The question may be asked, "At what age is the ordinary colt fit to perform a horse's work?" Some claim that a three-year-old is better able to work than a four-year-old, but, of course, this is wrong. It is claimed that the teeth of a three-year-old are better able to masticate the food than those of a four-year-old. This is also a mistake. A colt has a full mouth of molar teeth at four years of age, while between three and four years of age a temporary molar in each row (four all told) is being shed and replaced by a permanent one, and the sixth tooth in each row is appearing; all teeth are well up and in wear by time the animal is actually four years old. Hence a horse is much better prepared for hard work at four than at three years of age, but he is not fully developed until at least five years of age. The writer can call to mind a number of horses that were not asked to do hard or regular work until five, and in some cases until six years old, and when no accident occurred, these horses became remarkable for their serviceability at a ripe old age, but he cannot call to mind a single instance of a colt that was worked hard as a three-year-old, that had any such distinction. Hence, we plead for the colt. Give him a chance. Allow him to mature before asking him to perform the functions of a horse, then he will give long and satisfactory service. We ask horse owners to consider these matters from a humane as well as a monetary standpoint.—The Canadian Countryman.

GETTING THE MOST FROM FARM MANURE

Apply It With the Minimum of Loss and Labor—A Manure Spreader is Highly Desirable—By J. Hugh McKenney.

Stable manure is one of the big assets on the farm—in fact, the mainstay of crop production. It is an encouraging sign that the majority of farmers are coming to realize it. The old dictum that was prominent in the agricultural press, the farmers' institute meeting or the experimental station bulletin, a decade or so ago, warning the farmer against piling his manure under the eaves of the barn and allowing the fertility to leach down a slope into the nearest creek, is seldom mentioned. With the passing of graingrowing as a specialty and the advent of livestock as the principal factor of agricultural activity, the farmer has come to grapple with the situation from a scientific standpoint. Whereas, he formerly depleted the soil by marketing its fertility, he now aims to put back as much or more than he takes in the form of crops.

Anyone who has received a bill from the dealer in commercial fertilizers has a pretty good object lesson regarding the cash value of nitrogen, potash and phosphoric acid. When bringing home a load of cotton seed meal, linseed meal or other rich nitrogenous feeds, it is well to consider not alone their feeding value, but also their fertilizing value. After consumption, there will remain an average of 75 per cent. of the foregoing constituents to be utilized for feeding next season's crops. My experience leads me to believe that the safest way for the average farmer to buy fertilizers is by way of the feed bin. That means two profits for the one investment, which ought to make the transaction a highly satisfactory one.

How to get the greatest returns from the fertilizer produced on the farm is a live problem. Quite often the fact is overlooked that there are different types of soil requiring different treatment. For instance, it could hardly pay to put much farmyard manure on muck land. It is rich in nitrogen, phosphoric acid and organic matter, but is apt to be deficient in potash. Yet I have seen farmers applying all the way from ten to fifteen tons to the acre on just such lands. In such cases, all the benefit derived is from the potash contained in the manure. The result of an experiment conducted by the Indiana station showed that one application of 200 pounds of potash on muck soil gave an increase of eighty-nine bushels of corn to the acre, while an application of ten tons of barnyard manure to the acre increased the yield only fifty-one bushels during the same time. The potash then cost about five dollars and the ten tons of manure would be worth twenty dollars. This is a big waste of good fertilizing materials that would be of great value to sandy or clay soils.

In addition to the kind of soil, there are several other general principles that govern the use of farm manure. The most important of these are type of farming, rotation of crops, topography of land, time, method and rate of application, the amount of manure available for use and the total number of acres to be manured.

Regarding the quantity of manure that may profitably be applied to the land much depends upon the kind of farming followed. Truck growers and market gardeners, owing to the ability of their crops to use a large amount of available plant food and the comparatively heavy applications each year on the same ground. When well decomposed this also improves the water absorbing and retaining power of the soil as well as its bacterial and physical conditions. Sometimes when a dairy farm that is heavily stocked and a short rotation of crops is followed it becomes necessary to manure the land rather more heavily than would otherwise be desirable in order to utilize all the manure. On a general farm, not so well stocked, this could not be considered good practice.

Applying too much to the acre is a mistake and is bound to result in loss. I have seen fields lying next to the highway receive approximately twenty tons to the acre practically every year, while a meadow at the back end of the farm was left without any form of fertilizer for ten years. This "robbing Peter to pay Paul" policy gets a farmer nowhere, and if he keeps any tab at all on his operations, ordinary business acumen ought, in time, to lead him to abandon such a senseless show of vanity. Experiments at the Pennsylvania station clearly demonstrate that much of the value of such applications is lost. In a four-year rotation of corn, oats, wheat and grass, manure was applied at the rate of six, eight and ten tons to the acre for the corn and wheat crops, making the applications twelve, sixteen and twenty tons to the acre during the rotation. The average increase per ton of manure for twenty-five years has been $2.16 where twelve tons were applied, $1.66 where sixteen tons were applied, and $1.14 where twenty tons were applied during each four years.

The time that manure is applied to the land has a good deal to do with its effects on some crops. For instance, corn grown where manure was spread during the fall and winter will usually produce a larger yield than where the application was made just previous to planting. Also, meadows that have received a top-dressing of manure during the fall give a good increase, but if delayed until spring no beneficial results are likely to be observed.

Finally, the value of manure is influenced very largely by the method of application. If left lying over the field, unevenly distributed and in large lumps, it may be several years before it becomes decomposed and available as plant food. For proper fining and even distribution the manure spreader is almost indispensable. Not only that, but the supply of manure at hand will cover more land, and the application may be made more frequently.

Heroic Mine Sweepers' Daily War With Death

Quietly, but with unparalleled courage, England's mine sweeping flotilla is daily clearing her coasts of Germany's cruelest and most insidious offensive weapon. Since the early days of 1915 these mine sweepers have fished up from the sea thousands of tons of the highest explosives and kept the channels clear for a myriad of ships that the British people might be amply clothed and fed.

It will be divulging no naval secrets to describe some of the technical details of Germany's mine laying campaign. In the early months of the war the Huns adapted the submarine to the purposes of laying mines. They have rapidly developed their undersea craft until to-day they are capable of carrying as many as thirty-six mines, though the greater number carry twelve or fifteen.

These weapons are so constructed that they can be dropped in the shipping lanes to a depth of eighty or ninety feet, where an ingenious valve arrangement releases the mine from its thousand pound base and allows it to come within ten or twelve feet of the surface, though still anchored by a wire cable.

250 POUNDS OF EXPLOSIVES.

The newest German mines are egg shaped, about four feet high and 3 feet thick, with four horns so placed that contact with them causes an instant explosion of 250 pounds of the highest explosives. The horns are made of soft lead, each [illegible] a glass tube closely fitted within a horn so that a pressure of nine pounds breaks the glass, releasing a liquid which sets up an instant electrical connection with the detonator.

Experience has taught the British mine sweepers that the high tide currents swing the mines lower in the water. If the mine cable is set for ninety feet, allowing the mine to swing about ten feet under the surface, high tide currents sweep it over until it rests about twenty-two feet under the surface. Therefore mine sweeping is least dangerous at high tide or slack high tide. To cruise over a known mine field during low tide means almost certain destruction.

Some but men who have witnessed a mine explosion know its horrible effects. In some cases small drifters are blown up and shattered in such small pieces that no visible trace remains on the surface of the sea.

It was early in the morning when the correspondent went aboard a flagship of a mine sweeping fleet and sailed out of a well protected harbor into the most dangerous portion of the North Sea, preceded by a seaplane scout. A thick mist lay over the sea, making the work doubly dangerous, even if a mine were floating on the surface it could not be seen more than six cable lengths away.

TRAVEL AT LOW SPEED.

At a designated point the mine sweepers connected up in pairs with long, heavy cables, which they kept at a good depth beneath the surface by a clever arrangement of heavy weights so constructed as continually to bear down heavily on the cable. Under the most trying condition the mine sweepers kept the proper distance from each other, and proceeded to sweep up the course, steaming slowly at not more than four knots.

As the cable tautened under headway the captain and members of the crew adjusted their cork lifebelts, anxiously watching for signs of any obstacle. Within five minutes the skipper reported through the tube to the captain that he had picked up a mine. It was a needless formality, for the captain had already noted the signs and betrayed in every line of his face that he knew his vessels carried between them sudden death for himself and for his men and that upon his ability depended all our lives.

His signal for greater speed had hardly been sent to the opposite trawler when a shout from the deck called out all hands. Two hundred yards off there shot to the surface of the water a vile black nightmare monster, its black horns protruding menacingly. Heavy rifles were passed out to the marksmen, and the hardest part of the sweeping game commenced. Once a mine has been swept to the surface it must be destroyed or sunk.

RIFLE FIRE UNSUCCESSFUL.

The sharp barking of the guns cracked out through the mist. A little spray showing the bullet's course close to the mine and a series of dull clangs gave evidence of direct hits. Every man hoped one of the steel bullets would strike a horn and cause an explosion, which would finally remove the menace, but luck went against the gunners. They succeeded only in piercing the monster's heavy armor and allowing the water to enter. After perhaps a score of steel bullets had penetrated the mine it filled and sank beneath the surface, where it remained for a few minutes, and then sank to its last resting place on the bottom.

The trawlers proceeded on their course for twenty or thirty minutes, when another tautening of the cable indicated the presence of a mine. We were now in a field where the Germans had sown death with an extravagant hand. We knew we rode continually hand in hand with death. The members of the crew lined the rails with drawn faces, for they knew by experience that only a few seconds remained for escape in case we struck. The average light vessel sinks within one minute after being mined.

Again there leaped to the surface a horned destroyer, and again the marksmen's guns spat fire until it sank from view a half mile astern. Two companion trawlers whistled a warning that they had made a catch and dimly through the mist could be seen another black, horned object between them.

GIANT SEA GEYSER.

Only a few shots had been fired when the air beat upon our ears and the decks quivered. Then there was a mighty blast that almost stunned and blinded us. Between the following trawlers a great column of water rose steadily skyward, drawing the ships toward it. It seemed as if some [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] the captain's trawler had been engaged in this work for twenty months with little respite, putting ten or twelve hours every day after mines that they knew contained a sudden and frightful end.

In the course of the next few hours our fleet swept up and destroyed other mines with the same hardy, unrelenting courage, until their allotted course was safe for the passage of ships whose comings and goings must not for one hour be delayed if England is to fight successfully against an enemy who knows no rules of war, whose fiendish ingenuity knows no limits.

FROM THE AIR.

The declining sun [illegible] our little fleet back to harbor. The captain having finished writing a detailed report of the operations, glanced lovingly at his wife's picture on the wall of his little cabin and took up his pen to let her know he had come safely through another day of peril.

The following morning the correspondent had an opportunity to observe from the air [illegible] portion of the North Sea he [illegible] over on the previous day. In a powerful seaplane, the body of which had been constructed in America, manned by a pilot and observer, we rose from the harbor and circled high above the sea. We sighted soon a fleet of [illegible]

Looking down upon the entire area patrolled by vessels from one harbor gave one the impression that England was building a well nigh impregnable [illegible] to keep her whole gigantic coast line [illegible] of German implements of destruction and the organization does the work thoroughly.

After a few minutes flying one of our two motors broke down and we began a series of gyrations which at times [illegible] our lives. The captain was [illegible] that it became [illegible] impossible. The correspondent [illegible] behind the pilot and observer and watched them work their controls frantically.

SAVED AT ELEVENTH HOUR.

We shot downward toward some buildings. The pilot regained control just in the nick of time and cleared a high factory chimney. We circled again, then side slipped and skimmed over a row of two-storey houses. Then by a supreme effort of both pilot and observer they steered the machine toward the harbor. The machine dipped toward a pier, slashed off a flag staff and landed with a heavy jolt on the water.

Such incidents are not uncommon for flying men. By iron nerve and perfect composure they save themselves daily from sudden death. They take their part cheerfully in keeping England's coasts safe.—N. Y. Sun.

ISLANDS BUILT TO ORDER.

Description of the Easy-Going South Sea Style.

In the Bismarck Archipelago, now occupied by us, are two small islands that the Germans, with characteristic resourcefulness, built up for themselves in a sea where formerly no land was.

This, however, is not quite so difficult as it sounds. One must have a foundation, of course—a coral reef for preference. Given this, and also an unlimited supply of native labor, and island-building in those comparatively calm and tideless waters becomes almost as easily possible as house-building elsewhere.

The Solomon Islanders, for instance, are adepts at the art. When the population of any island in the group becomes too big for comfort, they get to work, and manufacture another, and the surplus families emigrate to it and settle down there.

The usual plan is to choose a coral reef, which must not be submerged more than three or four feet. A pile is first constructed, and [illegible] near the centre of the reef, where the water is shallowest. To this, coral, torn from the outer fringe of the reef, is brought and piled up pyramid-fashion to form the nucleus of the island. Lastly earth is carried in canoes from the nearest land and spread over the coral, cocoanut trees are planted and houses erected.

Shipwrecked British sailors once built for themselves an island of refuge after this fashion. In 1884 the Queensland labor-recruiting schooner Stanley was cast away and battered to pieces on the Indispensable Reef, which is completely submerged, and situated more than three hundred miles from the nearest inhabited island.

The plight of her crew seemed hopeless. But instead of giving way to despair, they set to work to manufacture an island on the line indicated above, and lived on it for several months, subsisting on clams and sea-fish dried in the sun, until they were finally found and rescued by a relief ship sent in search of them.

In Southwest Bay, Malekula, one of the New Hebrides group, is situated a tiny sugar-loaf shaped island, which was entirely rebuilt some years ago by order of our admiralty at the request of a native chief.

The original island was selected by the commander of one of our warships in those waters as a handy object for target practice. As a result it was practically blown to pieces. The Chief of Malekula, to whom it belonged, not unnaturally objected, and the captain of the man-of-war ordered to make good the damage occasioned by his guns.

This was done. But the chief was not satisfied. The reconstructed island, he complained, was neither so big nor so solid as the original one. "Oh, hang it all!" ejaculated the badgered commander. "What is your beastly island worth? I'll buy it from you."

"Ten sticks of tobacco," replied the chief promptly, and held out his hand. The tobacco was as promptly produced, and from that day to this the fragment of sea-girt coral-rock thus curiously acquired has been known as "Ten Stick Island."—London Answers.

◆◆◆

The Redbreasts.

[illegible]

UNSIGHTL[Y] PIMPLES
COVERED HIS FACE.
B. B. B. Cured Him.

All diseases and blemishes of the skin are caused by the blood being in an impure condition.

The best blood cleansing medicine on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters, a medicine that has been in use for over 40 years, so you do not experiment when you buy it.

Mr. Lenness D. Cooke, Indian Path, N.S., writes: "I am writing you a few lines to tell you what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. My face was covered with pimples. I tried different kinds of medicine, and all seemed to fail. I was one day in a friend's house, and there they advised me to use B. B. B. so I purchased two bottles, and before I had them taken I found I was getting better. I got two more, and when they were finished I was completely cured. I find it is a great blood purifier, and I recommend it to all."

B. B. B. is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Bradstreet's Trade Review.

Toronto—Returns made by travellers point to the possession of plenty of confidence by Ontario retailers with regard to a satisfactory summer and fall trade; spring goods are moving out more slowly than would be the case if weather conditions were normal. Intrinsic conditions have undergone little change during the last week, and collections have been reported to be good from all sections of the country. Western payments are also very good, although British Columbia is rather backward. Dry goods houses still report increase in the volume of business. Fall dry goods orders continue to be satisfactory. Leather markets are steady, with considerable enquiry for harness leather from the United States for war needs. The market for sole leather is relatively quiet. Hardware business is fair, with seasonable lines moving out fairly well. The metal markets have shown greater firmness. The coal situation has become stronger during the last week. Grocery markets are practically unchanged from last week.

Montreal—Unusually cold weather recently has affected the movement of spring merchandise, particularly retail dry goods trade and sorting orders. Labor conditions are looking better and affairs in women's and children's clothing lines are now on a more stable basis. Boot and shoe wholesalers report that travellers are sending in fair fall orders. Dry goods wholesalers report a satisfactory movement in fall goods. A fair movement in groceries is reported. In hardware lines there is a fair movement reported, with seasonable goods going out well.

Ottawa—Retail dry goods lines are reported to be quiet, but fall orders are being received by wholesalers in satisfactory volume. Collections are holding up well.

Hamilton—Retail trade is holding up remarkably well under the handicap which the absence of warm weather has imposed, and the outlook for autumn trade as shown by the volume of fall orders received by wholesalers both through their travellers and direct by mail. The general outlook is one of optimism. Wholesale dry goods business is quite up to normal, and the demand for house furnishings has been quite satisfactory. Collections are fair to good.

London—Retail trade is restricted by lack of seasonable weather, and prospects are generally good for a satisfactory business during the next few months. Fall orders are fairly good in dry goods lines, while shoe wholesalers find orders are averaging up well. Hardware business is fair in spring lines.

Winnipeg—While current business is not quite up to the mark, there is no lack of confidence in the future. There is a fair enquiry for harness leather, farm implements, etc. Country trade is generally slower. Staple dry goods and hardware is moving out fairly well, and commercial obligations are moderately well met.

Calgary—The acreage of wheat in the Prairie Provinces is likely to be smaller than last year, and the prospects are that the acreage planted in coarse grains will be larger. Retail trade has been fair.

Vancouver—General confidence on the part of business men. Trade has broadened during the last few weeks, and collections are beginning to show some improvement. Industries are busy and labor is well employed.

◆◆◆

Sun Drunkenness.

To become sun drunk is a condition into which any one may fall in the tropics. Exposure to the sun's rays will reduce a man to a condition almost exactly resembling drunkenness. He staggers about and is usually compelled to lie down and "sleep it off." Sun drunkenness is sometimes accompanied by nausea. Another curious fact in connection with life is the tropics, where the sun rises at the same time all the year round, as that if you do not get up before sunrise you do not feel well all day. You feel heavy, out of sorts and sickish.

◆◆◆

"Mary, I shall take one of the children to church with me this morning," announced Mrs. Fashionet. "Yes'm," replied the maid. "Which one do you think will go best with my new lavender gown?"—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

WAS WEAK and RUN DOWN
SUFFERED WITH "NERVES."

Many women become run down and worn out by their household cares and duties never ending, and sooner or later find themselves with shattered nerves and weak hearts.

When the heart becomes weak and the nerves unstrung it is impossible for a woman to look after her household or social duties.

On the first sign of any weakness of either the heart or nerves, take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and you will find that in a very short time you will become strong and well again.

Mrs. I. A. Williams, Tillsonburg, Ont., writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I suffered greatly with my nerves. I was so weak and run down, I could not stand the least excitement of any kind. I believe your Heart and Nerve Pills to be a valuable remedy for all sufferers from nervous trouble."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

WALKERTON TELESCOPE
Published Every Thursday
LORNE A. EEDY - PUBLISHER

Phone No. - 48
Phone No. (Night) 146

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

Strictly in Advance	$1.50
If not paid in Advance	$2.00
United States, paid in advance ([illegible] for Postage)	$2.00
Great Britain, paid in advance	$1.50
France, paid in advance ([illegible] for Postage)	$2.50

50c additional if not paid in advance

WALKERTON, MAY 24th, 1917

EDITORIAL COMMENT

Speed the spade, hustle the hoe, push the rake, garden the garden, says the Collingwood Bulletin.

+ + +

THE Kingston Whig learns from what it terms high authority that the Dominion Parliament will dissolve about May 29th, to be followed by a general election on or about July 2nd. The Whig's informant may or may not "speak from the book," but certain it is many signs point to an early appeal to the people by the Borden Government.

+ + +

PROVINCIAL Fire Marshall Heaton has issued a circular pointing out the excessive destruction of field crops by fire in Ontario during the past year, and makes three simple suggestions by which this simple loss can be cut down (1) by installing lightening rods' (2) by not putting in crops until they are fully cured. Heavy clover crops not receiving proper care resulted in many barns being burnt last year by spontaneous combustion, (3) by ventilating the barn so that gases caused by fermentation will be successfully carried off.

+ + +

A FARMER'S WIFE who sued her husband for alimony at the High Court Sessions here last week testified in Court that she did all the housework and sewing, milked the cows and separated the cream before her husband got up in the morning, and sometimes cleaned the stables, fed the cattle, harrowed, disced, drove the binder, held up one end of a crosscut saw, and helped load up the logs. For a reward she got cuffs and blows. This recalls the Stone Age. When the women start lawmaking, they will certainly fix that sort of a husband!

+ + +

MR. Stewart Lyon of the Toronto Globe, who has gone to the theatre of war as a representative of the Canadian press, is moved to sound a note of warning against the enlistment of men for overseas who have lost the vigor of youth. Certainly men who have got beyond the hockey, lacrosse and baseball age cannot do justice to themselves in trench fighting or in bayonet charges. "Some battalions," writes Mr. Lyon, "doing their first turn in the trenches may have in their ranks a certain number of men ranging up toward forty, but they do not last, and from the point of view of staying power they are not a good investment.

+ + +

PETER McArthur hits it about right, when he remarks: "It strikes me that the chief cause of the misunderstanding between city and country people is due to the fact that country people think that all city people are rich or at least highly paid, while city people think that all farmers are prosperous. Both are wrong. The percentage of prosperous farmers in the country is just about the same as the percentage of rich men in the cities. Both city and country are mostly made up of struggling people who are "just folks." If they understood each other better they would get together and right many wrongs from which both suffer."

+ + +

THE press almost without exception is hailing with satisfaction the announcement that conscription will be enforced in Canada. We are informed by those who should know that the situation is serious. Certainly we cannot continue to meet the need for constant reinforcements by the present system of volunteering and conscription seems the natural solution. The public mind has been prepared for conscription and so far as Ontario is concerned would have sanctioned it a year ago. The whole resources of the country should be put into this life and death struggle and we believe that Premier Borden will not have done his full duty until he has conscribed not only the young manhood of the country, but the surplus profits and surplus income of those who stay at home.

+ + +

MR. C. M. BOWMAN M. P. P. made a good suggestion at an executive meeting of the Bruce Preparedness League held here last Wednesday afternoon. He proposed that at the next meeting of the League to be held at Chesley in June that the farmers be asked to come with suggestions as to how the city folk can best co-operate with them to further production for the coming year, with the idea of getting started right before Fall. This year there was no attempt made by the Provincial Organization at Toronto to get in touch with the farmers, the men who know the situation, and as a result a tremendous amount of effort was absolutely wasted. The city men are at any rate earnest and patriotic, and if the farmers will come forward now with their problems, they will be able to get more intelligent help heretofore.

Bruce's Representative

N. C. McKay is Doing Good Work for the Farmers of This County—His Office a Clearing House of General Information.

Who is the busiest man in the County of Bruce? The editor of the Port Elgin Times says that Mr. N. C. McKay, the District Representative of the Agriculture Dept. at Walkerton is that man.

When The Times called on him the other day, he found a well-kept office, taking up the first floor of the public library, and at the same time Mr. McKay was dispensing advice to a farmer who had called regarding seed oats. We waited our turn, and when the farmer had departed told Mr. McKay we wanted some particulars regarding his work in the county.

Now, those who know Mr. McKay, also know that he is not a man to talk about himself very much and he seldom uses the personal pronoun "I." He is a man of few words, although a genial chap, and of a very sunny disposition. He has made good in this county, and he is appreciated by the farmers all over. We don't know whether it's the government's practice to change these representatives from one county to another, but we do know this, there will considerable good hard kicking coming from the big fellows from Bruce if any attempt is made to locate our representative elsewhere. All the government needs to do is to see that they pay this young man something worth while. He is making this county progress from an agricultural standpoint and that's what is wanted. Read this article closely, and notice the branches which are looked after by Mr. McKay.

We had the privilege of going over some of the reports made to the department, and therein is contained a brief history of the work of the Representative's office since it was opened up in 1912. We have tabulated some of the office work of the past four years which shows:

Callers at the office for information on seed, crops, live stock, drainage, poultry etc.

1913 650
1914 720
1915 690
1916 700

An average of almost 700 per year. Correspondence in connection with the subjects mentioned:

1913, 650 letters; 1914, 720 letters; 1915, 690 letters; 1916, 700 letters.

Persons coming in contact with the office through visits, meetings, demonstrations, calls, etc., were 8,000 in 1916.

Drainage work has always taken up a good deal of time and in the four years about 1000 acres have been surveyed for under drainage and plans and profiles prepared.

SCHOOL FAIRS—The first School Fair was held in 1913 when 228 pupils took part and 1500 people were in attendance at the Fair. The next year this was increased to three Fairs with 602 pupils and in 1916 six were held with 1500 pupils taking part and there was an attendance at the Fairs of 6390. The result of the Fairs are seen in fields of grain, potatoes, etc., that are found all over the country, the seed for which has been obtained originally from the pound that was distributed to the pupils in Rural Schools.

Poultry have also been improved by the introduction of a better strain of Bred-to-lay Barred Rocks.

HOME-GARDEN COMPETITION—After the pupils have left the schools and are at home for their first year, an attempt is being made to interest them in farming by means of the Home Garden Competitions. This year is being conducted for the first time.

4 WEEKS SHORT COURSES—During the months of January and February a 4 weeks Course in Agriculture is held at different points throughout the county. Boys 14 years of age and upwards are in attendance. 5 Courses have been held and about 200 boys have taken advantage of this. The first two were held at Walkerton in 1913 and 1914, one at Dobbinton in 1915, Teeswater, 1916, Underwood 1917. The training the boys receive during this four weeks is of a very practical nature and has always been appreciated by those in attendance. At the conclusion of the Short Courses, the boys organize into a "Junior Farmers Association" and hold meetings during the year, compete in competitions, etc. The winners in these various events receive a free Two Weeks Course at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph. In the grain crops, roots or potatoes, the competitors grow one acre, keeping accurate account of the cost of production and the winner is the one who can show the greatest profit. Feeding Hogs for profit is also another popular competition. Accurate weights are kept of the feed consumed and the hogs are weighed up at the end of 22 weeks.

Baby Beef Competition is also another contest considered by some of the boys. The animals winning out in this are shown at the Guelph Winter Fair, and Bruce County in 1916 was second place competing against all the other counties in Western Ontario. Besides the valuable information gathered by the boys from these competitions, the Course which they receive as a prize at Guelph is very valuable. In the four years the Contest has been running, nine boys have received a free Two Weeks Course at Guelph.

DOMESTIC SCIENCE COURSE FOR GIRLS. The girls on the farms are not neglected, for in 1916 a two weeks course in Domestic Science was held at Teeswater in conjunction with the Course for the boys and a similar one at Underwood in 1917. Through the co-operation of the Provincial Women's Institute, a demonstrator was secured and her services were much appreciated by those in attendance. Average attendance Teeswater 1916, 55, Underwood, 65.

SEED TESTING—A great deal of attention is devoted to the question of Seed Testing. Samples of clovers, grasses, grains, etc. are continually being received at the office. 25 to 75 farmers avail themselves of this opportunity each year and many of them would otherwise sow seed totally unfit for use, and by this means are shown what it contains and secure satisfactory seed. Information is also given to farmers regarding securing the newer varieties better adapted to the district. When O. A. C. No 72 Oats was first introduced, a number of farmers were induced to try this with the result that it is proving very popular and a great many of the Bruce County farmers are now growing it only. Alfalfa growing has also been given a good deal of attention and we have secured for a considerable number of farmers, a variety of home-grown seed from Haldimand County which has proven far superior to any other variety. Farmers having any seed to dispose of are also put in touch with parties securing the same.

FARMERS CLUBS — A number of Farmers Clubs were in operation when the office was opened, but a number of new ones have been organized. These Clubs are all visited from time to time and any subjects taken up that the farmers require information on, or an address is given on some subject such as fertilizers, sweet clover, live stock, feeding, etc.

LIVE STOCK—Bruce County contains a large number of small pure-bred Live Stock breeders. A list of these has been prepared and printed in the form of a Directory which contains the breeder's name, post office, kind of stock kept, the number of animals in his herd. The breeders in the south of the County are also organized into a "Stock Breeders Club" and a consignment auction sale was held under their auspices in 1916, and plans are under way for making this an annual event.

A Stock Judging Team from Bruce was in competition against the other counties in Western Ontario at the last two Winter Fairs. These boys were selected from those who have attended the Short Courses during the winter. The first year one of the boys won first over all the Counties in Dairy cattle and last year the Team stood 10th in 22 counties with one of the boys third in horses.

Very little new work will be undertaken in 1917, excepting the Home Garden Contest. All the other lines will be continued. The office has been made a Farm Labor Bureau. An Auto trip to some of the best Stock Farms in the southern part of the Province is also being arranged for.

It will be readily seen that Mr. MacKay is a very busy man, and we wonder how he keeps record of so much detail, but he has an able assistant at his office, in the person of Miss LaFrance who takes equal pride and interest in being connected with one of the biggest games in the country—that of progressive agriculture.

County Representative

NORMAN C. McKAY

Petition Circulated

A petition has been circulated around Kincardine for the release of John Wylie, who was committed to the County Gaol recently for five months for a violation of the Ontario Temperance Act. He was fined $200 for having liquor in his room in the Commercial hotel at Ripley. He refused to pay the fine and was sent to gaol.

Hydro For Waterworks

By the end of this week it is expected that all the electrical appliances for driving the waterworks pumps from the hydro power will be here and installed. The new and cheaper power has not come too soon. There is no pea coal in stock and the ordinary nut coal is being used to pump in the morning and fuel oil at 17 cents a gallon is being used for the oil engine in the afternoon.—Chesley Enterprise.

Guaranteed To Satisfy

The "Sunshine" Furnace gives healthful, warm air heat—and plenty of it. When installed, according to plans furnished by our heating engineers, it is guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction. Write for free illustrated booklet.

McClary's SUNSHINE FURNACE

LONDON TORONTO MONTREAL WINNIPEG VANCOUVER ST. JOHN, N.B. HAMILTON CALGARY SASKATOON EDMONTON

For Sale by Patterson Bros.

LAWN MOWERS & HAMMOCKS

Get your Lawn Mower now before the price advances. We have a complete line which range in price from $5.00 to $10.00.

Finest assortment of Hammocks ranging from $2.00 up.

Watch this space for our big Graniteware Sale coming soon.

PATTERSON BROS.
Hardware Stoves Graniteware

CANADIAN PACIFIC

Great Lakes Steamship Service
via Owen Sound
STEAMSHIP "MANITOBA" leaves Owen Sound at midnight each THURSDAY (connecting train leaves Toronto 5.25 p. m.) for Sault Ste Marie, Port Arthur and Fort William.
SERVICE via PORT McNICOLL COMMENCES JUNE 2.

Plan Your Vacation Trip Now
POINT AU BARIL
MUSKOKA LAKES
KAWARTHA LAKES
LAKE MAZINAW
FRENCH and PICKEREL RIVERS
RIDEAU LAKES
SEVERN RIVER
are delightful resorts and easily reached via C. P. R.

For WINNIPEG and VANCOUVER
Leave Toronto 6.40 P. M. Daily via 'The Pioneer Route'

Particulars from Canadian Pacific Ticket Agents or W. B. HOWARD, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, Ontario.

WRIGLEY'S

Now THREE Flavours

Get a package of the new "JUICY FRUIT"—See what a joyous, lasting flavour has been crowded in to give you a great, BIG 5 cent package of refreshment!

Private Seal—he guards the gum!
MADE IN CANADA
Sealed Tight—Kept Right!
WRIGLEY'S SPEARMINT THE PERFECT GUM MINT LEAF FLAVOR
WRIGLEY'S JUICY FRUIT CHEWING GUM THE FLAVOUR LASTS
WRIGLEY'S DOUBLEMINT CHEWING GUM PEPPERMINT

— THE FLAVOUR LASTS —
Chew it after every meal!

HOMESEEKERS' EXCURSIONS
LOW RETURN FARES TO WESTERN CANADA
ONCE A WEEK
Convenient Service. Modern Electric Lighted Equipment
Standard and Tourist Sleeping Cars and Colonist Coaches
For Tickets, Reservations, Literature and Information, apply to W. E. ATTWOOD, INSURANCE, WALKERTON.
Or write R. L. Fairbairn, G.P.A., 68 King St. E., Toronto.
CANADIAN NORTHERN RAILWAY

THE CANADIAN BANK OF COMMERCE

SIR EDMUND WALKER, C.V.O., LL.D., D.C.L., President
JOHN AIRD, General Manager
H. V. F. JONES, Ass't General Manager

CAPITAL, $15,000,000 RESERVE FUND, $13,500,000

FARMERS' BUSINESS

The Canadian Bank of Commerce extends to Farmers every facility for the transaction of their banking business, including the discount and collection of sales notes. Blank sales notes are supplied free of charge on application.

H. M. LAY, Manager Walkerton Branch.

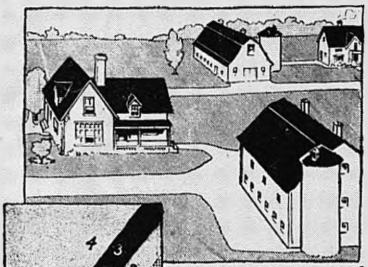
FIELD SEEDS

Our supply of Field Corn has just arrived. We have different varieties and the seed is excellent.

We also have a good supply of Turnip and Mangle Seed.

Don't forget we are selling Paint at 65c per quart.

S. W. Vogan



A BRANTFORD SLATE. 1—Fibre Base. 2—First coating of Asphaltum. 3—Second coating of Asphaltum. 4—Coating of crushed slate.

Yesterday and To-day

Wooden shingles of twenty or thirty years ago were of splendid quality, and answered the purpose very well. There was nothing better at that time. In fact no other roofing material was on the market. Yet who would think of putting on shingles to-day? When the deterioration of wooden shingles became noticeable, efforts were made to invent a roofing that would not only be an economical and permanent substitute for wooden shingles, but one that would outlast them in service.

Brantford Roofing was the result. It has "made good." The secret of its success is this: First, the base is of pure, long-fibred felt which is thoroughly saturated with asphalt or mineral pitch. The asphalt and crystal roll roofings are then thickly coated with crushed rock particles, which adhere tightly to that base, and the whole forms a permanent fireproof, water-tight roof.

Brantford Asphalt and Rubber Roofing are made in three different weights. Crystal is made in heavy weight only, and in red or green natural colors. All three grades are pliable and well suited to either flat or steep roofs.

Brantford Roofing

comes in rolls with protected ends. The layers do not stick together and the roofing is easily laid. It requires no painting or tarring when put on. It does not crack with the cold nor melt with the summer's heat. It does not curl, split, rust or blow off. It gives permanent weather and fire protection at a reasonably low initial cost.

May we send you our roofing book and samples? They will show you the real value of these roofing materials.

Brantford Roofing Company, Limited
Brantford, Canada

For Sale by S. W. Vogan

DENT

W. S. HALLADAY, L.
Dentist, Successor to Modern methods employ tal operations. Special crown, bridge and inlay wo doors east of post office. Vi gill 1st and 3rd Thursday aftern
each month.

C.L. GRANT, D.D.S.
Graduate of Royal Coll of Dental Surgeons
Ontario.
Dr. Lount's old stand.
Wisser Block - Wal

MEDICAL

DR. BROWN
Diseases of the Eye, Ear,
Throat, Neustadt, Ont. Will Queen's Hotel, Walkerton, 1 in each month from 1 to

W. A. HALL, B.A., M.D., C
Honor Graduate in Arts and cine at Queen's University. Mem
the College of Physicians and
ons. Office and residence on Colborne and Cayley Street

INSURAN
FIRE, LIFE,
ACCIDENT,
AUTOMOBIL
GUARANTE
MONEY to LO
REAL ESTA
Town and Farm Property
See my list before making a pu
OCEAN and RAI
TICKETS TO ANY PART
THE WORLD.
I represent the Canadian Nor Railway and all ocean ste companies — English, Americ
Italian.
ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LIC
T. E. ATTWOO
GENERAL AGENT
Walkerton - Ont

INSURANC
REAL ESTA
Fire, Life, Acciden
Health, Plate Gl and Guarantee Ins
ance in the best Companies.
Real Estate—Sev desirable residen properties for sale.
Money to Loan, Conveyanc and General Agency. Splen
Mortgage Loan Company De bentures for investment yielding good interest.
GEO. D. McKAY
Office Over Bell Telephone Agenc
PHONE NO. - 17

GRAND TRUNK RAIL SYST
Homeseekers' Excursions
Round trip tickets to points in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta via North Bay, Cochrane and Transcontinental Route, or via Chicago, St. Paul or Duluth, on sale each Tuesday until October 30th inclusive, at low fares.
Through Tourist Sleeping Cars to WINNIPEG on above dates, leaving Toronto 10.45 P. M., no change of cars, via Transcontinental Route.
Return Limit, Two Months, Exclusive of date of sale. Final return limit on all tickets, December 31st. Berth reservations and full particulars at all Grand Trunk Ticket Offices or write C. E. HORNING, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, Ontario.

Spring Styles

AS SHOWN IN OUR Superior Tailored Clothing are covered by one brief sentence "The and cheapest to be had in town."

We'd like to measure you for your spring suit or overcoat.

Hats, Caps, Ties, Shirts, Sweater Coats, all furnishings at Slaughter prices.

WOODMAN & CO.
Next to Vogan's Hardware

JUNE BRIDES

Will find the kind of Wedding Invitations and Announcements they are looking for in the Telescope Sample Book. New and up-to-date styles printed from new types.

.. THE ..
TELESCOPE

CENTRAL Business College.
STRATFORD, ONT.

Ontario's Best Business College

Students may enter our classes at any time. Commence your course now and be qualified for a position by midsummer. During July and August of last year we received calls for over 200 office assistants we could not supply. Our graduates are in demand. Write at once for our free catalogue.

D. A. McLACHLAN
PRINCIPAL

PATENTS
PROMPTLY SECURED

We solicit the business of Manufacturers, Engineers and others who realize the advisability of having their Patent business transacted by Experts. Preliminary advice free. Charges moderate. Our Inventor's Adviser sent upon request. Marion & Marion, New York Life Bldg, Montreal; and Washington, D.C., U.S.A.

Office Stationery

For nice Stationery printed from new type at moderate prices. Try the

TELESCOPE

Willys-Overland Motor Cars

Where Right Made Might

Light Four
$975
Subject to change without notice

Overland

Overland success is so eclipsing that one might take it as a matter of course.

But make it have a personal application to you, —because the cost of any car is too much money to be carelessly spent.

There need be no confusion in selecting the sound value at the same price—make comparisons and see if Willys-Overland does not spell the answer with mathematical correctness.

Do not miss the significance of the overwhelming production that makes it possible for us to give better cars at lower prices.

More than 400,000 owners have been guided to Willys-Overland by their desire for beauty, comfort and luxury in addition to utility.

Due to its gigantic facilities the Willys-Overland industry effects millions in economies; has never found it necessary to skimp or rob a car of value in order to compete; but is able to give surplus value throughout the entire car for far less money.

Might may not make right, but right has made Overland might.

The Overland Light Four from the standpoint of mechanical excellence, easy riding comfort, roominess and beauty is incomparably a better car than can be had in any other make at anything like so low a price.

Come in and see the Willys-Overland Motor Cars—the Light Four and the most comprehensive line of cars ever built by any one producer.

J. E. McGregor, Phone 142
Durham Street, Walkerton

Willys-Overland, Limited
Head Office and Works, Toronto, Ontario

THE CHIEF CHARM OF LOVELY WOMAN

Soft, Clear, Smooth Skin Comes With The Use Of "FRUIT-A-TIVES".

NORAH WATSON
68 Drayton Ave., Toronto.
Nov. 10th, 1915.

A beautiful complexion is a handsome woman's chief glory and the envy of her less fortunate rivals. Yet a soft, clear skin—glowing with health—is only the natural result of pure Blood.

"I was troubled for a considerable time with a very unpleasant, disfiguring Rash, which covered my face and for which I used applications and remedies without relief. After using "Fruit-a-tives" for one week, the rash is completely gone. I am deeply thankful for the relief and in the future, I will not be without "Fruit-a-tives".

NORAH WATSON.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At dealers or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

WOMEN WAR WORKERS

Young women can render the country real service by preparing to take positions in Business Offices and Banks and relieve young men for war service.

Fifty thousand men will be called up very soon under the Militia Act for home defence. Who will take their places in the Business Offices and Banks? Young women should prepare now at the

NORTHERN Business College
OWEN SOUND, ONTARIO

Spring Term Opens April 10th. Circular free.

C. A. FLEMING, F. C. A., Principal

HOMESEEKERS' EXCURSIONS

MAY 8th TO OCTOBER 30th
Every TUESDAY
"ALL RAIL" - also by
THURSDAY'S STEAMER
"Great Lakes Routes"
(Season Navigation)

Your Future is in the West

The fertile prairies have put Western Canada on the map. There are still thousands of acres waiting for the man who wants a home and prosperity. Take advantage of Low Rates and travel via

Canadian Pacific

W. B. Howard, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, Ont.

Walkerton's Y. M. C. A. Canvass

Team: Henry Pletsch, Rev J W Sanderson and George Carbert:—Henry Pletsch $3, Mrs. Henry Pletsch 1, Melville Pletsch 50c, Elgin Pletsch 50c, Mrs Atkey 50c, Jas Connors 2, P J Hynes 1, Albert Marshall 50c, Mrs Wm Anderson 2, C W Cryderman 1, Jas White 5, Robt McGregor 1, Wm Bolden 1, Geo Kuller 50c, Frank Bolden 1, Geo Carbert 5, Thos McIntee 1, A Beninger 50c, Mrs A Swanston 25c, Mrs Chris Morrison 1, Mrs F C James 50c, A friend 10, John Fraser 1, Archie Fraser 1, Mrs H Dietz 50c, Mrs N Allard 50c, F W Fruin 35c, Hy Williams 1, Mrs David Dirch 50c, H Watts 50c, J W Sanderson 5, Miss Hyslop 1, Mrs J R Jones 1, Mrs Wilfred Ritchie 1, Mrs J Gowanlock 50c, Miss Baird 30c, Mrs H Taylor 10c, Mrs W Pryne 25c, Peter Vanhorne 25c; total $43.80

Team: David Robertson, H. E. Truax and A P Johnston—Jos Batte 50c, Thos Dixon $10, Arthur Pengelly 2, Rob Wilson 2, Rob Harrison 1, Mrs Bergmann 50c, Mrs John Wilhelm 1, Franz Michael 1, Mrs. D H. Martyn 1, Mrs Geo Martyn 1, Mrs. R E Truax 2, Miss E Truax 2, R Truax & Son 10, R W Lee 1, Mrs H E Truax 2, Mrs Dan Miller 1, Mrs W G Searle 1, Mrs R Schuett 2, Mrs J H Apple 2, Mrs. Thos

Y. M. C. A. Gramaphone in Front Line Trench

Thompson 1, Rev D McLennan 2, Mrs W C Winters 2, Mrs F Schnurr 50c, Mrs W Paterson 1, Mrs Geo Inglis 1, A P Johnston 5, Lydia Weiler 1, Mrs Martin Weiler 1, Thos Hyslop 75c, Mrs John Pletsch 1, Mrs John McLean 2, Mrs M Crumpton 2, Mrs Albert Bell 2, Mrs Jas Gill 50c, Mrs Andrew McLean 2, Martin Dennon 25c, Mrs Henning 25c, Mrs Heepel 50c, John Pletsch 3, David Robertson 25, Frank Rennie 10, Henry Irwin 5; total $110.75.

Team: John McCool, E Walford, W M Shaw, and A E McNab—Dr R E Clapp $20, John McCool 10, Annie Crawford 2, Rev F Cummings 1, Rev F Haller 1, Rev T Wilson 10, Sam Earwaker 1, Mrs W M Shaw 3, R T Porter 1, Sam Farrer 2, Mrs Robt McPhail 1, Wm George 50c, Mrs. J J Schnurr 1, Mrs Geo Giesler 1, A E McNab 3, Mrs A E McNab 1, Mrs Halladay 1, Mrs N C Mackay 50c, Miss J Stephen 5, Mrs W F Taylor 30c, Mrs D Blair 1, Mrs F Oberle 1, Elias Walford 2, Chas Glebe 1, Ed McEntee 1, Mrs Alex Haas 50c, Mrs H Heffernan 50c, Henry Spitzig 1, A Tschirhardt 50c, Mrs Geo Lambertus 55c, Mrs F Walker 25c, Mrs David Robertson 5, Marion Robertson 5, Rose Leizque 1, Canada Spool & Bobbin Co Ltd 10, Anonymous 1, Miss Mary Godfrey 2, Clarice Vogan 2, J A McKinnon 1, Tom Wolfe 1, John Lambertus 1, Mrs Ball 50c, Mrs Alexander 2, Isaac Bueblow 50c, Thos Cunningham 1, Mrs Chas Symon 1.25, Mrs John Bilger 1, Mrs E Watts 50c, G Royce 50c, Mrs Jas Hyslop 50c, Adam Graff 1, Mrs J K Ross 1, Mary Ross 50c, G Beninger 25c, Hector McDonald 1, Alex Haas 1; total $116.10

A Y. M. C. A. Refreshment Hut in England

Team: H M Lay, N C McKay and D McKechnie—Ed Pengelly $1, Anonymous 1, Miss Nesbitt 1, Mrs McConnell 1, Miss Ernewein 1, Mrs Howie 1, Jas Warren 2, Agnes Warren 2, Winnifrid Warren 1, Rev Mr Grenzenbach 1, Chas Eckenswiller 50c, Mrs Brindley 1, The Misses Ross 2.50, Geo S Lettner 2, C Patrick 5, Mrs T Etsell 50c, Mrs Bradley 25c, H A Havill 8, Mary L Havill 2, M G Dippel 5, Mrs J E Burrows 5, Mrs James Flett 2, Mrs J T Nichols 25c, H M Lay 5, Mrs F Eidt 1, H Willoughby 10, Miss W Thompson 1, N Robertson 10, High School Student 9.85, Miss B Collins 2, Dorothy Frost 1, Dr A W Hall 5, A E Springstead 2, W H McFarlane 10, Jas Crawford 1, H M Norrish 1, J J Ernewein 50c, And Oberle 2, Mrs Jas Chisholm 1, Mrs Jas Brisban 50c, A Hoover 1, Rev R Perdue 1, Jas Tolton 2, Pat Ritchie 1, Miss J A Rowand 1, Master John Lay 1, Miss Jean Lay 1, Miss Rosabell Lay 1, Miss Halladay 1, Miss A Thompson 1, Miss Cummer 1, N C MacKay 3: total $121 85.

Team: Norman Hiscox and Thomas Pye—Mrs W S McGregor $5, Miss M C McGregor 5, Valentine Fischer 2, Mrs Claude Cooper 1, Mrs E Mortimer 50c, George H Walker 3, Mrs M Stalker 2, Dr M Stalker 2, Mrs C F Harris 1, Mrs Brillinger 25c, J Holm 1, Wm Trotter 2, Wig H McKay 3, Geo D McKay 10, Mrs Donald Sinclair 2, John Allen 1, Robt Goode 5, Robt Richardson 2, Mrs L C Benton 1, Miss Daisy Benton 50c, Albert Dirch 1, Miss C Gowanlock 25c; total $52 50

Team: Rev Thos Wilson, Rev R Perdue and J M White—Sam Fisk $3, Rev Mr Cousens 5, Jos Morgan 10, Mrs H Wettlaufer 50c, Mrs C Nutting 1, John Rowland 25, Miss I McDonald 25c, Mrs John Leggett 1, Mrs Wm Wells 1, John Tolton 2, Mrs M Graham 1, Dr H H Sinclair 5, Pete and Alex McCannel 1, Jos M White 3, Rev Mr Rock 1, John Henderson 5, N Crawford 1, Chief Ferguson 1, John Vogt 3, Liesemer & Kalbfleisch 3, Herb Weiler 1, Miss Ella Beattie 3, Tillie Dietsche 50c, Winnie Paterson 50c, Violet Laithwaite 50c, Frances Seiler 50c, Clarissa Long 50c, Florence Riley 50c, Judge A M Greig 5, D McKechnie 5, W A Clark 1, Miss M Rogerson 1, Kolpin & Ernst 5, Miss R Greenhow 1, Mrs Sam Paull 50c, Albert Fennell 1, Isaac Glintz 1, Robert Harrison 1, Mrs Jack Ferguson 50c, Miss Ethel May 1, Talbot Ross 1, Norm Hiscox 3, Dr A G Fortune 5, Mrs H K Watts 50c, Susie Bauman 1, Mrs H W Leslie 2, Mrs A Bonnyman 1, Mrs Montag 1, Frank Smith 2, Chris Ernst 1, J G Hibbert 2, Richard Baker 50c, Mrs Dr Kells 1, Dr A Farewell 50c, Duncan McKerracher 30, Mrs D McKerracher 5, Mrs John McGregor 1, George Lobsinger 50c; total $160.75.

TEAMS—H Pletsch, Rev J W Sanderson and George Carbert, $43.80; D Robertson, R E Truax and A P Johnston, $110.75; A E McNab, Wm Shaw, E Walford and J McCool, $116 10; H M Lay, N C McKay and D McKechnie, $121.85; Rev T Wilson, Rev R Perdue and J M White $160 75; Norman Hiscox and Thos Pye, $52.50; John McKinnon and Alex George, $61 40; R Russell, A O'Neill, A Tolton and R Richardson $27.50; G S Schwindt, J H Wiles, J H Hunter and T Cunningham. $50 50 H G Hunter and W H McBurney, $130.87; L A Eedy, J Whitehead and R L Gibson, $131.10. Separate Donations—George Hossfeldt of Brant Tp $3.00; Donation by the Ladies of the Soldiers' Aid Society at Walkerton, $25.00; Miss Elsie Kleist, 50c, Miss Luella Misch 50c, Miss Matilda St Marie 50c, W S Clendenning $5, total $1051.62.

Team:—John McKinnon and Alex. George—Fred W Lippert $1, J W Freiburger 1, Mrs Oliver McConnell 5, George F Bruder 1.50, Mrs I Glintz 50c, Albert J Misch 1, John Frame 1, Miss McKinnon 1, Mrs Lumley 1, Miss Anonymous 50c, Mary E Clendenning 3, Mrs Garner 1, Mrs Miller 50c, Miss M Siebahn 50c, Mrs J Lettner 25c, Mrs James Young 1, John Potter 1, Mrs Etsell 25c, Mrs A Dean 1, Mrs John Smith 25c, Mrs R Long 1, Mrs John Giesler 50c, J Abel 50c, A G Hampson 50c, John Neilly 2, Mrs F Spelman 50c, Wm Webber 1, Alex Gordon 50c, Frank Weiler 25c, Miss Agnes Fiske 1, Miss Mary Fiske 1, George Polley 1, Mrs Wm Craig 50c, Jos Freeman 50c, John Fisk 50c, John McKinnon 2, Mrs T Kenny 50c, John McGill 2, Mrs J Huck 50c, Mrs Jos Jarvis 55c, Miss O MacKay 1, Mrs and Miss Grainger 5, Mrs John Kreuger 1, Henry Buehlow 1, Mrs E J Skelton 4, Mrs Geo Gould 10c, Mrs Goodfellow 50c, Fred Schultz 25c, John Potter sr 1, Mrs Robt Parker 1, Mrs Fred Bannister 1, Jos Weiler 50c, E Dietsche 1, Mrs Wissler 1, R Weiss 1, Louis Yaeck 1, Henry Kroetsch 50c, James McKinnon 1, E P Wiest 1, Sam Siderson 1, Miss Garner 50c--Total $61 40.

Team:—Robert Russell, Andrew O'Neill, Arch. Tolton and Robt. Richardson—Miss Wallace 50c, Mrs Burrell 50c, Mrs Liddle 50c. Mrs T Singer 50c, Mrs Siegfried 50c, N Schefter $1, Mrs W Fairservice 50c, Henry Oppertman 1, Robert Russell 2, Mrs Robt Russell 1, Mrs Ray Vogan 1, Roberta Vogan 1, Joseph Batte 1, Mrs John Anstedt 25c, H Obrecht 25c, J Obrecht 25c, Mrs H McDougall 1, Arch Campbell 1, Jas Reaburn 50c, Alex Lewis 1, Andrew O'Neill 2, Mrs M Connors 50c, Wm Kneopfler 25c, Miss Rolston 2, Jos H Allen 1, Mrs D Kramp 50c, W Gillen 1, Miss Rueis 1, Wm Yates 1, Mrs H Giesler 50c, Arch Tolton 2, Eleanor Barbour 25c.—Total 27.50.

Team:—G S Schwindt, J H. Whiles, J H Hunter and T. Cunningham—Jas. Clancy $5, Martin Taggart 1, James Spalding 50c, Mrs. J Hilker 25c, Mrs. N P Schmidt 50c, Frank Letchford 1, R K Sutton 2, Mrs. Joseph Wallace 1, Mrs Robert Sillers 2, Mrs A Becchie 1, Mrs Geo Faust 50c, M Schlestel 50c, Jerome Illig 1, Andrew Hesch 25c, C M Gibson 1, E Schefter 1, Geo O'Neill 25c, C J Siegfried 50c, A Wilhelm 25c, J Sittle 25c, E Connell 50c, Geo Eckel 2, Alfred Schaefter 25c, F Frank 50c, T Tschirhart 50c, D Monk 50c, J Dentinger 25c, E T Gibson 1, Jno Kempel 50c, H Jerome 1, Gertrude Eckel 2, R V Baker 2, S Hernott 25c, T Wagner 25c, B Reich 50c, Rev Mr Mozig 50c, J H Wiles 2, G S Schwindt 2, Anthony Siegfried 25c, Minnie Sickle 25c, Louisa Misch 25c, Nellie Blue 25c, A Coates 1, Rotha Schwindt 1, Mrs Jos Yaeck 50c, Mrs. Albert Wilhelm 25c, Mrs Jno Weiler 1, George Yaeck 50c, S F Ellinghausen 50c, James Heffernan 1, Mrs G Saunders 25c, Mrs D H Taggart 1, Mrs Ed Kelly 1, Mrs John Mawhinney 1, Miss Johnston 2, James H Hunter 2, Annie Misch 25c.—Total $50 50.

Team:—L A Eedy, James Whitehead and Robert L Gibson—Robert Irwin $5, Mrs Kleupp 2, Jos C Bauman 3, Mrs A E Duncan 1, Miss Vera Duncan 1, Miss Sara Roether 1, A Hehn 1, J H Appel 2, E H Sheffield 1.50, Miss Stella Blough 75c, Robt L Gibson 3, L A Eedy 10, S W Vogan 15, Eli Myles 5, L H McNamara 1, Alex McCarter 3, P H Bremner 2, James Whitehead 10, F J Beninger 2, W B Halladay 5, Mrs Stead 1, Miss Jennie Stead 5, Miss Maud Stead 1, Miss Rose LaFrance 50c, R E Henghan 1, Fred Brisbin 1, Smith & McConnell 5, Lee Sing 35c, Miss Montgomery 1, Cunlo Bros 1, Andrew Cunlo 1, Con Reichenbach 1, C B Robinson 1, Walter Northgreaves 1, Miss C Jarvis 50c, Miss Schnurr 50c, Miss Iva Taggart 50, Miss Jennie Hyslop 50c, J M Burrows 10, C G. Hugill 50c, Mr Matson 1, W J Morgan 1, H Wilton 1, A Friend 5, W G Carabine 50c, Mrs Cooling 2, Miss Cooling 50c, Miss Waechter 2, Miss Kerry 50c, John O'Malley 1, T E Attwood 1, L C Benton 5, J J Schumacher 2, C. Petteplace 1.—Total $131.10.

Team:—H. G. Hunter and W. H. McBurney—Thos Pye 1, A Benninger 1, Miss C L Grant 1, A Brown 1, Miss K Beattie 50c, Miss Angeline Obrecht 25c, Harvey Damm 50c, R M McCrum & Co 3, W H McBurney 2, C A Fox & Son 2, J C Busby 1, John Erdman 2, P A Lambertus 1, Miss C Mosack 50c, John Bickel 1, H E Batz 50c. Miss M R McIntee 1, M J Ramsey 5, Mr Diebel 50c, W D Screaton 1, W R Patterson 1, Patterson Bros 1, A P Sieveright 10, Mrs W B Thompson 1, W G Searle 3, A Collins 5, Chas Petteplace jr 1, H A Eamer 1, Miss Ruth Warren 1, H Hunstadtler 1, Mrs A McCartney 1, E H Leeson 50c, Miss Shaw 1, J Bruder 1, Jacob Loos 1, F J Fraser 3, H J Bean 2, R H Brooke 1, Miss Gladys Rife 50c, Miss Pearl Rife 25c, W J Henning 1, Miss I Liddle 50c, R Weber 10c, J T Lamb 1, A E Sherrington 50c, Tory Gibson 2, Miss Sybilla Koller 50c, Miss Tillie Ernest 25c, T J Jenkins 1, M McConnel 1, H C Chisholm 50c, G T Rourke 2, J Bradley 50c, Miss Lottie Grant 50c, Miss Lillian Shelton 50c, Herbert Weiler 25c, Stephan Bros 10, Mrs Irwin 50c, Miss Olivia Schnurr 50c, Miss Caroline Schnurr 50c, John Kerman 4, Miss Kate Wagner 1, C H Rogers 5, Miss Susie Harkley 1.25, Alex George 3, Miss Elsie L Freeman 1, Wm Wesley & Son 10, Wingefelder & Krueger 4, Wilfeld Damm 1, Miss Irene James 50c, Miss H. Scanlan 50c, W A Clark 1, R M Player 2, Mrs F Lippert sr 50c, John Ward 2, Joseph McCurdy 50c, H G Hunter 5, F Steinhagen 25c, Arthur Giesler 25c, Miss M Cooke 50c, W J Hermiston 3 — Total $130.87.

George Hossfeldt $3. Ladies of the Soldiers' Aid Tea Room $25.

Population Decreasing

The 1917 assessment roll for the township of Carrick reveals the fact that the population of this municipality is steadily on the decline. The population given this year is 3380, a decrease of 90 from 1910. Of this number 1209 are between the ages of 5 and 21 years. The total assessment is slightly higher than last year—$2,806,096.—Mildmay Gazette.

Big Livestock Day

The other day was a record-breaker for a big delivery of cattle at Chesley. No fewer than 325 were purchased by M. Thompson, cattle buyer, and he issued checks to the amount of $32,586.68. Though not among the largest, some of the finest cattle brought in were raised by Robert Alexander, on the 5th concession of Elderslie, and Allen Kirkwood of Brant town line. Archie Campbell of Bentick town line took the biggest total home with him.

POETS' CORNER

MA AND THE AUTO.

Before we take an auto ride, pa says to ma, "My dear,
Now just remember, I don't need suggestions from the rear.
If you will just sit back there and hold in check your fright,
I'll take you where you want to go and get you back alright.
Remember that my hearing's good and also I'm not blind,
And I can drive this car without suggestions from behind."
Ma promises that she'll keep still, then off we gaily start,
But soon she notices ahead a peddler and his cart.
"You'd better toot your horn," says she, "to let him know we're near,
He might turn out!" and pa replies, "Just shriek at him, my dear."
And then he adds: "Some day some guy will make a lot of dough
By putting horns on tonneau seats for women-folks to blow!"
A little farther on ma cries, "He signalled for a turn!"
And pa says "Did he?" in a tone that's hot enough to burn.
"Oh, there's a boy on roller skates!" cries ma. "now do go slow,
I'm sure he doesn't see our car," and pa says, "I dunno,
I think I don't need glasses yet, but really it may be
That I am blind and cannot see what's right in front of me."
If pa should speed the car a bit, someone to hurry past,
Ma whispers, "Do be careful now, you're driving much too fast."
And all the time she's pointing out the dangers of the street,
And keeps him posted on the road when trolley cars he'll meet.
Last night when we got safely home pa sighed, and said, "My dear
I'm sure we've all enjoyed the drive you gave us from the rear."

Town and District

Evangelists Crossley and Russel have just conducted a successful series of meetings at Chesley. Two hundred and three people signed cards.

James Anderson of Peabody Saw mills, an ex-Reeve of Sullivan, and ex-Warden of Grey passed away on May 6th in his 69th year.

Southampton council will prepare five acres of the park and allot it free to citizens for potato ground. The seed potatoes are to be paid for in the Fall. Mr. C. M. Bowman, M. P. P. meantime is financing the purchase of seed, and has already procured 125 bags.

The starting of the cement works has already brought back a few of those who left town. So far, the employees are engaged in making repairs and alterations and some time will elapse before cement making proper can be engaged in.—Durham Chronicle.

A new clause in the temperance act makes it compulsory for a man who receives liquor to sign his name in a special book. This book is open for the inspection of the chief of police, county constables and officers of the law. These have authority to see what the purchaser does with the liquor. There has been a big falling off in the importation of liquor lately.

Poor old Lottie Tillotson (alias Judy Maguire) the fake returned missionary from Hawaii, who exploited half the women societies in Ontario about a year ago, seems to have gotten in wrong with the immigration authorities on both sides of the line, and she will soon be the woman with no place to go. The American agents insist that she belongs in Ontario, while Canadian officers say she is an Ohio Buckeye.

Individuality

THE selection of appropriate mountings for remarkably good Photographic Portraits.

THAT'S US.

FRASER STUDIO

The Time
The Place
The Price

NOW is the time, Men, while our range of Spring Cloths is complete.

THIS is the place for ordered clothes. Style and fit guaranteed.

THE PRICE is right and to suit every purse.

T. PYE
Clothier & Furnisher.

Bicycle Polo

The fastest, most exciting field game ever played.

RIDE A BICYCLE

There is a great lot of Real sport and fun to be derived from a Bicycle.

EXCITING GAMES
FAST RACES
INTERESTING TRIPS
SPECIAL TOURNAMENTS

Own a Hyslop

AND KNOW THESE JOYS
Manufactured by HYSLOP BROTHERS, Limited, Toronto
FOR SALE BY
PATTERSON BROS. - WALKERTON

Why not give your boy and girl an opportunity to make their home study easy and effective? Give them the same chances to win promotion and success as the lad having the advantage of

WEBSTER'S NEW INTERNATIONAL

Dictionary in his home. This new creation answers with final authority all kinds of puzzling questions in history, geography, biography, spelling, pronunciation, sports, arts, and sciences.

400,000 Vocabulary Terms. 2700 Pages. Over 6000 Illustrations. Colored Plates. The only dictionary with the Divided Page. The type matter is equivalent to that of a 15-volume encyclopedia. More Scholarly, Accurate, Convenient, and Authoritative than any other English Dictionary.

REGULAR AND INDIA-PAPER EDITIONS.

WRITE for specimen pages, illustrations, etc. FREE, a set of Pocket Maps if you name this paper.

G. & C. MERRIAM CO., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

GOLD DUST
digs deep after germs

Gold Dust not only cleans but sterilizes.

Soap merely washes over the surface, leaving a greasy film behind it.

Gold Dust "goes to the bottom," and insures absolute purity, and sanitary safety. Why not sanatize your home, as well as clean it?

Soap needs muscle help; Gold Dust does all the hard part of the task without your assistance.

Gold Dust is a good, honest, vegetable-oil soap, to which are added other purifying materials in just the right proportions to cleanse easily, vigorously, and without harm to fabric, utensils or hand.

Gold Dust is sold in 5c size and large packages. The large package means greater economy.

"Let the GOLD DUST TWINS do your work"

Made by THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY, LIMITED, Montreal
Makers of Fairy Soap (the oval cake)

A PUZZLING CASE

"Naturally enough, I asked her the meaning of this extraordinary message," said Ivan, quietly, "but she refused to tell me anything. I had never heard of a Black Carnation, and was curious to know if there was such a flower in existence. She never showed me the flower, and though her message was in those words, I was in complete ignorance as to whether she had actually received a black carnation (of the existence of which I was ignorant), or whether the words, 'Why did you send me the black carnation,' hid some secret of her past life."

"And what did you do?"

"I accepted the mission," said Ivan, simply, "and next day I went down to Lippinton. When I saw this Maxwell, I asked him the question as directed, upon which he stared at me in surprise and asked me what I meant. Of course, I could tell him nothing, and explained as much, whereupon he informed me that he possessed a carnation, which was unique of its kind, bearing perfectly black flowers, but that he was too fond of the plant to part with even a single bud."

"In fact, he denied having sent Mazzucata a black carnation flower," suggested Tancred.

"Yes. Then he took me to a glass house and showed me the plant, which was certainly marvelous, though it looked rather weird, being so unnatural in the color of its blossoms. On the plant, Maxwell said, there were twelve buds, upon which I counted them and found eleven."

"Eleven!" I ejaculated, in surprise, "why that is the same number as there were when I was down. So you did not steal the twelfth bud?"

"I, Monsieur! who accuses me of such a thing?"

"Why, this Maxwell; he told me there were twelve buds, but on counting them found only eleven, upon which discovery he said you must have stolen the twelfth."

"I certainly did not steal the twelfth," said Ivan, in a puzzled tone, "particularly as on my discovery of the missing bud, he guessed the thief's name."

"What was it?" questioned Tancred, impulsively.

"M. Dallas."

This name took us both by surprise, but of the two I was the most amazed, as I saw that Maxwell had been playing with Ivan the same comedy as he had played with me, only for the name of the singer, he substituted that of Dallas. We remained silent in sheer perplexity, for we knew not what to think or say, so Ivan, without waiting for our speech, resumed his story.

"I could get nothing else out of this Maxwell, so took my leave. He remained behind in the glass house, and graciously allowed me to find my way out into the street alone. While I was passing through the front of the house, I felt a touch on my arm and saw——"

"Mazzucata [illegible]"

"Well, I certainly thought so for the moment. The resemblance is truly wonderful, for this Mademoiselle Maxwell resembles my poor Mazzucata in all ways, save that she is blind."

"Poor girl," muttered Tancred, in a sad tone, "well, Signor Ivan, and what did she say?"

"She told me she had overheard my conversation with her father, and asked me if it were true that Mazzucata had received a black carnation. When I told her that I thought such was the case she was much disturbed."

"Did she make any mention of Dallas?"

"No."

"Did she say her father had sent Mazzucata the black carnation?" asked the lawyer, eagerly.

"My dear Tancred," I said, impulsively, "what an absurd remark. what possible motive could this obscure Maxwell have for sending Madame Mazzucata such a flower? There can be no connection between them."

"So I thought," remarked Ivan, who had listened to my speech, with a queer smile on his lips, "but when I tell you, monsieur, what this blind lady told me, I do not think you will find M. Tancred's remark so utterly absurd as you seem to fancy."

"Why, what did she tell you?"

"I cannot give you the whole conversation, it would take too long."

"Well, give us the pith of it," I rejoined, impatiently. "Who is Mazzucata, and what connection has she with this man?"

"I know what you are going to say," struck in Tancred, before Ivan could speak; "Mazzucata was Maxwell's daughter."

"Precisely," answered Ivan, with an emphatic nod; "she was Mademoiselle Maxwell's twin sister."

MAJOR GRANBY'S THEORY.

I am certainly much bewildered over the new aspect of this case, as after my interview with Signor Ivan, I cannot but think that my four previous theories are all wrong. Ilma Celinski, Dallas, Signor Ivan, and the secret society emissary, must be innocent, as all the evidence now obtainable seems to point in the direction of Simon Maxwell.

Now I have a theory, that he killed his daughter Mazzucata, and my belief is based upon the following circumstances:

He is the only possessor of the Black Carnation, and no bud could have left the greenhouse without his knowledge.

He equivocated on the missing bud, and after accusing Dallas to Ivan, of being the thief, now accuses Ivan to me.

As to the dynamite cartridge, which was certainly manufactured by Kutusoff and possessed by Ivan, I fancy that the latter must have lost it down at Lippinton, where it was picked up by Maxwell and used in the fatal bouquet, together with the missing carnation which the gardener plucked himself.

CHAPTER XIII.

When Tancred and myself left the Hotel Europa, we certainly had sufficient to think about, for the discovery of Mazzucata's relationship with the Maxwell's complicated matters to a surprising degree. Seeing that Marietta Mazzucata, or, to give her real name, Mary Maxwell, was the daughter of this gardener, it was evident that she must have known of the existence of the Black Carnation, created by her father. Hence her frequent reference to that flower. But why should it appear to her as a symbol of a violent death? This was the question which [illegible] our minds; and though we discussed it thoroughly, we could come to no conclusion as to the real meaning of the fancy.

Again, Mazzucata had sent Ivan to her father, to inquire why he had sent the Black Carnation, so it was evident that Maxwell was the person from whom she expected the token. But why should that token refer to a violent death? Turn which way we would, that last question kept appearing in the most persistent manner, and defied our efforts to obtain a satisfactory answer to it.

"I would like to tell Melchizedek about this fresh discovery," said Tancred, as we parted, "but, unfortunately he is down at Lippinton, and I do not know where a letter will find him."

"What will you do?"

"My dear major, I can do nothing except wait till Melchizedek returns to town, when we can consult as to what new move to make. Besides, it is probable Melchizedek will have discovered something at Lippinton likely to aid us in solving the mystery. At all events, now that we know the dead woman came from Lippinton, it is evident the secret is to be discovered there, and if so, you may be sure Melchizedek, who is on the spot, will ferret it out."

"Well, it is to be hoped so, for at present, so far as we are concerned, the secret of Mazzucata's death will remain one until the day of judgment. Good bye, Tancred, if you make any fresh discovery, let me know at once."

"Assuredly, but I must exact the same promise from you."

"Whatever I learn shall be known to you half an hour afterwards. But what about Gilbert?"

"I am going to see him now. Will you come?"

"No. Don't think me unkind, Tancred, but I am quite worn out for want of rest. Tell Tressilinger I will call and see him to-morrow morning, and not to worry too much."

"My dear Major Granby, when I tell him that Mazzucata is this Maxwell's daughter, he will have too much to think about to waste any time in worrying. Good bye, don't forget your promise."

So we parted, and Tancred went off to see Gilbert, while I returned to my rooms, quite worn out, as I have stated, with the many surprises of the last few days. When this case was finished, I was quite determined to abstain for the future from the investigation of criminal matters, for the employment is too exhausting. It wearies the brain, it irritates the nerves, it spoils the temper, and yet is so confoundedly fascinating that one can no more stop in the middle of a case than cease to breathe at one's own free will. I wonder if detectives live to any great age? If they do, it is a puzzle to me how they manage to preserve the body from wear and tear of the mind. Formerly I did not think much of detectives as an intelligent class; but now that I have had some experience of the difficulties they meet with, I have the greatest respect for their acuteness, their brain power, and their physical endurance.

For that evening, at least, I got the better of my detective fever, and by resolutely fighting against the demon of curiosity, managed to secure a few hours of comparative rest to my brain. Reverting to my usual mode of life, I strolled in the park to gain an appetite, dined at the Old Friends' Club with an old army friend, and afterwards went to the theatre. Whist was out of the question, as I could not have fixed my attention on the cards, but the theatre to which we went was the Gaiety, and there, in the frivolities of the last up-to-date burlesque, I forgot for a time that infernal problem which I had so foolishly set myself to solve.

I might have known such peace of mind would not last, and remember the calm before the storm proverb, for on my return to my rooms about midnight, I was met by Pointer with the extraordinary remark.

"A lady is waiting to see you, sir."

"A lady, Pointer?"

"Yes, sir; she has been waiting for three hours."

I own I felt somewhat indignant at this, as the mere fact of a lady waiting to see me at midnight in my own rooms was enough to destroy my character with the people of the house. Pointer, I must admit, was perfectly respectful, and yet I felt that he was secretly amused at my embarassment, which naturally put me into a towering rage.

"I can't see any lady to-night, Pointer."

"She says she won't go away until she sees you, sir."

"Who is she?"

"Miss Ilma Celinski."

"What, the witness in Mazzucata's case?"

"Yes, sir, she is in the sitting-room."

"Oh, I'll see her at once. I wonder what she wants. Pointer. You must come with me in order to bear witness to anything she may say in connection with the case."

"Yes, sir."

"She needn't see you, Pointer. Go into my bedroom and busy yourself with something, but leave the door open. Keep your attention fixed, Pointer; this is most important."

Pointer, as a matter of fact, felt much flattered at being thus brought into the case, as since his conversation with Dabsworth, he had taken a great interest in the affair, therefore he went into my bedroom by another door, while I entered the sitting-room where I found Mademoiselle Celinski impatiently awaiting my arrival.

"Major Granby," she said rising as I came into the room.

"Yes. To what have I the honour——"

"It is no honour," she retorted, abruptly, cutting short my polite speech, "I am in a rage."

"Not with me, I trust."

"No, with M. Dallas."

"Ho! Ho!" I thought to myself, "when thieves fall out honest men get their dues."

"Do you know me, monsieur," said the Pole, sitting down again, "I am Mademoiselle Celinski—Ilma Celinski. Oh, yes, you know me."

"I think so, mademoiselle. It was you who gave evidence against my poor friend, Sir Gilbert Tressilinger."

"Yes, I did tell a story against him. But why did he stay? I [illegible] told him to go. He should have run away. Why did he stay?"

"Because he was innocent."

"Innocent! Bah!"

"You are not polite, mademoiselle, and not truthful. You know Sir Gilbert is innocent."

"I know what I know," she answered, sullenly.

"Doubtless; but as you did not come here without a purpose I would like to know what that purpose is."

Ilma Celinski had taken off her gloves, and was twisting them round and round in her strong hands. Still dressed in that blazing red costume, hardly hidden by a thin black cloak, she was with her strongly marked features, flashing eyes, and eloquent gestures, sufficiently interesting, although hardly the kind of young person a steady old bachelor likes to entertain in his rooms at such an hour. I was glad Pointer was a witness in the next room. Besides, this girl had a temper, and was evidently in a towering rage about something, which [illegible] she vented on me for want of a better person.

"Eh, monsieur, you are astonished to see me here," she burst out, rapidly, "eh, yes, but it is not my fault this midnight. I came here at nine hours, but you were not here, so I waited. I wished to see you, to ask about this woman—this lady—you know, monsieur, I think."

"I haven't the slightest idea to whom you are alluding."

"It is a conspiracy against me. You take his side."

"Take whose side," I asked, completely bewildered.

"M. Dallas," she muttered, in a savage tone; "that coward, that infamous one."

"Monsieur Dallas," I repeated, reflectively. "Ah, yes, I think I know the gentleman you mean. He was in love with your mistress, was he not?"

"He was in love with me."

"But you said in Court——"

"Ah, I said many things in court—I told lies, and all for his sake."

"Then you acknowledge that you spoke falsely against Sir Gilbert?"

"I acknowledge nothing, monsieur," retorted the Pole, scornfully; "but if you tell me that which I wish to know why then, indeed—eh, yes, I can say something of your Sir Gilbert."

"I don't understand you, mademoiselle."

"Oh, yes you do," she panted, eagerly, "this woman, the sister of my [illegible]."

"Miss Maxwell?"

"Yes! yes! you have seen her. Oh, I know of your visit to that place; and he also was there, then he [illegible] her, this coward, who said I was his adored?"

"You wish to know if Mr. Dallas is in love with Miss Maxwell?"

"Yes! yes! Is it so?"

"I cannot tell you, mademoiselle. I know he was down there about some business."

"He is down there now."

"At Lippinton?"

"Yes. Oh, I know why he is there. He loves this woman who is like my dead mistress."

"How do you know that Miss Maxwell is the sister of Madame Mazzucata?"

"She told me so herself. Yes, I was the friend of madame, not the servant. She told me many things. I knew all her history. I knew of the black carnation."

"What do you know about that?"

It was an injudicious question to ask, for hardly had the words left my mouth, when Ilma Celinski closed her mouth with a snap and refused to answer. There was evidently nothing to be got out of this woman save by working on her jealousy, so, as I saw she knew a great deal likely to be useful to me in the case, I took that line at the expense of a few falsehoods, which I trust will be pardoned to me, seeing how desperate was the dilemma in which I found myself.

"You have come to ask me about Mr. Dallas, I understand?"

"I have, monsieur."

"What can I tell you, mademoiselle, I should think you were more likely to know his movements than I."

"I know nothing—nothing," she said, angrily, "after the death of my mistress, M. Dallas left the town, and I have not seen him since. Oh, I am sure he is down with that woman, he loves her because she is so like madame."

"Does he not love you?"

"He has told me so, many times, and I, like a fool, believed him. I helped him all in my power. I told him madame's name—of the black carnation, of the place where it was to be found—all—all that he wished to know, and this is my reward. He leaves me for another. I am neglected, despised; but let him beware, for I can speak, as well as keep silent."

"I think it would be best to speak, seeing how badly he is treating you."

"Yes, he is treating me badly, but I do not know yet that he is false."

"Oh, I can set your mind at rest on that point. He is false—he has been false all along. He never loved you as he loved Mazzucata."

At these words she grew so pale, that, for the moment, I thought she was about to faint, but being evidently a woman with an indomitable will, she controlled her emotion, and answered me at once.

"He did not love madame, he hated her. That is why he sent her the black carnation."

"Oh, he did send that flower then?"

"Yes."

"And did he kill madame, also?"

"That I do not know."

"Then tell me all you do know. Save an innocent man from death, and revenge yourself on your false lover."

"Is he false? Ah! I thought so!"

"He is false," I responded, eagerly. "He told me that he loved Madame Mazzucata, and no one else. The black carnation was only sent to her because he wished to frighten her into breaking off her engagement with Sir Gilbert. You have been his tool all along."

"His tool! I!" she screamed, in a rage, "impossible! he loves me!"

"He does not. He loved Mazzucata while she was alive, but now she is dead he loves her sister."

Ilma clutched her breast as if to prevent her fury bursting forth, but as it was she was by no means sparing of words in condemning her false lover.

"Oh, the infamous one—the deceiver. He swore by all that he held most sacred, that I was the only woman he loved. I see now it is false, and that he is with this woman, this sister of madame. But I will be revenged; I will tell all."

I listened eagerly for the promised revelation, and after a pause she burst out again.

(To be Continued).

* * *

"John," said Mrs. Crosslots, "the cook says she's going to leave." "What's the trouble?" "She says she's used to working for cultivated people and she can't stand our line of [illegible]

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON IX.

May 27, 1917.

The Holy Spirit and His Work.—John 15:26—16:14.

Commentary.—I. The Holy Spirit witnesses to Christ (vs. 26, 27). 26. when the Comforter is come—This expression indicates that the Comforter was certainly coming. The Holy Spirit is called the Comforter, a name which is full of significance. The original word means to strengthen and has in it also the idea of companionship. The Holy Spirit comes to us, stands by us and gives us strength. whom I will send unto you from the Father—In this brief clause the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit, the three persons of the Godhead, are named. The Holy Spirit proceeds from the Father and is sent by the Son. the Spirit of truth—He who declares the truth and guides into the truth. He brings truth home to the hearts of men. he shall testify of me—The world would hate and reject Christ, but the Holy Spirit would bear witness to the Messiahship of Jesus. He bore witness with the apostles by the truths he enabled them to declare, and by the miracles that were wrought by them in the name of Jesus. He bore witness also in the Scriptures he inspired them to write, and this witness is continuing now and will ever continue. 27. ye also shall bear witness—The mission of the apostles, after receiving the power of the Holy Spirit, was to witness to Jesus to all the world, commencing at Jerusalem. because ye have been with me—The apostles had been under the instruction of Jesus for three years. They were, therefore, prepared to be witnesses for the Master. from the beginning—From the commencement of Christ's public ministry.

II. Comforts in trial (vs. 1-6). Jesus explains his purpose in telling his disciples the things mentioned in this farewell discourse, especially about the hatred of the world toward him and them. He wished to forewarn them and prepare them for the difficulties they would have to face. They were to be on their guard so that they would not "be offended," or made to stumble, when persecution should arise. They would be put out of the synagogues, or excommunicated by the Jews. This means that they would become social and ecclesiastical outcasts, having no right in common with the Jews. They would suffer greater persecution than this, for the zealous and fanatical hatred of the Jews toward the new religion would lead them to put the followers of Jesus to death. Jesus had told the disciples previously that they would be persecuted, but he had spoken so particularly regarding it because he was with them to advise and comfort them. He was now about to leave them and they would experience sorrow of heart, but they would not be left uninstructed and uncomforted, for the Holy Spirit would be sent to them to remain with them always. His coming would meet all their spiritual needs.

III. Judges the world (vs. 7-11). 7. Nevertheless I tell you the truth—The solemnity of the affirmation arises from the fact that in their present state of mind the information was difficult to believe. Our Lord solemnly assures them that there is no contingency or mistake in the idea that his departure, however sorrowful, was necessary in itself, and best even for them.—Whedon. Jesus placed particular emphasis upon the great truth he was declaring. It is expedient for you that I go away—The best interests of the disciples, as well as the spread of Christ's kingdom on the earth demanded that he should go to the Father. His wisdom perceived that truth, although theirs did not. His redemptive work would soon be completed, and the Holy Spirit would be given to carry into execution the plan of salvation. For if I go not away, etc.—Jesus gives the reason why it is expedient that he go away. His presence during his earthly ministry was local. He was in only one place at a time, but the Comforter would be everywhere present to minister to the needs of all who longed after God. 8. When he is come—The Holy Spirit. Will reprove the world—He will bring illumination and conviction. He will let men know their moral and spiritual condition, and will show them what is required of them. The Holy Spirit brings deeper conviction to the heart than can be brought in any other way. 9. Of sin, because they believe not on me—Men must be convicted of sin in order that they must apply to God for salvation; for only as they see their sinful hearts and lives will they long for deliverance. The great sin of the world is the rejection of Jesus Christ. Unbelief effectually closes the door of salvation. "This is the source of sin—unbelief; formerly unbelief in God, now unbelief in his Ambassador. Not that the sin is limited to unbelief, but this is the beginning of it; 'Because' does not explain 'sin,' but 'will convict.' The Spirit, by bringing the fact of unbelief home to the hearts of men shows what the nature of sin is."—Cam. Bib. 10. Of righteousness—Righteousness means keeping the law, but it means more than the keeping of the law outwardly. It means the conformity of the nature and life to the will of God. The Spirit first convicts of sin and then points out the divine requirements which are laid upon man. Because I go to my Father—Jesus had been the pattern of righteousness and his teachings showed what it was to be righteous. He was about to go away to the Father, and the Spirit would continue the work that he had begun. He would write on the hearts of men what sort of character and life they must have. Ye see me no more—Very naturally this would be an occasion of sadness to the disciples, but they were to be comforted and sustained by the Holy Spirit. Jesus would not be to them an object of sight but of faith. 11. Of judgment—The world would be convicted with respect of judgment by the Spirit. The world's standards of sin and righteousness were wrong, as was also its standard of judgment. It was faulty in its discrimination between right and wrong. Because the Prince of this world is judged—Satan is the prince of this world. "The Advocate convicts the world of its error in this point also. The world might think that the power of darkness conquered at Gethsemane and Calvary, but the resurrection and ascension proved that what looked like victory was most signal defeat; instead of conquering he was judged. The result is so certain [illegible]ing it is spoken of as already accomplished."—Cam. Bib.

IV. Reveals the truth (vs. 12-14). 12. I have yet many things—Jesus had given much instruction to his disciples during the years of their association with him. He had explained the nature of his kingdom and the conditions upon which men might enter it. He had told them to some extent the relation of the gospel to the Mosaic system of religion. He had not as yet told them in full about his sufferings, death, resurrection and ascension. He had told them all that it was then necessary for them to know. What he had yet to tell them they were not prepared to comprehend. cannot bear them now—Truth is imparted as we are able to receive it. Jesus knew the capacity of his disciples to comprehend and bear the truths of the gospel, and he would not confuse or burden them with those that were too deep for them. What they could not bear at that time, they could not profitably receive when the Holy Spirit was given in his fullness. 13. the Spirit of Truth—One of the offices of the Holy Spirit is to impart the truth. He would declare to the disciples the truths which Jesus saw they were not prepared to receive from him. shall not speak for himself (R. V.)—The Spirit does not speak for himself apart from the Father, who is the source of all truth. he will shew you things to come—The Spirit would bring to the remembrance of the disciples the things that Jesus had said to them, would declare truth regarding their duty and privilege and would disclose truths pertaining to the future of the church and pertaining to the general judgment, the punishment of the wicked, and the glorification of the saints. 14. he shall glorify me—The Holy Spirit would dwell upon the nature and mission of Jesus, and would apply the benefits of the atonement to all who earnestly desired to be saved. Jesus is glorified in every one who accepts salvation through the atonement he made. He is glorified by a holy life and a positive testimony.

Questions.—Upon what grounds would the world hate the followers of Jesus? What is the significance of the name Comforter as applied to the Holy Spirit? Who were to be witnesses of Jesus to the world? What did Jesus tell his disciples about persecution? Why was it expedient that Jesus should go away? What are the several offices of the Spirit? How would the Holy Spirit glorify Jesus?

PRACTICAL SURVEY.

Topic.—Christian perfection.

I. Subsequent to Christ's atoning work.

II. Spiritual qualification for service.

I. Subsequent to Christ's atoning work. It was a mark of Christ's wisdom and tenderness to adapt his lessons to the growing capacity of his disciples. He had been speaking to a world hostile to himself and to his followers. Having spoken of the guilt of the persecutors, Jesus referred to the sufferings of his disciples. He mentioned two ways in which his apostles should experience the hostility of an unbelieving world, by ecclesiastical censure and by excommunication. They were given the assurance that however great their approaching trials might be and though Jesus himself was about to depart from them, One should come from his Father, who would be all sufficient for their help, a Witness commissioned by Christ to testify of him. They could not comprehend his sayings, either in their relation to him or to themselves. His departure was felt to be a most grievous trial. There was but one thing that could enable the disciples to bear the prospect of separation, and that was the descent of the Comforter, through whom should come the unfolding of Christianity in its spiritual power. The mission of the Holy Spirit was essential to the great plan of redemption, to present all the facts in a clearer light, illuminating the soul, mind, intellect, heart and conscience. How essential the Holy Spirit was to them and to the interests of the kingdom, all their subsequent history shows. By this cross and passion, by his sufferings and death, was Christ's kingdom to be set up and his throne established. As soon as the hour had struck when he would be accepted as the great substitute, it would surely have availed nothing to defer the hour of his triumphant return to God. It was expedient that Christ should go away, for his death was his work. His departure was to aid in the apprehension of his true character and nature. The hope his disciples had been entertaining of earthly honor for their Lord and the restoration of an earthly kingdom to his chosen people, must hence forth give place to a wider and better hope.

II. Spiritual qualification for service. With simplicity and decisiveness Jesus defined the functions of the Holy Spirit. He spoke of the ministry of the Spirit in relation to himself and his disciples. They, as yet, knew only the foundation truth of the unity of the Godhead. The process of the Spirit's action in regenerating the world formed Christ's own history of the silent progress of the spiritual life, the first step in the divine life being a sense of sin. The office of the Spirit is to teach mankind what sin is, to work which no earthly power can accomplish, and therefore Jesus mercifully sent the Comforter to produce such conviction in the human heart. The great end and design of the gospel required that conviction should be wrought by the Holy Spirit. The necessity of this conviction arises out of the fact that the gospel is a plan for the salvation of sinners. The work of conviction as to sin, righteousness and judgment, all goes on together. Unbelief found its climax in the rejection of Jesus Christ. It was the sin of the Jews. They withstood all the evidence of Christ's remarkable life, His remarkable discourses, and His remarkable miracles. They regarded their religion as perfect, capable of no addition and no improvement. Though Jesus ascribed their behavior to ignorance, he did not say they were irresponsible for it. He dealt with the deep, ancient and malignant causes of all human failure. The apostate Jewish church represented the world. They did did not like to hear about the tribulation of Jesus Christ or the work of the Holy Spirit. Their rejection of Jesus was virtually the act of the race. All the enmity against God which their hearts had harbored, was concentrated in a single act. Just as sin is revealed by the Spirit to be something far different from the outward falling short of ceremonial or moral observances. The great aim with Jesus was to make clear the spiritual union between Himself and His disciples.

T. R. A.

* * *

The traveler had four minutes in which to catch the train. "Can't you go any faster than this?" he asked the streetcar conductor. "I could," the conductor answered, "but I have to [illegible]

SUNDAY AT HOME

THE FUTURE.

The worst is yet to come,
So wail the doubters glum.
But here's the better view:
"My best I've yet to do."

The same come always fear
To-morrow holds no cheer.
Yet farther on life's lane
Are joys you shall attain.

Go forward bravely then
And play your part as men,
For this is ever true:
"Our best we've yet to do."

REMEMBER NOT MY TRANSGRESSIONS.

I have blotted out, as a thick cloud thy transgressions, and, as a cloud, thy sins. I, even I, am He that blotteth out thy transgressions for mine own sake, and will not remember thy sins.

Come now, and let us reason together, saith the Lord: though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool. I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more. Thou wilt cast all their sins into the depths of the sea.

Thou hast in love to my soul delivered it from the pit of corruption; for thou hast cast all my sins behind Thy back.—Who is a God like unto Thee, that pardoneth iniquity? ... He retaineth not His anger for ever, because He delighteth in mercy.—Unto Him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in His own blood, ... to Him be glory and Dominion for ever and ever. Amen.

THE OTHER FELLOW.

Perhaps he is snowed under; come along with your silver shovel and dig him out; perhaps you may find the angel. He may be considered dead, but there is a creative power in prayer, and a resurrecting lift in personal effort, and you may have the honor of unbinding the napkin about his head and leading him into the warm sunlight of everlasting day. You may meet him at the prison gate as he comes into a new day, after serving a term. Take his hand and bid him welcome by a [illegible] give him his dinner and some paper to write to his mother, and let him roll the cloud from the maternal heart. He has gained his liberty, to go to the devil, but do thou, by brotherly kindness, turn his feet into the ways of peace. Find him a friend and a job and spring a gleam of [illegible] in his [illegible] heart.

He is one of the lost sheep, and not always do men go in search for the shepherd, but the shepherd goes after the wanderer, and they seek and find, and return with joy. Oh, the [illegible] joy! Oh to drink out of the cup of [illegible]! A steamer stopped at a wharf on a great river. On a float was an interesting figure making great signals of joy, the mate of the steamer answered with equal demonstrations of delight. As we proceeded on our way I joined the mate at his leisure, and asked him to explain the correspondence by signals given. "My dear sir, I have a family at home, but that lad gives me more joy than all others; he fell into the water, and I plunged in after him and rescued him, and every trip he comes down to give me his glad salutation." The joy of serving is the highest possible joy; the very heart of God runs through you like a mill stream.

A Bible class teacher attended a convention and came back refreshed. On the walls of the class room was a motto, "The other fellow." He said, "We had better take down that motto and go out of business, for what have we done of late for the 'other fellow'?" "No man liveth unto himself." We do reap our joy by promoting the joy of others. We wash our eyes and see better when we look at another man's eyes. True sympathy is a very tender and delicate spiritual substance. We need to know what is going on inside a man's breast, and penetrate beyond the formalities of life, and touch the weary, aching, empty heart. The fingers of the soul are long and delicate; they carry secret [illegible] strength to the sad, who can not find a name for their secret pain. Oh, to give a thrill to the dry and shrinking soul, to warm the half-frozen heart made stubborn by the hard faces of those who ought to be better helpers in our brother's need. Oh, to come near and reverently touch the springs of life, and offer the purpose of a half-famished heart. A vital part of our moral equipment is buried in our neighbor's garden.

H. T. Miller.

Vast Sums to War Leaders

According to Burns, glory is the soldier's only prize, and his wealth but honor, and in the eyes of most people the reward of heroism is indeed merely praise and medals. But many a great soldier has won a fortune from his successful campaigning, especially in the armies of Europe.

American heroes have been rewarded by private gifts of real estate and by the gift of public office, but except for the "prize money," which meant fortune to many an adventurous lad or man in the old days, the awards to American soldiers and sailors have been much smaller than those in England. General Grant, General Sherman, General Lee, even George Washington, though he was made president—made no money from their successful campaigns. But for his services in the South African war alone the late Lord Roberts of England received from Parliament a grant of nearly $500,000 in American money. Added to that, an earldom was conferred upon him, and he was made a Knight of the Garter and appointed commander in chief of the army.

All this followed the reward of some $62,500 for his services in Afghanistan, during which he made the famous march in 21 days from Kabul to Kandahar, which is still a "fable" among the men of the army.

The late Lord Kitchener also won a fortune by his successful campaigns, Parliament awarding him $250,000 for his services in South Africa and later adding to that $150,000 for [illegible] the Sudan, for which he also received his seat in the House of Lords.

The late Lord Wolseley received from parliament [illegible] at various times and was also given a seat in the House of Lords for his triumphs on the battlefield, notably during the Ashanti war. [illegible] the greatest spoils, it having been estimated that his fighting resulted in a fortune of more than $3,000,000.

His great victory at Assaye brought him a sword and a service of plate from the inhabitants of Calcutta valued at nearly $20,000, while for winning the battle of Talavera he was made a peer and voted a pension of $10,000 a year to continue through two generations.

His victory at Salamanca greatly added to this already substantial fortune, since he received after it the thanks of parliament, most royally backed up by a marquisate and $500,000.

After the great campaign in the Pyrenees and the battles which sent Napoleon to Elba, Wellington was made a duke by his grateful country and was given a grant of $1,500,000 and his income made up to $85,000 a year.

In consequence, when the French emperor escaped from Elba and made that triumphant march that ended at Waterloo, the Duke of Wellington, returning a hero to London, perplexed all England with the problem of how to reward him. The highest honors and a great fortune had already been given him, but parliament added another $1,000,000 to his wealth, and he drew in addition $300,000 in prize money and the King of Portugal presented him with plate worth more than $50,000.

This is one of the greatest fortunes ever made in warfare—that is, by public gift.

Nor do the rewards that England gives her soldiers consist merely in flat sums of money or titles. In many instances, they take the form of pensions, to be continued for several generations. Lord Napier of Magdala received a pension of $10,000 a year to extend during two lifetimes, and when Lord Raglan was killed in the great Russian war his widow was given $5,000 a year and his son $10,000 a year, while Viscount Gough, the hero of the Sikh war, received not only a pension of $10,000 a year from the Government, but an equal sum from the Honorable East India company.

For the victory of the Nile, Nelson received a pension of $10,000 a year to last through three generations. After the battle of Aboukir Bay he was made a peer, and a second $10,000 pension was added. The Irish parliament at the same time granted him a pension of $5,000 a year for life, while the Honorable East India company added its little gift of $50,000 a year.

Lord Napier, another great English soldier, was awarded a pension of $10,000 a year, but had it changed for the flat sum of $150,000.

The commuting of pensions was done on several occasions by famous generals, Lord Wolseley preferring $125,000 down to the prospect of $10,000 a year during his own and his son's lifetime.

Such pensions and rewards sound enormous compared with those of this country, but they show the value which Britons put upon valor and belief in the old saying that to the victor belong the spoils.—Philadelphia North American.

STERN JUSTICE IN OLD ENGLAND

Poisoners Were Put to Death by Being Boiled.

Harsh Tortures for Many Minor Crimes.

In these merciful days, when a man who publishes a libel on the king escapes with a few months' imprisonment, it seems scarcely credible that as late as 1820 the punishment ordained by the law for high treason was that the offender should be drawn on a hurdle to the place of execution and there should be hanged by the neck and that his head and quarters be at the body be divided into four quarters Thomas Beille and his son were banished for life for administering poison until he was dead; that then his head should be severed from his body, that the disposal of the crown.

And this was by no means the worst fate that might befall a criminal in the so-called "good old days," as one John Roose, a cook of Henry VIII's day, found to his cost. Roose was convicted of the heinous crime of putting poison in the broth intended for the family of no less reverend a personage than the Bishop of Rochester. For such a crime hanging, drawing and quartering was too merciful a punishment. "Something lingering, with boiling oil," or at least water, was decided to be the punishment that best fitted the crime, and with this object a special act of parliament was passed ordaining boiling alive as the punishment for this felony. John Roose expiated his sins in a cauldron of hot water, and a few years later, in 1542, one Margaret Davy met the same fate at Smithfield.

So gravely was the crime of poison [illegible] a couple of [illegible] hens belonging to a neighbor.

These were indeed days when the man of violent temper or criminal tendencies must operate warily. If by any evil chance he came to blows and drew blood within the precincts of the king's palace he was inevitably condemned to lose his right hand, and a statute of Henry VIII. regulated the whole gruesome ceremony, with all its functionaries, from the surgeon who was to amputate the offending member, to the individual who used the searing irons, the yeoman of the scullery who made the irons red hot at his fire and the sergeant of the cellar who was provided "with a pot of red wine to give the same party after his hand is so stricken off and the stump seared."

Mutilation was a favorite form of punishment in those good old days, following, no doubt, the Scriptural penalty, "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth." Thus the slanderer's tongue was pulled out, so that he could at least utter slander no more, and he who destroyed the sight of a one-eyed man lost both his own eyes.

By the Coventry act in the time of Charles II. any person who should maliciously put out the eye, slit the nose or disable any limb of another with intent to maim or disfigure him was to pay for the wrong with his life. By another act the man who fought with weapons in a church had one of his ears cut off. If he had already lost both ears, as many a malefactor had, he was branded in the cheek with the letter "F."

By an act of Queen Elizabeth's reign the forger was condemned to stand in the pillory, to have his ears cut off by the common hangman, his nostrils slit up and seared and to be imprisoned for life, and in a statute of James I. an unfortunate bankrupt was nailed by an ear to the pillory for two hours and then his ear was cut off.

If an enterprising farmer were foolish enough to send any of his sheep out of the country he paid a terrible price for his rashness, for his goods were forfeited, he was sent to jail for twelve months, and on recovering his liberty his left hand was cut off in a public market and nailed up there as a warning against the danger of illicit exports. If he offended a second time he paid for his daring with his life. If he set covetous eyes on a neighbor's sheep and annexed one of them he was unceremoniously hanged by the neck until he was dead. Indeed, thousands of unfortunates paid with their lives for thefts much more insignificant.

Burning alive was, of course, a common punishment for witchcraft for many a century, down to a couple of hundred years ago, and many of the victims who were accused of "selling their souls to the devil" were children under ten years of age.

In 1726 Edward Farnworth, a highwayman, refusing to plead, was loaded with boards and weights. For more than an hour he bore a mass of metal weighing nearly four hundredweight, when human flesh could bear the [illegible] no more, and he prayed to be put to the bar again. He pleaded "Not guilty," but was nevertheless found guilty and ended his days on the scaffold. This cruel punishment survived to George III's time.—London Tit-Bits.

WAS TROUBLED WITH HER LIVER FOR FIVE YEA

When the bowels become constipated the stomach gets out of order, the does not work properly, and then the violent sick headaches, the sou of the stomach, belching of wind, burn, water brash, biliousness, etc.

Keep your bowels regular by Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. They clear away all the effete matter collects in the system and thus with constipation and all its troubles.

Mrs. John Fitzgerald, Brittan Ont., writes: "I have been with my stomach and liver for five years, and have had con causing headache, backache spells, and sometimes I would down. I tried all kinds of without obtaining any relief.

I commenced using Milburn's Liver Pills, and they have cure I have recommended them to man my friends, and they are all very pleased with the results they hav tained from their use."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, 25c. a vial, 5 vials for $1.00, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

EXERCISING THE MIND.

Time and Solitude Essential i Learning to Think Easily.

An important element in easy thin [illegible]

Opportunity for thought in time in solitude.

Many of us are "too busy" but wit far less productive things, to really live or to really think. One sh make time, make solitude for thou People are often too much continuo together, especially young peo Each individual is separate and ture individual separate thoug

One in general should room by oneself or in some way manage to spend considerable time alone, along the seashore or brook side or in one's room. The gentle exercise of a stroll or of a slow bicycle ride requiring little attention to itself is our ideal stimulant and occasion for thinking un the attention standing too much [illegible] For this [illegible] be had in which to be alone.

Parents are oftentimes too cruel to allow their students to think. can afford a matter of dollars cents to take an extra year in sch if one can learn to think by doing. The time so used is a rich and cert investment.

In default of better time a half ho after walking or before rising is good time to think, and many peo have their most productive and inal thoughts occur to them in the morning and early after a g night's rest.—Dr. H. Van N. Dear in Scientific American.

A Celebrated Suicide.

Haydon, the celebrated painter and writer, at life when he was overcome disappointment and ingratitude, down the brush with which he w work upon his last great effort, "Albert and the Trial By Jury," with a steady hand. "Stretch me n longer upon this rough world," an then with a pistol shot put an end his unhappy existence.

test invention, is the in

* * *

Wigwag—Dashaway, I'm afraid yo are a rake. Dashaway—Well, yo know all flesh is grass.

WHOOPING COUGH
The Infant's Most Dangerous Disease.

Whooping Cough, although specially a disease of childhood, is by no means confined to that period but may occur at any time of life. It is one of the most dangerous diseases of infancy, and yearly causes more deaths than scarlet fever typhoid or diphtheria, and is more common in female than in male children.

Whooping Cough starts with sneezing, watering of the eyes, irritation of the throat, feverishness and cough. The coughing attacks occur frequently but are generally more severe at night.

On the first sign of a "whoop," Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup should be administered, and weeks of suffering prevented, as it helps to clear the bronchial tubes of the collected mucous and phlegm.

Mrs. Nellie Barkes, Amherst, N.S., writes: "I have much pleasure in saying that there is no cough syrup like Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. My little girl took whooping cough from a little girl who has since died with it. I tried lots of things but found 'Dr. Wood's' to give the greatest relief. It helped her to raise the phlegm, and she is now better.

My young brother is also taking the cough and I am getting 'Dr. Wood's' to work again."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; 3 pine trees the trade mark; price 25c. and 50c. Refuse substitutes.

Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

FARM AND GARDEN

MANURE DETERIORATION.

The necessity of keeping manure moist is especially notable in case of horse manure. Being naturally of a dry nature, it decomposes very rapidly. The same may be said of sheep manure, only in a less degree. "Fire fanging" is the result of an insufficient supply of water, which can be easily checked by sprinkling.

This sprinkling should be done regularly so that the heap is kept in a constant state of moisture. Alternate wetting and drying liberates considerable ammonia.

FERMENTATION IN MANURE.

The nature and extent of fermentation in manure is governed largely by the composition of the manure, more particularly upon the amount of nitrogen in a soluble form which it contains. The more soluble nitrogen, the more rapid the fermentation. Urine is rich in soluble nitrogenous compounds, and consequently decomposes rapidly.

Manure decreases rapidly in bulk by fermentation. The coarse materials are gradually decomposed, and are dissolved to a large extent, in the black liquid which oozes out of the manure pile. Properly controlled, fermentation is a valuable manner of increasing the availability of the fertilizing constituents of manure, although it decreases the bulk, but, when not properly controlled it seriously reduces the value of the manure.

LEACHING OF MANURE.

Deterioration of manure is also caused by leaching. Manure exposed to the action of the elements loses about one-half of its valuable fertilizing constituents in the course of six months.

Solid cow dung, exposed to ordinary leaching for 109 days, acording to an experiment at the New Jersey Experiment Station, lost 37.6 per cent. of its nitrogen, 51.9 per cent. of its phosphoric acid and 41.1 per cent. of its potash. Mixed dung and urine lost during the same time 51 per cent. of its nitrogen, 51.1 per cent. of its phosphoric acid and 41.1 per cent. of its potash. More than one-half of the constituents in the total animal manure product of the cow may be lost by an exposure of less than four months.

The amount of litter required for any given animal depends largely upon the character of the food. A safe general rule is that the litter should amount to at least one-third of the dry matter of the food consumed. The following amounts per day for different animals is about right: Sheep, three-fifths pound of litter; cattle, 9 pounds; horses, 6 1-2 pounds.

It is not advisable, as a rule, to use an excess of litter beyond that needed to keep the animal clean and absorb the liquid excrement, since the materials available for bedding, are generally poor in fertilizing constituents, and so extend and dilute the manure unnecessary.

METHODS OF APPLYING MANURE.

Whether manure should be applied fresh or rotten depends largely upon the character of the soil. Where improvement of the mechanical condition is the main object sought, the best results will be secured by applying fresh manure to the heavy clay soils, and well-rotted manure to the light soils. If, however, prompt action of fertilizers is desired, in a favorable season light soils utilize coarse manure to better advantage than do heavy soils. In heavy soils, decomposition takes place slowly, and the constituents of the fresh manure become available very slowly. On the other hand, in light soils, unless there is a dry season, the decomposes readily, and the fertilizing constituents are probably rendered available as fast as the plant requires them.

On clay soils it frequently happens that manure produces no effect at all during the first year, on account of slowness of decomposition, but as the clay possesses very powerful absorptive properties the manure is not lost. There is, therefore, practically no danger of loss in apply manure to clay soils a long while in advance of planting time.

Fresh manure has a forcing effect and tends to produce stems and leaves at the expense of fruit and grain. It is therefore, better for early garden crops, grasses and forage plants than for cereals or fruits.

Spreading the manure and allowing it to lie on the surface should be practiced only on level fields where there is no danger from surface washing. There is no danger of a serious loss of ammonia to the air, where the manure is spread broadcast and allowed to lie on the surface. Experiments have proved that the loss from this cause is very small.

There can be no fixed rule as regards the amount of manure to apply. About 15 to 18 tons per acre is an abundant application. 14 tons good, and 8 to 9 light. Twenty tons is a frequent application in New Jersey, as well as in other regions where truck farming is practiced, and still larger amounts are often used.

FARM NEWS AND VIEWS.

The dairy cow often suffers the most from exposure to the weather before real winter has begun. After steady cold comes the cow is generally stabled. Exposure to cold rains is often more injurious to the animal that the colder but dry weather later in the winter. The dairy cow is not like the fat steer, protected from cold by a layer of fat. As a result bad weather causes a big drop in milk production. So long as the weather is dry it is just as well to leave the cow outside nights for some time, but every cold rain should find her protected. The main thing in barns is to have tight walls, so there is no draft or wind and a good roof. Care should be taken in arranging the stalls length and a gutter of sufficient depth to hold the manure. The cleanliness of the milk depends to a considerable extent upon having the barn built so the cow will keep herself clean.

[illegible]nces of grease save dollars in re[illegible]

[illegible]d is good for three or four [illegible]

[illegible] do best on a level seed bed, [illegible]h perfect drainage.

[illegible] the average farm the horses will [illegible] be worked so hard or as regularly as they have been during the summer. If they have been heavily fed and quantity of grain be reduced, but care must be taken not to cut down their food supply too much. They will need considerable food merely to keep them warm. In addition to this they should have enough to keep them looking well and give them strength for whatever driving or teaming may be required of them.

The feeding of cows on dairy farms is of still greater importance. Even if they get some grass or stalks from the pasture or the field, the supply will be scanty and the quantity will be poor. Unless there is prompt and liberal feeding from the barn, with grain added to the dried material, there will be a shrinkage in the quantity of milk and a decline in conditions. This will bring a loss not merely in the immediate present, but one which will continue for a long time. It is a rule to which dairying is no exception, that it is expensive to regain lost ground.

ZAM-BUK
Purely Herbal—No poisonous coloring
Antiseptic—Stops blood-poison
Soothing—Ends pain and smarting, etc.
Pure—Best for baby's rashes.
Heals all sores.
50c. box. All Druggists and Stores

You NEED for Preserves

St. Lawrence Red Diamond Extra Granulated which owing to its absolute freedom from organic impurities never causes those distressing failures which sometimes worry the best of cooks. Warranted pure cane sugar, the St. Lawrence Red Diamond Sugar does its full share to prevent fermentation.

Your dealer can supply Red Diamond Sugar in coarse grain, or medium, or fine as you may select.

Order the big bag—100 lbs. full weight of the best sugar made and avoid frequent trips to the store.

Sold also in many other sizes and styles of packages.

St. Lawrence Sugar Refineries Limited, Montreal.

OLD DUBLIN.

Irish Capital Indissolubly Linked With Country's History.

Whatever other good thing may be said of Dublin, which has bulked so large in the world's eye in the days just past, it is beautiful for situation. The sweep of Dublin bay and the rugged outline of Howth head and Kingstown harbor and Killiney hill have all found many to speak well in their praise. Like so many other Irish cities, and indeed like most old cities the world over, Dublin, for its early history, draws largely on tradition. The men of Dublin appear suddenly from nowhere, and they defeat the men of Leinster. That is dogmatically stated to have been the year A.D. 291. They then return, covered with achievement and filled with satisfaction, into the unknown, and no more is heard of them for about a century and a half. In the year 450, however, they suddenly emerge again from obscurity as converts to Christianity. Thereafter, they have still a way of retiring on occasion into the unknown, but the occasions are steadily more rare and the periods shorter.

Then the Danes begin to be heard of. For centuries they were a sore trouble. In the ninth century they attacked Dublin and took it, and in 841 Thokel, the Norseman, proclaimed himself king, and established himself in great strength at Armagh. The Irish, however, never for long acquiesced in the situation. There was no more peace in Ireland of those days than there was in all the centuries that followed, but it was not until the year 1014 that the Irish rose to a supreme effort. In that year, however, Brian Boroihme, king of Munster, determined to attack in force, and his enterprise culminated in the famous battle of Clontarf, in which Brian himself fell and his son and many thousands of his followers. The Irish won the day, but the Danes reoccupied Dublin, and the great back-and-forth struggle went on again with varying fortunes.

It was not, indeed, until the middle of the twelfth century that the Danes were finally driven out of the country, and then it was not by the Irish, but by the Anglo-Normans. Strongbow had by that time sailed from England and landed on the banks of the Waterford river. No weapon the Irish had could pierce the coats of mail of his followers, and with the Danes, too, he carried all before him. That was the beginning of the English conquest. Henry II. landed at Waterford in 1172, in great state. He moved to Dublin, and there held court in still greater state. In a pavilion of wickerwork he received the Irish chieftains with much pomp and circumstance, entered into alliances with them, and so departed. Dublin was now practically a Norman city, and, all alliances and agreements notwithstanding, there was no peace between the inhabitants of the city and the native Irish of the surrounding country. The slaughter in the "Bloody Fields" at Culenswood on that long-remembered "Black Monday" in the year 1209, when the native Irish set upon and slew some 500 citizens of Dublin, as they celebrated Easter, was only one amongst many similar incidents.

Towards the close of the fourteenth century Richard II. visited Dublin with much display. Some 30,000 bowmen he had in his retinue and 4,000 cavalry, and he came with his crown jewels and did lavishly entertain and was lavishly entertained, conferred with native chieftains, knighted some of them and returned to England. Hitherto Dublin had stood for the king, and it continued more or less faithful down to the time of the civil war in 1641. By that time, however, far-reaching social changes had come about. The Anglo-Irish had become more passionately Irish than the Irish themselves. They had resisted the Reformation, suffered much at the hands of the Protestants, and when James II. landed in Ireland to assert his right to the British throne, he had a great reception in Dublin. He returned to it for just one night after his defeat at the battle of Boyne, but thereafter the city saw him no more. Soon afterwards William III. was returning thanks in St. Patrick's cathedral for his victory.

Perhaps the most famous period in Dublin's history, however, is that wonderful twenty-five years stretching roughly from Grattan's entering the Irish parliament in 1775 to the passing of the Act of Union in 1800. The Dublin of those days was one of the greatest centres of wit and learning in Europe. Those spacious houses with wonderful doorways and stairways, now let out in tenements, which line so many of the streets between Stephen's green and St. Patrick's bore a very different aspect in Grattan's time from what they do to-day. In this respect Dublin's glory departed with the Act of Union, but nothing can ever take away from its natural beauty. The view of the custom house from the river, the view west across the College Park, with the granite spire of St. Andrew's shooting up amidst the trees; the view from the Wellington monument in Phoenix Park and the glimpses of the Dublin mountains as one walks along the north side of Stephen's green and beyond, are beauties which no change in fortune can take away.—Christian Science Monitor.

We'er Going to Hang a Child

(With Apologies to Luke North.)

By Robert Bickerdike, M. P.

We're going to hang a child in Canada—
Twelve men, a regular physician, a schooled jurist, and a Dominion full of righteous people have condemned a little boy of sixteen.
Whom the wisest on earth, its Saviour, prophets and sages, have refrained from judging; whom the Central Figure of the era (in whose name the nations are filled with Christians) admonished the world to "Judge Not"—twelve men, a regular physician, a schooled jurist and a Dominion full of righteous people have not only judged but condemned a little boy of sixteen.

We're going to hang a child—
Not in passion's blinding mists, or youth's high fever that riots through distended veins and overthrows the inner God;
Not in lightning spur to lust of blood—the quick flowering of atavistic germs from cave to forest;
Not (in a sudden clot that bursts a tiny vein and floods a lobe and clouds the mental vision;
Not for flashing impulses the nerve that reaches from the spleen and dethrones the clay's master.

We're going to hang a child
To uphold the majesty of the law, maintain the dignity of the country, a little boy of sixteen, to prove that Canada is a law-abiding state.
Eight million people against a little boy of sixteen.
We will hang him to prove our courage, our virtues, and our civilization
And the church and state are approvingly silent.

We're going to hang a little boy—
A jury, a doctor, and a "Daniel come to judgment" have condemned a little boy—read his heart, searched his soul, pierced the secret chambers of his mind, laid bare the human ego and found it all bad.
A jury, a doctor of physics, and a Daniel have measured the surging impulses of hot youth, balanced the force of impact and impulsion, read the record of the motor brain areas—
And found the little boy sane and bad—quite sane and all bad and have ordered him hanged.

We're going to hang a little boy—
A bad boy. Why is he bad, because he murdered? Then is he sane because he murdered? Or did he murder because he was sane?
Did the doctor measure the boy's sanity by his own? Would the doctor do murder? Is it only fear of hanging that keeps the doctor from murdering?
Then the little boy was a braver soul. If the doctor will consider why he would not murder, he will reach a truer measure of the little boy's sanity.
If the doctor has a better test of sanity than murder is, he is wiser than God.

We're going to hang a little boy
Unless the people or the Governor-General intervene.
Why are we going to hang the little boy? To show that murder is wrong?
But we are going to murder him. Murder means killing him. We are going to kill the little boy—we know—
We kill to show that killing is wrong.
We are not only a brave people—eight millions against one little boy; we are also a sensible, rational, intelligent people.
If it is wrong to kill, why do we kill?

We're going to hang a child—
Sixteen years from God. Take him back, God, he's bad, all bad, not fit to live with the eight million inhabitants of Canada.
Murder is right; we are going to murder a little boy. It's the little boy that's bad, not murder.
Why is the little boy bad? Because he is sane; if he were not sane he would not be bad and we would not hang him.
Take him back God—we reject him; he's all bad—a bad boy not fit to live with us.

Symbolic

"Could you suggest some suitable badge for our 'Don't Worry Club'" asked the typewriter boarder.

"How would a blue knot do?" asked the Cheerful Idiot.

STRENUOUS WORK SOON TELLS ON YOU

BUSINESS MEN AND BREAD WINNERS THE VICTIMS OF NERVOUS EXHAUSTION.

When worry is added to overwork men soon become the victims of nervous exhaustion—neurasthenia — the doctor calls it. Some have no reserve strength in their systems to bear the strain; others overtax what strength they have. If you find that you are nervous and not sure of yourself, that you sleep badly, and wake up tired and aching, your nerves are out of order. Other signs are inability to take proper interest in your work; your appetite is fickle; your back feels weak, and you are greatly depressed in spirits. One or more of these signs mean that you should take prompt steps to stop mischief by nourishing the nerves with the food they thrive on, namely, the rich, red blood made by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These Pills have cured thousands of cases of nervous disorders including nervous prostration, neuralgia, St. Vitus' dance and partial paralysis. Here is an example: Mr. P. H. Callan, a well-known business man in Coleman, P. E. I., says: "I owe my present health, if not life itself, to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I had always been an active man, and when I began to run down in health paid little attention to it as I thought it only a temporary weakness. As time passed, however, I found myself growing worse, and consulted a doctor, who said that I was not only badly run down, but that my nervous system was badly shattered. I lost flesh, my appetite was poor, I slept badly and notwithstanding the doctor's treatment grew so weak that I had to leave my business and was confined to the house. Time went on and I was steadily growing weaker, and my friends were all greatly alarmed by my condition. In this condition I was strongly recommended to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and as the doctor's medicine was not helping me I decided to do so. But the time I had used three boxes I could feel that they were helping me. When I had taken eight boxes of the pills I felt able to attend to my business again, and people were surprised to see me out. I continued the use of the pills until I had taken 12 boxes, by which time I was feeling as well as I ever did, and was being congratulated by all my friends on my full restoration to health. I feel sure that if I had used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at the outset I would not only have saved much money spent in doctor's bills, but would have had renewed health sooner. I cannot speak too highly of this medicine, and would recommend it to every man who feels weak, nervous or run down."

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer, or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

More Beans, Less Meat

In these [illegible] days there are thousands of families who find it a hard task to keep needful daily outlay within the limit of slender means. To some, [illegible] know beans. To say "he doesn't know beans" used to be a very common way of describing an ignorant or stupid fellow-mortal.

In these times of dear bread, dear meat, dear potatoes and dear living it may not be out of the way to ask whether the masses who are long on appetite and short of cash "know beans." Ninety per cent. of the dry matter in common shelled beans is digestible. The bean is so rich in starch and nutritious protein that it serves as a tolerable substitute for meat. There are a hundred different ways of cooking and serving the various kinds of beans so as to make most palatable soups and salads. Why not give this finest of the legumes a more frequent placing in our daily menus?

Here follow some bean recipes.

CREAMED BEANS.

Those who are using beans as a substitute for potatoes will find this a delicious variation. Soak a pint of beans in cold water overnight. In the morning put them on in enough slightly salted water to cover and let boil until broken in pieces and very soft. One hour before meal time rub beans through colander. Add to the pulp a white sauce made by cooking together a tablespoonful of butter and one of flour, pouring a half cup of milk over and stirring until thick and smooth. Mix the bean pulp thoroughly with this sauce. Lastly, add two well-beaten eggs, pepper and salt to taste. Heat all hard for a moment, then into buttered pudding dish, sprinkle fine buttered crumbs over top and bake in hot oven until light brown. Serve at once.

BEAN PUREE.

Soak one pint dried Lima beans in water overnight. In the morning drain, cover with fresh boiling water, add one teaspoonful salt, one heaping tablespoonful butter, and simmer till tender. Mash with a potato masher, add more salt if necessary, one saltspoonful paprika, two tablespoonfuls cream, and beat with a fork until smooth and creamy. Place in ramekins, cover tops with fine bread crumbs, dot with bits of butter and brown in a quick oven. A nutritious substitute for meat.

BAKED LIMA BEANS AND PORK.

Cook a four inch square of salt pork or bacon until done, then take out and in the same water cook a quart of Lima beans, measured after shelling. When the skin curls back when you blow on it, drain beans, put pork in centre of baking dish and pile beans around. Bake until pork is browned. In the winter dried Limas may be used after soaking.

BEAN CUSTARD PIE.

Make a light short piecrust and line the pie pan with it. Have ready one cupful of Lima beans, which have been cooked in a little water until tender. Mash them through a sieve and add the well-beaten yolks of two eggs, one-half cupful of sugar, one tablespoonful of vinegar, and season with nutmeg. Mix well and pour into the bottom crust. Place in the oven and bake until firm, then cover with a meringue, made by beating the whites of the two eggs and adding two teaspoonfuls of powdered sugar. Replace in the oven and brown slightly.

PORK AND NEW BEANS.

Prepare two quarts stringless string beans by washing carefully, then cutting them into inch lengths. Place beans in slightly-salted boiling water and boil until tender. When done, drain and put beans in dripping pan. Have ready two pounds pork chops, lay the meat on top of the beans, season with salt and pepper. Bake in a hot over thirty minutes or until meat is tender and browned. Serve very hot. Put roast pork chops on a platter with parsley. Put beans in a vegetable dish and pour gravy over. Make gravy of combined juices of meat and beans in bottom of baking pan.

FRIED SHELL BEANS.

This is an unusual recipe and will be found highly satisfactory. Cook shelled beans in the usual way. Make a batter of egg and cracker crumbs and dip the beans into it, frying in deep fat until brown. The fat should be very hot when the beans are put into it, and they should also be served while hot.

SALAD OF LIMA BEANS.

Soak the beans, and cook them as usual in salted water until they are done. Drain and let get very cold. Make a dressing of oil, white vinegar, salt, white pepper and a little mustard, adding to it some chopped parsley and chopped chives. Also add a sweet red pepper, or pimento, chopped till very fine, and then pour over the beans.

DRS. SOPER & WHITE
SPECIALISTS
Piles, Eczema, Asthma, Catarrh, Pimples, Dyspepsia, Epilepsy, Rheumatism, Skin, Kidney, Blood, Nerve and Bladder Diseases.
Call or send history for free advice. Medicine furnished in tablet form. Hours—10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2 to 6 p.m. Sundays—10 a.m. to 1 p.m.
Consultation Free
DRS. SOPER & WHITE
25 Toronto St., Toronto, Ont.
Please Mention This Paper.

"Do It Now"

We all know the light in which it pleased the Prussian Professor to present the Prussian spirit to an admiring world. It is admitted that the State, a military and political abstraction, personified in the King, is supreme, and that the individual lives only by and for the State. It is proclaimed that the word "duty" is the beginning and the end of the rights of the individual, replacing the words "Liberty, Equality, Fraternity," which more than a century ago seemed to bring a new hope and a new dignity to the individual human life, even in Prussia. But, with a wealth of cerebrous and metaphysical argument the Prussian professor maintains that duty is not a bond if it be freely accepted, that chains may be worn like a splendid decoration. Moreover, the Professor urges, the bondage of the State covers only a part of life. The State has to do only with the policy of peace and the policy of war, which as Clausewitz said, is a continuation of the policy of peace by other means. For these the individual must surrender his conscience, his judgment, his body and his life; in all other matters he is free. He may revile God, even the old German God, or worship him in his own fashion. He may hold any theory about the authorship of the Iliad, the nature of evolution, or the constitution of matter. He may, unlike the hide-bound Englishman, who only thinks himself free, go to the opera in a billycock, or eat odd meals in odder ways, without incurring the reprobation of society. He may, in fact, in every realm of thought or conduct outside the province of the State, pursue any vagary of the all-embracing, all-comprehending, colossal German intellect. Is that not enough for anyone? Is one not proud to be a Prussian?

Unfortunately, even in Prussia, there are some enquiring minds who try to analyze. What is the State to which we are told that we owe duty? The question soon comes to be: Who are the State? Even in Prussia, where organization is so wonderful, it turns out that the State is not a living being emanating wisdom and morality from a superhuman soul. It is merely a set of individual human beings, wilful and fallacious like other human beings, but with the power at any particular moment of imposing their will and their ideas (possibly even fallacies) as the conceptions which determine duty for all the other individuals. And thus we come straight upon the common questions that agitate nations without the advantage of being Prussian. Questions of franchise, questions of voting, questions as to whether those people who have to lay down conscience and judgment, body and life, at the biding of the State, may not have some claim to assist in choosing the persons who, for the time being, are the State.

A rumor of these strange enquiries has reached the Imperial Chancellor, and, to employ a vulgar phrase, he has given the show away. He has admitted that all is not well in Prussia; that the individuals who compose the State have some right to determine its course, or to think that they are determining its course, by having votes. And so, after the war, the matter is to be considered generously, the franchise is to be extended, and the Prussian people are to have some share in the Prussian State. Even this mild promise of benefits to come, however, has not quieted the Prussians. Scheidemann, the famous Socialist leader, has published an article in Vorwaerts which says, in effect, "Do it now." "The Chancellor," says this outspoken Socialist, "has made many good and wise speeches during the war, especially the last one in the Lower House of the Diet, which promised much for the future. But why is he afraid to do what is absolutely necessary? He will begin Prussia's cure only after the war. In Russia, too, reforms had been promised after the war, but the war lasted too long for the Russians."

"They say that so many difficulties are in the way of electoral reform. But look what tremendous difficulties people have to face now. Thousands die every day for the Fatherland, and millions at the same time bear the greatest sufferings. They are asked why? Not one day should inequality of rights remain." And so, very strangely, to the Prussian Professor, this war, the creation of the Prussian State, is bringing the Prussians precisely to that point in political history that England and France have long passed by.—Communicated.

QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY
KINGSTON ONTARIO
ARTS
MEDICINE EDUCATION
APPLIED SCIENCE
Mining, Chemical, Civil, Mechanical and Electrical Engineering.
HOME STUDY
Arts Course by correspondence. Degree with one year's attendance.
Summer School July and August
Navigation School December to April
GEO. Y. CHOWN, Registrar

MYRRH CURES MALARIA.

Isis Received Credit for Cures Her Incense Worked.

Dr. Aaron Jeffrey, of Newport News, Va., as the result of investigating the therapeutic properties of myrrh, has evolved a theory regarding the cures effected among Egyptians who went to pray for long periods in the temple of Isis. Myrrh was kept burning continuously before the altar, and he says, those who prayed were benefited by inhaling the fumes.

The announcement of this theory is made in connection with some remarks on what is apparently an effective treatment for malaria, myrrh being one of the ingredients. Writing in the "American Journal of Clinical Medicine," he says:

"Dr. William H. Ribble, sen., of Wytheville, Va. (who died several years ago), said to me on one occasion that he would tell me how to break up any attack of malaria and then proceeded to tell me the following story:

"As one day he was jogging along a country road in Nelson county, Va., some twenty years before, he was joined by a Methodist circuit rider. When the old preacher learned that Dr. Ribble was going to visit a man having chills and fever, and that in spite of the large doses of quinine and all his treatment the man continued to have chills, the old gentleman said: 'If you promise not to tell anyone, I will tell you what will cure your man.' And this was his prescription:

"'Mix forty grains of quinine, twenty grains of myrrh and ten grains of extract of licorice and make into forty pills. Take one pill every two hours until all are taken.' That was all.

"As the old man rode off he repeated: 'The chills will stop and your man will have no more.'

"Dr. Ribble told me that he followed the preacher's directions, and, sure enough, the patient promptly got well. He now had been using the same prescription for more than twenty years, and always with the same good results. He added that he supposed the old fellow was dead by now, and that he hardly committed a breach of confidence by telling his secret after twenty years had lapsed.

"After this conversation with Dr. Ribble I began the use of myrrh and quinine, writing for forty capsules, each containing one grain of bisulphate of quinine and one-half grain of powdered myrrh, the patient to take one capsule every two hours from the time he awoke in the morning until bedtime. And I always effected a cure. The licorice, of course, has no virtue, being used simply as a binder to hold the myrrh and quinine together so as to make the pill mass.

"I was desirous to know in what way myrrh could be of benefit in malaria, so consulted a number of materia medicas as to the action of myrrh but with little or no satisfaction. Finally, in a little book, namely, Ring's 'Elements of Therapeutics,' I found the statement that myrrh given internally increases the number of white corpuscles of the blood fourfold. Now, we are told that the leucocytes are the scavengers of the blood; so if myrrh increases their number, the malarial plasmodia (the organisms that cause malaria) are more readily exterminated.

"I am convinced that small doses of quinine given at short intervals are more efficacious than large doses at long intervals.

"It may be—though I confess it is a rather farfetched idea—that the reason why the ancient Egyptians were cured by their various fevers and other illnesses by going to the Temple of Isis and praying a week or more to this goddess was because of the fact that myrrh was continually burning on the altar. As a consequence, the votaries plentifully inhaled the fumes of myrrh and thus received its physiological effects."—New York Times.

Big Telephone Pole.

The highest telephone or telegraph pole in the world has recently been installed to carry wires over a river in the state of Washington. The old pole at this point was [illegible] feet high, but the increasing size of the steamers using the river made it necessary to raise the wires. The new pole is [illegible] feet high, a single stick of [illegible]. It took a crew of 12 men and a donkey engine to set it, and it is further secured by a double set of guys and braces, running from a point half way to the top [illegible] nearly [illegible].

Old Dutch insures Perfect Sanitation for all Metal Ware and Enamel Surfaces.
A sweet hygienic refrigerator safeguards your health and keeps food longer and better.

GOOD SOUP FOR HEALTH, WEALTH

Turn Your Daily Waste Into Nourishment.

Some Good Recipes That Will Help.

There are three obvious ways to reduce the cost of living. We can so increase the production of the necessaries of life as to bring supply into nearer balance with demand, thus insuring normal prices; or we can cut down consumption of what we eat and wear by the practice of simple economy; or we can eliminate waste.

To increase production takes time, but there is instant relief to be obtained through the practice of economy and the stoppage of waste.

Our housewives have no adequate idea of how greatly they may contribute to the general welfare by the stoppage of waste. What we throw into the garbage can or feed to the pigs the French woman puts in her soup kettle. In that depository she finds it possible by judicious admixture and proper seasoning and simmering to extract the full measure of remaining nutritive substance and place it upon her dinner table in various and enticing forms of relishing soup. If meats are not always available there are hundreds of ways of preparing meatless soups of fine flavor. It is not an exaggeration to say that the housewives of the country might do much to float it back into the haven of cheaper living by a generous outpour of savory soups.

The following soup suggestions are made by Elizabeth Lee, a practiced writer on the subject of domestic economy:

In these days of high cost of living meatless soups will be a means of saving and really better than the heavier kinds.

GREEN PEA SOUP.

Green pea soup is made by cooking a quarter of shelled peas in three pints of water, then rubbing them through a sieve.

The peas are put back into the water in which they have been boiled. One tablespoonful of flour is beaten into two tablespoonfuls of butter and then added to the peas. Salt and pepper to taste come next, and finally one quart of boiling hot milk is gradually stirred in. The mixture should be cooked about 10 minutes. If the flavor of onion is liked one should be boiled with the peas.

This is one of Mrs. Parloa's recipes and is a most delicious soup.

CORN CHOWDER.

Corn chowder, though quite an inexpensive dish, is very appetizing. A cupful of corn is boiled soft and then rubbed smooth. In the meantime cut two ounces of fat pork into small pieces and fry with a sliced onion. Cut up four large potatoes into cubes and scald one quart of milk. Put corn, pork fat strained, potatoes, milk and seasoning into a saucepan and bring to a boil.

Rub a couple of tablespoonfuls of butter into a little flour and add to the chowder to thicken.

Dried herbs are a great boon to housekeepers who live far from a store. In fact, city residents find them a very great convenience, too. They come in compact form, and the process of drying is so complete, even the fresh herbs are not found to be superior to them. They are an economy, also. One tablespoonful of powdered mixed herbs is equal to a handful of soup greens.

ONION SOUP.

A good onion soup is made by boiling onions gently until cooked through. They should then be chopped and put into a saucepan containing one quart or more of water. A large cupful of potatoes cut up is added with salt and pepper to taste, also a level dessertspoonful of dried herbs. The soup can be thickened with the butter and flour rubbed together, as before directed.

VEGETABLE SOUP.

A good substantial soup can be made from any soup bone and vegetables. Almost any kind of the latter will do except tomatoes.

Meat bone and vegetables are boiled together and then, when thoroughly cooked, are strained. One quart of potatoes finely mashed are added to the liquid, and lastly a cupful of boiling milk. Seasoning should be added and, if liked, a tablespoonful of butter rubbed up with a little flour, but the potatoes will serve to thicken. Serve with chopped parsley.

CREAM OF CORN.

Cream of corn soup makes a nourishing dish and a soup of this kind may be very inexpensive as well as quickly prepared.

The corn should be cooked and then scraped from the cob. One cup of the scraped corn is rubbed through a sieve and put into a saucepan.

To this is added one cup of boiling water, a little onion juice and salt and pepper to taste.

In a double boiler heat one cup of milk, and, when boiling, stir into it a tablespoonful or so of cornstarch and the same quantity of butter. When thickened put in the corn and boil together for about five minutes.

A couple of tablespoonfuls of whipped cream stirred in just before serving is an improvement to the soup but is not a necessity.

WIT AND HUMOR

A PLAIN THIEF.

(Life)

Harduppe—What is your opinion of Pinchit's honesty?

Borrowell—Mighty poor. He actually came around to my house and stole an umbrella I had borrowed from him.

THE DOCTOR'S ORDERS.

(Puck)

Doctor—I advised you to take a two-mile walk every day. Is it doing you any good?

Patient—Not so much good yet; but I have figured out a system of short cuts that saves a lot of time.

THE WIDOW'S GRIEF.

(Boston Transcript)

"But my dear, you should not allow your grief to overcome you. Remember, your husband is far happier in the other world."

"M—maybe he is, b—but I think you are exceedingly rude to say so."

CAUTIOUS.

(Washington Star)

"Are you in favor of peace at any price?"

"What's the use of discussing it?" inquired Senator Sorghum. "Before I give any thought to such a transaction you'll have to show me a responsible party who wants to make such a deal and who is competent to guarantee the goods."

THE MANAGER's PROBLEM.

(Boston Transcript)

Actor—I say, old man, I wish you'd advance me $5 and take it out of my first week's salary.

Manager—But, my dear fellow, suppose it happened that I couldn't pay your first week's salary, where would I be?

CAPABLE HENRIETTA.

(Washington Star)

"Do you think your wife would excel in statesmanship if she had an opportunity?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Meekton. "Henrietta is not only a powerful hand in a regular argument, but she has gifts for prolonged discourse that would make her a wonder at filibustering."

A BAD FAULT.

(Yonkers Statesman)

"I'd like to exchange that piano you sold me for my daughter," said the man in the music store.

"Anything wrong with it?" asked the salesman.

"Yes; it is defective."

"How so?"

"It has only one soft pedal. I'd like to exchange it for a piano with two soft pedals."

A WIDOWER.

(Judge)

Milly—I would only marry a man who has lived and suffered.

Tilly—I suppose what you want is a widower.

OF COURSE.

(Boston Transcript)

Mrs. Kawler (discussing the war)—Belgium should be restored, of course.

Mrs. Blunderby—Yes, and, as our President suggests, I think there should be anatomy for Poland.

PLAINLY STATED.

(Judge)

Inquirer—Just where did the torpedo strike? I want to know exactly.

Sailor Man—Stabbo'ad bilge, mum, 'aft o' 'midship, forra'd o' number two bunker.

COMMON STOCK.

(Life)

Boggs—I understand that the Uptonsmythe have bought a whole new set of ancestors with the proceeds of their steel holdings.

Toggs—I always suspect that they came of common stock.

JIMSON'S [illegible]OLD.

"Has Jimson ever had much of a hold on you?"

"He succeeded in pulling my leg once."

HIS VIEW.

(Transcript)

She—How foolish we were when we were young.

He—Yes, and how young we were when we were married.

CAUSE AND EFFECT.

(The Lamb)

Mrs. Crabshaw—I might have married that man who became a millionaire.

Crabshaw—Forget it, my dear. If he'd married you he would be as poor as I am.

INEXCUSABLE WASTE.

(Washington Star)

"What do you think of this idea of burning people in effigy?"

"I'm against it," replied Senator Sorghum. "When fuel is so expensive, there's no excuse for the waste."

DIFFERENT.

(Baltimore American)

"I intend to enjoy some piscatorial diversion to-morrow."

"Oh, professor, what do you want to bother with such highbrow things? Come with us on our fishing party."

"TIP"SY.

(Puck)

Rural Aunt—Doesn't the waiter act queer?

Dasher—Decidedly so; I believe the fellow is tipsy.

Rural Aunt—Dear me; he must be one of the victims of that tipping habit I've read so much about?

A HUSTLER.

(Detroit Free Press)

"Do you see that young fellow over there?" said the manager of the factory. "He's made up his mind that some day he is going to get my job away from me."

"Is that so? I shouldn't think you'd keep him around here then."

"Great Scott, man; I'd be mighty lucky if every fellow in this plant had the same idea."

How Eggs Are Tainted.

Eggs, be they ever so fresh, are tainted by everything with which they come in contact, because the shell of the egg is an absorbing surface. Odors readily penetrate the shell of an egg.

If hen's nest into which the egg was laid is not clean, the shell of the egg absorbs the odor of the nest and the egg will have an unpleasant flavor.

Eggs, all the way from the nest to the home of the consumer are liable to be tainted, owing to the absorbability of their shells.

In the home eggs should be placed in a glass, stone or tin dish and never be placed near anything that has an odor.

A dish of eggs may have their flavor ruined by being near the coffee box—near onions—or any other food.

It is for this reason every housekeeper should take pains to keep the supply of eggs in a separate dish and separate refrigerator.

Lion Signs in England.

Lions have always been and are now very favorite signs in England—lions white, black, red, brown, golden, yellow—red being most common. Probably the Red Lion originated with the badge of John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, who married the daughter of Don Pegro, King of Leon and Castile, and who adopted the lion rampant gules of Leon to represent his claim to the throne. Under Richard and John lions became the settled arms of England and were generally used by those who could find any claim.—London Mail.

THE SEASON'S first holiday comes as a fitting introduction to Summer and of course Summer Clothes and the most important naturally being Ready-To-Wear.

Men's Ready-to-wear

Those New Spring Suits

In fine Worsteds, neat and new patterns consisting of small checks and pin head stripes.

Grey, Brown and Blue shades in fast color keeping dyes. Well made and lined and absolutely perfect fitting. Sizes to fit every man and a range of prices that compared with to-day's values, look exceedingly small.

Men's Suits $8.50, $10, $12.50, $14.50, $16 up to $21.00.

Boys' Suits, $4.50, $5, $6.50 and up to $9.

MEN'S NECKWEAR

In Sporty new colorings and designs 50c & 75c.

SPORT & NEGLIGEE SHIRTS

White and new stripes, sizes 14 to 18½ $1 to $1.75.

New Belts, Summery Socks, Athletic Underwear, Hats and Eastern Caps, all in new summer styles.

Women's Ready-to-wear

DAINTY BLOUSES

White Voille. Beautifully made and trimmed, each $1.25, $2.25, & $3

Rich Crepe de Chene, Georgette and Habuti Silk Blouses, All the newest shades and black and white, $2.25 to $5.00.

Awning Stripe Sport Skirts

In the pretty new color effects, at $2.75 and $3.00.

MIDDY BLOUSES

In Indian Head, nicely made and trimmed 75c, $1, 1.25.

SERGE SKIRTS

Navy and black. Best values we ever had. New models, well made and perfect fitting. $5.00.

THESE SILK GLOVES Made in Canada, Black, White and Tan

And nothing could be more sensible, more good looking, more attractive than gloves of silk and the Niagara Maid at that. It's the niftiest silk glove we know of. Per pair $1.00.

Buy All You Need Of Towellings, Tickings, Cottonades, Prints, Ginghams, Shirtings, Pillow Cottons, Grey and White Cottons and Flannelettes. Our prices for these lines are in practically every instance below the actual wholesale cost. You should buy now.

STEPHAN BROS.

JUST ARRIVED

TEA

That famous Japan at........................ 35c a lb.
Some choice black tea at ... 50c and 60c a lb.

ORANGES

From 1c each to 50c a dozen

Bananas, Grape Fruit, Pineapples, Lemons and choice Bermuda Onions.

In Bulk Peanut Butter, Heinz' Pickles, Soda Biscuits, at old prices.

C. PATRICK

PHONE 165 WALKERTON

Seeing the Opportunity and Seizing it are Two Very Different Matters.

Why do we claim the Bacon we offer is the brand of Bacon that you should buy if you want the best?

Because of:—Appearance and Quality: Sure to satisfy: Taste that is just right; Nice Trim and Mild. Sweet Cure.

Nowhere will you find a Bacon that you can eat with greater pleasure and enjoyment.

"A Try—Tells Why"

GOODE & McKAY

PHONE 67 The People's Grocery

Straw Hats and Panamas

For the Holiday. Warm Weather Coming and we are Ready for It.

Panama Chip Hats, fedora and telescope crowns, very stylish 75c, 85c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00, $2.50, $3.25.

Sennit Sailors and plain, high, medium and low crowns, 50c to $3.00 each.

Snap Brims and Plain Sailors for the boys, 25c, 50c, 75c, $1.00 to $1.50.

Children's Straw Hats of Milan Braids, Tuscan and Common Straws. Everything that is new in shape, 50c to $2.00 each.

Pretty Parasols in black and fancy, just opened for the summer this week. This line will interest you.

Rain Coats and Umbrellas for the Wet Weather

Rain Capes and Coats for the children, $3.50, $5.00 to $8.00; Misses' and Ladies' Rain Coats, plain Poplin and Tweed effects, $4.60, $6.00, $7.00, $8.00, $10.00, and $12.00.

You will Want a New Blouse Now

See our selection. Mull, Lawn, Voille, Crepe and Silk, very pretty styles, $1.00, $1.60, $2.00, $3.00, $4.00, and $5.00.

McBURNEY & CO.

THE PEOPLE'S STORE

Shopping Satisfaction

BECAUSE it is the privilege of the public to choose and transfer the favor of their patronage when and as they please, no store can claim that any customer belongs to it only so long as the store satisfies from individual point of view.

It is Satisfaction that you get at OUR Store.

Everything you need or want—and plenty of it.

Prompt service—courtesy—full stocks. Do your shopping here and see how convenient it is.

Butterick Quarterly.

June Fashion Sheets.

BUTTERICK PATTERNS

Phone 53 J. H. APPEL Walkerton

OUR NEIGHBORING TOWNS, VILLAGES AND COUNTRYSIDE

Newsy Happenings of the Week Collected for Our Readers by a Staff of Live Correspondents

MILDMAY

Mr. Conrad Faupel was taken to Fergus hospital on Friday afternoon and operated on Saturday morning for bladder trouble. On Monday morning he took a turn for the worse and soon died. The remains were brought to Mildmay on Monday evening.

Mr. George Helwig accompanied [illegible] of Harriston on a fishing trip to Pike Bay. They were successful in securing a nice catch of perch.

Communion services were held in the Presbyterian Church on Sunday afternoon.

A meeting of the Sports Committee was held in the town hall on Thursday evening last week to get everything in order for the celebration on Victoria Day.

Mr. John Hunstein is slowly progressing to recovery. It will be a couple of months before he will be able to be around again.

The road grader is at work on the Carrick roads this week. Instead of the usual two teams of horses required to haul the grader this year, Frank Rents's steam traction engine is the motive power.

Mr. John Ripke, of Con. 6, Bruce Township is visiting at Mr. Chas. Wendt's this week.

While cranking his father's Ford car on Tuesday morning May 15th Mr. Albert Buhlman had his arm badly twisted on account of the engine back-firing. On examination the doctor found that the wrist bone had been fractured. Albert will be without the use of his right arm for some time.

Mr. J. A. Matsh formerly pastor of the Presbyterian church will take part in the entertainment to be given in the town hall on May 24th.

The Carrick council has leased a portion of the old Fair grounds north of the town hall to be used for the cultivation of vegetables.

Mr. Charlie Buhlman and Ed. Wittich journeyed to Sauble Falls last Wednesday and returned with a good catch of suckers.

Miss Vivian Butchart, a graduate nurse of the Sick Children's Hospital Toronto, made a short visit to Mildmay last Tuesday. Her father Mr. Ed. Butchart now of Edmonton formerly kept a general store here.

Mr. John R Wendt of Wroxeter visited for a short time in town on Sunday.

SOLWAY

Mr. and Mrs. Dave O'Connor from Elderslie spent Sunday at the home of Mr. E. O'Connor.

BORN—At the Lady Minto Hospital, New Liskeard on Monday May 14th, to Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Michell, Cobalt, a son, (James Goldie.)

Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Grubb and young son from Formosa spent Sunday at the home of Mr. John Stroeder.

Dietrich Bros. had a bee, hauling gravel on Wednesday and a euchre party the same night.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Spitzig from near Cargill visited at the home of the former's sister, Mrs. Alex Knoll here on Thursday last.

Mrs. Ben Michell attended the reception given her brother Pte. Chas. A. Whitehead, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Whitehead on Tuesday evening.

Quite a number of ladies were present at the meeting of the Red Cross Society in the Township Hall on Thursday last. Fifteen pairs of socks were turned in, also a number of shirts and pyjamas. The next meeting will be held on Thursday, May 31st.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lambertus spent Sunday at the home of Mr. John Lambertus near Walkerton.

OTTER CREEK

The crops look fine here after the warm and much welcomed rain.

Wolfe Brothers motored from Clifford up to their uncle's Henry Wolfe on Friday.

Mr. Swartz Beck was visiting at his home near Carlsruhe.

Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Schumacher and daughter of Belmore were visiting relatives here on Sunday.

The very severe electrical and wind storm which passed through here on Saturday did considerable damage tearing down fences and breaking barn doors. It blew Mr. David Gress' stone silo off the foundation and completely ruined it.

Mr. Henry Dippel has taken up the cream route for the Walkerton Egg and Dairy through Mildmay.

Miss Katherine Gress returned home from her work at Mr. George Klein's near Mildmay.

The thieves in both our neighboring towns have been busy carrying off potatoes and meat. So far we have been spared.

GLAMIS

Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Peacock and daughters of Meaford, motored here on Saturday and spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. N. C. McFarlane.

Mr. Kidd of Toronto has been visiting his brother here in the village.

Miss Ethel Stewart has returned to Guelph for take another course.

Mr. and Mrs. James McLennan visited her mother Mr. McLeod of Kincardine last week.

Pte. Clyde McKeeman received orders to report in Toronto, and left for the city on Thursday morning.

Mrs. J. M. Draper of Stratford is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. McIntosh.

Miss Edith Howson has returned home after spending some time at Dr. Black's of Clifford.

Pte. Thomas McCormick, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. McCormick, has been wounded. No particulars of his injuries have been received.

On Friday afternoon collectors visited the burg and vicinity, canvassing for funds in aid of the Y. M. C. A. War Work.

Mr. Ed. Downey has returned home from Niagara Falls.

On Wednesday last John K. McLennan had his barn-raising. He will have a fine barn when work is completed. Jos Weightson was the framer.

Mrs. W. F. Stewart has returned home from an extended visit with friends in Toronto, Bradford, and other points.

Miss Ray of Lindsay, left on Saturday morning for Wroxeter to visit friends before returning home.

Pte. Wilbert McNally who enlisted a year ago with the 160th Batt. we understand is being discharged as he is physically unfit for military service.

Mr. Burrows, Mr. and Mrs. Loney, and Mr. and Mrs. Beacock of Wiarton were Sunday visitors at W. J. Grahams.

Miss Susie Thompson spent Saturday and Sunday with her friend, Miss Mildred McLaren of Tiverton.

Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Tufford and Mrs. Laing and Mrs. Davidson of Beamsville motored here on Saturday and returned on Monday, accompanied by Mrs. Tufford's sister, Miss Jennie McKeeman.

BRANT AVENUE

Pte. Charles Whitehead who enlisted in a Western Batt'n is home on last leave visiting his parents Mr. and Mrs. John Whitehead. This is Charlies' first visit home in a about eight years. He makes a splended soldier and the Kaiser had better keep himself well out of the way as Charlie is an expert marksman.

Last Saturday's heavy rain surely was welcomed by our farmers as their fall wheat was almost a failure this rain ought to help it some.

Seeding is all finished throughout this vicinity and farmers are all busy getting the root grounds ready, putting up new fences, and fixing things up.

Messrs. J. Ernst and F. Frank wheeled to Hanover last Sunday and renewed old acquaintances.

Mr. J. J. Zettler, our enterprising cattle dealer, has some 60 odd cattle on his 150 acre grass farm on 2nd. con. and these are a choice bunch of beefsteakers. He believes if you don't risk you won't win.

Mr. Tom Watson of Toronto is on on an extended visit to his cousin, Mrs. James McCarter.

Secure kind of quiet on this line as there has been no party or social of any kind since last winter, when for a few weeks it was quite lively, it sure seems like hard times alright. Cheer up boys, we may soon have to go to the war.

Recently one of the neighboring farmer's collie dog got somewhat vicious and to avoid further trouble among some people, Mr. Lambert Gallop was called on and he soon put the canine out of commission.

CHEPSTOW

Mr. and Mrs. J. Fischer and daughter of Memphis, Tenn. arrived on Saturday and will spend the summer months with the latter's mother, Mrs. R. Powers.

Mr. F. Phelan of the Galt Collegiate teaching staff, spent the week-end at his home.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Meyer and family motored from Hanover and spent the Sunday with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. Moblin.

Miss Mary Graf and Misses J. and M. Spitzig, returned to Kitchener on Saturday to resume their positions, after spending a week at their respective homes.

Mr. Wm. Coumans, who was removed to the County Hospital some two weeks ago, is progressing favorably, and expects to be released from that, instution shortly Mrs. Jos. Fritz who has been ailing for some time past from nervous trouble, was admitted to the Hospital on Monday.

The death occurred after a brief illness, of a respected citizen of the community, in the person of Mrs. John Cassidy Sr. Deceased who was 55 years of age contracted a severe cold a few weeks ago, which developed into pleuro-pneumonia and from whose clutches the patient was unable to rally. Besides a sorrowing husband, one son and eight daughters survive to mourn the loss of a mother. The remains were interred in the R. C. cemetery this Thursday morning.

EAST BRUCE

Jas. Geo. Brown has taken a position at Harriston.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Brownscombe have got settled in their new home at Lovat, he having joined partnership with his brother Edgar in the tile and brick business, We welcome them as citizens.

Mr. Frank McLennan of Glamis spent Sunday on the 5th.

Howard McPhail is engaged with Dunc. Currie for the summer.

Mr. Jno Colwell of the 10th has purchased a new Ford Car.

War news was again received of the late Pte. McGillivary, son of Mr and Mrs. Colin McGillivary, that he died of wounds received on the battle-field of France a short time ago. He me death bravely in the noble cause for King and Country. He enlisted in the West. The sympathy of the community goes to the bereaved ones.

Mrs. A. McIntyre of Port Elgin got word that her brave and noble son Dan, gave his life for his country. Pte. Dan was born and raised to manhood at Lovat and vicinity. He has three more brothers, two training in England and one at the firing line. Two of Bruce's sons were killed within a week, bringing the horrors of war home to all. Our sympathy is extended to Mrs. McIntyre in the loss of her son.

FORMOSA

SEPARATE SCHOOL REPORT

Fourth Form.

Leo Kraemer, Hilda Kuntz, Louise Oberle, Carolina Beninger, Anthony Wiesser, Hedwig Beninger, Irene Hahn Leander Dentinger, Gertrude Bildstein, Rosalia Weiler, Eleanor Waechter.

Third Form.

Clarence Hauck, Willie Waechter, Marie Schnurr, Rupert Welsher, Richard Kuntz. Loretta Gutcher, Hildegard Strauss, Nettie Beninger, Johanna Fedy, Alice Weiler, Edgar Lehmann, Hilaria Zettel, Olivia Kraemer, Joseph Waechter, Marie Dentinger, Clara Oberle, Georgina Kuntz, Elizabeth Messel, Magdalena Durrer, Leo Oberle.

Second Form

Henrietta Zettel, Matrona Brick, William Messel, Gertrude Zimmer, Margaret Kraemer, Mildred Bildstein, Ludwina Kuntz, Mathilda Gutscher, Clarence Beninger, Laura Beninger, Alfred Rettinger, Leonard Oberle, Marianne Obrecht, Edwina Weiss, John Schnitzler, Vera Noll, Otto Dittner, Cornelius Obermeyer, Julitta Weiler, Daniel Weiss, Henry Oppermann, Margaret Beninger.

First Form

Malinda Schnurr, Alphonse Schill, Elmer Schefter, Arthur Hehn, Gerald Welsher, Mary Fischer, Clara Weiss, Bernolda Bruder, Isidore Schnurr. Loretta Oppermann.

PINKERTON

Rev. R. M. and Mrs. Gale went to Toronto on Friday to attend the graduation of their son, Ewart. Mr. Jas. Gale of Alma occupied the pulpit here.

Mr. R. L. Garland of Palmerston spent Sunday at his home here.

Mr. R. Donnelly purchased an Overland touring car last week from the local agent, Mr. Geo. Gilchrist.

Mr. Albert Pinkerton is remodelling the store. We understand it is his intention to brick it.

CARGILL

Mrs. Wm. Kenna of Ayton spent Sunday with her daughter Miss Loretta Kenna here.

Mrs. C. W. Kerling is visiting her sister Mrs. A. J. Helm in Cranbrook.

Pte. Harold Loughleen of the C. A. M. C. London was home on last leave on Friday. Harold expects to go overseas shortly. The citizens presented him with a five dollar gold piece and a pair of socks.

Mr. Isaac Chambers who has been working in Stratford is visiting at the home of the former's daughter, Mrs. W. C. Almack here.

Mr. E. Ziegler of Winnipeg spent Sunday with his brother M. L. Ziegler here.

Mr. Joseph Clancy made a business trip to Toronto on Saturday.

Mr. James Alexander of the Royal Bank staff Elmwood spent Sunday at his home here.

Mrs. J. MacFoggan spent last week with relatives in Durham and Priceville.

BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. F. F. Balsdon on Tuesday May 15th, a daughter, (Frances Jean.)

The reception given Alex Thompson by the Bruce Preparedness League in the Foresters Hall on Friday night was largely attended. Among the speakers from other towns were Messrs. John Rowland, F. Rennie, J. Lamb of Walkerton, Rev. Father Goodrow of Chepstow, and D. Willoughby of Elmwood. Pte. Alex Thompson was presented with a ten dollar gold piece and a very appropriate address was read by Mr. Lamb in behalf of the League.

Mr. W. D. Cargill M. P. P. made a business trip to Ottawa on Friday.

Pte. Wm. Anderson of London visited his mother here on Friday.

+ + +

MUSTN'T PLAY FALSE

(Continued from page 1)

is a splendid speaker and appeals on high moral grounds to the best that is in her hearers.

Our standards have changed since the War, she reminded her audience. It used to be when a man died: How much is he worth? Now it is, How did he die? What did he die for? To the women who had sent their husbands and sons to the Front, she urged that they get others to follow. You are false to your men, if you do not use every effort to send the necessary men to help them, she said. You women workers have done much. Forget what you have done. Don't rest in the backwater of apathy. If you change your plan of work at all double your work. The need is ever greater. The boys who are holding the line have had their butter, milk and sugar cut off. Here we are living on just the same as ever. It isn't fair. She urged economy in food. To those mothers who feared the temptation their boys would fall into at the Front, she said, she had more faith in the men in khaki than those out of it with whom they were associating now at home. Remember, she urged, God is in the trenches as well as here.

Between speeches, Miss Ernuel gave a fine rendition of a good recruiting song: "Why aren't you in khaki?"

Capt. Hindson, who is a splendid speaker, paid a high compliment to the 160th Bruce Battalion, whom he lived along side of at London. They were the envy of the whole Camp, he said, the finest battalion in the entire military district. Walkerton had also won an enviable reputation throughout M. D. No 1, for the magnificent supporting work of her civilians. He rejoiced that conscription had come. The unequalities of service which came to his notice in travelling from town to town, made his blood boil, and his heart sick. He hoped the young manhood that remained in this County would take the last chance of getting into khaki at once and avoid the stigma of becoming pressed men. Major Nelson, he said, was a man who had the respect of those who had associated with him at London, and was a man of action. He urged the co-operation of the people of Walkerton with him in raising reinforcements for the 160th.

Major Nelson, who spoke briefly, made a good impression. He asked the help of the good people of Walkerton. He said that recruits were starting to come in, and if hard work by himself and staff would count for anything, the complement would be filled soon.

+ + +

DEDICATION AT CARGILL

(Continued from page 1)

known are;—Wor. Bro. Jas. Dougan, Eden Grove; Wor Bro. Thos Chittick, Stoney Creek; Wor. Bro. W. J. McKeeman, Glamis. The hall at Eden Grove was dedicated on January 4th, 1894 by R. Wor. Bro. Collins, D. D. G. M. of North Huron Dist. No 5, assisted by R. Wor. Bro. Martin P. D. D. G. M. and R. Wor. Bro. Telford, P. D. D. G. M. The Worship Master, officers, and members were ably assisted on that occasion by members of Saugeen Lodge, Walkerton, and Aldworth 11, Paisley. Speaking to a Telescope representative, R. Wor. Bro. W. J. Loughleen, who has been a leading pillar of Moravian Lodge for a number of years, generously gave these two neighboring lodges a good deal of credit for co-operation from time to time, and helping to make Moravian Lodge what it is to-day. Moravian Lodge had the honor of having one of its members, Wor. Bro. Thos. Pinkerton elected D. D. G. M. and a good representative at Grand Lodge he made. Owing to the increasing membership from the village of Cargill and in that vicinity. It was thought that it would be advisable to procure a larger building and a more central meeting point. Accordingly, the proper proceedings having been taken, Grand Lodge granted the request for the removal of Moravian Lodge from Eden Grove to the village of Cargill, which took place in December, 1911. At the Annual Meeting of Grand Lodge, held in the city of London, July 1910, it was deemed wise to re-distribute the districts, it fell to the lot of R. W. Bro. W. J. Loughleen to see what could be done and after due consideration the change was made and now for the first time the lodges of Bruce and immediate neighborhood form a separate district of their own.

The Officers of Moravian Lodge for the present term are:—Wor. Bro. J. Alexander, I. P. M; R. A. Fowlie, W. M; Karl Cliff, J. W; John Chisolm; S. W; Cecil Garland, Chap.; R. Wor. Bro. W. J. Loughleen, Secy; Geo. Sirrs, D of C; G. F. Saunders, J. D; W. T. Hopper, S. D; Fred Balsdon, I. G; Wm. Cliff, Tyler; I. Chambers, Sr. Std; J. Garland, Jr. Std.

ELLIOTT Business College

Yonge and Charles Sts., Toronto.

It will pay you well. We were asked to fill 120 positions in two months and 210 during two other months. Write for catalogue. Enter now.

W. J. Elliott, Principal.

The Central Grocery

JAPAN TEA

25c a lb,
5 lbs for $1.00
35c a lb,
3 lbs for $1.00

JAMS AND CANNED FRUITS

Special 2 lbs Prunes for 25c

Get our price on five-bag lots of Flour.

W. G. Searle

Phone 161 Walkerton

Thos. A. Edison's [illegible] known as the New Edison, [illegible] strument to which the New York Globe refers as "the phonograph with a soul." We cordially invite you to visit our store and permit us to demonstrate that the New Edison is utterly different from any and all talking machines.

R. L. GIBSON

JEWELER · WALKERTON

IF YOU WANT a good, Reliable Boot. —Try a pair of our Cushion Soles made of solid leather.

FIRST CLASS REPAIRING

C. PETTEPLACE

Individuality

THE selection of appropriate mountings for remarkably good Photographic Portraits.

THAT'S US.

FRASER STUDIO

JEWELLRY OF ALL KINDS

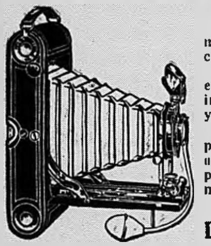
Watches, Clocks, Cut Glass Silverware and Jewellry of all kinds.

C. A. FOX, & SON

WALKERTON TELESCOPE

VOL. XLIX, NO. 22 WALKERTON TELESCOPE, WALKERTON, MAY 31st 1917 $1.50 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE

Kodaks and Cameras



$1.25 to $22 50

Films to fit all makes and sizes of cameras.

Everything needed for the developing and finishing of your pictures.

An illustrated price list for the asking or drop us a postal for one by mail.

HUNTER'S Drug Store

The Rexall Store

A Sunny Disposition

in the morning follows the use of

Rexall Orderlies

the night before. The mild but sure laxative tablet with the pleasant taste. In neat tins at 15c & 25c.

A. P. Sieveright

Drugs • Kodaks

WALL PAPERS OF QUALITY

The newest effects and a wonderful assortment for the Parlor, Living Room, Dining Room, Hall, Bed Room, Kitchen, at very reasonable prices.

McCrum's

A Harvard Brown Vici Kid

Princess Shoe

Made with 7in Champagne Cloth top, and new heel. One of the latest styles for Spring and Summer.

Price $7.00

Ramsey

The Shoeman

ur Suits

They make you look good, feel ood, and they are made good, o matter what price you pay.

Greys in all shades, plain tripes and small checks; Blues, Browns and Blacks in fast colrs. We have them all. Try us or your next suit.

Men's Furnishings

The Newest Summer Styles

In Soft Collars, Sport Shirts, ar, Pyjamas, Night ts, Caps, Etc.

OURKE

Men's Wear.

rton, Ont.

BAPTISTS MEET HERE

Big District Meeting Will Open Here Tuesday — Prominent Outside Speakers Will be Heard.

The Thirtieth Annual meeting of the Walkerton Association of Baptist Churches will be held here on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week. At the Ladies Meeting on Tuesday night, Mrs. (Rev) G. C. Rock will give an address of welcome, and Miss Ellis B. A., principal of Moulton College a very able speaker, will deal with Home Missions. The general sessions will open Wednesday morning at 9.30. Several prominent speakers will be heard, including Dr. Matthews of McMaster University, who will speak on "The War and After," at 8.40 Wednesday evening. The musical program, it is expected, will be especially good. Mrs. C. S. Stephan has kindly consented to sing at the evening services, and there will be other musical numbers About 80 delegates will be in town during the meetings.

Mr. J. J. Cook of Mount Forest is Clerk of the Association, and Mr. C. S. Stephan of Walkerton, chairman of Billeting.

Pengelly—Stevenson

The marriage took place at Toronto, on Thursday, May 24th of William Pengelly, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Pengelly to Miss Maud Stevenson, only daughter of Mrs. M. F. Stevenson of Toronto. Mr. Pengelly recently gave up an important position with the Cowan Co. of Toronto, to enlist with the Cobourg Battery for Overseas.

Only Two Days' Leave.

Pte. C. Whitehead, son of Mr. John Whitehead, who arrived here last week from Calgary on a farewell visit to his old home before going Overseas, had only been at home a day when he received a wire to report at once at Halifax. Charlie put in a busy two days while he was here and was surprised and delighted with the send-off which the people of the old neighborhood got up in his honor.

Masons At Chesley

Mayor Johnston went to Chesley on Monday night to pay his official visit as D. D. G. M. to Chesley Masonic Lodge. He was accompanied by Messrs. D. McKerracher, C. B. Robinson, N. Hiscox, and D. George. After the formalities of the evening, a banquet was held for the brethren, their wives and daughters, at which Mr. W. J. Mickle K. C. was the principal speaker.

BORN

DIXON—At Olds, Alta., on Saturday, May 27th, to Mr. and Mrs. C. Gordon Dixon, a son.

NESBITT—At Shoal Lake, Man., May 17th, to Mr. and Mrs. John B. Nesbitt, a son.

FLEMING—In Greenock, on May 28, to Mr. and Mrs. John Fleming, a daughter.

OHLHEISER—At Chepstow, on May 27, to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ohlheiser a daughter.

160TH BRUCE BATTALION

Will be Led to France by Lieut-Col. Dan. Sutherland—Boys are Still at Witley Camp

The 160th Batt'n is still in England. At least it was yesterday, as a Walkerton member demonstrated his presence on English sod by cabling to his father here that he was suffering from congestion of the pocket book.

That the Battalion will soon be in France may be gathered from a cablegram which was sent by a member of the Battalion to relatives:—"Lieut-Col. Sutherland in command. All boys well

Col. Sutherland is a young officer, who has had a great deal of experience at the Front. He was wounded at the Ypres in 1915, and after being invalided home, he returned to England in command of the 71st Batt'n.

It will be a great disappointment to the Battalion if their popular Commanding officer does not lead them to France. It may be however that the authorities are holding him for more important work in England.

Located At Folkstone

Miss Marion Hueghan writes a friend in town that she is nursing in a Military Hospital at Folkstone, Eng. The Hospital is beautifully situated, facing the sea. She is in the officers' ward and has Mr. George Holland, formerly of Walkerton, as one of her patients.

Brant Gives $1.000

Brant Council decided on Monday to grant $1.000 for Y. M. C. A. Overseas Work. The grant was made at the request of a deputation composed of Messrs Frank Rennie, Alex. G. McLennan and others. With all of the municipalities falling in line, it looks as if Bruce would roll up a magnificent total for this worthy work.

Moving Towards Front.

Ralph Glave, who went Overseas with a draft from the Divisional Signalling Corps, Ottawa, last Fall, writes home that he has had one move nearer to the Front lines since he landed in France. He is now working on cable repairing a short distance from the Front. They have had good weather since he crossed the channel and he likes it in France.

Should Be Stopped

A resident of the East Ward informs the Telescope that a number of people in that part of the town are using the outlying streets for a dumping ground for ashes and old rubbish. It is up to the Council to have this practice stopped at once. Besides making the streets unsightly, it means that the town will have to bear the expense of a general clean-up sooner or later.

Wins Military Cross

Many Walkerton friends will be glad to hear that Lieut. C. P. Halladay of Chesley, has won the Military Cross for distinguished conduct at the Front. Lieut. Halladay who is a son of Mr. William Halladay, and a nephew of Mr. M. A. Halladay, has been attached to the Imperial Army, being an officer of the Yorkshire Light Infantry.

Old Curiosities

Miss Kate Grese of Carrick has in her possession an old Evangelical hymn book, which was used by her great grandfather two hundred years ago but has thus far withstood the ravages of time. Another heirloom which she highly prizes is the collar of her grandmother's wedding gown, a dainty bit of hand-made lace which is still in a good state of preservation.

Appointed To British Navy.

Sergt Wilbur Cryderman, who left Salonika for England recently after serving in the University Hospital Staff there since 1914, is one of five members of the staff who have been singled out to receive appointment as Surgeons on probation in the British Navy. These young men will have the rank of Sub-Lieutenant and will serve in a medical capacity in His Majesty's Fleet. Sergt. Cryderman was a third year student in the Medical Faculty, University of Toronto, when the war broke out and he went soon afterwards with the University Hospital to Greece. He has had a trying but invaluable experience in the hospital there, including a close "squeak" when he took Cholera last summer and barely pulled through.

A Brant Wedding.

A very pretty event took place in the Brant Lutheran church on Wednesday May 23rd when Louise, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Gateman of the 4th con. Brant became the bride of Mr. Wm. Messerschmidt, in the presence of only the immediate relatives, Rev. E. Deuel officiating. The bride was prettily attired in white crepe de chine and wore the regulation veil and carried a bouquet of white carnations. Miss Rosetta Gateman, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid and wore white silk while Mr. Ed. Schmidt of Bentinck supported the groom. After the ceremony the guests repaired to the bride's home, where a dainty supper was served, the house being prettily decorated for the occasion. The young couple will take up house-keeping on the groom's farm, 4th con., Brant.

Wool Wanted

Highest price paid for wool. S. A. Rife & Co.

Young Lady Wanted

To learn type-setting. Apply at the Telescope Office.

Lady Clerk Wanted.

Experienced lady clerk for general store.—Apply Box 25, Walkerton.

Plants On Sale

Plants, Tomato, Cabbage and Cauliflower plants. Apply to Mrs. Lymberry.

Lost.

A motor cycle chain near Johnston's school. Finder please leave with Dept. of Agriculture.

Valuating Local Plant

A Hydro Engineer is here this week, valuating the generating plant of the Walkerton Electric Light & Power Co.

Dance at Cargill

A dance will be held in the Foresters' Hall Cargill, Monday evening, June 4, 1917. Everybody welcome. Ladies bring cake.

Shirt Bee

An invitation is extended to all the women of Walkerton to the Armoury on Friday, June 1st at two o'clock to make shirts for the soldiers.

118 Writing On Entrance

The High School Entrance candidates for Walkerton District wrote on a preliminary test on Saturday. There are 118 candidates this year.

Seed Potatoes Arrive

The belated car of seed potatoes ordered by the local Agricultural Dept. arrived here Tuesday afternoon and are being handed out at $3 75 a bag.

Annual Garden Party

The Annual Garden Party of the Pinkerton Presbyterian Church will be held on June 18 on the Manse grounds. Tea served from 6 to 8 o'clock. A good programme will be provided. Admission 25c. Children 15c.

Help For War Sufferers

The Walkerton R. C. Congregation gave a special collection on Sunday morning, May 20th, for the Lithuanian War Sufferers, amounting to $65. Previously collections were given for the Belgians and Ruthenians.

Transferred to 160th.

Pte. Charles Bryan, of the 18th Reserve Batt. who has been confined to the Hospital at Bramshott with Diphtheria has completely recovered, and as his Batt., the 222nd is in France, Charlie expects to get transferred to the 160th Bruce Batt'n.

Card of Thanks

Mrs. George Cunningham wishes to express her sincere thanks to her many friends and neighbors for their great kindness since the death of her husband who was killed in action on Apr. 9th at the Battle of Vimy Ridge in France and also to Rev. R. Perdue and those who sent such kind letters of sympathy.

Quick Work

Mr. Chambers of Enniskillen sold his big barn to Mr. Filsinger of Carrick and employed Jim Hyslop to take it down which he completed in two days and a half including the removing of the shingles and nails and prepared all for moving without any accidents of any kind, and needless to say, it turned out a splendid success.

Join Guelph Battery

Six Walkerton men went to Guelph this week to join the Guelph Battery for Overseas:—Mel. Kato, Hermie Runstadtler, Rob McGregor, J. McKinnon, Dave Brindley, and Nic. McIntee. The last two named failed to pass the physical examination. The new sappers are now home in khaki with orders to report next Tuesday.

Cattle Prices Good

This will give you an idea of what is going on every week in the Walkerton cattle market. On Monday J. J. Zettler paid Wendal Schnurr of Carrick $1819, for 13 head of cattle almost the price of fifty acres; Anthony Batte of the same township, son of Mr. Joseph Batte, Gibson St. $790 for 7 two-year old cattle. For a milch cow Mr. Wm. Lamberius received from Mr. Zettler the sum of $115.

Nearly $1600 Still Due

No less than 120 citizens have not yet paid up their Patriotic Red Cross Subscriptions, all of which will be past due on Friday, June 1. The total amount subscribed by the people of this town was some seven thousand dollars. Of this amount $1470.45 is still unpaid. Citizens who have carelessly neglected to meet their obligations, should get busy and give the treasurer of the local campaign an opportunity to close up his books.

All Three Sons Fighting.

A Walkerton woman who has given more than most for King and Country, is Mrs. Engelbert Runstadtler, East Ward. All three of her sons are now in khaki: Bert, a prisoner of war in Germany; Louis, who was badly wounded, and is now retained as a military instructor in England, and Hermie, who enlisted here for the Guelph battery last week. Her daughter, Mrs. (Evelyn) Grosz, who is making her home with her at present has also given her husband, to fight for the Allied Cause.

NEWS ABOUT TOWN

Miss Collins is visiting at Toronto.

Miss Cora Smith is holidaying at Simcoe.

County Council meets June 18 at Chesley.

Mr. Richard Lee spent the week-end at Toronto.

Kincardine hotels have raised their rates to $2 50 a day.

Alf. Schnurr was up from Stratford over the week-end.

Flat to rent. Very convenient. Apply to C. Patrick.

Miss Maude McGill nurse, of Muskoka, is home on a visit.

Mrs. A. P. Sieveright is spending a few days at Toronto.

High School Departmental exams begin next Thursday.

Mrs. Hugh McKillop who has been ill for some time is on the mend.

Mr. George Bingleman of Hamilton was a visitor in town over Sunday.

Mr. Sam Vogan has taken Mr. T. E. Attwood's house on Colbourne St.

Miss Helene Whitehead left Tuesday on a three weeks' visit to Toronto.

Miss Mary Lindsay left last week to visit friends at Toronto and Preston.

Mrs. B. Courtney of Walkerville is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Walford.

Mr. Geo. Schnurr started on his rounds on Wednesday with a new ice waggon.

Mr. and Mrs. Wes. Etsell and babe of Toronto, are visiting at the home of Mr. Thos. Etsell.

A number of the Oddfellows attended the funeral of Bro. John Hillhouse at Clifford, on Sunday

Rev. C. W. Cosens and Inspector McCool attended Methodist District Meeting at Chesley last week.

Communion will be held at Knox Church Sunday morning. Preparatory Service Friday night at 8 o'clock.

Mrs. Jas. Schmidt and daughter Laura of Chepstow, were the guests of Mrs. Frank Schnurr last week.

An East Ward resident reports having seen a humming bird on Tuesday. Take heed, summer must be coming.

Major Nelson will have a staff of recruiters busy at the celebrations at Mildmay and Lucknow next Monday.

The Annual Convention of the German Lutheran Synod of Canada will be held at Hanover June 14th to June 18th.

The Misses Tillie and Minnie McGregor of Paris Ont. visited their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robt. McGregor over Sunday.

Pte. George Cunningham, who fell at Vimy Ridge, was the first married man from Walkerton, to make the supreme sacrifice.

Mrs. Glave and Miss Roulston returned on Monday from attending the Branch meeting of the Methodist W. M. S. at St. Catherines.

"Teddy Bruce," the pet bear of the 160th Batt'n has been handed over to Zoo at London, Eng. to be kept while the Battalion is in France.

Mrs. Stewart of Teeswater is suing the Toronto Lime Co. which recently built a factory at Teeswater, for damages for trespass on her land, demolition of her fence etc.

Laura, the 11 year old daughter of Mr. Jos. Schmidt of Chepstow, underwent a successful operation for tonsilites, adenoids and nasal trouble, at the Hospital here last week.

Mr. Herbert White, of Calgary, who has an important position with the government in connection with the war tax on joint stock companies, visited his father, Mr. James White, last week.

North Bruce liberals will meet at Tara, on Thursday June 7th to select a candidate for the Dominion House. North Bruce Conservatives meet at Wiarton on June 20th to nominate for the Local House.

Philharmonic Concert, June 12th. We are behind the men in the trenches. Help us and you help them. Plan open at the Tea Room, Tuesday ev'g. June 5th at 7.15. On the following days at McCrums.

The engagement is announced of Miss Edna L. South, daughter of Mr. J. W. South, Walkerton, to Mr. Harry S. Markle, Toronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Markle, Hamilton, the marriage to take place quietly in June.

Tenders for the $100,000 worth of Bruce County Patriotic Debentures will be opened at Mr. Norman Robertson's office on June 8th by a Committee composed of Warden Izzard, Chairman Dowling of the Finance Com., County Treas. Robertson, and County Clerk Malcolmson.

Rev. C. W. Cosens will occupy the pulpit of Emmanuel Baptist Church at Brantford next Sunday (Conference Sunday.) Mr. John McCool will preach at the Methodist Church next Sunday morning, and Rev. J. H. Grenzenbach at night, when there will be a union service for the Methodist and Evangelical Congregations.

Mrs. Grant of Paisley is visiting Mrs. Stalker.

R. E. Truax M. P., was home from Ottawa over Sunday.

Miss Helen Bryce returned from a visit to friends in Wiarton.

Mrs. James Whitehead is visiting her old home at Woodstock.

Miss Eleanor McGarity was home from Durham for the week-end.

Miss Jennie Gowanlock is recovering from an attack of bronchitis.

Mrs. G. H. Kilmer of Toronto is visiting her father, Mr. N. Crawford.

Mrs. W. Fischer of Hanover, spent Sunday with her sister, Mrs. J. Jones.

Mervyn Forsythe, who had a serious attack of typhoid, is able to be out again.

Messrs David Robertson and W. M. Shaw returned from Montreal on Saturday.

Mr. Armand Whitehead has passed successfully his second year law exams at Osgoode Hall.

Mr. J. E. McGregor had a new Pianola piano delivered at his residence from Oshawa last week.

We always pay cash for eggs, butter, potatoes and other lines of produce.—Goode & McKay.

Mrs. F. Rennie and Mrs. F. Eidt attended the funeral of the late Mr. John Hillhouse at Clifford.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. McGregor motored to Clifford on Sunday to attend the funeral of the late John Hillhouse.

The Women's Patriotic Club near Durham, of which Miss Eleanor McGarity is President, is arranging to hold a big Red Cross Social.

The Women's Institute will meet at Mrs. Wm. Morgan's on Thursday, June 7th. Mr. N. C McKay will give an address on "Outdoor Insect Pests."

Baked beans in cans are handy at this time of the year. We are sure you will like them because they are delicious. Plain or in tomato sauce.—Goode & McKay.

Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Ernest of Brant announce the engagement of their daughter, Emma Matilda to Mr. Theodore Schaus, the marriage to take place early in June.

It is not talk, or boost, or guess for the "Japan Tea" we are selling, makes its own success—note the investment 5 pounds for $1.00, one of our big sellers.—Goode & McKay.

Miss Bertha Brillinger, who contracted scarlet fever while on duty in the Detroit Hospital in which she has an important position, is reported to be on the road to recovery.

Many Walkerton friends will learn with regret that Mrs. J. E. McGregor's mother, Mrs. McCully, who has been very ill at her home in Stratford, shows no sign of improvement.

The Annual meeting of the Bruce Presbyterial of the W. M. S. will be held at Hanover to-day, May 31. Mrs. Menzies, returned missionary from Honan, China, will address the meeting.

Mr. Corney Becker who has been employed in the Elliot Works, Detroit, has been in the Hospital for some time suffering from blood poison caused by a small cut above the eye. At last reports he was doing nicely.

Mr. J. Murray Lay of Vancouver B. C, paid a visit this week to his brother, Mr. H. M. Lay. Mr. Lay, who is manager of the Merchants Bank at Vancouver came East to attend the Annual meeting of the Bank at Toronto.

Mr. Con. O'Gorman of the C. N. R. engineering staff, spent the week-end with his mother, Mrs. O'Gorman. Mr. O'Gorman is being transferred from Montreal to Toronto to take charge of the development at Ashbridge's Bay.

Big shipment of Pineapples expected next week. Take advantage for preserving. Remember we can make low prices because we buy the quantity—the leading Grocery Walkerton. Goode & McKay.

Mr. Ritchie of Tessier, Sask., who came East last week owing to his brother's death, says that in Saskatchewan and east of Portage the crop prospects are good. Seeding was a bit earlier in his district than in Ontario this year.

Our stock of staple and Fancy Groceries is complete. Our prices compare very favorably with those of the Mail Order Houses of the city. This week we feature three staple lines, flour, potatoes and granulated sugar. See our ad. on page 8.—The Central Grocery W. G. Searle.

Mr. Bert Hoover of Port Colborne, spent the holiday with his father, Mr. Amos Hoover. The erection of the new nickel works there is making a real town out of Port Colborne. Between 1100 and 1200 men are employed on construction and when the plant is completed, 700 men will be employed at good wages.

Bread went up to 12c in Walkerton on Monday.

A gang of travelling gypsies struck town yesterday.

Mr. S. D. Croft, G. T. R. Freight Agent, was in town yesterday.

Mr. L. A. Eedy left yesterday to attend Methodist Conference at Brantford.

Dr. and Mrs. Lawrence Barrett and children of Galt spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. H. McCrum.

Miss Frieda McCrum has arrived home from New York. She is now a graduate nurse of New York hospital having received her graduation diploma.

The many friends in the town of Miss Annie Robertson of Southampton, will regret to learn that she is again a patient at the County Hospital owing to illness.

Pletsch Bros. have just received another car of corn feed. Get your supply now. Use Red Cross Flour for a wholesome loaf. Prices guaranteed. Have you tried our Whole Wheat Flour. At all up-to-date grocers or at the mill.

Unanimous Vote for Hydro

Alliston carried the Hydro Enabling by-law last week by 183 to 0, and the money By-law the same day by 277 to 5.

$100 Gift to Hospital

The Bruce County Hospital was the recipient of a $100 cheque on Monday from Mr. D. McKerracher, to pay for a life membership in the institution.

Leaves On Saturday.

Harold Patterson, who has been home on sick-leave, recuperating from an attack of scarlet fever, has orders to report for duty at Camp Borden on Saturday.

Out of the Hospital

A letter received on Friday states that Gunner Jas. Leech is out of the Hospital and has been transferred to the 8th Reserve, Biscoro Barracks, Shorncliffe where he will remain for some time before going to France.

Assault Case

Messrs N. P. Schmidt and his son, were fined $[illegible] and $1 and costs respectively in Court on Tuesday by Magistrate Tolton on a charge of assault laid by Mr. A. B. Sherrington. It appears that Mr. Sherrington bought a small piece of land adjoining [illegible] Schmidt fruit [illegible] from Prof. Cuslo and was [illegible] to work it, when Mr. Schmidt, who disputes the title and claims it belongs to him, came along and ordered him off. He and his son then resorted to force with the result that an assault charge was laid.

Wilfred McKay Wounded

Mr. Carl McKay had an official wire from Ottawa this week stating that his son, Pte. Wilfred McKay had received gunshot wounds on left arm and face on May 13th and was now in the Third Canadian General Hospital at Boulogne. Wilfred, who is a bright young fellow, about twenty years of age, enlisted with the 71st, and about a year ago went to the Front with a machine gun section. On Tuesday Mr. McKay received further word in a post card from Wilfred. He stated that he had been moved to a Hospital at Edinburgh.

Blood Will Tell

It is a well-known fact that the hills of Scotland were early stripped of their best manhood by a rush to the colors in the present war, and probably no clan has a better record than the Cunninghams who, though a small family, have made themselves felt in the great fight for liberty. Mr. John Cunningham of Greenock has kept track lately of the members of the family, whose names he has run across in the Canadian Casualties and so far he has a list of thirty-five dead and wounded. The Cunninghams are all descended from a single forebear of that name, who won his estate by saving Prince Malcolm of Scotland from his pursuers, by throwing a forkful of hay over him in his mow. The family motto in the crest was thereafter, "Over fork over." From the eleventh century down the Cunninghams were great fighters and in the present war they are showing the old mettle of their sturdy ancestors.

Humane Society's Loss

At a meeting of the Executive of the Humane Society held Friday evening, May 25th, the following resolution was passed—The desire to place on record a sense of the great loss sustained by our Society in the death of our President, Mrs. Havill. Her love for God's dumb creatures led her to devote much of her time to the protection of birds and beasts so often cruelly treated. Many through thoughtlessness or passion cause much unnecessary suffering to the dumb creatures that are not able to cry out and plead for mercy. Mrs. Havill's influence upon the children in the Public Schools impressed them with the duty of preventing cruelty to these creatures. By means of literature distributed to delivery boys, teamsters, and owners of horses Mrs. Havill drew attention to treatment such as should be given but so often overlooked thus causing unnecessary pain. The following ministers were added to the Executive—Mr. Rock, Mr. Cosens and Mr. Grenzenbach.

FORTY RECRUITS [illegible]

Secured by Major Nelson and Staff for Overseas Service in Various Units.

Major Nelson and his staff of recruiters have been meeting with very good success the past two weeks in the signing up recruits for the [illegible] Overseas Company, C. E. F. Forty men have signed up in all, some of these enlisting here for Guelph battery and for the forestry company. The names up to Tuesday are:—Aaron Diebel, Hanover; Eph. Clark, Kincardine; Wm. McNaughton, Chesley; J. E. Fraser, Kincardine; M. McLean, Chesley; Orville Knox, Allenford; Gilbert Danard, Allenford; R. G. McDonald, Kincardine; Clarence [illegible], Chesley; C. G. Esch, Hanover; D. C. Brindley, H. A. Runstedtler, J. McKinnon, M. J. Kato, R. McGregor, N. E. McIntee, Walkerton; J. A. Stehhoff, Southampton; E. C. Dath, J. B. McCallum, Chesley; Wm. [illegible], Freeth, H. Murrey, B. Weston, T. Sunbury, J. Farr, Goderich; [illegible] Buckley, A. C. Wilson, [illegible] D. Robinson, Geo. McEwen, W. [illegible], J. B. Simpson, Goderich; E. [illegible] and E. Jones, Southampton.

Going To The West

Miss Stella Blough, clerk at J. [illegible] Appel's is leaving shortly to make her home with her father, near Calgary, Alta. Her health has not been of the best and it is hoped the change will be beneficial. Miss Blough has a host of warm friends in the town whose best wishes accompany her.

Death Of Mrs. Latimer

Mrs. Wm. Latimer, an old resident of the Enniskillen neighborhood, passed away on Saturday evening in her 83rd year. Mrs. Latimer was a fine old lady of sterling character, highly regarded by everyone in the community. Most of her lifetime was spent in Greenock and Culross. Her husband predeceased her seven years ago. A family of eight survive:—Wm. of Regina, John of Durham, Mrs. Dixon of Oak Lake, Man., Mrs. Montgomery of Greenock, Robert of Voltaire N. Dakota, Thomas of B. C., Mrs. Wm. Lane of New Westminster, [illegible], Wellington of the West. [illegible] tended. [illegible] Rev. Mr. Clysdale of [illegible] J. W. Sanderson of Walkerton, interment being made in the old Baptist Cemetery.

A Good Year

Never in the history of the organization has the Walkerton Branch of the Wom. Hospital Aid been so successful in raising funds for the Hospital as during the past year. The report of the Entertainment Committee presented at the Annual meeting on Saturday, showed that about $[illegible] was raised during the past twelve months, or double the average of other years. Officers for the incoming term were elected as follows:—President, Mrs. N. Robertson; Vice Pres., Mrs. Jas. Whitehead; Treasurer, Mrs. Thos. Dixon; Sec., Mrs. Sieveright; Auditor, Miss McGregor; Entertainment Com:—Mrs. Benton, Convener; Mrs. Schwindt, Mrs. C. Stephan, Mrs. Bock, Mrs. Krueger, Mrs. O. Klein, Mrs. McFarlane, Mrs. Burrows, Mrs. Bogie; Sewing Com. Mrs. Robertson, Mrs. Dixon, Mrs. Duncan, Mrs. McGregor; Membership Com:—Miss McCormick Convenor, Miss Flett, Miss Rolston, Mrs. Latchford, Mrs. C. Eimens, Mrs. McCool, Mrs. F. Eidt—With power to add to their number.

Suddenly Called Away.

Mr. Jos. Kroetch arrived here from Regina on the late train Monday night, accompanying the remains of his young wife (Pauline LaFrance,) whose shockingly sudden death was reported in last week's paper. It appears that Mrs. Kroetch had been feeling unwell and on consulting her doctor had been advised to have a slight internal operation. As she was planning to visit her old home at Walkerton this summer, she decided to have it at once. The operation revealed conditions worse than had been expected, but she came through well. The shock however proved too great and within twenty-four hours she had passed to the Great Beyond. Her death came as a heart-breaking blow to her husband and relatives, for whom the deepest sympathy is felt in the old home town, also for the motherless little boy, Harry, just 8 years old. Mrs. Kroetch, who was in her 27th year, spent her girlhood in Walkerton and was held in the highest regard here. After her marriage ten years ago, they lived for sometime at Ambleside, then removing to the West, where Mr. Kroetch had a position in the C. N. R. Express Office. Her mother, four brothers and four sisters survive. They are:—Peter of Walkerton, George of London, Mary of Neville, Sask., Jos. Mgr. Merchants Bank, Acme, Sask., Julia of Detroit, Mike of Guelph, Margaret and Rose at home. Funeral Service was held at the R. C. Church on Tuesday morning, followed by interment in the Walkerton Cemetery. A large concourse of old friends and relatives followed the remains to their last resting place.

COMM

National Committee on and Prison Labor has transformed itself into a relief society for ar Department, and proposes to after interned prisoners of war in States. By so doing it hopes to e unnecessary after war bitterness the States and ope.

The election of a Sinn Feiner in South Longford to the British Parliament while he is still in jail for participating in the Dublin riots, is not a very good omen of the political condition of Ireland. It is this state of affairs that makes Mr. Redmond's position a somewhat trying one. This Home Rule question should not be allowed to drift much longer.

Twelve hundred applications have been made to the Ottawa Vacant Lot Association for land to cultivate. Mentioning on this, the Ottawa Journal Press says one of the thoughts which occur in connection with such a striking fact is how valuable a daylight saving law would be. The extra hour would also be appreciated here. Are we patriotic enough to get up an hour earlier.

It is said that Gen. Petain will occupy a similar position in France to that occupied by Gen. Sir William Robertson in Britain. He will be Chief of the General Staff. As we understand it, Gen. Haig works under the direction of the General Staff, which works in conjunction with the French General Staff. The staff supplies the strategy and Gen. Haig the tactics. But then Gen. Haig has three Generals under him—Gen. Allenby, Gen. Horne and Gen. Gough. Allenby is a cavalry leader who distinguished himself in the South African war. He has played a great part in the present war in France and fought a gallant rear guard action from Mons. He is 56 years old. Horne is a native of Caithness, and comes from a military family. He is the same age as Gen. Allenby. He served through the South African war, in which he won the Queen's medal with five clasps, and the King's medal, with two clasps. Gen. Horne has been at the front since 1914. The King conferred a knighthood upon him last year. Gough is the most dashing cavalry leader in the British army. He played a conspicuous part in the Battle of the Somme. He comes of a distinguished military family; his father won the V.C. in the Indian mutiny; his grandfather commanded the British [illegible] the Sikh wars.

OME WAR NOTES.

Kaiser must be a devil incar- for he uses the devices of the in this warfare, boiling oil, gas, shells and every vile thing that be thought of are put to use in effort to defeat the Allies. But agencies of the evil one do not ing victory to the men who use them. The deviltry on the water as on the land, we hope is doomed to defeat. What adds to the villainy and iniquity of this mode of fighting is the impious claim of the Kaiser that he has the support and sympathy of the Most High in all his devilish doings.

The Canadians are busily engaged in the neighborhood of Lens, fighting for the possession of some trenches. In the attack on the Hindenburg line in the vicinity of Bullecourt and astride the Arras-Cambrai road, the British gained their objective. It will be remembered that last week the British were driven from their position astride these roads. The news to-day goes to show that the British have come back and are again astride the Arras-Cambrai road.

But Gen. Haig does not confine his operations to one part of the front. Local actions took place yesterday east of Lempire and east of Ypres. Hindenburg is forced to fight where he is. To fly or retreat would mean more losses.

To the south the French are pegging away. There is fighting on the Verdun front and in Alsace.

For voluntary recruits the British Government proposes to raise the age limit to 50 years, for both married and single men. This is another hint for Canada to enforce the Militia Act.

The three Scandinavian countries have decided once more to remain neutral in the struggle.

Swedish Electric Power.

The richness of Sweden in water power, and Denmark's natural poverty in any sources of power, has led to Sweden exporting electric power across the sound. The works are established on the small river Laga, in Smaland, and the current is carried by overhead wires to Helsingborg, and thence by three submarine cables under the waters of the sound to Marielyst north of Elsinore, on the island of Seeland. The Swedish power station sends 500 horsepower to Denmark, but the company is undertaking to increase this to 5,000 horsepower. Precautions have been taken so far as possible to prevent the cables being fouled by the anchors of ships.—Railway Age Gazette.

Same Family Name.

An Irishman was seated in a railway carriage next to a very pompous looking man with whom he commenced a conversation in a rather free and easy manner. At length the pompous one said: "My good man, reserve your conversation for one of your own equals. I would have you know that I am a K. C. (king's counsel)." The Irishman jumped up and held out his hand. "Begorra, shake!" he exclaimed. "I'm a Casey myself."

HER HUMBLE LOVER

"I am very pleased to see you, Lady Delamere," said the duchess. "Your husband and I are old friends, and I should have been broken-hearted if you had passed through without coming to see me! Will you sit down? Lord Delamere shall bring you some tea," and she made room beside herself on the broad ottoman. Signa sat down, and Hector went for the tea. There were no servants in the room, though the vestibule was crowded with the ducal liveries, with the exception of her grace's own maid, who sat at a large table and poured out the tea, which the visitors fetched for themselves. He knew the customs of the house, and went to the table for the tea, and the duchess, looking after him for a moment with a strange expression which was rather sad and wistful, turned to Signa.

"And so you are the heroine of the romantic tale which has so deeply interested us all, my dear?" she said with a smile.

"A very poor sort of heroine," said Signa.

"A very lovely one, certainly," said her grace, with a charming smile that robbed the retort of all rudeness. "And is it true that he ran away with you to Scotland with that magnificent pair of horses you drive about?"

"Not at all true," said Signa, with a blush and a laugh. "We did not run away, and it would have been of no use going to Scotland, because they don't marry people there in the fashion they used to do. We were married in a little country church in Devonshire."

"Really!" Then she paused. "How happy you must be!"

Signa did not know quite what to say to this, so remained silent.

"And he thought that he could keep you shut up in Paris like like a little nun!" said her grace. "That was a wild idea! Why, we were all dying to know you, and should have stormed that pretty little house of yours if you had not surrendered. Lady Bertrand is a very dear friend of mine, and has written to tell me all about you. And you are so happy, are you not?" in a lower voice.

"Yes, very," said Signa, frankly.

"And you will hate me for interrupting your dream, and dragging you out into the cold world, will you not?"

"I shall not, indeed," said Signa. "I think it was very kind of you to call."

"I mean that we shall be very great friends while you are here," said her grace. "We must do what we can to amuse you; and as to Lord Delamere—he must not be selfish and wish to monopolize you. Why, the honeymoon is over! According to Parisian custom, he ought to quite [illegible] tired of you by this time!" But [illegible] head.

Then she beckoned to a gentleman with her fan, and when he came up with a sort of hushed eagerness as if all his object and aim in life were to obey the wishes of her grace, she said:

"Marquis, will you see if the duke is in the room and bring him to me?"

The marquis departed on his errand, and her grace introduced Signa to a dozen or so of great people, and the little chain of courtiers drew closer. It was a trying moment for any young girl, more trying still for a newly-made bride, but Signa bore her position with her usual composure and sweet self-unconsciousness, and the favorable impression she created was evident in the manner of her grace, who leaned back and smiled with haughty satisfaction.

Presently the marquis returned, accompanied by an old man with a wig and a dyed moustache, and powder thick on his face, yet not thick enough to hide a network of wrinkles. He came up with a jaunty step, amazingly juvenile, and looked at the duchess with a fine smile.

It was the great duke himself. He had been fetched away from a group of statesmen who were talking politics of the utmost importance, and there was a burning impatience in his soul, though not a trace of it was visible in his smiling face, as he stood waiting for his wife's commands.

"Victor, come and know Lady Delamere, Lord Delamere's wife," she said. "My dear," to Signa, "this is my husband."

The duke smiled still more broadly and unmeaningly, and bowed low, then, as his keen eyes took in suddenly Signa's loveliness, the smile vanished, and a real look came upon his face. Without a word he approached the ottoman, those near it making room for him, and began to talk to her.

And then, in an instant, it was known that Signa's fame was established; that the duke had set his seal upon it, and she was to be a great personage.

Lord Delamere, as he sauntered round the vast salon, talking to one and the other, could see the crowd round the Duke and Signa grow larger, and that she had become the centre of attraction, and he smiled to himself sarcastically; the quiet days when they used to be all in all to each other were over.

The duke himself accompanied Signa to the vestibule—an honor only accorded to his greatest favorites—and when she had left the salon the room re-echoed her praises. The duke's verdict was very short, but emphatic.

"After all," he said, with the usual smile upon his face once more, "where is no beauty like that of a young [illegible] English girl."

"Well," said Hector, leaning back and looking at Signa's flushed face with a smile, "well, are you satisfied?"

"The only sentiment on my mind at present, sir, is—confusion!" she answered. "What a crowd of people! It was like the crush room at the opera. And she receives them twice a week! What do they find to talk about?"

"Each other," he said, laughing. "That kind of amusement, isn't it; but we are in for it now, you will see!"

He was quite right; on the morrow came a shoal of invitations with the pack of visiting cards, and Signa reluctantly accepted one from the duchess. It was a magnificent party, a brilliant gathering of rich and beautiful women and distinguished men; but it was felt, and admitted afterwards, that of them all there was no one more lovely than the young English girl, and that Lord Delamere, without a single order on his black coat, save the band of blue ribbon, looked the greatest patrician amongst the gentlemen. The social treadmill, as Hector called it, had begun, and from that day Signa took her place in the great social world and shone there like a bright star. It was then that she understood the meaning of the vast wealth at her disposal. At the bottom of Lord Delamere's passionate love for his bride was an almost a passionate a pride in her, and as he was forced to share her presence with the world, he took a grim kind of satisfaction in seeing her at the head of it.

It was known amongst the most eminent of the tradespeople that if they had anything out-of-the-common in the way of precious stones or articles of feminine adornment, they could at once find a purchaser in Lord Delamere, and accordingly Signa found herself possessed of gifts of diamonds that had been coveted by every woman in her set. Worth, sur, passed himself in designing costumes which should get some share of the notice which was lavished upon Lady Delamere. The head of a noble family offered his palatial mansion to Lord Delamere as better adapted to Lady Delamere's position than the little house in the Champs, but Signa declined steadfastly.

"We have been so happy here!" she pleaded. "Don't let us leave it while we are here." And Hector had kissed her and nodded assent with a thrill of gratification.

He went with her everywhere, and stood watching her triumphs, quietly proud of them. Sometimes, as he leant against the wall of some corner, men and women would come to speak to him and speak of her beauty, and the nameless charm which did more for her even than her loveliness, which was now the talk of Paris; and he would listen with his grave smile, and say some few words, and none knew the pride that welled up in his heart.

It was, though she knew it not, a dangerous pre-eminence. There were men continually about her who would have given their lives for one word or smile of more than ordinary kindness from her, there were men who had lost their hearts as utterly as Sir Frederic had done. Had she been anything but absolutely pure and innocent of even the appearance of evil, there might have been peril for her; but her love for Hector was so obvious that like a halo it surrounded, like a [illegible] charm, it protected her.

As for him, he was almost as popular as Signa herself, and yet there was a certain reserve about him that kept most men at arm's length. It was not pride or hauteur, but a nameless something they could not understand. In very truth, his life was so wrapped up in his darling that his love was all-sufficient for him. The world was but an unreal, phantasmal atmosphere, through which she, the only real thing, as it were, moved. He used the gay world of Paris as a plaything for her, and was waiting until she tired of it to find some other amusement to take its place. The women envied her her position, her wealth, her diamonds, but there were some, and many, who in their hearts envied her her husband beyond all else.

"He sees no one else when she is in the room," said the duchess one night, as she looked beyond her chain of courtiers to where Lord Delamere stood, alone and silent, his dark eyes fixed on Signa, who was dancing. "When she speaks he listens to catch every word, though he may be talking to some one else with the most apparent interest. There never was such devotion—never!"

"Perhaps it is a mere suggestion," said a statesman, with a wave of his hand, "perhaps Lord Delamere is jealous."

The duchess laughed.

"You have not been amongst us long," she said, quietly, "or you would never even make the suggestion. She thinks him a god and worships him—that is all."

The statesman bowed courteously.

"Yes? Indeed? It is strange. Delamere was always fortunate, I remember."

The duchess shrugged her shoulders ever so faintly.

"Do not," she said. "Every one has forgotten Lord Delamere's youthful sins."

"And she—?" asked the statesman, with a fine smile.

"Never knew of them," retorted the duchess.

But she was wrong in point of fact; people had not forgotten, and often, as he stood silent and preoccupied, some one answering a question would explain who he was, and whisper some of the stories of which Signa knew nothing.

CHAPTER XXVII.

The world left them but a few hours to be alone with each other now, and Hector snatched every moment of such time as something precious. He would hurry over his dressing in the evening, that he might go and sit in her room and watch the elaborate toilet, which afforded her maid a great deal more satisfaction and pleasure than it did Signa. On the night that he told her, with gentle irony, that she had been a success, Signa was dressing for a state ball. She had dismissed her maid, and was standing before the glass, putting on the diamonds, which the man who sold them had declared to be equal to, if not purer than those of the wife of the great American millionaire. Hector was sitting in a low easy-chair, leaning back to watch her with luxurious content.

"Like Byron you awoke one morning to find yourself famous. I wonder how it feels to be the great planet in the hemisphere of social stars. Does your head get turned now and again, Signa? Tell me! I like to make a study of these things. What sentiments do you feel most acutely when you are queening it in those crowded rooms? To-night now, for instance, when they come round you like the moths round the candle, any one of them ready to think himself fortunate if he can hold your fan, and really happy if he can get a dance; when the duke, for whom all make way, tells you in that whisper of his which can be heard by every one, that your dress is simply perfection—how shall you feel?" And he laughs softly.

She turns, and lets her glove fall upon the dressing-table, her violet eyes fixed upon him questioningly as a smile curves her lips.

"Come," he says, with an air of gentle banter, "don't let your modesty overcome your truthfulness. Tell me exactly how it takes you. I have often wondered, as I have stood at some remote distance and watched you. It is so different to the old life at Northwell—and yet how calmly you take it; if you had always had a duke in your retinue, you could not accept the fact with greater composure. What are you thinking of, Signa?"

For a moment longer she is silent; then her eyes are suffused, and she glides towards him and kneels at his side.

"Shall I tell you honestly and truly?" she murmurs.

"Certes!" he says, taking the one ungloved hand and kissing it.

"I am thinking of you," she says, and her voice thrills with suppressed passion.

He looks into her eyes and the color comes into his face for a moment; but he says, with that quiet, which comes of intense self-suppression:

"Of me, my queen?"

"Of you!" she repeats, and she takes his hand and puts it round her white neck, where it lies against the diamonds. "Hector, I wonder whether—ah! how shall I go on?"

"Go on; tell me everything, dear," he says, gently.

"It is so hard," she murmurs. "But I have often wondered if you thought me frivolous and—and heartless, all this giddy, whirling time!"

"Heartless. No," he says, quietly, his eyes fixed on hers.

"Yes, heartless!" she says. "Day after day, night after night, it has been one rush and hurry; we have lived in a crowd and confusion, that seems to me, when I think of it quietly, like a mad dream. It is often like a dream to me when they are all round me, buzzing like bees, with the music filling the air, and the lights dazzling and bewildering, and and then I wake and see you standing silent and alone, and I wish—ah, Hector! if you could see my heart. I wish that you and I were wrecked on St. Clare, and were quite alone, where the glittering, buzzing crowd could not reach us!" And with a little sound that is scarcely a sob, she draws near to him, and lays her head upon his shoulder.

He is silent for a moment, as he presses her to his heart, and his brows are knit with troubled doubt.

"My darling!" he murmurs. "And you said nothing of this! I thought that you were happy—that, woman like, you enjoyed it! It is only natural that you should have enjoyed it! Such as you were meant to play the queen! And all this time you—"

"Have been longing for the old time when we were all in all to each other, and there was no duke to marry—[illegible] tery into a heedless earl!" she whispers.

"Great Heavens!" he says. "Why—why did you not tell me? A word or a look could have ended it!"

She smiles strangely.

"And that I would not have said or looked," she says. "You have said I have—been a success. You said it—not I."

"All Paris says it, darling!"

"Well, he is so. Do you know why I have borne it, and gone on? No! Because you have told me to speak, dear—because I wanted you to feel that I was not all unworthy the great name you have bestowed on me!"

"Signa! My child!" he murmurs, for the tears are streaming from her upturned eyes.

"Yes—yes," she says, swiftly, with a long breath. "You—you married me, a mere nobody—without title or position; you, an earl, with a high place in the great world, and I—I—when the chance came to show myself worthy to stand beside you and bear your name, seized it. I care nothing for all this; I—Hector—I hate it! but I have done it and gone through it that the world might admit that you had not married beneath you."

Pale and steadfast she looks at him, and pale and steadfast he looks down at her. Then he draws her face toward him and kisses her.

"Then it was all for my sake, my darling," he says.

"Yes," she says. "If there was at any time any pride in my heart, it was that the world should deem me worthy to be your wife and bear your name, Hector; nothing more. Often, when I have looked at you standing alone, my heart has ached for the old time; but I have whispered to myself: 'Be patient! The time will come when he will say, "You have done enough! and we shall go away and be alone once more, he and I together, and leave the crowd to itself!"'"

He is silent for a moment; then he bends over her, taking her into his arms, utterly regardless of the magnificent costume which Worth expects to see chronicled in the morning papers.

"Great Heaven!" he murmurs, more to himself than to her, "who shall know a woman's heart. And it is for me that you have done all this? My poor darling! Well, there shall be an end of it!"

"Yes, Hector?" eagerly.

"Yes, to-night shall be the last night," he says, firmly. "Why, Signa, I thought—blind fool that I was!—that you were enjoying your triumphs most intensely!"

"Ah, Hector! When they left me so little time for you!" she murmurs.

He bows his head penitently.

"I have been wrong. Forgive me, Signa! We will leave Paris at once. I have noticed that you have looked pale and tired—"

She smiles.

"I have often been tired, Hector, but for this quiet half-hour I don't think I could have borne it!"

"Good heaven! Signa, we will go to-night."

She shakes her head.

"Not to-night, dear."

"Why not?" he demands, gently.

She laughs, softly.

"Don't you understand? This is a great occasion, this state ball, and I have told so many that I intended to be there. Why, I think I have promised nearly all the dances."

"Well?"—gently.

"Well!"—with a smile—"what would the world say if we did not put in an appearance?"

"I neither know nor care!" he says, carelessly.

(To be continued.)

HAIR GOODS
—FOR—
LADIES AND GENTLEMEN

Mailed at lowest possible prices, consistent with high-grade work.

Our Natural Wavy 3-Strand Switches at $5.00, $7.00 and $9.00 in all shades are leaders with us. Just send on your sample, or write for anything in our line.

GENTLEMEN'S TOUPEES at $25.00 and $35.00, that defy detection when worn.

MINTZ'S HAIR GOODS EMPORIUM
62 KING ST. W. HAMILTON, ONT.
(Formerly Mdme. I. Mintz).

INSECT TRAVELERS.

Moths, Butterflies and Beetles Make Long Distance Journeys.

Mr. William Evans, a Scottish naturalist, who has made a lifelong study of the fauna of Scotland, obtained from a dozen Scottish lighthouses 241 species of insects, which include two butterflies, 159 moths, eighteen caddis flies and lacewings, forty diptera, ten beetles and a dozen other insects. To reach the Isle of May, in the Firth of Forth, where Mr. Evans collected most of the insects, many of the specimens must have flown across several miles of sea.

In his records Mr. Evans calls attention to several other extraordinary flights of insects.

Thus, the "painted lady," or thistle butterfly (Pyrameis cardui), has been known to cross the Alps; the red admiral butterfly (Vanessa atalanta) has landed in numbers on the deck of a vessel 500 miles from the coast of England; the common white butterflies cross the English channel in clouds; the famous milkweed butterfly (Danais archippus), abundant everywhere in the United States, is said to make the 2,000 mile journey from California to the Hawaiian Islands and has gradually progressed by way of the south sea islands as far as Australia.

A death's head moth has boarded a steamer 200 miles off the Cape Verde Islands. Clouds of ladybirds miles in extent, so that they resembled smoke from a steamer, have been seen at sea. A swarm of locusts that passed over the Red sea in 1889 is said to have extended over 2,000 square miles, and it was estimated to weigh 42,850,000,000 tons!

Minard's Liniment Cures Diphtheria.

TOURISTS BY WING.

Birds Move Distances Such as Man Never Dreams.

Last August a man in Montana trapped a hawk. He released it after attaching to its neck a small bottle containing his name and address. Word has just come to him that the bird was killed in October near Bogota, the capital of the South American Republic Colombia.

As compared with the birds, human travelers are mere stay at homes. They don't know the first principles of real globe trotting. Take the little, seemingly weak-winged black poll warblers, for example. They winter in Venezuela. Before we get a hint of spring they start north, cutting boldly across to Jamaica, then to Cuba and on to Florida. About the end of April they have reached the Missouri River. In less than a month after they are passing through Manitoba and ten days later they are nest building in Alaska just under the Arctic circle. The golden plover spends the winters in the vicinity of Buenos Ayres. When it leaves the southern continent it makes a 2,500-mile flight from the Orinoco country to Nova Scotia. Its cousin in the Pacific region flies from Hawaii to Alaska over ocean entirely landless.

Birds have no transportation problems. Embargoes, blockades, autocratic commands of traffic officers, are unknown to them. When it is settled [illegible] out for the human traveler to get a good breakfast and start for the world's [illegible] they can begin challenging the migrating birds, but not before.—Toledo Blade.

MONEY IS USELESS.

No Cash is Needed in the Island of Ascension.

The island of Ascension, in the Atlantic, belonging to Great Britain, is of volcanic formation, eight miles by six in size, and has a population of about 150. It was uninhabited until the confinement of Napoleon at St. Helena. Vast numbers of turtles are found on its shores and it serves as a depot and watering place for ships.

Ascension is governed by a captain appointed by the British Admiralty. There is no private property in land, no rents, no taxes and no use for money. The flocks and herds are public property and the meat is issued as rations. So are the vegetables grown on the farms. When an island fisherman makes a catch he brings it to the guardroom, where it is issued by the sergeant-major. Practically the entire population are sailors, and they work at one of the common trades. The muleteer is a jack tar, so is the gardener, so is the shepherds, the stockmen, the grooms, masons, carpenters and plumbers. Even the island trapper who gets reward for the tails of rats, is a sailor.

The climate is almost perfect; anything can be grown.—Philadelphia Ledger.

RELIEF AT LAST

I want to help you if you are suffering from bleeding, itching, blind or protruding Piles. I can tell you how in your own home and without anyone's assistance, you can apply the best of all treatments.

PILES TREATED AT HOME

I promise to send you a FREE trial of the new absorption treatment, and references from your own locality if you will but write and ask. I assure you of immediate relief. Send no money, but tell others of this offer. Address

MRS. M. SUMMERS, Box 8,
Windsor, Ont.

FAMILIAR PHRASES.

A Few of the Many Gems We Get From Alexander Pope.

With the exception of Shakespeare, Pope is the author of more familiar phrases than any other writer of modern times. Here are a few of his gems:

"Shoot folly as she flies." "Hope springs eternal in the human breast." "Man never is but always to be blessed." "Whatever is is right." "The proper study of mankind is man." "Grows with his growth and strengthens with his strength." "Order is heaven's first law." "Worth makes the man and want of it the fellow." "Honor and shame from no condition rise; act well your part, there all the honor lies." "An honest man's the noblest work of God." "Thou wert my guide, philosopher and friend." "Woman's at best a contradiction still." "Just as the twig is bent the tree's inclined." "Who shall decide when doctors disagree?" "A little learning is a dangerous thing." "To err is human, to forgive divine." "Beauty draws us with a single hair." "Fools rush in where angels fear to tread." "Damn with faint praise." "The many headed monster."

Minard's Liniment Cures Distemper.

THE JAGUAR.

Is Bigger But Not So Fierce as African Leopard.

The jaguar or "el tigre," as it is generally known throughout Spanish America, is the largest and handsomest of American cats. Its size and deep yellow color, profusely marked with black spots and rosettes, gives it a close resemblance to the African leopard. It is, however, a heavier and more powerful animal. In parts of the dense tropical forest of South America coal black jaguars occur, and while representing merely a color phrase, they are supposed to be much fiercer than the ordinary animal. Although so large and powerful, the jaguar has none of the [illegible] of the African leopard. During the years I spent in this country, mainly in the open, I made careful inquiry without hearing of a single case where one had attacked human beings.

In one locality on the Pacific coast of Guerrero I found that the hardier natives had an interesting method of hunting the "tigre" during the mating period. At such time the male has the habit of leaving its lair near the head of a small canyon in the foothills early in the evening and following down the canyon for some distance, at intervals uttering a subdued roar. On moonlight nights at this time the hunter places an expert native with a short wooden trumpet near the mouth of the canyon to imitate the "tigre's" call as soon as it is heard and to repeat the cry at proper intervals. After placing the caller, the hunter ascends the canyon several hundred yards, and, gun in hand, awaits the approach of the animal. The natives have many amusing tales of the sudden exit of startled hunters when the approaching animal unexpectedly uttered its roar at close quarters.—National Geographic Magazine.

DRS. SOPER & WHITE

SPECIALISTS

Piles, Eczema, Asthma, Catarrh, Pimples, Dyspepsia, Epilepsy, Rheumatism, Skin, Kidney, Blood, Nerve and Bladder Diseases.

Call or send history for free advice. Medicine furnished in tablet form. Hours—10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2 to 6 p.m. Sundays—10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Consultation Free

DRS. SOPER & WHITE
25 Toronto St., Toronto, Ont.

Please Mention This Paper.

This Summer wear FLEET FOOT and Save Money

With leather prices still high, you may have several pairs of attractive Fleet Foot Summer Shoes for what one good pair of leather boots cost.

Fleet Foot line is so complete, that there are many styles for work and play—for sports and outings—for men, women and children.

Ask your dealer to show you the full line of Fleet Foot Shoes—and save money this summer. 203

DOMINION RUBBER SYSTEM

Versatile.

"Do you know," she simpered, "you are the first real actor I ever met. It must be so awfully interesting to act the parts created by the master dramatists [illegible]."

"[illegible]," the actor [illegible]. "I just [illegible] Shakespeare's [illegible]."

Minard's Liniment Cures Garget in Cows.

THE NOISELESS MOOSE.

Taller Than Ordinary Horse, He Moves Silently Through Forest.

Although taller than an ordinary horse, weighing more than half a ton, and adorned with wide-spreading antlers, the bull moose stalks with ghostly silence through thickest forests, where man can scarcely move without being betrayed by the loud crackling of dry twigs. In summer it [illegible] swampy forests, interspersed with shallow lakes and [illegible] wades up to its neck in a lake to feed on succulent water plants, and when reaching to the bottom becomes entirely submerged. These visits to the water are sometimes by day, but usually at night, especially during the season when the calves are young and the horns of the bulls are but partly grown.

Late in the fall, with full-grown antlers, the bulls wander through the forest looking for their mates, at times uttering far-reaching calls of defiance to all rivals, and occasionally clashing their horns against the saplings in exuberance of masterful vigor. Other bulls at times accept the challenge and hasten to meet the rival for a battle royal. At this season the call of the cow moose also brings the nearest bull quickly to her side. Hunters take advantage of this, and by imitating the call through a birch-bark trumpet bring the most aggressive bulls to their doom.—Exchange.

Lachute, Que., Sept. 25, 1908.
Minard's Liniment Co., Limited.

Gentlemen,—Ever since coming home from the Boer war I have been bothered with running fever sores on my legs. I tried many salves and liniments; also doctored continuously for the blood, but got no permanent relief till last winter, when my mother got me to try MINARD'S LINIMENT, the effect of which was almost magical. Two bottles completely cured me, and I have worked every working day since.

Yours gratefully,
JOHN WALSH.

A ROUMANIAN VILLAGE.

Quaint Switch Houses Mask Great Poverty.

Behind the community haystack will be found the village.

Each village house itself seems but a mass of willow switches wattled together, the interstices being then chinked in and about with mud, so that the place resembles nothing so much as the Dahomey villages of World's Fair times. Along the road, beneath the locusts, rise high walls of it, hiding the yards behind as Turkish women were wont to screen their faces from the masculine gaze. From the street wall other fences run back to the meadows, to enclose a yard.

Passing through the fence, one will see the house, usually the bare, brown mud walls alone, but occasionally coated over with a whitewash of slightly blue tinge, and now and then boasting a portico, on which repose old sheepskin coats, green peppers, cats and the great troop of village dogs, the scavengers of the highway.

Inside the house, poverty is everywhere manifest. The floors are of earth, on which the family go about barefoot in order to save the costly shoes. The oven is of earth; the bed is a plank, set against the wall; and the artistic is supplied by a single cheap iron. Opulent peasants now go so far as to cover their walls with a cheap cloth, which gives a decidedly pretty effect, but they are the exceptions. For food on their table, there is one dish that is common to all, and that is a soft meal of maize. In addition, there will be mangoes, the poor man's friend in the Balkans, either stuffed with cabbage, roasted or boiled, and, possibly, a potato. Sheep's cheese is also served; but bread is a rarity, and then it is of the black variety always. Meat, of course, is to be had on great occasions only.

At one end of the village stands the symbol of their wrongs, the home of the landed proprietor, to whom the adjoining thousand odd hectares of land belong.

Seldom, if ever, is the noble here. He lives in Vienna or Paris, and leaves the place in charge of some Greek or Macedonian, who has the stewardship for a term of five years, with the intent of making all he can, first for himself and then for the proprietor.—Christian Herald.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED — PROBATIONERS to train for nurses. Apply, Welland Hospital, St. Catharines.

LADIES WANTED TO DO PLAIN light sewing at home; whole or spare time; good pay; work sent any distance; charge prepaid. Send stamp for particulars. National Manufacturing Co., Montreal, Que.

WANTED—CARD ROOM HELP — Woolen Mill Cleaners and Te for day and night work. For lars, apply to the Slingsby M pany, Limited, Brantford, Ont.

WANTED—WOOLLEN MILL — Napper tender, one accustom Gessner Nappers on White and Blankets and heavy Cloths. For particulars, apply to Slingsby M Ltd., Brantford, Ont.

SEPARATE SK

Ultra Smart fo Chic Bl

The separate sk been given more ers than this received heretofore. last realized that it a garment as the s are, consequently, much care in its de

As a result, it is now oped in various very appr brics and it is showing lety of line. The bar featured this year, may safely say that skirt silhouette. Sp more popular than too, a dress skirt, mu fashionable Parisian wo out the winter, which this spring. It is of bla blue satin and is especially when worn with the new blouses in art colors.

A very new design for a s skirt is that which has been from the native dress of th colony of Algeria. It has thick pleats set close together the sides of the skirt, the fr back panels being entirely pla

Blouses, simple or elaborate, frequently composed of two mat usually sheer. Practically all blouses are made up in sheer Net blouses will be worn, m them having colored linings of or satins. Dressy blouses show cided preference for very sho mona sleeves, but the tailored b have sleeves extending quite mona sleeves, but the tailored b are expected to receive the appro of the ultra smart. Paisley designs appear upon chiffon blouses. Sheer organdies show the finest possibl embroidery done in fine sewing silk.

Very fine linens, lawns, organdies and washable silk crepes are the favored spring and summer blouse materials.

nd.
Walkerton
CAL OWN
Eye, Ear, Nose and Ont. Will be at the kerton, 1st Friday
2 to 6 p.m.
M.D., C.M.
in Arts
Mediember of and Surgeon corner of Streets.
NCE
E, N sale.
hase.

Minard's Liniment Cures Colds, Etc.

THE CATACOMBS.

Between Six and Eight M Bodies Laid There.

Nature has been kind to th tine, that hill where dwelt the herd kings and where later rose tremendous palaces of emperor a emperor, clothing its scanty ru with lavish verdure. The silence of Ilion broods over the fragment the halls where Domitian played his fleas and Caligula bathed in tering seas of minted coins. most compelling thing upon the w rocky hill, says Geographic Magaz the little stone altar chisled: S Deo, Sei Deivae—to the Unknown God.

This was really the shrine of th protecting deity of the city, the patron god of Rome, and only the priests knew the dread spirit's name. It was never written, but handed down verbally from generation to generation, because, if the common people knew whom they worshipped, any traitor could reveal the sacred name to an enemy, who might bribe the deity t forget Rome.

What a contrast! The home of th Unknown God on the pleasant hillside, in the sun-sweetened air, and far underground, pent in the damp chill of the Catacombs, the altars often the sarcophagi of martyrs—the stout-hearted who worshipped the Known God.

Originally cemeteries, perfectly well known to the pagan authorities, the remarkable vaults and galleries and chapels, 20 to 50 feet below the surface, became hiding places for the faithful in time of persecution. More than forty of these cities of the dead which extend around Rome in a great subterranean circle, have been explored, and it has been estimated by an Italian investigator that between six and eight million bodies were interred in them.

ST. VITUS DANCE

EVEN THE MOST SEVERE CASES CAN BE CURED BY DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS.

Is your child fidgety, restless, irritable? Are the hands shak the arms jerky? Does the twitch? Do the legs tremble drag? These are signs of St. Dance, a nervous disease w confined chiefly to young child but which often affects hi strung women, and sometimes St. Vitus Dance is caused by disordered nerves, due to poor blood, and always cured by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills which fill the veins with new, rich red blood, strengthening the nerves, and thus driving out the disease. Here is proof:—Mrs. John A. Cumming, Lower Caledonia, N. S., says:—"When my daughter Myrtle was about nine years of age she became afflicted with St. Vitus Dance. The trouble ultimately became so bad that she could not hold anything in her hands, and had to be fed like a child. She could not even walk across the floor without help. She was treated for some time by a physician, but did not show any improvement. One day a neighbor said she had read of a case of St. Vitus Dance cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and we decided to give this medicine a trial. By the time the third box was used there was some improvement in her conditio we continued giving her the about a month longer whe entirely cured, and has not the least return of the tro

Dr. Williams' Pink tained from any or by mail at 50 boxes for $2.50 liams' Medici

Women's Organization for Services in War

Lady Londonderry Tells of British Women's Magnificent Work.

dward Marshall, special corre- dent of the N. Y. Sun.)

Cable.—Lady London speaking. What she said rded as a sample of small to the grande dame of [illegible] and gowns or "No. Did it ever Well, after a fash- of a big, incom- medical instru- great electrical edu- to be a sort of sup- anything which in the has been associated along with real lead- of the elect, the in- the British aris- it was a tractor, plow, pulling rapidly to pre- Britain for the sol- might find something was saying. "It wasn't turned to me. "If you have [illegible] London drawing room gos- days. And my reply had in order to in the great old house to be the all sorts of social gay- now are their caste but for usual and and gay, but must be too of the drawing rooms occupied as a hospital.

the war to any may be of special interest to the women of ica at this particular time, when too, are eager to organize in the ice of their country.

Marchioness of Londonderry is president of the Women's Legion the motto of that legion is, not "Say and Work," as that of the leg- of society women is supposed to by those who do not know) but "Pray and Work." In the legion are housemaids as well as marchionesses, cooks as well as countesses. And the marchioness works quite as hard as the housemaid, while the is likely to be a better cook [illegible].

Glance at the list of those who have [illegible] and you will find such names as the Viscountess Allendale, Lady Beatty (wife of the Admiral), the Duchess of Bedford, the Countess of Carrick, y Cowdray of Midhurst, the Coun- of [illegible] Lady [illegible] Wemyss, Lady Jellicoe (an- r famous Admiral's wife), the Marchioness of Londonderry, [illegible] Mildred, the March- s of Salisbury, the Duchess of Sutherland, the Viscountess Wolseley, the Countess of Pembroke and Montgomery and many others.

And what may be the object of this organization which links such distinguished women, who before the war were principally famous for their social power, with Mary Smith and Sally Jones—these women organized to "pray and work." Here it is, as they themselves [illegible] set it forth:

"To provide a capable and efficient body of women whose services can be offered to the State as may be required to take the place of men needed in the firing line or in other capacities."

The men who must be replaced if they go to the war are drawn from farms, from shops, from factories, from stables, from motor vehicles, from everywhere. And to all these places the distinguished women go themselves or send their sisters with an enthusiasm and a democracy which I never have seen equalled in my own democratic United States.

The mighty band (for the membership [illegible] political and without class distinction [illegible] nel's lady and Judy O'Grady are sisters [illegible] war born and war needed. But [illegible] sure to [illegible] days to come after the great war shall have ended.

"The [illegible] sections," said the really very beautiful Marchioness of Londonderry, smiling, "are [illegible] and canteens."

There is work for a real Marchioness [illegible]

"The object of the cookery section, under Mrs. Burleigh Leach's able management, is to provide women cooks for all war cooking work that women possibly can do and to teach men properly to cook where women cannot go. When women replace men army cooks they thus release the men to the trenches, and when women holding high diplomas for cookery instruct the men of camps or in military schools of cookery before these men are given charge of the digestions of their fellow soldiers, the work may be regarded [illegible] not perhaps as first aid to the injured, but certainly as a first step to prevent injury.

"A subsidiary section provides a paid staff of capable and experienced women to take [illegible] catering, cooking and management of huts or hotels where regular meals are served to munition workers, [illegible] with voluntary workers [illegible] for supplying sailors, soldiers and munition workers with meals and refreshments. The supply of good food to munition workers is one of the really necessary preliminaries to the supply of good shells to the artillery.

"Our cooks and transport drivers are now a part of the military machine, working with the Women's Auxiliary Service Corps, and may claim to be the first women workers incorporated with the army, outside, of course, the army nursing sisters.

"We are as official as the men in khaki, and are proud of the fact that Army Council Instruction No. 2031 of 1916 explains this. It formally places us at convalescent camps, command depots and other special formations and also as a special war measure in replacement of soldiers withdrawn from officers' messes, cadet battalions and other units. Our women also are employed at military schools of cookery [illegible] other military units in the United Kingdom."

I shall take the liberty at this point of interrupting the Marchioness long enough to state that there may be as much for Americans to learn from this militarization of women in the army as there is from us to learn from Lord Derby's recruiting scheme and militarily organized battalions of dock workers. The organization has been of truly incalculable value to the military cause of the Allies.

A further interruption (if you please) will [illegible] fashion note, as is but right in the [illegible] of an article about or even an interview with a Marchioness. But this fashion note is found in nothing similar to a fashion paper. Instead, it is officially recorded in "Standing Orders." And it [illegible]

"The women will be required, after the completion of their probationary period, to wear the regular Women's Legion uniform."

That uniform, as described briefly in what may be called the fashion page of the British Military Regulations, is a [illegible] khaki Norfolk coat and skirt, with khaki shirt and tie, brown boots or shoes and soft felt hat to match.

"How many women have enrolled?" I inquired of Lady Londonderry.

"The figures in complete form are not at hand," she answered. "Roughly, I may say more than 4,000."

"And from what social classes?"

"There are workwomen and noblewomen, housemaids and honorables, soldiers' widows and the wives of admirals. There is no worthy class of British womanhood which is not represented in our membership. Among our cooks are ladies of position."

"And how does Judy O'Grady get on with the admiral's lady and the peeress and the wife of the millionaire knight and the daughter of the bishop?"

"She likes them all."

"And do they like Judy?"

"They adore her. She has made them. She is superb. She is a patriot. She is wonderful. You can have no idea how much it all has done to make the women of England understand one another, respect one another.

"I presume that some of the workwomen who have joined the organization find the life easier than their previous civilian grind; but they are no fonder of it than the ladies who by it are thrust into unmistakably hard work. There never is the slightest grumbling from either one.

"Hard work it [illegible]. Consider the task of [illegible] women [illegible] at Folkestone, which [illegible] because only [illegible] there except when the drafts come through to go out to the front or the men come back on leave or wounded.

"Some days 6,000 men pass through. The cooks always are ready for them. In peace time it would be called killing work, but these war time women never whimper. They would be ashamed at thought of snivelling before their fires as the men would be at thought of shrinking before rifle fire.

"Often such stations are understaffed, but the men never are underfed, nor is the food ever underdone. The women frequently are overworked, but they thrive on it. Patriotism will keep a woman's spirit fresh in front of her range as surely as it will keep a man's fresh behind his sandbags.

"I believe we now safely may say that the women have made good. [illegible] as much as the machine guns or the drill sergeants, a part of the British army."

"How many men have been released for fighting by the women workers?"

"I don't know. I doubt if any one knows. Four thousand men have been released by women cooks, 1,000 by women motor drivers, thousands have been replaced in agriculture. The women canteen workers have not replaced men, for the women created the canteens.

"The women's work in agriculture is developing along unexpected lines. Among other things it has accomplished the real introduction of motor machinery into British agriculture, where previously it was practically unknown. At first it was decided that these motors should be managed by disabled soldiers, but now it has been found that women manage them as well or better, so disabled men are released for other work which women obviously could not do."

I was surprised. Is there any work which women obviously could not do?" I asked.

"Not really," said the marchioness, "but some of the old superstitions still remain.

"We are working very hard in the agricultural section. Miss Brocklebank, sister of Sir Aubrey Brocklebank, who is the brother-in-law of your [illegible] American George Westinghouse, is of great importance in the work. And your Mr. Perry, of the Ford Motor Company, has now an official position as to tractors.

"We very [illegible] tractors, such as are [illegible] in America. This is not because our women cannot operate successfully large tractors which are at our disposition, but because those great tractors are what might be called wholesale machinery, while a light American tractor, of which I have heard such great things predicted, would possibly be what we might call a retail machine.

"Our women motor drivers never stop work until they have specific orders to do so. Their energy is amazing. We use every tractor which we have every hour when use is possible. In Rutland our women drivers are this spring plowing at night, their furrows illuminated by the great headlights on the machines. Our women workers are often as busy upon Sundays as they are upon week days. With the women ready to work every inch of land, the enemy will find England perfectly supplied with food next winter, if by an evil chance we have not won the war before then."

"Canteens have had a wonderful effect on munition workers. I believe they will remain a feature of British industry after the war ends. Their sanitary effect and their social influence alike have been fine. One of the results of the canteen system is to bring women and men together pleasantly and keep both away from public houses. The moral and social effect of this is undeniable.

"I do not feel that canteens should be supported even partly by philanthropic contributions any more than they should be operated by volunteer workers. They should sell their food to all and not for less than cost. Those who do [illegible] need pay their way.

"One result of the employment of women cooks in the army, by the way, has been the achievement of immense savings. Even the best male cooks are wasteful creatures and the ordinary soldier cook is hopelessly extravagant. We are arranging for instruction by women of men cooks before they go to the front.

"The success of our women motor drivers has been marked.

"I am sure that feeling of our work, like the horticultural section, will continue to develop after the war ends. The garden work already is so popular that there is believed to be some danger that it may absorb too much of the available agricultural area."

I asked the Marchioness what effect she thought all this useful work would have upon the cause of suffrage in Great Britain.

"It seems to me that the most striking result of our work will be to prove that men and women working together upon equal terms is of the greatest advantage to the nation at large," she replied.

GROW CORN AND REDUCE THE FEED BILL

At Present Prices for Feed Corn Silage is Worth $5.60 Per Ton—Help to Get a Bumper Crop by Using Tested Seed—Best Varieties to Use in Your Locality.

"Can you tell me whether it is going to be a good year?" We have had several inquiries of this nature come to the office during the winter months. No one can tell definitely whether it is going to be a good corn year, as it depends chiefly on getting rain and heat at the proper time.

Corn converts are being made all the time. When farmers see what a lot of first-class succulent feed corn provides when it is put into the silo they cannot help being convinced of its value. Roots have a very important place, and rightly so, in the stock menu, but as silage corn can be grown so much cheaper per ton, it would be well for those who have grown nothing but roots to seriously consider whether it would not pay them to put in a few acres of corn this year.

Silage is preeminently a cattle feed but it can be profitably used for sheep and even for horses. With present prices for feed stuffs a ton of good silage is worth about $4 for the food nutrients it contains. On account of its succulency, however, silage makes the other food better digested, and it has been found that cows will give more milk when fed silage than if they were fed the same amount of nutrients in the dry form as hay or dried fodder corn, so that $4 per ton does not represent the full value of silage. From the average of a large number of experiments that have been carried on in the United States we may reckon that one ton of silage will increase the milk flow of the cows to which it is fed by at least 80 pounds. Reckoning the value of milk at $2 per hundred, or 2 cents per pound, we see that we must add $1.60 to the $4 to get the true feeding value of one ton of silage. This gives $5.60.

The cost of producing one ton of silage will vary, of course, with the cost of labor and the yield of the crop. When on account of good climatic conditions the corn crop is a good one the cost of producing a ton of silage may be as low as $1.25, while another year, when the crop is a poor one, the cost of production may run as high as $4 per ton. Under average conditions it will cost about $20 to put one acre of corn in the silo. An acre of corn will yield from 10 to 20 tons of silage. Taking 15 tons as an average, the cost of one ton would be $1.33. In this calculation the rent of the land or the cost of the barnyard manure or artificial fertilizers used has not been considered. Corn is a heat-loving plant and thrives best in southern climates. Under the most favorable conditions the corn plant produces a large leafy stalk and ears with deep kernels. Corn of this type yields heavily, but would not mature early enough to be grown in our northern climate. By careful breeding and selection, however, varieties of corn have been produced with a shallower kernel, which although they do not yield quite as well, mature sufficiently early to be grown successfully practically all over Canada. In the southern part of Ontario the Dent varieties of corn are grown largely. These varieties are heavy yielders [illegible] somewhat late in maturing. The Flint varieties of corn mature earlier, as a rule, than the Dent varieties so that they are usually grown in the more northerly sections.

In choosing a variety of corn it is evident that it is necessary to select one that is suited to the locality, but one that at the same time will give a large yield. In this connection the experiments that have been conducted by the Ontario Agricultural College are very instructive. In the table a summary of these experiments is given. Seven terms have been used to describe the condition of the corn as regards its ripeness when harvested, as follows: water, early milk, late milk, milk dough, firm dough, and ripe. Suppose a man were growing Wisconsin No. 8 and wanted to get a variety that would yield more heavily, but would mature at the same time. From the table it is seen that Wisconsin No. 8, was in the dough stage when harvested. Salzer's North Dakota was in the same stage when harvested but yielded 18.97 tons per acre against 13.84 by the Wisconsin variety. Salzer's North Dakota could safely be grown instead of Wisconsin No. 8.

GREAT DIFFERENCE IN STRAINS.

Not only is there a great difference in the yield of the different varieties but there is a difference in the yield of the same variety obtained from various sources. Thus take for example, White Cap Yellow Dent. The strain obtained from one source, H. Smith, took 89 days until it was in full tassel, and yielded 16.37 tons of green fodder per year. Another strain obtained from J. Hammond took only 81 days until it was in full tassel, but only yielded 12.12 tons of green fodder per acre. For best results, therefore, not only must one know the variety of the seed, but something about its source.

It is useless growing an early maturing variety or strain of corn which will give a light yield of fodder when a later maturing one that will give a heavy yield can be grown equally well. South of the 43rd parallel of latitude, which runs almost through Sarnia, London and Welland practically all the Dent varieties of corn will mature the later types in Essex and Kent the earlier varieties as we approach the northern limit. Between the 43rd and 44th parallels of latitude the earlier types of Dent corn are mostly grown. Between the 44th and 45th parallels of latitude only the very early varieties of Dent corn are grown, and these are grown chiefly for silage. In this zone such varieties of Flint corn as Longfellow, Salzer's North Dakota and Compton's Early are grown very largely for grain, while the Dents are grown for fodder. In the zone which lies between the 45th and 46th parallels of latitude only the very earliest varieties of Flint corn can be relied on to produce mature corn. For silage, however, the later maturing, heavier yielding varieties of corn may be grown.

Seed corn should never be bought shelled, but on the cob. Only in this way can one be sure of sowing seed of strong vitality with good germinating qualities. The type of ear selected for seed should be true to type. It should be almost cylindrical but slope slightly towards the tip. Both tips and butts should be well covered. The kernels should be deep and full. The deeper the kernel the later the corn is in reaching maturity, so that care must be taken if the kernels are exceptionally deep that the corn is of a variety or strain that will mature in the locality where it is to be grown. This is more important where it is grown for the grain than if the crop is to be put into the silo. The kernels should be close together, even and in straight rows. Beware of corn that was harvested when immature. It will germinate all right, but the plants will be weak and a Now place a piece or cloth on top poor crop will be the result. Corn that is immature can be told by the ease with which the ear may be twisted in the hands.

After the best ears have been selected, these should be laid to one side and tested for germination. In making the germination test 6 kernels should be taken from each ear, two from the tip, two from the middle and two from the butt. The kernels may be germinated in earth, sand or sawdust, any material in fact that can be kept moist and yet allow of sufficient air getting to the kernels. Make a box about 30 inches square and four inches deep. Fill it with moist, heavy soil, sand or sawdust, and level off the surface. Take a piece of cloth and rule it off into squares like a checker board, making the squares 2 1/2 inches each way. Place this cloth on top of the soil, sand or sawdust or whatever material has been used. Take six kernels from each ear and place each group in one square. Have a system of numbering the ears of corn and the squares so that when the test has been made one can tell which kernels belonged to which ear of corn. of the kernels and moisten it with some water. Place on top of this a cloth that is considerably larger than the box and fill in on top with some moist soil, sand or sawdust to a depth of about two inches. Now turn the ends of the cloth over the top of the box and put the box away. The temperature of the room where the box is kept should be about that of the living room. In six or eight days the grain should have sprouted. Discard all ears whose kernels have not germinated well. [illegible] planting, it is good practice to remove the kernels from the tips and butts from the ears that are to be used for seed, and plant only the kernels from the middle of the ear.

There is little use planting corn until the soil has become thoroughly warmed up, but on the other hand it should not be planted too late. From the middle to the end of May is about the right time to plant it in most sections of Ontario, although sometimes on account of weather conditions it has to be planted in rows having the plants eight inches apart in the rows. If the field is weedy it is better to plant the corn in hills, dropping three to five kernels to the hill. When the corn is planted in rows, the rows should be 3 feet 6 inches apart, but if it is planted in hills 3 feet apart each way is about [illegible]. For planting in rows there are special corn planting machines, but the ordinary grain drill may be used by stopping up some of the holes. For planting the corn in hills special machinery may be used, if not it will be necessary to mark off the land into three feet squares. A marker may be constructed to mark four rows at a time, which is very [illegible] planted at the corners where the rows cross.

Whenever possible the corn should be planted on clover sod. The sod should be plowed up the fall previous. The following spring the [illegible] should be plowed [illegible]. The following spring the land should be thoroughly disced and harrowed and worked up into a nice, fine, firm seed bed. Corn responds well to barnyard manure and 15 tons per acre is not too much to apply. This should be applied preferably in the fall or winter. After the corn has been planted the land should be rolled and harrowed. A second harrowing may be given before the plants come up.—The Canadian Countryman.

CORN GROWN FOR SILAGE

Varieties.	Kind of Corn.	Condition when Harvested.	Days Until in Full Tassel.	Yield per acre of Green Fodder, tons.
Eureka	Yellow Dent	Early Milk	99	20.67
Salzer's North Dakota	White Flint	Dough	89	18.97
Reid's Yellow Dent	Yellow Dent	Early Milk	94	17.84
Mammoth Southern Sweet	White Dent	Early Milk	98	17.82
Gold Nugget	Yellow Flint	Firm Dough	84	16.95
Improved Leaming (Vick)	Yellow Dent	Milk	91	16.56
White Cap Yellow Dent (H. Smith)	Yellow Dent	Late Milk	89	16.37
Sanford	White Flint	Dough	84	15.25
Canada Yellow	Yellow Flint	Firm Dough	84	15.23
Compton's Early (Duke)	Yellow Flint	Firm Dough	85	15.10
Longfellow (Duke)	Yellow Flint	Firm Dough	81	15.09
Duke's Improved Sweet	Sweet	Milk	93	15.03
90-day Red Flint	Colored Flint	Firm Dough	82	15.02
Wisconsin No. 8	Yellow Dent	Dough	84	13.84
Squaw Corn	Colored Flint	Ripe	82	13.47
White Cap Yellow Dent ([illegible])	Yellow Dent	Late Milk	87	13.44
Duke's Improved Early White Cap	Yellow Dent	Dough	82	13.33
White Cap Yellow Dent Hammond	Yellow Dent	Firm Dough	81	12.12

In growing corn for silage it is necessary to select a variety that will yield heavily, but at the same time will mature early enough to ensure quality. The above table gives the results of five years' experiments carried on at the Ontario Agricultural College, and will help our readers to decide which varieties are best under their conditions.

Glad To Be Out of It

A typical story coming from the front in these days of half way open warfare was told to the New York Sun by an officer on leave.

The story goes that the British had succeeded in capturing three lines of trenches of a small German salient. The position had been consolidated, and where the communication trench bisected the centre of the new firing line a strong sandbag barricade had been built. The communication trench wound onward through No Man's Land, and just in front of what was once the German firing line it ran through a cluster of dugouts. A group of British bombers was stationed near the barricade to prevent the Germans making any advance along the trench. Into their midst two days later crawled a German soldier.

It would be difficult to imagine a more curious looking figure. He wore regulation blue trousers with a red stripe down either side. On one foot he had a [illegible] on the other a German infantry boot. For an upper garment he had nothing but a blue blanket wrapped about him. He was a squatly made person with thick lips and the flat countenance that one sees these days among the German rank and file. His curly black hair and barbaric rings in his ears, deep broad shoulders and long arms finished off by hands huge and strong and [illegible] combined with the oddity of his garments gave him a piratical look. If the original German army contained many of his kind every one of the atrocities in France and Belgium might be easily understood.

"I surrender," he said simply, raising himself out of the mud into which he had sprawled when he flopped over the barricade.

The bombers stared at him in amazement. "Holy tom cats," said one, "here's the Old Nick himself!" They gathered around him, not knowing what to make of the occurrence, and again the German said, "I surrender," slowly raising his hands above his head. One of the Britishers offered him a cigarette, and he lowered one hand, grasped the cigarette and put it into his mouth. A hunk of cheese was held out to him. He lowered the other hand took the cheese. Then he lost his wistful look and began to smile. Clearly he was beginning to feel at home.

"[illegible]—It's bin ver Brodel," he said, raising the blanket to reveal and ugly wound in his back just below the shoulder. The sight stirred the men to action.

"Hey, Johnstone!" shouted the bombing corporal, addressing a stretcher-bearer. "Bring that puke of yours and get busy here."

The dressing had just been completed when the Captain came on the scene. "What's up, corporal?" he demanded crisply.

"I think we've got a German prisoner, sir," said the corporal.

"You 'think,'" said the officer sarcastically. "Why don't you bring him along to headquarters to make sure?"

KNEW WAYS OF DUGOUT.

Instantly the men recovered their senses and the German was marched off to be headquarters dugout. It had been a German dugout once, and Fritz was quite familiar with its whereabouts. He knew the awkward position of the broken step at the entrance, and automatically turned to the right at the bottom of the steps, and as he stepped inside his eyes rolled around the familiar objects, picking out the points that had impressed him upon previous visits.

Besides the Captain inside the dugout there was a young lieutenant recently from England.

"Guten morgen, Herr Officer," said Fritz, gazing at the tea on the table. He was at his ease now, and when a cup of tea was offered him his delight was evident. It is typical of the average British soldier that he invariably offers food and drink to every man who enters his door, whether it is a fellow officer or a bedraggled prisoner, invited or uninvited.

He had been wounded by a shell splinter and was being treated in one of the dugouts when the dressers fled before the advancing British. There he had lain, too weak to move, until the supply of food ran out. After that he had just sufficient strength to crawl into the British lines, as his own lines were too far away. As he left the headquarters dugout the young lieutenant turned to the captain and said: "Jolly bad luck on the poor blighter having to surrender after all he has been through," he said. The captain eyed the boy thoughtfully before he made any comment.

"Do you mean to say that you believe that yarn?" he asked deliberately and almost sadly. The subaltern looked up astonished.

"My boy," continued the Captain, "if your knowledge of our sector was commensurate with what it ought to be, you should have noticed little discrepancies in this story that has just been told us. Those dugouts that he spoke of are more than 100 yards from our line and only twenty yards from his own trenches. Despite that fact he says that his weakness compelled him to take the shortest road to help. No physical weakness sent that man to us. He is the confoundedest deserter I've ever struck. Come on out and watch him."

The two officers walked off down the communication trench to a point where the ground dipped sharply and below them they saw the prisoner and his escort moving toward headquarters. Two figures walked together, one was the corporal in charge of the escort, while behind, struggling hard to keep up, came the two soldiers of the escort. The coat with which the German had been supplied was heavy, several sizes too large for him, and its folds flapped grotesquely as he swung his arms, talking to the corporal, but in spite of its hindrance he was walking faster than any man in the party.

"He looks pretty gay, doesn't he?" said the Captain.

"By Jove," murmured the subaltern, "that beggar looks like a fellow going home on leave."

"That is precisely what he is doing," said the Captain, "and it is what most of his mates across the way would give a whole lot to do."

The Pirates By Night

One thirty o'clock on a bitter winter's morning. Colder and more wretched than it had been at midnight. The waters of the harbor were being whipped to frenzy in the darkness by a viciously driving sleety rain. A good time enough for those in warm beds, but no sort of night for seafaring, or for lying out on the plains of Picardy, say, trying to get shelter out of a water-logged, shrapnel-opened shell crater.

Suddenly the line of waiters at the quay head, their coats all gleaming, jumped into life and animation; for, from around the end of the long jetty appeared a mast-head light.

"Here they are, at last! Gad, how cold and wet they'll be!"

A second light followed the first, and, handled as though they were rubber-tyred perambulators on a foot-path two of His Majesty's destroyers were laid gently alongside the stage; their sides just kissing the great rope fenders. The whole operation had been performed in perfect silence, but in that dramatic instant of soundless contact with the wharf-side fenders, a full-throated shout rent the rain-swept air from the deck of the first destroyer:

"Three cheers for the Hummingbird and the Whipsnake!"

For a full minute the thunder of cheering rolled out into the night: a very moving sound, compact of vivid and varied emotions, and contributed to by men who a day or two earlier had been fighting under the scream of our own and enemy shells, and forcing their way through knee-deep mud and tangles of German barbed wire in the inferno between Vimy Ridge and Arras. There they had been wounded, and passing out for rest and treatment in Blighty. But since then, all unarmed and helpless, they had been suddenly called on to face the Boche again: and in his vilest and most murderous guise. Yes, the sum of the cheering was moving; its component parts singularly varied. For a full minute the cheering rose and fell athwart the driving rain, and then the Hummingbird made answer with one long fierce blast from his syren, full of defiance, and somehow, as it seemed to our ears, of good British cheer.

Then they began to come ashore: a long, stiffly-moving file of shaky, utterly weary souls, wrapped about as to their heads or arms, necks or shoulders with rain and brine-soaked surgical bandages. Few had any sleep for several nights; all were new-plucked from the midmost jaws of death among the shell holes; and all had faced the Boche again at his ugliest, since leaving France. The fatigue in their eyes, which no man may hide in such a case, was pathetic; but there was a look in the same eyes that overrode anything like pathos: the look of indomitable. Out of those tired eyes shone the spirit that no power on earth, or from the hell that the Boches have made on earth, can reduce to whimpering. There is no English equivalent on the French front for "Merey, merey, kamerad!" The light of the dear indomitable spirit of the modern crusader in khaki was there in every one of those weary eyes, and not to be mistaken or overlooked, though here and there [illegible] a man obviously tottering on the verge of collapse. The waiting R. A. M. C. orderlies have developed an almost uncannily intuitiveness in these matters. They were instant in detecting such cases and would run forward with a tenderful helpful outstretched arm, and a muttered:

"Feeling bad, old son?"

And the sense of the answer was invariably the same, as in the case of the first, the words of which were:

"I'm all right, mate. Just come over a bit queer like. All right again now."

Inside the shed nothing had been forgotten. Hot drinks, sandwiches, and cigarettes, the blessed tobacco; it was all waiting there. And the kindly English faces of those who provided the comforts; they played their part; two o'clock in the morning or no. One does not yawn, you know, however tired, in the faces of men who have just been snatched from—well, of men who have just been rescued from one kind of death, when they had a right to think they had already escaped another kind in open fighting; fighting for you who read, and for humanity at large; for all that we of the Allied peoples hold dearest and count as the decencies of life; for the women and children of the remotest American villages, as well as for the grey islands that are sacred to all the sons and daughters of our stock, and for the blood-soaked earth of outraged France and Belgium.

Some of the greyness began to fade out from their faces now, as, warmed, and cheered and comforted, they climbed into the waiting train, filling coach after coach, an endless succession. As they sank into their seats, one heard short, hard sighs of relief pass their tight closed lips. But in talk there was mighty little of that, and might have been none, if one had put no questions. If you live with sufficient intensity for days on end, and then, on top of wounds and great fatigue, pass through some violent and unexpected crisis, you are apt to find speech seem curiously remote, not to say out of place. If in the middle of the night you are turned out of bed as the result of a fire, you may well spend the rest of the night comparing notes, and swapping experiences. But not after the sort of thing these men had been through. But they were emphatically B.E.F. men, and whatever they felt would always respond to a call. They would 'carry on,' these men, while life was in them.

"Yes, we were within sight of Blighty when the torpedo got us." It was a lung, lean north-countryman who spoke. "But it just caught our stern, and blew it clean away—a few men with it, too. Another four seconds, and that would have been a wasted torpedo."

An exceptionally small, earnest faced man in the corner looked up. "Yes," he said, quickly, and quietly: "And I suppose a few Boches might have been saved for a bit from earning—hell!"

"Eh? Well, I don't know about that," resumed the north-countryman, in an open-minded, matter-of-fact way; as if he regarded this as a question for the decision of some superior officer; possibly his C. O. "But it was wonderful to see the two destroyers. They are men, those sailors. They had their boats in the water almost before you could turn around. One of them came close in alongside of us, and the other went circling round and round us, like a sheep-dog, but angry. Man, but that destroyer did look angry. We floated just over a quarter of an hour, and we were very nearly all clear of her, when she gave one h'ist, an' went down like a plummet. That last few minutes wasn't nice, you know—like waiting to go over the parapet. Some of us jumped to the deck of the destroyer, and some got knocked about a bit; wounded men, ye see; not so handy as they might be at other times. The destroyer came right in under us at the last, to get the least of us, and only drew away as the suction began.

"There wasn't any muddle or panic you know; no more'n on a job o' work at the front. I don't suppose we minded as much as civvies would. The army does teach you how to keep your head; and, anyhow, we'd been getting it in the neck this long time from shells, and Emma Gees, an' bombs, an' that. This was only a sort of a last act. If it came out there, you'd think nothing of it; but on the way here I suppose a man begins to lay off a bit, as ye might say, an' gets a bit slacker."

One gave a handful of lint to one man with a bandaged arm and a nasty cut on his forehead which was still bleeding.

"I only just found out I had that," he said. "I didn't [illegible] there when I [illegible] Of course, we could see she was done for, and everybody kept quiet. It was lucky the rain was so heavy, they say, because it beat the sea down a bit, and made it smoother. It was perishing cold; but I'm feeling fine now. I got twenty-eight Boches to me own rifle, out there by Blangy; and I wish it had been a hundred. We picked 'em off as they ran, like rabbits. Between us here, I reckon we must have got a regiment of 'em, so no wonder they wanted to get to us to-night. It seems a dirty way to do it, with a hospital ship. But, there; you know what the Boches are. A chap on the destroyer—they're men, those destroyer chaps, all right—he told me a thing or two about what happens to these U-boats, and it sounded pretty good, I can tell you. I suppose the Boches can't help bein' Boches—the silly blighters!"

One went the length of the long train. The silent calm of it all seemed almost unnatural; fatigue of body and mind. The whole thing was accepted as part of the day's work; and, after all; "We're in Blighty, you know, an' don't you forget it," said one man. "It's rather like something you've seen in the pictures," said another man.

As the train pulled slowly, smoothly out from the stage, the rescued men offered up their thanks again, the only way they knew, with a long, quivering cheer. "Are you down-hearted?" called an orderly with a long, rumbling roar of a "No"; they disappeared into the night, and — England.

"Nice chap, Fritz," said a destroyer officer, as he turned away.

Complicated, but Easy.

"How do you get your husband to do what he doesn't want to do when you want him to do it?"

"That's easy. I make a big fuss over something he has already done which I didn't want him to do or I remind him of something which I have done which he wanted me to do and I didn't want to do and soon he is doing what I want him to do just as though he had wanted to do it all along."

Had Severe Cold ON HER LUNGS.

RAISED PHLEGM AND BLOOD.

Never neglect what at first seems to be but a slight cold. You think perhaps you are strong enough to fight it off, but colds are not so easily fought off in this northern climate, and if they are not attended to at once will sooner or later develop into some serious lung trouble such as bronchitis, pneumonia, and perhaps that dreadful disease, consumption.

Miss Kasye McDonald, Sydney Mines, N.S., writes: "Last winter I contracted a severe cold, and it settled on my lungs. I would cough and take phlegm and blood. I had the cough for a month, and had medicine from the doctor but it did not seem to do me any good. I really thought I had consumption.

My friends advised me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which I did and it gave me great relief. I am very glad I used "Dr. Wood's," and would recommend it to every one."

You can procure Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup from any druggist or dealer, but be sure and get "Dr. Wood's," when you ask for it as there are a number of imitations on the market, which some dealers may try to palm off on you as the genuine.

See that it is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees is the trade mark; price 25c. and 50c.

Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Bradstreet's Trade Review.

Toronto.—Retail trade showed signs of reviving this week, assisted by milder weather, and seasonable commodities began to move out more freely. Wholesale trade was fair in volume, with dry goods orders for fall delivery quite up to, and in most cases a little better than, last year. Nervousness was experienced in financial circles. The dry goods trade is fair. Travellers find that many retailers are stocked up with goods bought at lower prices, and the tendency towards conservatism is evidenced by nearly all dealers with full shelves. The hardware houses are fairly busy, and retailers report a fair movement of shelf goods, as well as seasonable lines, while paints and oils are quite active. Groceries are little changed from last week.

Montreal.—Spring dry goods and kindred lines have not been as active as could be desired. Collections are reported by wholesale dry goods men to have been very gratifying. Fall orders are coming in quite satisfactorily. The boot and shoe wholesalers report a temporarily quiet trade. Grocery lines are fairly active.

Ottawa.—Dry goods, boots and shoes, etc., were rather quiet recently, but have begun to pick up again. Grocery and hardware lines report a fair degree of activity. Collections measured up well during the period when road conditions were not of the best.

Hamilton.—[illegible] generally good. Spring dry goods are continuing to move out well, in spite of advanced prices. Carpets, linoleums and house furnishings were fairly active. Country trade has been of fair proportions and indications of crop conditions in the vicinity of the Niagara peninsula have been very favorable to date. Prohibition of the export of Canadian apples promises to bring about lower prices this year, and reports on the conditions of the orchards are good. Fall orders being turned in by travellers show that retailers are confident of a good fall business. Hardware, paints, building materials, etc., are selling well. Labor is busily employed, and commercial obligations are generally well met.

London.—Western Ontario conditions are very good, and the prospect of good prices for farm produce in the autumn is creating a feeling of optimism in trade circles. Buying for fall requirements had been on a liberal scale, on the whole. Groceries have been moving out fairly well. Collections are reported as fairly good.

Winnipeg.—Retail trade is [illegible] as fair. The movement of trade in the country has been rather slow recently, on account of farmers being busy, but there is general confidence about trade during the summer. City business is fair in seasonable lines. Collections have been rather slow in some sections.

Calgary.—Mercantile trade is of fair proportion. Collections are quite up to the mark, and the outlook is generally one of hopefulness. Buyers are showing plenty of confidence in the future.

Vancouver.—Industries are busy, and business conditions continue to show improvement. Retail business has been moderately active. Seasonable dry goods, footwear and clothing lines show fair business, and orders for fall requirements are encouraging.

St. John.—Weather continues backward. No important failures. Collections fair.

"The thermometer has a very human way of behaving." "How is that?" "When it once begins to take a drop it falls by degrees."—Baltimore American.

Many Women Suffer From Pains in the Back.

When the back begins to ache it is a sure sign that there is something radically wrong with the kidneys.

What you want is a kidney medicine. Doan's Kidney Pills are not a cure-all but a medicine for the kidneys only.

Mrs. L. Melanson, Hympton, N.S. writes: "I am sending you this testimonial, telling you what a wonderful cure Doan's Kidney Pills made for me. For years I had suffered so with my kidneys I could hardly do my housework. I used several kinds of pills, but none of them seemed to be doing me any good. At last I was advised to try a box of Doan's Kidney Pills. When I had taken the first box I found relief. I have used five boxes and to-day I feel like a new woman. I cannot recommend them too highly."

Doan's Kidney Pills bear the trade mark of a Maple Leaf and are put up in an oblong grey box. See that you get "Doan's" when you ask for them.

Price 50c. a box, 3 for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

WALKERTON TELESCOPE

Published Every Thursday
LORNE A. EEDY - PUBLISHER

Phone No. - 48
Phone No. (Nights) 146

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

Strictly in Advance	$1.50
If not paid in Advance	$2.00
United States, paid in advance (50c for Postage)	$2.00
Great Britain, paid in advance	$1.50
France, paid in advance (1 00 for Postage)	$2.50

50c additional if not paid in advance

WALKERTON, MAY 31st, 1917

EDITORIAL COMMENT

WINSTON Churchill declares that the darkest days of the conflict are still ahead. Does Canada realize this possibility?

+ + +

WHILE little Sister Sue is sewing shirts for the soldiers, little Brother Bill should be planting potatoes for the people.—Gillis Packet.

+ + +

REMEMBER this, a man can show a heap more patriotism by waving a hoe this year than he can by flopping the flag.—Guelph Mercury.

+ + +

SOME Walkerton people we know should ponder over the following from the Flint (Mich.) Journal:—"After finding fault that there is no business life in their home towns many people send money away to other places to help produce business life somewhere else."

+ + +

SOMETHING to remember: "And he gave it for his opinion, that whatever could make two ears of corn, or two blades of grass to grow upon a spot of ground where only one grew before, would deserve better of mankind, and do more essential service to his country, than the whole race of politicians put together."—Swift.

+ + +

HERE is some pretty good advice from the Windsor Record: "Go out among the people. Spread the gospel of good cheer. Practice encouragement instead of discouragement. Don't magnify your troubles. There is enough to worry about now. Keep sweet. Be an optimist. Swat the pessimists. Boost and the world boosts with you. Weep and you weep alone. A smile is worth par value in any market."

+ + +

THE RENFREW MERCURY published by W. E. Smallfield & Son, is giving fresh evidence of prosperity by the widening of its pages, making it all eight columns. The Mercury is in many respects the model town newspaper of the province. It has wielded an influence for good citizenship in its community and has been aggressive in advancing the industrial interests of Renfrew which is fast becoming one of the most important towns in Eastern Ontario.

+ + +

BECAUSE local merchants declined to buy his space the editor of the Thornbury Review has decided to take a contract for advertising with the T. Eaton Co. of Toronto. The contract is for a full page ad. each issue. While a good many local merchants still grumble that advertising doesn't pay, this Department Store stands ready to buy all the space it can get in the local papers of Ontario. The only reason they aren't doing it is that the local merchants in most cases won't accept their contracts. It's about time some local merchants were waking up and taking a leaf out of the book of their competitor, the Department Store.

+ + +

Is skating to become a common mode of locomotion? With the latest form of roller-skate, having ball-bearings and pneumatic tires, one may travel with greater ease on a good road than an ice-skater does on ice. On such skates a given amount of exertion will carry a man about three times as far as if he were walking. The writer of an article on this subject in the Scientific American believes that instead of being used entirely for recreation and exercise, as at present, the wheeled skate is about to enter on an extensive career as a business utility. Perhaps it may also see service as a military device. Skates of this kind are cheap, noiseless, and efficient, and with them every man is his own motor. Their only limitation is that they require a reasonably smooth surface.

+ + +

THE suggestion has been made in the Telescope and elsewhere that Town should [illegible] forward to provide a suitable memorial for Walkerton's [illegible] who have fallen on the field of battle. The only suggestion we have heard so far is that a marble monument be erected to their memory. That is very good, but if some memorial could be provided which would be useful as well as ornamental, it would be even better. Unless some better scheme offers, we would like to see a Soldiers' Ward in the local hospital, endowed by the people of Walkerton, or all of Bruce County, where our returned soldier heroes may obtain medical treatment absolutely free as long as they live. This would be a fitting memorial which we believe, would appeal to the spirit of our boys who are fighting, and it could be supplemented by a simple tablet, in some public place, such as the Town Hall, or Public Library, bearing the names of all our boys who have made or shall have made the supreme sacrifice.

MEMORIAL SERVICE

In Honor of Walkerton Hero, Private George Cunningham at St. Thomas Church Sunday Night.

A Congregation, numbering all denominations in the Community, and filling the Church to the doors, gathered at St. Thomas Church on Sunday evening to honor the memory of one of Walkerton's soldier-heroes, Pte. George Cunningham, who was mortally wounded in the glorious charge at Vimy Ridge on April 9th. Rev. Mr. Perdue gave an eloquent and thoughtful discourse from the text Psalm 30:5: "Heaviness may endure for a night but joy cometh in the morning." The reverend gentleman said that David had written most of the Psalms to encourage the Jewish people in the accomplishment of the tasks that God had set before them. In our day, the Church owes it to the nation to have a message for our people to assist them in the performance of our great national task. The most important duty in the present crisis was for the people to repent of their sins. If we are an instrument in the hands of God for a holy purpose, we must needs be a holy instrument. There is a message of hope in what we see all around us at the present day, the spirit of self sacrifice. The church also has a message of hope to all those who mourn for friends who have given up their lives for country and for Christ. It points everyone to the Christ who can comfort every sorrowing heart. He spoke of the late Pte. Cunningham as one who had been known and loved throughout the town and country, a fact that was evidenced by the large gathering present. Honor is a greater thing than life and "one crowded hour of glorious deeds is worth an age without a name." He asked his hearers to remember that God will not fail any man who lays down his life for Country and for Jesus Christ. Also to ask themselves if we who have stayed at home, have done anything to make the name of Canada more glorious. 400,000 of Canada's best men have done so. The name of Canada will be a million times more glorious hereafter. No matter how humble we are, we can at least so order our lives as to bring no stain upon our country. In asking his hearers to remember those who have fought and died, he asked them also to remember the heroes who have fought and who have returned bearing the infirmities of war.

His Memory Honored

PTE. GEO. CUNNINGHAM

In honor of whose memory, service was held at St. Thomas Church, Walkerton, on Sunday evening, May 27th.

DISCHARGED DUTY TO THE FULL

Mrs. Geo. Cunningham received the following comforting letter from the Chaplain of her husband's Batt'n, Major W. L. Baynes Reed:—

Mrs. G. Cunningham,
Walkerton, Ont.,

Dear Madam:—

I regret to write and confirm the news of the death of your husband Pte. G. Cunningham No 126317, 75th Batt'n Canadian. He was Killed in Action on April 9th in the taking of Vimy Ridge. His body was recovered and buried in the 11th Brigade Burying Ground, Vimy Ridge (grave 119.) This is quite close to where he fell and was the scene of the desperate struggle for the Ridge—the possession of which has made possible the successful advance now being made.

For all your sorrow it must be an intense satisfaction to recall the fact that your husband gave his life and thereby made the supreme sacrifice while discharging his duty to the full to King and Country and to humanity in their great need.

Surely God will intervene to overrule this cruel war with all the consequent effects—sorrow and suffering and sacrifice, which we cannot fully understand as yet—to the bettering of conditions in the world and the general uplift of humanity—in some measure to compensate for personal losses.

On behalf of the Officers, N. C. O's and men of the batt'n I extend to you our sincere sympathy. And with the earnest prayer that you may be upheld in your great sorrow by the consolation which our christian faith offers to us. I remain, truly yours,

W. L. Baynes Reed, C.F. Major.

Wedding invitations and announcements in the latest correct styles of type and stationery, can be procured on short notice and at right prices at The Telescope Office.

WHY POLICY FAILED

Gifted Lecturer at Baptist Church Tells Why Prussian Foreign Policy Has Not Triumphed.

Those who heard the lecture at the Baptist Church last week felt that they were deeply indebted to the Ladies of the Baptist Church for a rare treat. Chancellor M'Crimmon is one of the few University professors who are at the same time good public speakers. He dealt with his subject, The Prussian "Menace" in a masterly way, giving his audience a glimpse of the world situation from the viewpoint of a scholar who knows and understands history. He showed how the German foreign policy developed under the three outstanding leaders, Frederick the Great, Bismarck, and the present Kaiser, showing how Germany sought an outlet for commerce, and population, and proposed to get it with the mailed fist. Prussian policy failed for three reasons (1) Because of the grand old British fleet (2) Because her foreign policy was always immoral. Expediency of the Machiavellian type ruled right from Frederick's time down to the tearing of the "scrap of paper" (3) Because a state such as Germany is incapable of understanding the genius of democracy. The Prussians are political asses, according to a prominent German authority, a statement which one would hesitate to deny. Rev. G. C. Rock, pastor of the Church, presided acceptably. A highly enjoyable feature of the program was a beautiful solo by Mrs. C. S. Stephen. Miss Helene Whitehead, a young singer of much promise, also rendered a solo. On the motion Rev. D. McLennan and Jos. Tolton, the audience tendered Chancellor M'Crimmon a hearty vote of thanks for his splendid lecture.

TELESCOPE LETTER BOX

THE NEED OF THE HOUR

The Manse, Pinkerton, May 24th.

Editor Telescope,
Walkerton, Ont.

Dear Editor;—

I notice in your issue of to-day an article under the head of "Our Champion Exhorter," which I think needs to be commented upon. We are glad as ministers of the Gospel to have our laymen enter our pulpits and help by their "exhortation" the great needs of the times, but I must take decided objection to any such "exhortation" as is stated in your columns and said to be the utterances of Mr. John Rowland. I should be very sorry to cast any reflection upon his statement or in any way hinder his influence in the self denying, magnificent work he is doing, and has done for recruiting and keeping alive the military spirit and also stimulating effort for further production, but to advocate that the local pastors desist in their efforts to steer pilgrims to the Pearly Gates, and preach "Grow Beans, more Potatoes, and then more" reads too much like a modern edition of that exhortation which was given so gratuitously to our Lord and Master when He was asked to desist in looking upward as He hungered and look to the ground and turn the stones into bread. Let the local clergy sound out the word with increased emphasis to-day as never before "Man shall not live by Bread alone but by every food of God."

The function of the ministry is not just to steer men to the Pearly Gates but to make them better citizens, better producers, Honest and Loving but to be thus perfected we must ever have our eyes and our thoughts turned to God.

Today we are having a demonstration in the world of the colossal failure of man to control and guide the destinies of the world and the exhortation that is needed to-day, as at no other times in world's history is that men turn from the voices that lure us from God and tempt us to magnify to undue proportion, the things under our feet, and cause us to forget the Great Senior Partner in life, who alone has power and upon whom we are entirely dependent for the Growth of beans and Potatoes after they are planted in the ground.

I feel sure that Mr. Rowland has been misquoted.

Yours very sincerely,
R. M. Gale.

We heartily agree with our friend Rev. Mr. Gale's view and have no doubt that Mr. Rowland will too. In his remarks Mr. Rowland was appealing to the patriotism of our citizens to produce more, a matter which everybody knows he is intensely interested in. He urged the ministers to preach greater production but we don't believe he wanted the preachers to neglect their other work to do it. It is difficult to reproduce exactly what a speaker meant to convey, in a short condensed paragraph and in this case our report has apparently conveyed a wrong impression.—Editor Telescope.

Forestry Draft for Bruce

Captain Graham, of Wiarton, has received authority to organize a second Forestry draft of 172 men at Wiarton. According to the Wiarton Echo, the men in this draft will be paid $3.00 per day, and will go overseas as soon as possible after the draft is made up. Captain Graham is asking for lumbermen, carpenters, bridgemen, etc. He has the whole of Military District No 1, to recruit from, and men go to Wiarton as soon as enlisted.

Built To Please YOU

—and does please you because it offers that rare combination of service, satisfaction and economy. Ask our local dealer to show you the "Sunshine," or write for free, illustrated, descriptive booklet.

McClary's SUNSHINE FURNACE

LONDON TORONTO MONTREAL WINNIPEG VANCOUVER ST. JOHN, N.B. HAMILTON CALGARY SASKATOON EDMONTON

For Sale by Patterson Bros.

HOT WEATHER GOODS

NOW IS THE TIME to buy your summer goods, while there is a good selection to choose from.

We have a good assortment of
Hammocks, Lawn Mowers, Screen Doors and Screen Windows & Refrigerators.

We also have the three best Oil Stoves on the market, the New Perfection, Jewel, and Florence Automatic. Call and let us show them to you.

PATTERSON BROS.
Hardware Stoves Graniteware

CANADIAN PACIFIC

Great Lakes Steamship Service
via Owen Sound
STEAMSHIP "MANITOBA"
leaves Owen Sound at midnight each THURSDAY (connecting train leaves Toronto 5.25 p.m.) for Sault Ste Marie, Port Arthur and Fort William.
SERVICE via PORT McNICOLL COMMENCES JUNE 2.

Plan Your Vacation Trip Now
POINT AU BARIL
MUSKOKA LAKES
KAWARTHA LAKES
LAKE MAZINAW
FRENCH and PICKEREL RIVERS
RIDEAU LAKES
SEVERN RIVER
are delightful resorts and easily reached via C. P. R.

For WINNIPEG and VANCOUVER
Leave Toronto 6.40 P. M. Daily via 'The Pioneer Route'

Particulars from Canadian Pacific Ticket Agents or W. B. HOWARD, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, Ontario.

WRIGLEY'S JUICY FRUIT CHEWING GUM
THE FLAVOUR LASTS
WRIGLEY'S SPEARMINT
WRIGLEY'S DOUBLEMINT CHEWING GUM

WRIGLEY'S

A New and Tempting Taste:

As toothsome as the name implies.

Delicious, long-lasting. The third of the Wrigley trio of refreshing confections.

Good for teeth, breath, appetite, digestion.

Sealed Tight—Kept Right!

Chew it after every meal

Three of a kind
Keep them in mind

MADE IN CANADA
ON SALE WHEREVER CONFECTIONS ARE SOLD

The Flavour Lasts!

HOMESEEKERS' EXCURSIONS
LOW RETURN FARES TO WESTERN CANADA
ONCE A WEEK

Convenient Service. Modern Electric Lighted Equipment
Standard and Tourist Sleeping Cars and Colonist Coaches
For Tickets, Reservations, Literature and Information, apply to W. E. ATTWOOD, INSURANCE, WALKERTON.
Or write R. L. Fairbairn, G.P.A., 68 King St. E., Toronto.

CANADIAN NORTHERN RAILWAY

THE CANADIAN BANK OF COMMERCE

SIR EDMUND WALKER, C.V.O., LL.D., D.C.L., President
JOHN AIRD, General Manager
H. V. F. JONES, Ass't General Manager

CAPITAL, $15,000,000 RESERVE FUND, $13,500,000

FARMERS' BUSINESS

The Canadian Bank of Commerce extends to Farmers every facility for the transaction of their banking business, including the discount and collection of sales notes. Blank sales notes are supplied free of charge on application.

H. M. LAY, Manager Walkerton Branch.

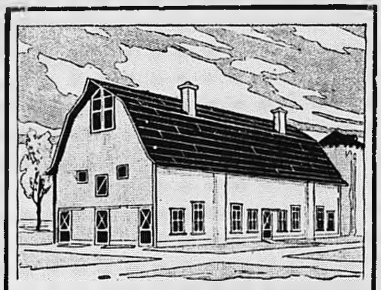
FIELD SEEDS

Our supply of Field Corn has just arrived. We have different varieties and the seed is excellent.

We also have a good supply of Turnip and Mangle Seed.

Don't forget we are selling Paint at 65c per quart.

S. W. Vogan



The foundation is not the most important thing

True, you can't have a good barn without a good foundation, but don't forget either that the roof has to stand most of the punishment. Upon it falls the burden of resisting the destructive influences of weather and changing seasons.

Now, the question is "Where am I going to find a roof which will meet these conditions?" Certainly not in wooden shingles which have rapidly deteriorated during the past few years. Not in anything so perishable as wood, nor yet iron, which lets in driving rain, but rather in a permanent mineral composition such as Brantford Roofing.

Now, let us look at a section of Brantford Roofing. First, you notice it has a pure, long-fibred felt base. This is thoroughly saturated with a filler coat of asphalt or mineral pitch. Then it is given another coat. Finally, the surface is thickly covered with crushed slate. You can imagine what a job rain, snow, fire or heat would have penetrating a roof like that. As for comparing with shingles on the score of permanency, or protection, or appearance, or even economy, there is no comparison. You put a Brantford Roof on once, and it will last as long as the building; it will always look well and it will never need repairing.

Brantford Roofing
Nature's Water-proofing

Why not let us send you samples, also a copy of our booklet which explains how Brantford Roofing is "always on the job"? Or, if you will give us the dimensions of your barn or house roof we will gladly submit estimates without charge or obligation.

Brantford Roofing Company, Limited
Brantford, Canada

For Sale by S. W. Vogan

DEN

W. B. HALLADAY, L. D. S.
Dentist, Successor to D
Modern methods employed tal operations. Special at crown, bridge and inlay wor doors east of post office. V gill 1st and 3rd Thursday af
each month.

C.L. GRANT, D.D.S.,
Graduate of Royal Colleg
of Dental Surgeons
Ontario.
Dr. Lount's old s
Wisser Block -

MED

DR. B
Diseases of the Throat, Neustadt,
Queen's Hotel, W in each month fro

W. A. HALL,
Honor Graduate
cine at Queen's U
the College of P
ons. Office and r
Colborne and Ca

INSURA

FIRE, LIFE
ACCIDENT
AUTOMOBI
GUARANTEE
MONEY to LOA
REAL ESTATE

Town and Farm Property for
See my list before making a pu

OCEAN and RAIL

TICKETS TO ANY PART OF THE WORLD.

I represent the Canadian Northern Railway and all ocean steamship companies — English, American and Italian.

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES

T. E. ATTWOOD
GENERAL AGENT
Walkerton - Ontario

INSURANCE
REAL ESTATE

Fire, Life Accident & Health, Plate Glass, and Guarantee Insurance in the best of Companies.

Real Estate—Several desirable residential properties for sale.

Money to Loan. Conveyancing and General Agency. Splendid Mortgage Loan Company Debentures for investment yielding good interest.

GEO. D. McKAY
Office Over Bell Telephone Agency
PHONE NO. - 179

GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY SYSTEM

Homeseekers' Excursions

Round trip tickets to points in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta via North Bay, Cochrane and Transcontinental Route, or via Chicago, St. Paul or Duluth, on sale each Tuesday until October 30th inclusive, at low fares.

Through Tourist Sleeping Cars to WINNIPEG on above dates, leaving Toronto 10.45 P. M., no change of cars, via Transcontinental Route.

Return Limit, Two Months, Exclusive of date of sale. Final return limit on all tickets, December 31st. Berth reservations and full particulars at all Grand Trunk Ticket Offices or write C. E. HORNING, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, Ontario.

Spring Styles

AS SHOWN IN OUR Superior Tailored Clothing are covered by one brief sentence "The and cheapest to be had in town."

We'd like to measure you for your spring suit or overcoat.

Hats, Caps, Ties, Shirts, Sweater Coats, all furnishings at Slaughter prices.

WOODMAN & CO.
Next to Vogan's Hardware

JUNE BRIDES

Will find the kind of Wedding Invitations and Announcements they are looking for in the Telescope Sample Book.

New and up-to-date styles printed from new types.

.. THE ..
TELESCOPE

MISERABLE FROM STOMACH TROUBLE

Felt Wretched Until He Started To Take "Fruit-a-tives"

594 Champlain St., Montreal.

"For two years, I was a miserable sufferer from Rheumatism and Stomach Trouble. I had frequent Dizzy Spells, and when I took food, felt wretched and sleepy. I suffered from Rheumatism dreadfully, with pains in my back and joints, and my hands swollen.

A friend advised "Fruit-a-tives" and from the outset, they did me good. After the first box, I felt I was getting well and I can truthfully say that "Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine that helped me". LOUIS LABRIE.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Office Stationery

For nice Stationery printed from new type at moderate prices. Try the

TELESCOPE

Why not give your boy and girl an opportunity to make their home study easy and effective? Give them the same chance to win promotion and success as the lad having the advantage of

WEBSTER'S NEW INTERNATIONAL

Dictionary in his home. This new creation answers with final authority all kinds of puzzling questions in history, geography, biography, spelling, pronunciation, sports, arts, and sciences.

400,000 Vocabulary Terms. 2700 Pages. Over 6000 Illustrations. Colored Plates.
The only dictionary with the Divided Page.
The type matter is equivalent to that of a 15-volume encyclopedia.
More Scholarly, Accurate, Convenient, and Authoritative than any other English Dictionary.

REGULAR AND INDIA-PAPER EDITIONS.

WRITE for specimen pages, illustrations, etc. FREE, a set of Pocket Maps if you name this paper.

G. & C. MERRIAM CO., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

WALKERTON SOLDIERS' LETTERS

JOHN CLANCY TO JOHN ROWLAND

Dear Mr. Rowland;—

I have from time to time intended writing you but for some reason or other never found time to do so. Have been busy ever since I came over here to Belgium on March 10th but as we are having four days' rest am writing to some of my friends. We are all pretty well over here considering the circumstances. They give us clean clothes regularly and have tobacco and matches issued to us every week. Was shown the field where Bob and his Battalion of the Princess Pats slept the first night they were up in Belgium. We have a Sergeant who came over with them.

Everyone over here is a worker. Every fit man is away soldiering and only the old men and women wear wooden shoes and work around the stables, plant potatoes and do all manner of work in the fields. In fact no work is too hard for them. They have to do it or let the land go idle. There is no dressing up in afternoons here like at home and no afternoon teas with war in Belgium. The women are all heart and soul in this war. No style in this country either in food or dress. You never know until you have to do it what you can live on. By this I mean variety. In this country, we go to a house, open the door and walk in. Never go to the trouble of rapping and waiting to be admitted. Tell the lady of the house to give you a cup of coffee and she hands out as much as you desire at a penny a cup. A good many places sell bread and fried eggs. Have just had potatoes once since I came over. I hope they are a good crop in your country this year and that you people are planting as many of them as possible because they will be wanted before this war is over. From all accounts, things will be very high.

Have had grand weather the past ten days. Previous to this it rained every day. The land here is fine. The average farm is 44 acres and they have the finest class of heavy horses I ever saw.

I thank you for your letters. They are appreciated very much. Hope you and your family are in good health and that in some future time I will be able to meet my old friends in the good old county of Bruce as I have seen no place superior to it.

Yours sincerely,
Corp. J. J. Clancy,
A Co., 4th Labor Batt., B.E.F.

+ + +

SAPPER WILFRED FREEMAN

Mrs. Thos. Wilton had the following nice letter from her nephew, Wilfred Freeman, a fine young Walkerton soldier, who went to England last Fall with a draft from the Divisional Signalling Corps, Ottawa:—

Crowboro, Sussex, Eng.
April 24th, 1917.

Dear Auntie and the Rest;—

Your welcome letter was received alright but now when I come to answer it I see I am somewhat overdue. However as I am not writing out lecture notes to-night I am utilizing the time to good advantage, and incidentally to your advantage also. Since I received your letter, Spring weather has come and I have been hard at my training all about electric currents and the inside working of the various field telephones which we use in our work. At the end of March I passed my first set of examinations and now I am busy on a higher branch of work (on the Brigade Section.) For the first two weeks in April I took my Musketry Course which upset my Brigade training but it only means that I will stay on this section until the end of May, at which time I hope to pass out and go into Cable work. I will then be eligible for France. It takes a long time to train us properly but when we have passed all of our exams we have enlarged our education considerably.

As regards our food, I certainly cannot complain at all as we get all we want to eat and have never known shortage of food. Lately the rations per man have been cut down considerably but this has meant that a very large quantity of good food has been kept out of the garbage can as we do not waste nearly as much as we did last January and February. Everybody is more careful with their food now and the present system which is pretty finely run, provides every man with three good wholesome meals each day. Then I may say too, that since two weeks ago the food has been a fine surprise to all of us because of the variety which is served up each week. Here's what I served out today (I have been on mess)—For Breakfast—"Mush" (porridge as you know it) Kippered Herrings, Cocoa, Bread and Margarine (butter, but not as rich.) For Dinner—Soup, Dressed Beef, Potatoes, Peas and Rice Pudding. For Supper—Bread, Margarine, Liver, Hamburg Steak, fresh Biscuits with currants in them, and Tea.

Now to-morrow we'll have Hamburg Steak for breakfast and something different again for dinner and supper. We almost think we are in a hotel sometimes. I'll admit we're better fed than the infantry and I consider myself very lucky here. The food agrees with me and it is always well cooked.

Now too, since the warm weather has partly come, I see ploughing being done on all sides of the camp here and they are getting the land ready for crops. I always had the idea that there was very little land not under the plough over here, but I have changed my mind as there is an awful lot of waste land with only heather and shrubs growing wild. Right around this camp there is a lot of it and also in other parts too, and it is one of Lloyd George's pet schemes to get all this unused land to grow crops. Quite a bit is being broken up this Spring but that is only a small fraction of it. It may take several years to turn this land into money by cropping it. But then again some of these tracts of land are all clay and may not be very much use. The landlord system of holding land over here has been responsible for the present state of the land. But there is no doubt but that that old system or custom, is steadily being done away with by these landholders being forced by Government to either till their land or sell it to the small farmers.

I suppose by now, Uncle Tom will be busy getting ready for the Spring ploughing and I hope he gets his crops in in good time. No doubt you too will be busy looking after the Spring "chicks" and "goslings" and looking forward to getting the garden in. I have been just wondering how much garden the folks at home will put in this year but no doubt they will put in all they can since prices have soared so high in certain lines. We have "war prices" over here too but we Canadians do not notice it as much as the English people do as we get better pay. All the same we think prices are high enough. The Canteen here did a big business when our food was nearly the same every day, but since the new system has been inaugurated and we have been getting good variety their funds haven't been as large.

Well I think I had better close for to-day. Clayton and I are fine and dandy and hope you are all well too.

Trusting to hear from you again at your convenience.

I remain as ever,
Yours with Best Wishes,
Wilfred.

+ + +

PTE. HARRY VAN HATTEN.

Pte. Harry Vanhatten, who is one of three sons of Mrs. Searchle, Walkerton, serving at the Front, writes to Mrs. Geo. Lattner:—

France, April 25th, 1917.

Dear Friend;—

I have just got time to write you a few words so that I can thank you for the parcel that was sent to me by the ladies of the R. C. Church. It is some time since it was sent. I just got it yesterday and I consider myself lucky to get it. I put the socks on to-day and they sure do feel fine. I hope you will excuse my poor writing and the dirty paper as I am writing this under rather awkward conditions. No doubt you have read in the papers what we have been doing out here this last while. We sure are giving old Fritz all he wants just now. I have been lucky so far and hope to come back to the old town just as good as I left it. I have to get busy now, so please remember me to the ladies of the church, and give them my best regards. I would like to write a lot more but as you know we cannot write much about the war and outside of that there is nothing out here. I will have some great tales to tell you when I get back. Well I have to close now, so will say good-bye for this time.

802242, Pte. H. E. Van Hatten,
Medical Staff, 10th Can. Batt'n,
France, B. E. F.

+ + +

CORP. WILFRED YACK.

France.

Dear Mrs. Lattner,—

It was certainly a pleasure for me to receive your letter written March 17, with the enclosed notes from Georgie and Jim. Also the parcel arrived in good condition about two days later and through you I wish to express my most sincere thanks to the ladies of the Church, for their kindness. No doubt you can readily understand how much we appreciate these little remembrances from home.

After having spent a rather strenuous period in the line we are out and enjoying a rest period just now. I do not think it is necessary to tell you how pleased we all are with the results of our try at Fritz.

Lately the weather has been improving somewhat although it seems that we can never find ourselves free from rain and mud. Still we have several months yet to complete our year in France and they may bring a decided change for the better.

From what I have seen Canada has France beat completely as a place of residence, of course we have seen only a small portion of this country.

I notice that Jim is busily engaged in the manufacture of shells. They are what is required to do the work here, the more the better. I may not be able to write to Jim immediately but will do my best later on. Well it is getting rather late so perhaps I had better close before "lights out."

Trusting that you will remember me to your mother and all of the family,

I am,
Your sincere friend,
Wilfred L. Yack.

+ + +

SERGT. GEORGE KINGSBURY TO R. E. TRUAX M. P.

Dear Mr. Truax:—

Just a line to say how I am getting along. Have good news for you this time. I am getting along splendidly. Am now out of bed and able to go out for a walk in the afternoons, with the aid of a stick. The wound is healing up fine, and it will not be long now, before I get sent from here, to a Convalescent Home. The weather is lovely, getting nice fine days now. To-day it is quite hot in the sun, and this afternoon will be going out for a stroll. We are allowed out from 2 o'clock till six, but I have the privelege of going out in the morning. Sorry to hear the sad news about Everett, but he gave up his life for a noble cause. He fought like a hero, for the Flag we so dearly love, though gone from us, he still lives. You know, even yet, I hardly realize that this is England. In the Country, everything seems to be so still, whereas only a few miles away, the guns are thundering away, and this morning I picked up the "Daily Mail," and saw that the Canadians are in the thick of it again, and doing fine work, piercing the German lines, and heavily defeating them. Well I guess in another two or three months time, shall find myself out there again. It is certainly surprising, to find so many civilians strong and healthy young fellows about, who should be in the Army, and I wonder how many there are in Canada, who have not yet joined up? I wonder how many in Walkerton and vicinity there are, who are hiding in funk holes? Our boys will soon be needing large reinforcements. Now if I keep on, shall soon be getting a job as recruiting Sergeant, but it does certainly make me sore, when seeing these things. Now must close for this time, please remember me to Mrs. Truax and how is Harry and remember me to all the kind people of Walkerton, and hoping you are quite well.

I remain, Yours truly,
George Kingsbury.

+ + +

COL. (DR.) J. J. FRASER

(Concluded from last week)

At seven o'clock a. m. German prisoners were coming in and soon they were coming in droves, more officers than usual and many more stretcher bearers than usual, a Battalion Commander, then a Brigadier Gen. and his staff. They were Bavarians and the officers were rather fine looking, but the men were a very mixed lot. We had a great number to carry stretchers from the line and they carried all day long. Thanks to them and the good arrangements, the wounded were never cleared more rapidly and with less congestion. I hid five of them in a dugout all night and used them next day to help carry down stragglers. They are great workers. They were two wounded medical officers came through me and I think there were others. These were two intelligent young fellows, both could speak French well and one of them spoke Eng[illegible] is a nephew of one of the best known doctors in the world. He is either a mighty clever fellow or a very good liar, perhaps both. He thought the submarines would have us beaten in four months. I have been lucky all through and certainly was that day. As the French Canadian says: "By gosh I think I was born for lucky." They put over a lot of gas shells at a battery. One of them got a man's arm and almost tore it off. I went out to where he was and was amputating it on the side of road when two of the gas shells exploded on the road. I thought I was shocked at first but managed to scramble into a dugout with him. Next day we walked over the country taken from the Hun. We got orders to move just while writing this. Now writing in an old German dugout, deep down in the earth. When we walked across, his front lines were battered, just a mass of shell holes. Then there was a nice valley where we walked through the grass to the other side of the ridge. It was wonderful how quickly we got means of communication across, plank roads, leglet railways and even the heavy Standard Guage railways appeared as if by magic.

23, 4, 17.

We have our men split up in different old German dugouts and I have been living in one and another since; have been pretty well on the go. Just now we have an artillery battery in the same dugout. So you can imagine we are pretty well packed in. They are Royal Horse Artillery which in peace time is the Corps d'elite of the Army. They are very nice fellows, the officers, and good soldiers. Well, I must draw this in or will never get it away.

Jim.

France 23, 4, 17.

The day after I wrote you I got a slight wound. A piece of shrapnel bit me a biff on the ear. It was not bad but enough to say I shed blood for my country. It hurt like the dickens for a little while but soon got all right. The day the show began a boy came up and called me by name. I remembered his face but couldn't recall his name. It was young Reichenbach from Walkerton. He said his officer had sent him back and I took him and sent him down to the dressing station with a note to keep him there. He has been there until today, when I am sending him back to his Battalion which is now at rest. There were a good many casualties in his battalion. The aeroplanes are busy, the weather having turned fine. We counted twenty-six of ours up at once. Fights in the air are not uncommon and are very exciting to watch. Do not know what we will do for thrills when we go home, watch movies of it I suppose. You don't need to worry. I'm all right and going strong.

Jim.

ART CLOTHES
COOK BROS. & ALLEN LIMITED

YOU'RE dealing in very definite quantities when you consider our clothes—the style, the weave, the wear, the value are all known and established—they're standard in every way.

The clothes which this store sells reach a stage at value-giving that no other clothes have ever attained—thousands of satisfied wearers establish this fact very conclusively.

ART CLOTHES
COOK BROS. & ALLEN LIMITED

are tailored to your measure from any of hundreds of selected fabrics—and from any model. The prices are surprisingly moderate.

THOS. PYE
TAILOR · WALKERTON

CENTRAL Business College.
STRATFORD, ONT.

Ontario's Best Business College

Students may enter our classes at any time. Commence your course now and be qualified for a position by midsummer. During July and August of last year we received calls for over 200 office assistants we could not supply. Our graduates are in demand. Write at once for our free catalogue.

D. A. McLACHLAN
PRINCIPAL

Read the Ads.

HOMESEEKERS' EXCURSIONS

MAY 8th TO OCTOBER 30th
Every
TUESDAY
"ALL RAIL" - also by
THURSDAY'S STEAMER
"Great Lakes Routes"
(Season Navigation)

Your Future is in the West

The fertile prairies have put Western Canada on the map. There are still thousands of acres waiting for the man who wants a home and prosperity. Take advantage of Low Rates and travel via

Canadian Pacific

W. B. Howard, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, Ont.

The Time
The Place
The Price

NOW is the time, Men, while our range of Spring Cloths is complete.

THIS is the place for ordered clothes. Style and fit guaranteed.

THE PRICE is right and to suit every purse.

T. PYE
Clothier & Furnisher.

PATENTS PROMPTLY SECURED

We solicit the business of Manufacturers, Engineers and others who realize the advisability of having their Patent business transacted by Experts. Preliminary advice free. Charges moderate. Our Inventor's Adviser sent upon request. Marion & Marion, New York Life Bldg., Montreal: and Washington, D.C., U.S.A.

WOMEN WAR WORKERS

Young women can render the country real service by preparing to take positions in Business Offices and Banks and relieve young men for war service.

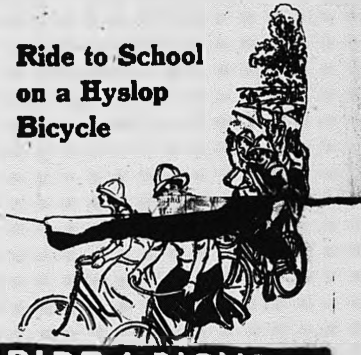
Fifty thousand men will be called up very soon under the Militia Act for home defence. Who will take their places in the Business Offices and Banks? Young women should prepare now at the

NORTHERN Business Colleges
OWEN SOUND, ONTARIO

Spring Term Opens April 10th. Circular free.

C. A. FLEMING, F. C. A., Principal

Ride to School on a Hyslop Bicycle



RIDE A BICYCLE

Miles of joy with a
HYSLOP BICYCLE

HIGH QUALITY. EASY RIDING.
STRONG CONSTRUCTION. BEAUTIFUL FINISH.
Special Models for Boys and Girls.

RIDE A HYSLOP

Made in Canada for 28 years by HYSLOP BROTHERS, Limited, Toronto
FOR SALE BY
PATTERSON BROS. WALKERTON

GOLD DUST.
digs deep after germs

Gold Dust not only cleans but sterilizes.

Soap merely washes over the surface, leaving a greasy film behind it.

Gold Dust "goes to the bottom," and insures absolute purity, and sanitary safety. Why not sanatize your home, as well as clean it?

Soap needs muscle help; Gold Dust does all the hard part of the task without your assistance.

Gold Dust is a good, honest, vegetable-oil soap, to which are added other purifying materials in just the right proportions to cleanse easily, vigorously, and without harm to fabric, utensils or hand.

Gold Dust is sold in 5c size and large packages. The large package means greater economy.

"Let the GOLD DUST TWINS do your work"

Made by THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY, LIMITED, Montreal
Makers of Fairy Soap (the oval cake)

PUZZLING CASE

Madame [illegible] told me that a black carnation existed, and that she was afraid to receive one. She did not tell me the reason; I did not know it was a message of death. I knew her father [illegible] Maxwell, who had the black carnation in his possession, and all of [illegible] to M. Dallas. He came back [illegible] days before madame [illegible] at the theatre — he told me [illegible] he loved me, and that he loved [illegible]. I believed him, [illegible] told him all. Then he assured me that he hated madame, who had treated him badly; and when I told him how afraid she was of receiving a black carnation, he determined to send her one. I informed him where the black carnation was to be found."

"Don't you think it was very cruel of you thus to treat your mistress?"

"I never thought of my mistress," she [illegible]. "I [illegible] what he desired. I knew no [illegible] but his, fool that I am. I have been punished for my folly. He told me that [illegible] for sending the [illegible] to madame [illegible] name."

"[illegible] excuse. Surely, you did not believe him?"

"Why should I not, monsieur? I knew [illegible] that he loved her, as dear, and [illegible] there was no harm in sending madame the flower. It would cause her [illegible] do me no harm. — Tiens, oh! what foolishness!"

"[illegible]"

"[illegible] me at, but I gave madame the letter when it arrived. It was from Paris, and contained that black flower. I could not understand that coming from France, and thought M. Dallas had returned to Paris; but no, I saw him the same day, so it was a lie, that letter — he had sent it to his servant to post from Paris."

"Did he ask you to keep silent about his being in London?"

"He [illegible], and I held my peace. I told him all. He pretended to [illegible] of M. Gilbert and myself, but I saw [illegible] madame. He [illegible] her always. He gave her flowers, and then I showed him the shop where the flowers came from."

"[illegible] Sir Gilbert's bouquet?"

"Ah, yes. I knew of that. M. Dallas told me [illegible] to the shop and asked to have a bouquet the same as Sir Gilbert's. He said the bouquet was for me, [illegible] to be equal to madame. He brought it to the hotel after madame [illegible] to the theatre. We were [illegible] the voice of Sir Gilbert [illegible] in, yes, and M. Dallas hid [illegible]."

"Where?"

"In the same room as Sir Gilbert, who was drinking [illegible]. The flowers of Sir Gilbert were on a table near the curtain. I was in the next room, but I saw all — yes, [illegible] I will tell."

"What did you see?" I asked, much excited.

Ilma Celinski [illegible] her fingers on her lips.

"I saw M. [illegible] hand, when was [illegible] back [illegible] change [illegible] the flowers."

"How could [illegible] bert was in th[illegible]"

"You do no[illegible]" she replied, [illegible] was near the [illegible] was hiding [illegible] front of him [illegible] Gilbert, so wh[illegible] out his hand with the [illegible] leave it on the table, [illegible] Gilbert's instead."

"And you said nothing?"

"Nothing. I did not know there was danger in the bouquet. Sir Gilbert, he [illegible] Dallas, [illegible] and went [illegible] out, and [illegible] changed the flowers, he laughed, and said it was a trick for [illegible]"

"Then he gave you [illegible] by Sir Gilbert."

"He gave me [illegible] Pole, in an [illegible] it, monsieur; I was late to go to the theatre, and M. Dallas said he would put me in a fiacre. [illegible] the room [illegible] behind. He came also with me, and had his cloak over his [illegible]. I did not know then, but I know now that [illegible] not see the [illegible] says an [illegible] he, infamous one, takes the flower he gives [illegible] the theatre."

"What kind of flowers were they that he brought [illegible]"

"The same as those of Sir Gilbert; with [illegible] a black one in the centre."

"A Black Carnation?"

"I cannot tell. [illegible]"

"Try and recollect; [illegible] very important."

"I cannot say, Monsieur. I was busy [illegible] the flowers [illegible] ment [illegible]"

"[illegible] bouquet had a black Carnation in the centre, it was the one which killed Mazzucata."

"[illegible] the Black Carnation. Oh, yes, it might have been; but why should he bring me flowers to kill [illegible]"

"He didn't wish to kill you, but madame."

"And for why?"

"Because he loved her, and could not bear to see her marry Sir Gilbert."

"Oh, I have been a fool," she said, throwing up her arms in despair. "I see now he did not love me. But I will make him suffer." [illegible]

"It would serve him right. He has made others suffer. [illegible] all [illegible] for stealing the Black Carnation?"

"Because Mr. Dallas said he would marry me if I did so."

"Oh! [illegible]," I cried, revolted at this callous behaviour, "whilst you have condemned an innocent man to death on so slight a cause. Shame!"

"I did not want him to die," answered Ilma, [illegible]; "but I wished to marry M. Dallas. I warned Sir Gilbert to [illegible], but he would [illegible]"

"You are little better than a murderess."

"I am what I am," she retorted defiantly. "I was good once, but now — oh, I will make him suffer. He never loved me — he loved madam, and now it is her sister."

"I am not sure if he loves the sister."

"It is a lie. You said it was so."

"Pardon me. I said I thought so, but I did not swear to it."

"Oh! old false one, you have deceived me. Perhaps he does love me after all."

"No. I'm sure he does not."

"And I have destroyed him with my tongue," she said, not heeding my speech. "But — no matter, I will go back to this sister and ask her. 'Does he love you?' If she says 'yes,' I will [illegible] all that I have said to the justice; but if she says 'no,' I will swear that I spoke nothing of the changing of the flowers."

"And thus condemn Sir Gilbert to death?"

"No, no. But what is that to me. I [illegible] marry M. Dallas [illegible] murderer."

"He is not a murderer. He did not change the flowers. He loves me. [illegible] that I have said is lies — all lies."

"What you have said is the truth," I replied, sharply, rising to my feet, "and I will tell it to my friends."

"I will deny it."

"Quite useless, Mademoiselle Celinski. You have confessed in the presence of two witnesses."

"Two witnesses!" she gasped, falling back [illegible]

"[illegible]"

"[illegible] at the door of the next room."

"Did you hear what this lady said?"

"Every word, sir."

"You can swear to it?"

"I can swear to it, sir."

Ilma Celinski looked from one to the other, in a quietly vindictive manner, and then addressed herself to me.

"You have tricked me, monsieur. You are [illegible] man. I make you my compliments; but I will go to this girl; and if he loves her not, I will swear that I told you lies to-night. If he loves her, you can kill him. If he loves me, I will save him!"

And without another word, she turned and left the room.

CHAPTER XIV.

It can easily be imagined that after two such exciting interviews I had but little sleep that night, and arose next morning earlier than was my custom. Every second of those dragging hours of darkness my thoughts were busy with that weary case, and, though I looked at the affair from every imaginable point of view, I was unable to arrive at any conclusion respecting the solution of the problem. Towards dawn, worn out with incessant thought, I fell into an uneasy slumber, from whence I awoke about 8 o'clock, feeling jaded and unrefreshed.

When I caught sight of my face in the glass, I positively started, so haggard did I look, and when Pointer entered [illegible] my shaving water, he was unable to refrain from an exclamation of surprise. Usually Pointer knows his place and makes no remark [illegible] directly addressed, [illegible] that my appearance must be singularly careworn to thus provoke uncalled-for condolences from my ordinarily reticent servant.

"I am afraid you have not slept, sir."

"[illegible] I have been thinking [illegible] you see."

"[illegible] that young [illegible] concerned —"

"[illegible] so far as my [illegible] yes, but as regards the case, I am glad I interviewed her, as her evidence will be of great value."

"I hope it will go a long way to releasing Sir Gilbert, sir."

"[illegible] am sure there will be little difficulty now, in proving his innocence. But the question is: Who is the guilty person?"

"If I may make so bold, sir —"

"[illegible]"

"[illegible] opinion."

"After what Dallsworth told me, sir, and after the story of that young person [illegible] Dallas is the guilty party."

"Ah! is that your conviction, Pointer?"

"My [illegible] I don't see that it can be anyone else."

"I have my doubts about Mr. Dallas, myself, Pointer, but I can't be sure. However, when I am dressed, I shall call on Mr. Tancred, and tell him about this interview. By the way, Pointer, you need not mention her visit."

"By no means, sir."

[illegible] opinion about the matter that it did not take me long to finish dressing; a most remarkable thing for me, as I usually dawdle about my bedroom for at [illegible] matter was too important to admit of delay. So, having hastily swallowed breakfast — another extraordinary thing for me [illegible] went at once to the Temple [illegible] hurriedly and eating quickly, I felt most uncomfortable, and thus realising — that this detective business [illegible] with [illegible] vow to my [illegible] that if the case were not concluded speedily, I would throw it up and go [illegible] Carlo or San Remo I should be sufficiently distracted to forget this foolish [illegible], and able to take up the pleasant calm life of the days before this terrible criminal case had upset [illegible].

Tancred was out when I arrived at his rooms. This hardly astonished me, for which [illegible] generally throws all kinds of obstacles in his way, both to delay his aim and [illegible] already, so I accepted the absence of Tancred with resigned despair, and sat down to read the Times. Generally, I [illegible] could not keep my attention fixed enough to even read [illegible] on one side, I was about to go out and take a walk when Tancred entered with such a joyous look on his face, that [illegible] before the sun.

"What [illegible] Major Granby," he said, [illegible] "I am glad to see you, major. I have much to tell you."

"And I [illegible] to tell you."

"Eh, major. Have you found out who committed the crime? Another theory, major?"

"No; but I have had an interview with Ilma Celinski."

"What, the waiting maid? Did you pay her a visit?"

"On the contrary; she paid me a visit."

"Major! major!"

"Oh, Pointer was there in the next room; and I was very glad, as he overheard her evidence, and is prepared to swear to it."

"Did she confess to the [illegible] told in [illegible]?"

"Yes, and she confessed a good deal more. Listen, Tancred; I am going to astonish you."

"Good, I like [illegible] astonished, Major," [illegible] "I am your most obedient servant."

Having he was thus disposed to listen, I narrated, at great length, the conversation of the previous night with Ilma Celinski. Tancred was very attentive, though he frequently interrupted me with exclamations of surprise. When I finished my story he rose to his feet and walked to and fro for some moments in deep thought. Then resumed his seat with a [illegible] frown on his face.

"That woman is such a liar that I don't know whether to believe her or not."

"I am sure she speaks the truth in this case."

"Oh, I have no doubt that she is in love with Dallas, and that he deceived her. Also, that story of the changing of the bouquets is perfectly true, but she has not told you everything."

"What else is there to tell?"

"I wish to know if that bouquet of Dallas, which she said he presented to her, contained the dynamite cartridge. It is a lie she is telling about the flowers, I am sure, for Dallas had no reason to give her that fatal bunch of flowers. No, he meant it for Mazzucata!"

"Doubtless; but very likely knowing the temper of this Ilma Celinski, he was afraid to say so, and all the time pretended that the bouquet was for her, although he meant it for Madame Mazzucata."

"Well, there is only one way to prove the truth of the story, and that is to see Dallas at once."

"But he is at Lippinton."

"No, he isn't, major. I have no doubt in order to be rid of this girl, he lets her think he is at Lippinton, but in reality he is in town."

"How do you know?"

"Because I have seen him this morning."

"Seen Dallas?"

"Yes. After our interview with Ivan, yesterday, I wished to see what attitude Dallas was taking up, and so called at his rooms an hour ago."

"Did you speak to him personally?"

"Yes, but only for a moment, as he was not yet up. However, he promised to come here at once and have a conversation over the matter."

I rose to my feet with an ejaculation of rage.

"What is the matter, major?" asked Tancred, calmly.

"Don't you see that you have put him on his guard. He will not come here."

"Oh, yes, he will, if he is innocent."

"But I think he is guilty, and now that he knows you wish to see him, he will suspect something and run away."

"Don't be alarmed, major, he won't run far. I have a detective watching his chambers, and he cannot move a yard without being followed."

"Well, supposing he does come here, do you think that will prove his innocence?"

"I don't go so far as that," replied Tancred, quickly, "but it will be strong presumptive evidence that he is not guilty."

"Or that he is on his guard, and knows he can baffle justice."

"What do you mean?"

"Why, Tancred, I don't think my meaning is hard to guess. As I told you, when Ilma found that I had de[illegible] matter of Dallas being in love with Mazzucata's sister, she withdrew all her previous statements."

"That does not matter. Her evidence was overheard by two witnesses, yourself and Pointer."

"Yes, yes, that is all right; but she said she would warn Dallas of the mistake she had made."

"She won't warn Dallas until she is satisfied he loves not me, but her," responded Tancred, coolly, "and that she can't make sure of until she had a personal interview with Miss Maxwell, in which case, she will have to go to Lippinton, therefore, up till now, she cannot have called on Dallas."

"But, supposing she called at his chambers before she went to Lippinton, and told him all. That would put him on his guard, and he will come here with a prepared conversation and line of defence."

"If he comes here to tell lies, I think I can prove their falsity. But as to [illegible] calling on him, she would [illegible] do that, for two reasons. The first being that she wishes to see Miss Maxwell and know the truth; the second that she thinks Dallas is at Lippinton, as she told you last night. So, my dear major, you need have no fear that Dallas knows of that midnight visit, for by this time, Ilma Celinski is on her way to Lippinton to kill two birds with one stone by asking Miss Maxwell and Dallas at once."

"When she doesn't find Dallas there, she will come back to town and [illegible] him."

"She can't; for Dallas will be here shortly, and we shall know all he has to [illegible] before Ilma Celinski returns. Besides, when she sees Miss Maxwell she will fall into the clutches of Melchisedek."

"He doesn't know her."

"Oh, yes, he does. He was in court and heard her evidence, which I proved to him to be a tissue of lies. When he sees her at Lippinton he will suspect her intentions, and watch her. If she [illegible] conversation with Miss Maxwell, as she assuredly will do, I wouldn't be surprised if he found out the truth without further trouble."

"Do you think Ilma Celinski knows the truth?"

"Either she or Miss Maxwell."

"Why Miss Maxwell?"

"Because [illegible] Miss Maxwell. I wish to know several things about Miss Maxwell."

"Such as—"

"Why was she so agitated at the mention of the black carnation? What does she know about that confounded flower? Tell me that, major, for, revealing so much to Ivan."

"But, surely, Tancred, you do not suspect that poor blind woman?"

"I don't know who to suspect," responded [illegible]. "[illegible] to learn the truth, I do not [illegible] to discover the real criminal."

"But, Tancred, you don't think [illegible] Freminere will be hanged?"

(To be Continued).

◆

Voice and Art.

"Why in the name of all the muses," asked the master, "have you come back to Bologna — you, the most accomplished singer in the world?"

"Because," said the pupil, "because, dear master, I feel that I don't yet really know how to sing."

"My son," was the reply, "that is what none of us shall ever know on this earth. In the next world there may be opportunities, for when we are young we have the voice, but not the art, and when we are old we have the art, but not the voice." — Exchange.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson X.— [illegible] June 3, 1917.
Jesus Betrayed and Tried.—John 18: 1-27.

Commentary.—I. Jesus in Gethsemane (vs. 1-14). 1. These words. The discourse and prayer included in John 14-17. He went forth—Jesus and his disciples, except Judas, who had gone forth previously, left the upper room. Some scholars think they left the upper room before this (John 14: 31). If that is true, they now "went forth" from the city of Jerusalem. Over the brook Cedron—This is a ravine on the eastern side of the city in which a stream flows in winter, but is dry during the rest of the year. This ravine lies between Jerusalem and the Mount of Olives. A garden—This was Gethsemane, the name meaning "oil-press." A garden is now shown to travellers on the western slope of the Mount of Olives, which is said to be Gethsemane. In it are several very old olive trees. The claim is made that one of these is the one under which Jesus prayed. This claim is probably without foundation, but it is certain that the garden was not far from there.

II. Jesus betrayed (vs. 2-9). 2. Judas also—Judas Iscariot, the betrayer, as well as the faithful disciples of the Lord, knew the place and knew that Jesus oftimes resorted thither. Jesus made no effort to escape the betrayal and what followed by hiding himself or by going out of his usual course. 3. Having received a band of men—Judas had made a bargain with the Jewish leaders to betray Jesus to them for about fifteen dollars. Arrangements were made to employ a part or the whole of the Roman garrison of the fortress Antonia to arrest Jesus. It was considered necessary to take more than ordinary precautions, for he whom they were to arrest was no ordinary man. There was probably a fear that an attempt would be made by his friends to resist the soldiers, and a riot might follow. In the company that followed Judas were Roman soldiers, Jewish officials and chief priests. With lanterns and torches—The ordinary equipment for night duty, which the paschal full moon would not render useless. It was possible that dark woods or buildings would have to be searched.—Cam. Bib. Weapons—Swords for the soldiers and staves or clubs for the rest. 4. Knowing all things—Jesus understood the general plan and the details of the conspiracy against him. John here declares Christ's divinity by saying that he knew all that was coming upon him. Whom seek ye—Jesus went forth to meet the company that had come to arrest him, for the hour had arrived for him to be delivered into their hands. In asking this question he would make his enemies realize what they were doing and that their great preparations for arresting him were unnecessary. It may have been also to shield his disciples by calling attention to himself. 5. Jesus of Nazareth—The reply came without any apparent hesitation. Nazareth was held in contempt and for that reason it may be that the leaders of the company were quick to answer the question that Jesus asked. Jesus saith unto them, I am he. Jesus did not in any way resist his enemies, but took a course to show that he had nothing to conceal or to fear. Judas . . . stood with him—The betrayer was prominent in the company that sought for Jesus, and showed his despicable character by using a token of friendship to deliver him to his enemies. From Matthew's account we learn that Judas kissed Jesus effusively. Judas came later to realize his awful sin. He returned the money he had received for betraying Jesus and committed suicide, but there is no record that he repented. 6. Fell to the ground. There was a supernatural display of power that caused the crowd to go backward and fall to the ground. It showed that an armed company of soldiers and Jewish officials were powerless before Jesus of Nazareth whom they sought to arrest. 7. Then asked he them again—The enemies of Jesus had been overcome, but he would have them commit themselves again. 8. Let these go their way—Jesus would not have his disciples included in the sufferings that awaited him. At the point where he was to give himself up to Jewish [illegible] he made a plea for the safety of his followers. 9. That . . . the saying might be fulfilled—Jesus had given utterance to this thought in his intercession when he offered to the Father an hour or two before (John 17: 12). There is much in this to encourage Christ's followers at all times.

III. Peter defending Jesus (vs. 10, 11). 10. Simon Peter having a sword—The possession of two swords by the disciples is mentioned in Luke 22: 38. John alone gives the name of the disciple who used the sword. Smote the high priest's servant—After the betrayal the disciples asked Jesus if they should smite with the sword. Peter's impulsiveness led him to try to defend his Master. Jesus healed the servant's ear and rebuked Peter for his act, saying that they who take the sword shall perish by the sword. The healing of the servant's ear was the last miracle Jesus wrought before his crucifixion. 11. The cup . . . shall I not drink it—Peter would not have his Lord suffer at the hands of his enemies. Jesus had prayed in Gethsemane that the cup of suffering might pass from him if it would be the Father's will, yet he prayed in full submission to that will; now he would not have his disciples' solicitude for him prevent his drinking it.

IV. Peter's denial (vs. 12-18, 25-27). 12-14. The entire force that came out to arrest Jesus took part in securing him. They were impressed with his power as manifested by their being hurled to the ground, and his saying that he could ask the Father and would give him more than twelve legions of angels for his defense. They took Jesus first before Annas, the father-in-law of the high priest Caiaphas, for a preliminary hearing. Caiaphas had declared to the Jews that it was expedient that one man should die for the people (v. 14). 15. Simon Peter followed Jesus—The eleven disciples had forsaken Jesus and fled when he was arrested, but Peter and "another disciple," almost certainly John, followed Jesus to the palace of the high priest and went into the palace, but Peter remained outside. 16. Brought in Peter—The description here is minute and indicates that the writer of the narrative was a witness of what was done. John was interested in his fellow disciple and would use of his acquaintance with the high priest to favor him. Peter, in common with the other disciples, had been quick to forsake Jesus, but he was quick to come back to see what would be done with him. 17. The damsel that kept the door—The one to whom John spoke, requesting her to admit Peter. Art not thou also one of this man's disciples—This question came with suddenness and directness to Peter. The young woman recognized him as one of the disciples of Jesus and in her contemptuous question [illegible] him. He saith, I am not—John had hurried on to the room where Christ was being examined; as at the cross (John 19: 26), he kept close to the Master; and in neither case was he molested. Peter, who "followed afar off," and that more out of curiosity "to see the end" (Matt. 26: 58) than out of love, encountered temptation and fell.—Cam. Bib. 18. Peter mingled with the servants and officers who were warming themselves about some burning coals, thus hoping to escape observation.

Questions.—What words had Jesus just spoken? Where was Cedron? Where was Gethsemane? Give the meaning of the name. Why did Jesus go there? Who came with Judas to arrest Jesus? Describe the betrayal. How did Jesus show his power? What request did Jesus make for the disciples? What rash act did Peter commit? To whom was Jesus taken? Give an account of Peter's denial.

PRACTICAL SURVEY.

Topic.—Love wounded.

I. When Judas proved to be a traitor.

II. When Peter denied discipleship.

I. When Judas proved to be a traitor. The "decisive hour" came when Jesus passed over the brook Kidron. He was under the guidance of perfect wisdom. He alone comprehended the nature of the crisis in the moral history of mankind. All his approaching agonies were simultaneously present to his mind. He was ignorant of what was coming. He had mentally gone through all the events of the coming hours. With him there was absolute knowledge that he was in harmony with the will of God. The "cup" was prepared by the Father's wisdom, appointed in the Father's love, designed for the Father's son, accepted for the father's sake. The "cup" included all the bitterness of suffering, the agony of body involved in the crucifixion, the mental distress involved in his betrayal, denial and desertion, in the apparent success of his enemies' plot, and in the fickleness and ingratitude of his countrymen, the anguish of soul-conquest upon his consciousness of the world's sin, its estrangement from God, and the burden of his sacrifice. When the event of this lesson took place, Jesus was in the garden of Gethsemane, where he had passed "his agony." He was about to endure the indignities of the trial and the anguish of the cross. His thoughts were not of himself, but of his disciples. Knowing the danger to which they were exposed, and the weakness which still characterized them, he was concerned in their behalf, that they should not be exposed to a trial which they were not then able to bear. His disciples would die in his cause, he knew, but they were not ready spiritually for that, therefore Jesus cast around them the shield of his protection for the time in order that their weakness might have time to change into strength. It was necessary for the purpose of Christ's kingdom that the apostles should be spared. Jesus advanced to the spot where Judas had planned to betray him, with no trace of fear, agitation or weakness, as calm as though he had an appointment to meet him there. The kiss of Judas was unnecessary, for Jesus introduced himself to the men who sought him. Until he had explained his real position, Judas had no power to capture him. Jesus revealed himself to the men who were hired to shed his blood.

II. When Peter denied discipleship. Peter, indignant at his Lord's betrayal and arrest, impulsive in his nature and impetuous in his action, seeing his Master in danger, drew his sword and rashly used it. His act was directly opposed to the precept of his Master. Jesus forbade and disclaimed the use of carnal weapons in his cause. Peter was prompted by sympathy for his Master. He had a generous desire to protect him. His act was a proof of love, zeal, faith and [illegible]. To follow, as [illegible] did, One who was being led by Roman soldiers to undergo a mock trial and who in a few hours would suffer a terrible death by crucifixion, revealed bravery of heart of no small degree. Strange to say, Peter was conspicuous for his [illegible] in the time of trial and danger. His introduction into the court of the high priest by John placed him in dangerous association with Christ's enemies, where he was recognized by those who had seen him in Gethsemane and who knew of his assault upon Malchus. There was a combination of fear and [illegible] in Peter's presence among Christ's enemies. It was the clearly and strength of Peter's love that impelled him to follow Jesus when the companionless fled without the safety which John secured. Peter's conduct, when he was thrown off his guard, was in strong contrast to his former championship. The vanity of his [illegible] was followed by the folly of fear in his own attempt to conceal his connection with Jesus. He attempted to secure personal safety at any cost. The disciple disowned his Master, the servant his Lord. The difference between Judas and Peter, between betrayal and denial, lay in the purpose of heart. Judas pursued knowingly a criminal course. Peter through sudden fear thought only of self-protection without disloyalty of purpose.—T. R. A.

Fancies of Literary Men.

Keats liked red pepper on his toast.

Dickens was fond of wearing jewelry.

Joaquin Miller nailed all his chairs to the wall.

Edgar Allen Poe slept with his cat and was inordinately proud of his feet.

Longfellow enjoyed walking only at sunrise or sunset, as he said his sublimest moods came upon him at these times.

Daudet wore his [illegible] when [illegible].

Alexander Dumas, the younger, bought a new painting every time he had a new book published.

Robert Louis Stevenson's favorite recreation was playing the flute, in order, as he said, to tune up his ideas.

Hawthorne always washed his hands before reading a letter from his wife. He delighted in poring over old advertisements in the newspaper files.

Oliver Wendell Holmes used to carry a horse-chestnut in one pocket and a potato in another to ward off rheumatism.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Blobbs—Divorce is pretty easy nowadays. Slobbs—Yes, It's a wonder there are so many married people left.

THE Sergeant-Major

The [illegible] covered gangway which connected the hospital ship with the landing stage was one of the youngest [illegible] in the British army. The [illegible] roused him upon [illegible] in July of last year, when he had fully two stars on his shoulder straps; and he was then nursing his second wound, his first having been received in Gallipoli some considerable time before. This time it was a machine gun bullet through the left elbow.

"Just give me time for a look round at home, and put up my third wound stripe," he said, with the broad smile which would seem to be part of his most characteristic expression. "Fit as nicely. I've a setter bitch at home whose second lot of pups are due at the end of the month, and I've a notion they're going to beat the record. As for me, the hospital gods, I think they ought to let me out in a week, don't you? After all, what's a bullet through the elbow?"

"What indeed?" And to such a war-hardened veteran, too!

To his high spirits, this was almost a witticism; good ground for broadening of the smile.

"But seriously, by Jove, there's a difference since last year, isn't there? Our casualties now are nothing, to what they were then; and look at our gains. Mind you, it's going on all the time. The communiques may not say very much, but we've been just as busy in the last week as we were on Easter Monday; and we're snaffling bits out of Fritz's line all the time; and little bits of his army, too; don't you forget; and his guns, and other old iron. Fact is, we've settled down to business now, and made a real business of it; and, when we mean business, our people get the holts on old Fritz every time. I reckon we've learned a lot more in the last couple of years than he's learned in the forty years he's been preparing. Militarism may be as rampant as you like in Germany, but I'm hanged if I can see where they can claim to be such swells at it. I consider our staff work and co-operation between infantry, artillery and airmen is not only equal to theirs, but better now. It certainly has been in this latest fighting, for instance, since Easter Monday; not a doubt of it. They tell me some of the newspapers [illegible] home here criticized us over the Boche retreat on the Ancre, and thought we failed. They can't know much about it, or they'd never think that. Fritz was fairly hammered every inch of the way back. Why, in this Arras show, Hindenburg has been simply pouring his reserves in for counter attacks, and they haven't won back a yard; not a blessed yard; we hold every inch we bite off, and keep on biting off more. Of course, there are bound to be some reserves before we finish with the beggars. That goes without saying. But we've got 'em. Their organization and spirit aren't equal to ours; their arrangements aren't as good, and their power troops aren't anything like as efficient, as well trained, or as well disciplined as ours; nothing like."

Sergeant G——, of the Seaforths, was a policeman in Glasgow before the war. Last week a German shell took off a piece of one of his arms; blew it right off. When I saw him, he was one of the very cheeriest members of his [illegible] his head back and roared with laughter as he described the queer, frightened rabbit-like scuttling of the Germans he had seen running out of their dug-outs to surrender. He explained that the lowest down type of [illegible] showed more pluck in the conduct of his nefarious business than these soldiers of the Fatherland, none of whom had been decorated with the Iron Cross.

Private J——, of the 13th Canadians who live in Iowa before the war, gave it as his opinion that the Germans kept their best troops in reserve, and [illegible] all the [illegible] hands into their front lines. "They're [illegible] you know," he said, "They've no more bowels than so many mice cats, an' no more sense of decency than a starved coyote. Old men and boys, crooks, and raw recruits, they shove in their front lines and [illegible]. The prisoners we've been taking every day in their counter attacks have been mostly sons of guns, and well set up every one; and yet, if you'll believe me, they haven't much more spunk in 'em than the other lot. A little more fight, of course, because they're stronger, and been longer at the game; know a bit more; but they haven't spirit enough to stand up to the steel and take their gruel like grown men. I don't know if the machine gun supply is running short in Germany, but certainly they haven't been anything like as much in evidence in the Arras fighting as they were on the Somme last year."

SUNDAY AT HOME

GOD WITH US.

This ray of promise falls on darkened ways:
"Lo, I am with you alway—all the days"—
The bright, untroubled, gladsome days of life,
The days of bitterness, and care, and strife.

The days when peace doth like a river flow,
The days of grief with weary hours and slow.
He goes not on far journeys. Christ is near!
He leaves no days without His help and cheer.

As one of old "He knew what He could do,"
When servants were dismayed and troubled too,
So now, with infinite supplies at hand,
He walks with us, though in a barren land.

Some sweet surprise He doubtless has in store,
Some secret that He never told before.
For this, perhaps, He leads through shaded ways,
And you will understand ere many days.

PRAYER.

Lord of our life, and God of our Salvation, make us strong to endure hardness as good soldiers of Jesus Christ. Thou sendest no man a warfare upon his own charges. In dependence on Thy help, [illegible] to do each duty, as the hour and Thy will may bring it. And, with Thy dear Son, [illegible] from all other fears whatever. For Thy Name's sake. Amen.

THE SEVENTY.

They came back with flying colors. "Lord, even the devils are subject unto us by Thy name." Talk of miracles, they are very pleasant. A miracle is an exhibition of a [illegible] law, and the intercession of a [illegible] of law, a wondering prodigy, a power. There is the power of truth, of Providence, of purpose, the power of beneficence, of deliverance of spirits from the vassalage of the devil.

Heaven is near to earth, heaven touches earth, Heaven [illegible] related to earth. When you look at man as he is and as he was, you will say there is need for the coming [illegible].

The power of the Highest overshadowed Mary, the highest, [illegible] the best, the very essence, came down, fire flashed from the finger-tips of God. Words came out of His mouth hot, vital, consuming. If you don't want miracle, don't come to Jesus Christ, for He is full, full, to save.

Witness Galilee,
"It is not that the wild Galilee
Comes down to drink thy tide,
But that 'twas He who saves from hell
Oft wandered by thy side."

Paul says: "He revealed Himself to me, I went up by revelation." "Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord [illegible]" [illegible] power was most abundantly displayed during the life of Christ and some think that the Devil had extra license given, that the overcoming [illegible] might be displayed.

Think of the seventy, flushed with success. What men we are, how soon inflated, excited. What room for vanity, self-seeking, self-importance. There is ground for joy in the use of miraculous power, but there is a [illegible] better prerogative in which you can take no part; in the process you do not share, and there is no crowd to stare, there is nothing done for the sake of those who stand by. You go from noise to silence, from crowd to secret counsel, from miracle to [illegible] decision, discriminating [illegible]. There is no ministry here, no conditions, no repentance, no pleading; these exercises are on earth, these transactions are in the [illegible] of heaven. Mark the emphatic pause, then a voice, a flag. Write down his name, her name, the name the mother shall give after the child is born in the flesh. It is our pleasure, our purpose, our promise.

It is a law that alters [illegible], never to be superceded, or canceled.

The book is made in heaven, inscribed in heaven, in heavenly light, on heavenly paper, with heavenly ink, with heavenly hand. But it is for men: it is a human book, with human names; these names unfold human destiny, human [illegible], human delights. How near to Motherhood is God.

H. T. MILLER.

BATTLE STORIES FROM THE WEST FRONT

Arthur [illegible] in reality had no drill, but up to a short time ago the mere presence of the regimental sergeant major, on parade sufficed to reduce him to a state of nervous impotence that invariably brought disgrace on his platoon.

One of the first things the sergeant major does when he takes us is to rise almost imperceptibly on his toes, inflate his [illegible] to its fullest extent and remark in a loud and peremptory tone, "Form fours!" On this every even number in the battalion, with a precision [illegible] of several weeks of constant practice, takes a pace to the rear and [illegible] side pace to the right. Every even number [illegible] every even number except Arthur. Arthur always took a side pace to the left, and was [illegible] into his proper place a [illegible] later by Smithson, his next door neighbor but one in the rear rank. Why he did this was a mystery, as was also his consistent habit, on receipt of the command "Quick-March," of stepping off with the wrong foot. And then [illegible] the change came.

It was last Sunday morning. The weather and the sergeant-major's face were [illegible] and [illegible], as we stood shivering on the square we felt in our [illegible] that there was trouble ahead. "Form-Fours!" [illegible] stepped back and braced himself for Arthur's usual [illegible], but it did not come. With the precision of a Grenadier, Arthur smartly gained his right place, and Smithson had the surprise that he overshot his own mark and almost failed to cover off correctly. "By the left, 'Quick-March!'" Arthur stepped off with the proper foot. And so it went on. From start to finish he made no mistake.

The [illegible] of the service forbade our congratulating him while on parade, but afterwards in the hut we all got round him and fell on his neck. "And now, Arthur," I said when things had calmed down a little, "tell us how you did it. What has happened to you?"

"It's quite simple," he replied. "You know, somehow or other the sergeant major has always mesmerized me. Whenever he has taken the parade I have felt like a rabbit in front of a rattlesnake. I knew perfectly well what to do, but for the life of me I could never do it. I didn't mind when the adjutant or the C. O. took us. One knew that somewhere inside their Sam Brownes a human heart was beating, as it used to beat in the old days before the war when I took their Saturday afternoon half crowns on the links at Wimbledon. [illegible] was different with the sergeant major. It wasn't so much his command of language, though that of course has always been frightful. He seemed to inhabit a plane so far above and beyond all the rest of them, so detached from everything merely mortal. You must have felt it yourselves."

We nodded in silent sympathy.

"At [illegible], that was how I regarded him [illegible], I shall never do so again. I have learned that after all he is just a man and a brother."

We held our breath. Surely, it was treason, this. I raised my hand to stop him. But Arthur went on. "Last night about 7 o'clock, I was passing those small houses on the right side of the road just before one comes to the entrance of the barracks. The front downstairs room of one of them was brilliantly illuminated, and the slats of the Venetian blind, through some oversight, were set at an angle that afforded a clear view of the interior. By the fire, in his shirt sleeves, smoking a pipe and nursing a baby, sat—"

"The sergeant major," said Smithson's hushed voice. "Ye gods!"

"It was indeed none other. I was so astonished that I stood rooted to the spot, staring helplessly [illegible] railing [illegible] while the [illegible] began to kick and struggle, and the [illegible] I could not catch the sound of its [illegible]. It seemed to be [illegible] bitterly. [illegible] got up and walked to and fro with it. He, too, was obviously agitated, and kept glancing to [illegible]. Suddenly the door opened and a smallish woman, about midway in size between the sergeant major and the child came quickly into the room, snatched the baby [illegible] from him, and [illegible] paused and shuddered.

Sick Headache and Biliousness
CURED BY
MILBURN'S
LAXA-LIVER PILLS.

Mrs. Willard Tower, Hillsboro, N.B., writes: "I have suffered something awful with sick headache. At times I would become bilious and would have severe pains in my stomach after eating, and [illegible] taste in my mouth every morning. I told some of my friends about it and they advised me to use Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. This I did and they [illegible]."

When the liver becomes sluggish and inactive, the bowels become constipated, the tongue becomes coated, the stomach foul and sick and bilious headaches [illegible]. Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills clean the foul coated tongue and stomach and banish the disagreeable headaches.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c. per vial, 5 vials for $1.00, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

"Go on," said Smithson, [illegible].

"[illegible] the sergeant major's ears."

It was too much. A groan burst from us all. Then with set faces we waited silently for him to finish.

"[illegible] remember no more. The whole sky seemed suddenly to fall on the top of me. I think I must have fainted and then after a time recovered and [illegible] into barracks, because about an hour later I found myself sitting here on my bed with my overcoat [illegible], as if I had fallen in the road. The sergeant-major's spell is broken. And yet I am not altogether glad. I feel that for me something has been [illegible] out of the world, something that I shall never know again."—London Opinion.

IRISH COGNOMENS.

Meanings Attached to Most Common of Surnames.

It is not so generally known that Ireland was the first country in modern Europe to enforce the adoption of surnames by law. The act prescribing their general use was passed more than a hundred years before the Anglo-Norman invasion, whereas surnames did not come into general use in England until the days of Queen Elizabeth or in Wales till late in the seventeenth century.

There are some interesting meanings attaching to the most common of Irish names, [illegible]. Here are a few, with the curious changes of spelling that have come about since the names first originated:

[illegible] came from O'Dubhda, [illegible] meaning "[illegible]"; Kelly came from O'Kelly, Ceallach, meaning "for war"; O'Connor came from Connor, Conchobar, meaning "helper"; and Dougherty from O'Dochartaigh, meaning "destroyer." It is noticeable that all Irish names in the first stage in their history had "O" before them, the first change consisting of dropping that "O." It will not be necessary therefore to repeat the name with the "O" before it.

Sullivan was originally Sillivant and Sullivant, meaning "quick sighted"; O'Donnell and McDonnell and all combinations of that name were Donald, Daniel, Dona, meaning "dark chief"; Moloney was O'Mulgomaz, Molony, Mullany, meaning "[illegible]"; McCormack was O'Cormac, McCormac, McCormick, meaning "son of the crow"; [illegible] was Finnigen, meaning "[illegible]"; Boyle was Boylar, Boland, [illegible] Boylin, meaning "the [illegible]"; O'Brian was Bryan, Bryant, Bryen, meaning "author"; Brady was McBrady, meaning "son, captain"; and Macauley was O'Caindew, McAuley, McAuls, McAuliff, Cork [illegible] meaning "echo" or literally "[illegible] of the rock."

He Was Wise.

A woman, pocketbook in hand, [illegible] the box office at a theatre: "Young man, before I buy a ticket, tell me whether or not this is a moral, proper show."

[illegible] to hear her, [illegible] the seats that were vacant on the plan.

"Young man," she repeated, "don't you answer me when I ask if this is a moral, proper show?"

"Because, madam," confessed the agent, "I'm not a good enough judge of human nature to know which way to answer without losing a customer. Everybody's [illegible]."

Hillious—To what do you attribute the fact that so many marriages are failures? Cynicus—I think it is because those who don't [illegible] the young wait until they are [illegible].

Had Weak and Dizzy Spells
WAS CURED BY
MILBURN'S
HEART AND NERVE PILLS.

Mrs. J. S. Nicholls, Ludlow, Ont., writes: "I was weak and run down, my heart would palpitate, and I would take weak and dizzy spells. A friend advised me to take your Heart and Nerve Pills, so I started at once, and found that I felt much stronger, and my heart was even so much better in a short time. I cannot praise your medicine too highly, for it has done me a world of good. My husband has also been bothered with heart trouble ever since childhood, and finds quick relief by using your valuable pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have been on the market for the past twenty-five years, and are universally known as the very best remedy for all troubles arising from the heart or nerves.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

ROYAL
MADE IN CANADA
MAKES PERFECT BREAD
YEAST

POTATO CULTURE

The present high cost of potatoes has caused farmers and amateur gardeners to sit up and take notice. There probably will be more acreage of this crop this season than ever before. The potato thrives best in a climate that is cool and moist. The heaviest yields and the best quality are obtained in rich sandy loam, naturally well drained and supplied with organic matter. Soils that are so stiff that they cannot be perfectly fined and pulverized should be avoided, but, generally, successful crops are grown on nearly all kinds of soil.

There is apt to be sogginess in tubers on heavy clays. All stiff soils should be well drained and green crops and barnyard manure plowed under. It is not only important that the soil be fertile, but it should be made in a good mechanical condition—loose, friable, deep and mellow.

A heavy clover sod is especially recommended. A thin layer of fertile surface soil, with a clay subsoil which is impervious to water, is not fit for potatoes, even if thoroughly under drained. The tubers are not so apt to rot in light sandy or gravelly soils, as in soils that are heavy and sticky, particularly in a wet season.

A clean crop cannot be successfully grown in the same ground year after year. There must be rotation with other crops. In many of the large potato districts a three-year rotation is practised—fall wheat seeded to clover in the spring the first year, clover the second year, plowed under in fall or winter, and potatoes the third year.

MANURE AND ITS APPLICATION.

Stable manure that is coarse and unfermented is nearly worthless for the potato crop, unless as a mulch on the very porous and dry soils. The best fertilizer for potatoes is stable manure that is fine and thoroughly rotted, spread evenly during the fall previous. When applied directly to the potato crop the tubers are apt to be scabby.

On soils that have been made rich in humus through the application of barnyard manure, or plowing under of green crops, commercial fertilizers will be found of most value. A complete fertilizer (one that contains nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash) generally gives the best results.

On land manured the previous year, potatoes will do well without additional fertilizer, but the application of wood ashes or lime often increases the yield.

Stable manure newly applied seems to attract the wire worms, and has a tendency in consequence to produce scab in the tubers. Coarse manure is a frequent cause of prongs, protuberances, "fingers and toes."

The fairest, smoothest and best-shaped tubers are generally grown on well pulverized soils which were fertilized with chemical manures, or not at all the same season.

HOW TO PLANT THE TUBERS.

The early crop of potatoes is put in the ground as soon as settled weather arrives. While the plant is sensitive to frost, the seed pieces start slowly and are not likely to get above ground until danger from frost is past. light frost may utterly destroy lants grown from single eye (or two three eyes) the resources of which exhausted in the very first wth, yet it has little or no sner eriously harm plantations resulting from whole tubers, which have nsiderable amount of reserve force.

ome growers, not wishing to take e risk with late frosts, postpone lanting until one or two weeks before corn planting time. The ground ould have been cultivated two or ee times to warm it up and make mellow.

he rows should be a yard wide, the furrows four inches deep, and ore the plants have broken through soil, a light harrow or weeder ould be run over the field to break the crust and row the field again en the plants are three or four hes high. Thereafter cultivation een the rows should be shallow frequent throughout the growing eriod, keeping the ground level.

ARM NEWS AND VIEWS.

has been said that the first step ilding up a profitable dairy herd eding out the "boarder" cows. ertaking this, however, rememt oftentimes a cow is condemnen it is the feeding and not the at is the fault. The true worth w can be determined only by feeding, and the weighing and of the milk at proper intervals throughout an entire milking Thus it would seem that the step is not weeding out the unable cows, but obtaining a wledge of what constitutes a cor and balanced ration. Only until have acquired this skill you are mpetent to select the paying cow. the a good rations table and study it. It will not only help you to put "boarder" cows on the pay list, but will enable you to increase the profits from the cows that are already making good records.

Weighing and testing a cow's milk will not make her give a larger yield, but it will sometimes make her substitute a better one.

Cows will not do as well when they have two or three persons working with them as they will when they have but one. Kindness counts.

If you think you are providing your cows with all they will eat, just try the addition of a little more, and probably you will be surprised also.

Keep cows. They give the farmer and his wife money every day in the year and save plowing, sowing and reaping by turning pasture grass into gold.

A poor cow will stand abuse, as it doesn't make much difference with her, but the highly-bred, nervous dairy cow must have careful, humane treatment.

The profits that come out of the dairy business are usually commensurate with the thoughtfully directed efforts that are put in. Brains are a valuable asset.

All ill treatment of a cow makes her milk less desirable, and also decreases her value permanently. Good care and kindness toward her make for profit for her owner.

Some simple condition powder, such as any veterinarian will prepare, should be in every stable to feed to the mares and colts when symptoms of indigestion appear, something that frequently happens during the winter months.

In selecting a horse, always select one with plenty of space between the eyes. This mark of intelligence is worth a whole lot to the intelligent handler of a horse.

While a thin, poor sow may raise a litter of pigs, they will fall short of being of the best quality.

In all pure breeds the boar has the greatest influence upon the quality and general appearance of the offspring.

The cheapest hog fodder is clover, but the best single food is corn; in the combination of these two lie the best results.

As soon as the pigs begin to eat they become partially self-supporting and to this extent demand less of the mother.

Breed the sows just as long as breeding them is profitable. It is generally not good economy to slaughter a good breeding sow.

Pigs should not be weaned under 8 weeks old. 10 is a better age; and if the sows are bred only once a year, 12 weeks will do better still.

It is not best to have young pigs very fat. The development of bone and muscle is the primary object of the first six months of a pig's life.

It is best not to make the selection for a brood sow until a reasonable age has developed the good or bad qualities that are sure to come out.

There is no particular advantage in striving for extra litters. Eight or 10 from any sow will be of better size and quality than a larger number.

In the winter season especially ground floors are preferable to plank, because they are much warmer, and when once warmed they retain the heat as well.

When butter is worked very dry the grains of butter left in are not dissolved, but remain in a gritty condition.

Feed the cows regularly, so they will know when to expect it and will not worry about their feed. Worry is bad for cows.

Never let the heifer become more than two years old before breeding. Cows which have been bred young are usually good milkers.

"OH, PEOPLE IF BAGDAD!"

Sir Stanley Maude's Proclamation to the Wandering Arabs.

Lieut. Gen. Sir Stanley Maude, commander-in-chief of the British army in Mesopotamia, issued a striking proclamation to the population of Bagdad, when his army entered the "City of the Caliphs" on March 11. The complete text of it has just reached this country. It reads with a fluent stateliness, well fitted to the flowery phraseology of the original Arabic, and inspires the assumption that it must have been the work of one of the linguists of the Indian army.

The reference to "the days of Halaka" apparently refers to the capture of the city and the overthrow of the Abbaside caliphs by the Mongols under the great Khan Hulagu in 1258.

The proclamation follows:

"To the people of Bagdad vilayet.

"1. In the name of my King and in the name of the peoples over whom he rules, I address you as follows:

"2. Our military operations have as their object the defeat of the enemy and the driving of him from these territories. In order to complete this task I am charged with absolute and supreme control of all regions in which British troops operate, but our armies do not come into your cities and lands as conquerors and enemies, but as liberators.

"3. Since the days of Halaka your city and your lands have been subject to the tyranny of strangers, your palaces have fallen into ruin, your gardens have sunk in desolation, and your forefathers and yourselves have groaned in bondage. Your sons have been carried off to wars not of your seeking, your wealth has been stripped from you by unjust men and squandered in distant places.

"4. Since the days of Midhat the Turks have talked of reforms. Yet do not the ruins and wastes of to-day testify the vanity of those promises?

"5. It is the wish not only of my King and his people, but it is also the wish of the great nations with whom he is in alliance, that you should prosper even as in the past, when your lands were fertile, when your ancestors gave to the world literature, science and art, and when Bagdad city was one of the wonders of the world.

"6. Between you people and the dominions of my King there has been a close bond of interest. For two hundred years have the merchants of Bagdad and Great Britain traded together in mutual profit and friendship. On the other hand, the Germans and the Turks, who have despoiled you and yours, have for twenty years made Bagdad a centre of power from which to assail the power of the British and the allies of the British in Persia and Arabia. Therefore the British Government cannot remain indifferent as to what takes place in your country now or in the future, for in duty to the interests of the British people and their allies, the British Government cannot risk that being done in Bagdad again which has been done by Turks and Germans during the war.

"7. But you people of Bagdad, whose commercial prosperity and whose safety from oppression and invasion must ever be a matter of the closest concern of the British Government, are not to understand it is the wish of the British Government to impose upon you alien institutions. It is the hope of the British Government that the aspirations of your philosophers and writers shall be realized and that once again the people of Bagdad shall flourish, enjoying their wealth and substance under institutions which are in consonance with their sacred laws and their racial ideals. In Hejaz the Arabs have expelled the Turks and Germans who oppressed them, and proclaimed the Sherif Hussein as their king, and his lordship rules in independence and freedom, and is the ally of the nations who are fighting against the powers of Turkey and Germany, so indeed are the noble Arabs the lords of Koweit, Nejd and Asir.

"8. Many noble Arabs have perished in the cause of Arab freedom at the hands of those alien rulers, the Turks, who oppressed them. It is the determination of the Government of Great Britain and the great powers allied to Great Britain that these noble Arabs shall not have suffered in vain. It is the hope and desire of the British people and the nations in alliance with them that the Arab race may rise once more to greatness and renown among the peoples of the earth, and that it shall bind itself together to this end in unity and concord.

"9. Oh, people of Bagdad! Remember that for twenty-six generations you have suffered under strange tyrants, who have ever endeavored to set one Arab house against another in order that they might profit by your dissensions.

"That policy is abhorrent to Great Britain and her allies, for there can be neither peace nor prosperity where there is enmity and misgovernment. Therefore I am commanded to invite you through your nobles and elders and representatives to participate in the management of your civil affairs in collaboration with the political representatives of Great Britain who accompany the British army, so that you may be united with your kinsmen in north, south, east and west in realizing the aspirations of your race."—New York Evening Post.

Why We Can Gauge Distance.

Aside from the monkey, man is the only animal having what we call binocular single vision. That is, he can tell not only the direction of an object, but he can estimate fairly accurately its distance. This is because both of his eyes point at the same object at the same time like two range finders. Other animals do not concentrate their gaze in this way. Their eyes are set more nearly at the sides of the head so that they see not only forward, but backward for a short distance. Man, on the contrary, sees clearly only the object at which he looks directly.—Popular Science Monthly.

Redpath SUGAR

When you pay the price of first quality sugar, why not be sure that you get it? There is one brand in Canada which has no second quality—that's the old reliable Redpath.

"Let Redpath Sweeten it." 3

2 and 5 lb. Cartons—
10, 20, 50 and 100 lb. Bags.

Made in one grade only—the highest!

A VILLAGE IN FRANCE

(By F. J. Sleath.)

At the top of the hill about half a mile from the church is Estaminet Moulin. Opposite one end of the churchyard, where the road turns at right angles, is Estaminet Maitre, and along this turning opposite the other end of the churchyard is the estaminet of Colin Dupriez. We take the estaminets as salient points, for in between, filling up each arm of the right angle so formed, are gathered all the houses of the village. Nearly all the buildings consist of farm steadings built right up from the roadway itself, with the barns and cowsheds and fields stretching away behind. Indeed, the village is just one of those agricultural communities hundreds of which are dotted all over the country districts of France.

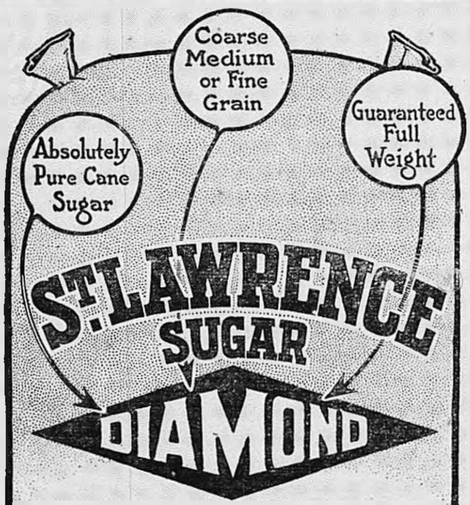
People who dwell in the country are a statelier and more sober race than those who dwell in the town. The exigencies of their daily vocations send them to their homes when the life of the city is only approaching its gayest, and at no time is there the bustle even faintly reminiscent of the crowded city streets. But in these days the village is unusually quiet. Children there are in plenty, and old men to pass the time of day with women and girls. Yet none of the stir is noticeable, nor the vigorous life usually associated with the presence of young men, for the lads of the village have gone to the war.

The business of the place still goes on briskly, however, but it is largely in the hands of women and men long past their prime. They help each other in the fields, and the same feature holds for affairs in the village itself. "Old Jacques," the smith, clangs away on his anvil in his smithy behind Estaminet Maitre. For a year or two previous to the war he had hardly touched a tool. Now that young Jacques, and Jacques of a younger generation still, are both in the trenches, he has taken up his tools again. For the farmers' hard-pressed horses must be shod and their harrows and ploughs repaired, and though Grandpapa Jacques is old and feeble his hand has not lost its cunning, and the work is done as of yore. Henri Allan sometimes comes to sit and watch him. Henri owns the Estaminet Maitre—and the two exchange battle reminiscences. For Jacques fought in '71 and Henri was crippled at Soissons. He looks hale and hearty—sitting, but he will never walk again. His wife does all the work of the estaminet. He just sits, and watches, and talks.

The Estaminet Moulin is also managed by a woman. Her husband is a gunner in the Calais artillery. She does not fear much for his welfare, but when her son is mentioned she looks wistful. He has just been called up to do his training, and his cousin, Colin Dupriez's youngest boy—the two older sons fell before Lens—is a recruit at the same depot. Colin himself is too old to go to the war. He served in '71 as a mere boy, with the francs-tireurs. Even the cure has joined the colors. A venerable priest, a refugee from the Flemish border, now shepherds his flock. And the village pedagogue left the same day as the cure. A daughter attends the mental welfare of the sturdy school boys in his absence.

They are patriotic little fellows, these French schoolboys, and right proudly they sing the Marseillaise as they tramp smartly into the school. Once they paid a very gallant compliment to the army of their allies in the person of a British officer, who, sent to secure billets for his battalion in the village, had paused to watch them. Quite on their own initiative every tiny boy brought his hand smartly to the salute when filing past the officer. It might easily have proved rather an awkward situation for the latter to handle, but his wit did not desert him. He instantly sprang to the salute himself, and gravely kept his position until the boys had all gone by. More than one watching party observed the incident, and the officer's courtesy was greatly appreciated. Shortly afterwards when his battalion came to spend its "rest" period in the village, the men were made the more welcome.

The older people of the village do not sing the Marseillaise. Theirs is the patriotism that waits and suffers and endures in silence. The arduous extra work they have to shoulder because of the strong men who have gone from their district is done without enthusiasm, done with an earnestness which, viewed in an introspective spirit, almost startles the observer. It is for France to labor, and the soil of France. It is for France their lads have gone out to die. Yet underneath the steady calm rages a fierce current of nervous excitement, all the more intense because of the reserve which hides it. Enter the little church at any hour of the day, and you will be sure to see someone praying there. Enter again at benediction and you will find little space even to stand. Go down to the little shrine, beyond the church, as evening falls, and count the number of women who come to set a lighted candle on the altar as a votive offering for some absent loved one, and you may gather some idea of the strain under which these people are laboring. In the light of the sacrifices made not only in the battle line, but also at home in the towns and villages of the country, the German talk of France's pre-war decadence seems the grossest impertinence. The whole inner heart of the country is a fire with zeal and earnestness. She has offered her best blood as a sacrifice, and the sacrifice has been accepted. Yet because of the spiritual and religious strength of her people, as a nation she is stronger than before.



FOR PRESERVING

it is wise to insist on the ST. LAWRENCE RED DIAMOND EXTRA GRANULATED which is pure cane sugar of the very best quality.

Because St. Lawrence Red Diamond contains no organic or other impurities and will absolutely prevent fermentation, even if your preserves are stored away for months, provided good fruit is used, and the jars are well sealed.

Avoid the possibility of expensive failures by getting the St. Lawrence Red Diamond Extra Granulated.

Buy the big bag—100 lbs. full weight—refinery packed and sealed and have a supply handy to do justice to your skill.

Your dealer can supply St. Lawrence Red Diamond Extra Granulated in either Coarse Grain, Medium or Fine, as you may prefer. Also in many other styles and sizes of bags and packages.

ST. LAWRENCE SUGAR REFINERIES, LIMITED, MONTREAL.

1-4-17

When Parasols Began.

Parasols when they first came into use must have been cumbersome. Henri Estienne writing in 1578, speaks of a parasol as capable generally of sheltering four persons from the sun. And when they diminished in circumference the material still remained of the heaviest. Red velvet parasols, with heavy gold fringes, were carried by ladies of fashion in the days of Louis XIV. At that time it was possible when crossing a bridge in Paris to hire a parasol at one end and deposit it at the other, the charge for the accommodation being a sou. Under the regency fashion went to the other extreme. Men's parasols folded into the shape of a three-cornered hat and could thus be carried elegantly under the arm. Ladies' parasols were hinged so that they could slip into the pocket, for the ladies had pockets then.—London Spectator.

BABY'S OWN TABLETS OF GREAT VALUE

Mrs. J. A. Lagace, Ste. Felicite, Que., writes:—"Baby's Own Tablets have been of great value to me and I would strongly recommend them to other mothers." Thousands of other mothers say the same thing. They have become convinced through actual use of the Tablets that nothing can equal them in regulating the bowels and stomach, driving out constipation and indigestion, breaking up colds and simple fevers; expelling worms and curing colic. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"SHORT SELLING."

How Money is Made as Well as Lost On Falling Market.

Someone writing to the New York World confesses that as sharp as Cobal von [illegible]'s declared ignorance of the workings of the stock market machinery "by which it is possible to make money on a falling market," and ask whether it is possible to make money "otherwise than by buying at low prices and holding the goods until the market rises again."

The World did not take the trouble to enlighten the inquirer. Yet it is worth while to do that. The speculative process that is known as "selling short" is a mystery to many, and frequently attempts to explain it to those who do not understand are unsatisfactory in their results, if not altogether futile.

It is axiomatic that profit can be made only by selling a thing for more than one pays for it. The simplest process to accomplish the desired result is to do the buying when prices are lower than they are likely to be at some future time, and then wait until realization of the expected advance makes opportunity to sell at a higher price.

Short selling is simply a reversal of that process. The selling is done at a time when prices are higher than they are likely to be at a future time, and the buying when prices have declined. Manifestly the difference between the prices is profit, just the same as it is when the buying precedes the selling.

It is the fact that as a rule, short sellers do not possess what they sell, that makes comprehension of the process difficult to many. They cannot understand how anyone can sell something that he hasn't. But the explanation of that is simple enough. The short seller borrows the stock which he sells, directly if he is a member of the stock exchange, or through a broker if he is an outside operator and delivers the borrowed stock to the buyer. The lender of the stock is secured by the delivery to him of the purchase price, and the obligation of the seller to make up to him any advance in the price which may come before return of the stock.

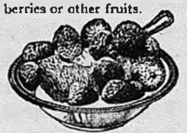
When, sooner or later, the price of the stock declines, the seller and borrower buys as much as he has sold and borrowed for delivery at the lower price. He returns this to the lender and receives his original selling price. His gain is the excess of that over the price which he paid in a lower market.

This closing of the transaction is called covering.

We have described a successful transaction. It may happen, of course, that the short seller is disappointed in his expectation that he will be able to buy the stock which he sold when he didn't have it, at a lower price. It may advance so much that he is unable, or deems it inadvisable to hold the transaction open indefinitely for possible ultimate results in his favor. Then he must buy the stock for return to the lender, at a price higher than that which he paid for it and the difference between selling price and the purchasing price is a loss to him, just as that difference is a loss to the speculator who buys when he believes a stock will advance sooner or later and instead it declines and he is forced, or thinks it advisable, to sell at the lower price.—Albany Journal.

"Scientists say that blondes will disappear in a few years." This gave the golden-haired girl her opportunity. "Well, if you want one," said she sweetly, "you'd better speak up now."—Louisville Courier Journal.

Your Wife's "Allowance" may not expand to meet the increasing cost of foods, but it will buy a sufficient quantity of Shredded Wheat to nourish every member of the family. Two Shredded Wheat Biscuits with milk make a good, nourishing breakfast at a cost of a few cents. All the body-building material in the whole wheat grain. For breakfast or dinner with berries or other fruits.



Made in Canada

PORTO RICAN BATS.

Only Mammal On the Island Swarms in Caves.

The American Museum of Natural History has received a fine series of birds and mammals collected by H. E. Anthony, of the museum staff, in Porto Rico. Mr. Anthony conducted this expedition as part of a plan of a natural history survey of the island undertaken by the New York Academy of Sciences and the American Museum of Natural History in co-operation with the insular government.

Included in the collections are a number of specimens of bats and fossil mammals. It is not generally known that bats are the only mammals found on the island to-day. Not less than twelve distinct species were found in a collection of nearly 500 specimens. Caves are found all over the island and nearly fifty were visited. Many of these caves are extensive and contain underground streams, so that exploration is a difficult procedure. In some places bats were found by the thousand, and when disturbed, the noise of their wings was like that of a gale of wind.

Although the layman regards a bat as a commonplace sort of animal, closer acquaintance yields many interesting facts about them and in the variety of forms obtained on the island, many important scientific points concerning them were noted. Most of the bats are insectivorous and play an important part in the control of insect life. The largest bats on the island are reputed to be fish eaters. On this point, however, no first-hand evidence could be secured. The guano in many of the caves is a valuable asset as a fertilizer and the deposits are being worked by the natives.

In addition to the bats fossil mammals of a type hitherto unknown were secured. These mammals were, like the bats, to be found in the caves, but it was necessary to search for the latter by digging in the loose soil of the cave floors. Without doubt these animals lived before human habitation, but it is possible that some of them—larger rodents—formed an important item in the diet of the early Indian dwellers who used to visit the caves probably to celebrate religious ceremonies, at which time the animals may have been eaten and the bones cast aside. Evidence of this was found by examination of a number of refuse heaps in the caves in which bones and broken bits of Indian pottery were found.

The fact that Porto Rico at one time doubtless had an abundant point in the study of the history of the West Indies.—New York "Evening Post."

The Miracle.

Let me be thankful for the flaming day,
The moon that burns to splendor when I hear
The feet of Beauty passing on her way,
The voice of Beauty as she trembles near,
Sweet silvery wraith, my hope and my despair!
Man's path is but a pilgrimage of need
Seeking the ultimate star, the hidden lair,
And if he falters in his ruthless greed
Let him remember life, the miracle—
The rose of evening faint against the sky,
The slow moon's glory risen in the dell,
First love or children's laughter floating by—
The sweep of sudden wind among the trees * * *
Let me be thankful, Lord, for all of these!
Blanch Shoemaker Wagstaff in the New York Sun.

Proved Once More In Southampton, Ont.

THAT DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS CURE RHEUMATISM.

Harold D. Bertram Had Inflammatory Rheumatism and One Box of Dodd's Kidney Pills Cleared It Out of His System.

Southampton, Ont., May 24.—(Special.)—That rheumatism is caused by disordered kidneys and that Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure it is again proved by the case of Harold D. Bertram, a young man well and favorably known here. He had inflammatory rheumatism for two months. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured him.

"The doctor said my trouble started with the grippe," Mr. Bertram states. "My hands and feet were badly swollen, and the doctor did not seem to be doing me any good. My grandmother, Mrs. G. Grasser, advised me to take Dodd's Kidney Pills. I took one box of them, and I haven't been bothered since. I am clear of the rheumatism."

That Mr. Bertram's trouble came from his kidneys is shown by his other symptoms. He had stiffness in the joints, was tired and nervous, and there were flashes of light before his eyes. He had a dragging sensation across the loins, was always thirsty, and felt heavy and sleepy after meals.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood. Cured kidneys strain the uric acid out of the blood. Dodd's Kidney Pills cure the kidneys.

WIT

A DIAG (Washing

"Did you call that low-brow and a bonehe
"Yes, I did," answered
shum.
"He resents the insult."
"That was no insult. Tha diagnosis."

THE LAST PRIVATION.
(Exchange)

Lady Visitor—"Why so sad
Lady N—
Well, you see is Flo's less day is terrib

LIKE

The Author of my brain.
The Editor
you've mistreated
a step-child.

JOKE ON (Washington

"What's that tune your playing on the piano?"
"I don't believe it was plied Mr. Cumrox. "I joke she was playing on t

MAGGIE'S COMPLA
(Life)

Maggie—Sure, miss, and it's life I bane living.
Mrs. Smith—Didn't I tell you, Mag
"If you marry in haste, you repent at leisure?"
Maggie—Faith, and I've had no rure!"

SARCASTIC.
(Life)

Pullman Porter—Shall I show him to his berth, or let him get a little sleep?

THE SOLE BENEFICIARY.
(Puck)

"Your fiancé appears to have a will of her own."
"True. At times I regret that I am the beneficiary."

FRIENDLESS.
(Boston Transcript)

"Who stood up for Jack when he married Miss Flirtleigh?"
"No one. Everybody called him a fool."

THE DIFFERENCE.
[illegible]

Frank—What is the difference between a potter and a reporter?
Lu—The former works for tips and the latter on tips.

KEPT NOTHING BACK.
(Boston Transcript)

Lawyer—Now, you must keep nothing from me.
Client—I haven't. I paid you every cent I had in the world for your retainer.

CAUGHT!
(Louisville Courier-Journal)

Hubby, you know that letter I said I gave you to mail?
"Yes, my dear; I assure you I mailed it."
"No, you didn't. I didn't give it to you. I thought I gave it to you, but I gave it to father."

SCIENCE'S VICTIM.
(Washington Star)

"Science has devised a machine that will measure a millionth of an inch," said the man who is always trying to surprise you.
"I know it. I believe my restaurant uses one in cutting the meat for ham sandwiches."

TOO PREVIOUS.
(Birmingham Age-Herald)

"I had an idea I'd this business some day," said charged office boy.
"That's just why you are fired,"
"Ever since you started work here you've been acting as if you already owned the business."

CALLING TERMS.
(Boston Transcript)

Mrs. Illey—Are you on callin' terms with your new neighbor?
Mrs. Murphy— missin' some of her washin' yesterday, she called me a and I called her a

AN EASY MARK.
(Life)

First Bunco Man—What makes you think you can get something over on an intelligent-looking gent like him?
Second Bunco Man—He always carries an umbrella when the weather report prophesies rain.

OLD SALT'S REPLY.
(Judge)

Visitor—With sharks and submarines about I guess you fellows that live along the shore have some exciting sensations?
Old Salt—Sure we do! Not that I've seen any sharks or "subs," but I read the papers, like the rest of you lubbers.

THE CATSUP.
(Boston Transcript)

She was a green girl, just land the old country, and it was h day at her new place. When h ter and mistress sat down to latter said: "Oh, Mary, h sup, please." So Mary w and brought up—both of

HIS RESOURC
(Boston Transcri

Old Roxleigh—What are sources?
Nervy Suitor—Well, I hav rich girls willing to marry not have your daughter.

NO RETURNING
(Judge)

"I have come to ask yo daughter's hand," said the timidly to her father.
"All right," said the old man joyfully, "but don't ever come around and ask me to take her back."

BUT HE SMOKED.
(Puck)

Railway Attendant (to man smoking—"You can't smoke.
The Smoker—So my friends say.
Railway Attendant—But you mustn't smoke.
The Smoker—So my doctor says.
Railway Attendant—Well, you shan't smoke.
The Smoker—So my wife says.

CAUTIOUS.
(Washington Sta

"I can't get any attention from that young man in the bureau of information," said Mrs. Corntossel.
"Well," replied her husband, "they're mainly a sort of like I s'pose the young man feels like he's mighty careful."

THE BRUTE!
(Yonkers Statesman)

Mollie—Did you notice Mr. Jenks while I was singing?
Chollie—Oh, yes; his face expressed wonder.
Mollie—He didn't think I could sing like that, I suppose.
"He didn't think you had the nerve to sing like that."

What the Party Was For

Gladys' beau took her younger sister Mabel aside and confided in her as follows:
"Now, I am going to tell you something, Mabel. Do you know that last night, at your party, your sister promised to marry me? I hope you'll forgive me for taking her away."
"Forgive you, Mr. Sparks," said Mabel; "of course I will. Why, that's what the party was for."—New York Times.

In spite of the fact that women are changeable it is sometimes difficult for a fellow to get rid of one and another.

NOW IS UNDOUBTEDLY THE TIME TO BUY SUCH HOUSE-FURNISHINGS AS

FLOOR RUGS, LINOLEUMS & OILCLOTHS.

Prices have advanced as much in the last few months as during all the two preceding years. These recent advances and the difficulties in transportation will make today's prices impossible for the immediate future

Cover Your Floors with These New Brussels and Tapestry Rugs.

Whether for the Dining Rooms, Living Room, Parlor or Bedroom, any room that you wish to make comfortable and comely at a low cost, Brussels and Tapestry rugs offer their good services. They are famous for wear, are easily kept fresh and bright and to these practical advantages, a most pleasing appearance.

Superior Quality Brussels Rugs
9x9, 9x10½, 9x12, 10½x13½ at $18.00 to $28.50.

Canadian Oilcloths
Extra good patterns. Best quality Canadian Make. 1, 1¼, 1½, 2 and 2½ yards wide.

New Lace Curtains
Pretty new designs. 50c, 75c, $1 to $3 a pair.

And About Linoleums
We have it on good authority that for some time no British Linoleums will be shipped. We have a big stock of the best Scotch makes in extra select patterns. Two and four yards wide. Per sq. yard 69c, 75c and 81c.

New Marquiselte Curtains
Plain strong centres with new dainty borders. Cream and Ecru at $3 to $6 a pair.

Best Quality Tapestry Rugs
9x9, 9x10½, 9x12, 10½x12, 10½x13½, and 12x12, at $9.50, $10.00, $12.50, $15.00 to $24.50.

STEPHAN BROTHERS

OPENING AND CLOSING STORE

On and after Wednesday June 6th this Store will be open
Wednesday Evenings Until 9 O'clock
and will close
Thursday Afternoons at 1 O'clock
during the summer months. I will have special attractions for Wednesday evenings to give the public an opportunity to do their buying in the evening. All orders taken will be delivered Thursday morning.

C. PATRICK
PHONE 165 WALKERTON

Seeing the Opportunity and Seizing it are Two Very Different Matters.

Why do we claim the Bacon we offer is the brand of Bacon that you should buy if you want the best?

Because of:—Appearance and Quality; Sure to satisfy; Taste that is just right; Nice Trim and Mild, Sweet Cure.

Nowhere will you find a Bacon that you can eat with greater pleasure and enjoyment.

"A Try—Tells Why"

GOODE & McKAY
PHONE 67 The People's Grocery

Some Exceptional Values This Week

We Anticipated All the Requirements in Hosiery Far Enough Ahead to Protect Ourselves on High Prices, so now when the Time Comes that you Need them, we quote you below.

Ribbed Cotton Hose all sizes, good black, at 15c a pair.

Boys' Ribbed Hosiery, all sizes, at 20c a pair.

Buster Brown, Rock Rib, Princess and Buster Brown's Sister Hosiery at 25c a pair.

We have a splendid assortment of Ladies' Cotton and Lisle Hose, both black and white at 25c a pair.

Ladies' Silk Boot Hose at 40c, 50c, 75c and $1.00 a pair.

Men's Sox, at 12½c, 15c, 20c, 25c, 35c, 50c and 75c a pair.

See Window Display for New Shapes in Men's and Boys' Straw Hats

The warm weather is coming at last and we have prepared with ladies', Misses' and Children's summery Dresses, Waists and Skirts. Sheer summer Dress Materials in Mull, Lawn, Voille, Ginghams and Chambrays.

Parasol Season Opens This Week

McBURNEY & CO.

THE PEOPLE'S STORE

Patriotism and Fashion

Patriotism demands that you spend your money and make every dollar go as far as possible. You can serve both the dictates of duty and fashion by making your own clothes.

Dress with smart individuality in the most advance styles by using Butterick Patterns.

Illustrated Instructions with each pattern SHOW you just how easy it is.

See for yourself.

Butterick Pattern Department

Phone 53 J. H. APPEL Walkerton

OUR NEIGHBORING TOWNS, VILLAGES AND COUNTRYSIDE

Newsy Happenings of the Week Collected for Our Readers by a Staff of Live Correspondents

MILDMAY

Messrs. Peter Reuber and Ed. Wittick brought up two new Overland cars last Wednesday from Windsor. These cars have the new torpedo body and with their 32 h.p. motor, there are few better cars on the road anywhere.

Mr. Jack Schnurr son of John H. Schnurr shoemaker who is employed by the Goldie McCullough Co. in their shell factory at Galt visited at his [illegible] over Sunday.

Mr. Frank Schmidt of Central Business College, Stratford spent Saturday and Sunday with friends in town.

On account of the inclement weather prevailing over the 24th the Victoria celebration has been changed and will take place on Monday June 4th. A hearty welcome is extended to all to come and enjoy themselves.

Mr. Joe Filsinger whose barn was destroyed by fire a few weeks ago bought a barn up near Chepstow and took it all apart. On Friday, Saturday and Monday his neighbours gave a day's work to help him haul the timber to his farm on the 4th concession.

Mr. and Mrs. James Shera of Gorrie visited in town on Sunday.

Mrs. J. W. Derscht and son Lennie of Didsbury Alta., is visiting for a few months at the home of her mother Mrs. Conrad Liesemer.

[illegible] McCool of Walkerton was [illegible] Saturday presiding over [illegible]ance Examinations at the [illegible]

[illegible] Liesemer teacher in Bal[illegible] School, spent Sunday at her [illegible]. Master Orville Kalb[illegible] accompanied her to Baden and [illegible] this week in that place.

[illegible] in this section report [illegible] last week did no harm [illegible] that it even did some good [illegible] was very dry before the [illegible]

Carrick Council met on Monday May 28th in the Town Hall. There is some talk of putting a railing on the east side of the hill east of Robert Brown's [illegible]. This is a bad spot and is where Mr. Solomon Lindenschmidt met with his accident about two weeks ago.

Mr. Edward Diebel employed in the Kiddie [illegible] at Elora visited at [illegible] over Victoria Day and re[illegible] Elora by motorcycle on [illegible]

[illegible] Mrs. John Eckel of Hanover [illegible] town all week. The funeral [illegible] Conrad Faupel, Mrs. Eckel's [illegible] took place on Wednesday afternoon, interment being made in the Evangelical cemetery, Mildmay.

SOUTH LINE

[illegible]uch fishing was done on the [illegible]ing to our late winter.

[illegible] is re-shingling his [illegible]

[illegible] Hamilton spent Sunday with [illegible] Teeple at Maple Hill.

Mr. Solomon Schwandt has purchased a new Ford car.

Mr. Fisher of Kitchener was visiting at Thomas Steele's last week.

Mr. Sebastian Kimtine went to Oshawa last Friday to bring home a new Chevrolet car which he had purchased. Mrs. Kimtine accompanied him as far [illegible] Toronto.

GLAMIS

Our snow storm on May 23rd, soon faded away, and brought fine weather.

Mrs. Woodstock has returned back to the village after spending six months at Mr. Pierson's, 6th Con. Kincardine.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Avery of Armow, Sundayed at J. D. Robertson's.

Miss Mary Webb, teacher at Chippewa Hill, spent a few days at her home.

Mr. Garfield Virtue of Owen Sound was a guest at Capt. P. McKinnon's, over the holiday.

Clyde McKeeman returned home again on Saturday from Toronto.

Messrs Henry Dent, and McLean Young of Underwood, were Sunday visitors in the vicinity.

Mrs. R. F. Harrison of Calgary, Alberta, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. McIntyre.

Mrs. John Stalcker of Oil Springs, visited at the home of her uncle, J. Cunningham, over the holiday.

Corp. Alex. McPhail of 229th Batt. came up from Toronto, (where he has been taking a special course) on Friday, and paid a flying visit to friends here. All were glad to see Alex again.

Mr. Fiddis of Elmwood, Sundayed at George Webb's.

Miss Edith Howson returned to Clifford on Thursday.

Duncan Guest of Bervie, was a visitor in the burg on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. James Brown and family of Paisley, spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson.

On Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. Graham entertained a few friends in honor of their friend, Corp. McPhail.

Miss D. McDougall of Paisley is visiting her friend, Miss Margaret Symon.

Mrs. Begg of Underwood, spent a few days with her mother, Mrs. P. Gilchrist.

Mrs. James Thompson spent a few days with relatives in Pinkerton.

J. Cunningham attended the Greenock Township Council in Pinkerton on Monday forenoon, and also the Kincardine Twp. Board of Health at Armow in the afternoon.

W. J. McKeeman has disposed of his 1916 Ford Car and has purchased a 1917 model.

We regret to report the illness of Mr. McIntosh. His many friends wish him a speedy recovery.

All were glad to see Mr. McIntyre (who is in his [illegible] year) able to be up the street on Saturday.

On Thursday last a letter was received from Pte. Ervin Cunningham from "Somewhere in France". He stated that the weather there is hot just like summer. He has been transferred into 10th Batt. from 9th Reserve.

BRANT AVENUE

Mr. Charlie Lundy who has been learning the blacksmith trade with Mr. Wm. Geisler in town, and left some time ago to work in the Harriston Pork and Bean Factory, spent over Sunday at his home here.

Mr. Wm. Schuler of Dunkeld is working for Jos. J. Zettler at present putting in piping to run the water from an adjourning spring on the hill to his house.

Mr. Herb Cheesey who is working for Mr. Len. Long spent Sunday at his home at Dunkeld.

Mr. Tom Watson of Toronto, who was visiting at Mr. James McCarter's returned to his home on Wednesday. He certainly enjoyed the country life while here.

That was sure a big surprise to some folks last week, [illegible] came again. One young man certainly made use of it by hauling manure on his root ground. Time seemed precious to him.

CARGILL

Spr. W. L. Keeling of Toronto spent the week-end at his home here prior to leaving for Ottawa.

Mrs. F. L. Martin spent the week-end with relatives in Paisley.

Mrs. J. Donnelly of Chepstow is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Joseph Clancy.

Messrs. H. Grice, W. L. Keeling and Miss Gladys Keeling motored to Cranbrook on Saturday and returned Sunday.

A number of Masons motored to Chesley on Monday to attend a banquet given by the Masons of that town.

We are sorry to report that Mr. Alfred Garland is ill with pneumonia. We all wish him a speedy recovery.

Miss Agnes Ward of Walkerton spent a few days of last week at the home of Mr. Martin Bester.

Mr. Jas. Alexander of the Royal Bank staff, Elmwood, spent Sunday at his home here.

A meeting was held by the young ladies on Monday night at the home of Mrs. R. A. Fowlie. They formed a Junior Patriotic League and elected officers as follows—Convenor, Miss Gladys Keeling; Sect'y.-Treasurer, Miss Mabel Clancy. A number of scrap books were made of comic clippings and pictures and will be sent to the boys in France.

CHEPSTOW

The engagement has been announced of Rose, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Kunkel, to Mr. Joe Lang of Brant, marriage to take place June 5th.

Inspector W. F. J. Lee of Toronto, paid his official semi-annual visit to the local school on Tuesday.

Miss L. Wagner of Chesley, spent the Sunday with her mother.

Mr. A. Die[illegible]ner, accompanied by a party of friends, motored to Guelph and Kitchener on Sunday.

BORN—On Friday May 25th, to Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Uhlbreser, a daughter.

RIVERSDALE

Mrs. R. F. Sanderson and two daughters of Oakville, are visiting at Wm. McDonald's.

Mrs. L. Baninger and Miss Eva, visited friends in Formosa, on Sunday.

Mrs. and Mr. H. J. Baninger of Dungannon and Mrs. Kelp of Teeswater, Sundayed with friends here.

Miss Agnes Dietrich spent a few days in Walkerton.

BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Valad, a son, (Elmer Sylvester.)

HANOVER

The following committee has been appointed to see that every returned soldier receives a royal welcome home: Mrs. (Dr.) Ball, Miss Hahn, Miss Martin, Miss Jamieson, the resident ministers of the town, the Mayor and municipal council Dr. Erde, J. A. Mager, M. S. Armstrong, D. L. Strachan, J. S. Wilson, John Telford, J. H. Adams, Chas. Coppinger, Dan Weppler, S. B. Clarke, Harvey Richardson, M. J. Muter and E. F. Graff.

The annual convention of the German Lutheran Synod of Canada will be held in St. Mathew's Lutheran Church (Rev. Tweitmeyer's), Hanover from June 11th to June 18th.

Miss Renata Knechtel who secured her degree in arts at the Toronto University, also pulled down the Robertson prize for obtaining the highest marks on a regular examination on the subject of "Canadian Constitutional History."

Mr. Martin Monk, met with a serious injury when a portion of the stable wall fell on him, burying him under a pile of brick and mortar. When rescued it was found he had a badly dislocated shoulder and many bruises about the head and body.

Joseph Heintzman, a young soldier training in London, deserted on May 4 and made his way to his home near Hanover, where he was located and arrested on Saturday by the local authorities, word was sent to London and on Monday Sergt. Dudney and Pte. Levitt of the 7th Battalion came to Hanover and took Pte. Heintzman back with them.

A most impressive memorial service was held in the Methodist Church in honor of Sergt. Helkirk Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Wilson, who made the Supreme sacrifice for his Country at the battle of Vimy Ridge.

It is now learned that the 400 men of the 248th will go direct to the 8th Reserve Battalion in England, the unit that is reinforcing the other Grey Battalion, the 147th.

Miss Renata Knechtel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Knechtel, has secured her B. A. degree at Toronto University.

The local Resources Committee have appointed Mr. John Frook to canvass the town for the names and other particulars of men and boys who are willing to work on the farms in case they are needed.

"A very serious accident took place on the farm of Mr. McGauchie, Normanby township, last Wednesday evening when his horses ran away with the large steel roller. His daughter, Mary McGauchie, was seated on the roller and driving the team, when something frightened them and they started off at full speed. Miss McGauchie was jerked forward and fell in front of the roller which went over her. She was taken to her home and a physician sent for. On examination it was found that three ribs were broken away from her breast bone and her back and shoulder badly crushed. She is in a serious condition and will require many weeks to fully recover."

Five Hanover members of the 248th Battalion who went to Owen Sound last week were rejected as medically unfit, Harold Kormann, Carl Muter, Hilbert Clarke, Herb Kobe and I. A. Young. Lieut. Claude Kormann of Hanover retains his rank.

FORMOSA

The Formosa Congregation gave a collection of $65 for the Lithuanian War sufferers.

The contractors are busily engaged in repairing the church tower.

Mr. B. Beingessner went to Wingham on business Wednesday.

Town and District

Jas. Thomson of Elderslie sold six young lambs for $75 last week.

It is understood that jurymen are not likely to be called for the June court throughout the Province, to avoid taking farmers away from their land.

Mrs. F. C. Ryan of Paisley received a telegram on Monday stating that her brother, Pte. Jack Sutherland of Bradford, a well known lacrosse player, had been killed in action.

Coun. Alex. McCarter and Mr. Amos Hoover drove out through Bentinck over the week-end. They state that everything is looking well in that district, fall wheat surprisingly good in comparison with other sections.

Last Saturday the Royal Milling Co. of this town bought 1000 bus. of wheat from Fred Lieiso of 12th con. Brant at 2.00 per bushel to be delivered at the mills here. Fred has 250 acres of land well adapted for wheat and made enough out of his sale last week to pay for 30 acres of land. He expects to sow 40 acres of wheat this Fall.—Chesley Enterprise.

Coal dealers throughout the province are unable to get a price on coal for any time ahead this summer, and they and the consumers who are contracting for a supply, have to go more or less blind. There has been an advance of wages to the miners amounting to something like thirty million dollar which will be made up by higher prices at the mines. The experience of last winter has caused many to get their supply in during summer and this too has a tendency to stiffen prices by increasing the demand. In the meantime dealers can only guarantee prices as they will be at time o delivery.

Battalion Loses Heavily

The 75th Grenadiers of Winnipeg with which Pte. Albert Condy of Brant is fighting, has been one of the heaviest sufferers in the desperate fighting which has been going on around Fresnoy. Thursday's casualty lists alone contained the names of 78 men from this unit of which 23 were killed and 53 missing.

How Hinsperger Was Wounded

A letter received by J. A. Johnston of Mildmay from Gunner A. W. Hinsperger explains the nature of his wound. A piece of shell struck him on the forehead, causing a compound fracture of the frontal bone, taking a downward course penetrating the right eye, lodging behind the same, and displacing it to some extent. He was totally blind for three days, after which the left eye regained a vision The doctors have good hopes of saving the other eye, although its usefulness may be somewhat impaired. "Mlach" says the hospital is simply sublime, after his experiences at the front.

New Library Books

The following books have been added to the Walkerton Public Library:—Action Front (Calb), Between the Lines (Calb), Grapes of Wrath (Calb), Student in Arms (Hankey), Only a Dog (Smith), Rhymes of a Red Cross Man (Service), When the Prussians Came, Italy, France and Britain (Wells) Canadian Commonwealth (Lant), My Second Year of the War (Palmer), England's Effort (Ward), Red Cross Girls in Belgium, The Melting Pot, Worn Doorstep, The First Hundred Thousand, Under the Country Sky, The Salamander, Pollyanna, Elizabeth and her German Garden, Further Foolishness (Leacock), Lydia of the Pines (Willsie), Up the Hill and Over (MacKay), O Mary be Careful (Weston), Piccadilly Jim (Wodehouse), The Hillman (Oppenheim), The Road to Understanding (Porter), Jerry (London), The Mission of Janice Day (Long).

Took 8½ Hrs To Elect Clerk

Thos. H. Purdy, Clerk of Greenock, was the representative of Purdy's appointment at the District meeting in Wesley Church on Tuesday. Mr. Purdy makes a very efficient municipal officer and is giving the very best satisfaction to the council and ratepayers of his Tp. When J. J. Donnelly resigned the clerkship of Greenock, 8 years ago there was quite a race among the several aspirants for the vacant position. Those who went to ballot were Jno. Meagher, Thos. Purdy, and Thos. Houston. The council was composed of Reeve Alex. McKee and councillors Jno. Mutrie, Thos. Fullerton, Jno. Hogan and Frank Caskanette. The two latter stood firm by Meagher but the votes of the other members were divided between Houston and Purdy. At last after balloting from 8.30 o'clock in the evg. till 3 next morning, McKee, Mutrie and Fullerton united on Purdy who got the position which he has since filled so satisfactorily.—Chesley Enterprise.

+ + +

APPEAL TO MEMBERS OF THE I. O. D. E.

Daughters of the Empire:

In the present crisis of our Empire, when we are assured by those most competent to know, that world-hunger stares us in the face, and that it is absolutely necessary that we help those who are fighting for us by increased production and greater economy at home, the National Executive, at a meeting held on May 10th, 1917, decided to make the following appeal to all members of the Order, and through them and their influence to all the women of Canada.

It is in no spirit of arrogance but in the spirit of humble service that we deem it incumbent on the Order to do its utmost to give the light and leading so vitally essential at this crucial period of Canada's welfare.

We ask that members pledge themselves to observe two meatless days, and two potatoless days a week, the meatless days to be Wednesday and Friday, and also to abstain from the use of veal and young lamb.

We also ask that every member should realize for herself, and impress on others the terrible gravity of the situation, and the imperative need of loyal and immediate co-operation, and acquaint herself with the various aspects—scientific, economic, social—of this many-sided problem.

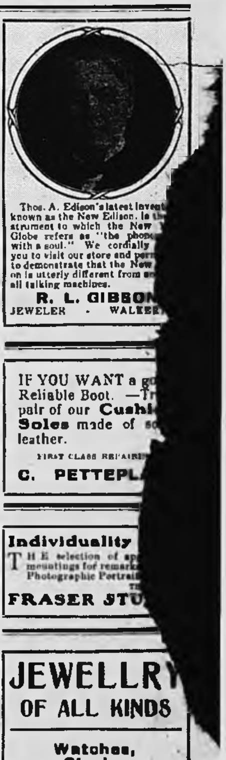
Worth Knowing

A Walkerton lady, who read the account of a prominent Montreal woman being burned to death by her clothes catching fire, remarked to the Telescope that there is absolutely no need of a woman being burned to death if she will only use the simple expedient of rolling on the floor. A number of years ago, she was alone in the house when her clothing caught fire. There was no floor mat or quilt convenient to grasp, so she dropped to the floor and by rolling, easily put out the flames. This information is worth a woman's while to remember in case of emergency.

Walkerton Markets

(Revised, Wednesday, May 30)

Hay, per ton,	10.00 to 12.00
Oats, per bsh.	75 to...... 75
Wheat " "	2.65 to...... 2.65
Barley, " "	1.10 to...... 1.10
Hogs, per cwt,	16.40 to...... 16.40
Butter, per lb,	35 to 36
Eggs, per doz	39 to 40



Thos. A. Edison's latest invent[illegible] known as the New Edison, is th[illegible] strument to which the New [illegible] Globe refers as "the phono[illegible] with a soul." We cordially [illegible] you to visit our store and per[illegible] to demonstrate that the New [illegible] on is utterly different from [illegible] all talking machines.

R. L. GIBBON
JEWELER - WALKER[illegible]

ELLIOTT Business College
Yonge and Charles Sts., Toronto.
It will pay you well. We were asked to fill 120 positions in two months and 210 during two other months. Write for catalogue. Enter now.
W. J. Elliott, Principal.

IF YOU WANT a go[illegible] Reliable Boot. —Tr[illegible] pair of our Cushi[illegible] Soles made of so[illegible] leather.

FIRST CLASS REPAIRI[illegible]

C. PETTEPL[illegible]

The Central Grocery

Flour
All grades and sizes.

Potatoes
For Seed; different varieties.

Granulated Sugar
$8.50 per 100 lbs.

W. G. Searle
Phone 161 Walkerton

Individuality
THE selection of ap[illegible] mountings for remark[illegible] Photographic Portrai[illegible]
FRASER STU[illegible]

JEWELLRY OF ALL KINDS

Watches,
Clocks,
Cut Glass
Silverware
and Jewellry
of all kinds.

C. A. FOX & SON

WALKERTON TELESCOPE

VOL. XLIX. NO. 23 WALKERTON TELESCOPE, WALKERTON, JUNE 7th, 1917 $1.50 A YEAR IN ADVANCE

KNEW QUEEN VICTORIA

And Played With Prince of Wales, Afterwards Edward VII. — Walkerton Citizen Has Spinning Wheel on Which the Queen Spun

Mr. Charles Symons, Victoria St. enjoys a destinction not shared by many people in this country, of having known the late Queen Victoria quite well, talked with her many times, and having played as a boy with her young son, Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, who later became King Edward VII. Mr. Symons' people belonged to the tenantry on the Balmoral Castle Estates in Scotland, where the Queen and her husband spent many happy months of their early wedded life. Mr. Symons tells how the Queen enjoyed living a plain and simple life there moving about unaffectedally among the cottagers and chatting with them about the daily affairs which all housewives have in common. If she stepped into a cottage, it was a common thing for her to enquire in a neighborly way what was in the pot. The children would always rush for their prize toy to display its merits to the kind old lady, and Mr. Symons remembers one diminutive lad, who liked a raw turnip better than anything else and considered it the finest dish in the world, shouting to his mother to get the Queen a "nip." The Queen of Great Britain and Empress of India despensed with dignity on the estate and went around alone on foot with a plain woollen jacket. She was a cheerful body and liked a quiet joke too. All the people loved her and as Mr. Symons chatted to a Telescope representative about those early times, he remarked: "She was a noble woman."

The Queen and her daughters were foremost in charitable work and whenever a charity bazaar was given—they always contributed no end of fan[illegible] work from their own hands which [illegible] brought a big price on [illegible] made by royalty. When [illegible] ball was given at the Castle, the [illegible]ntry were invited and Mr. Symons [illegible] dancing in the big ball-room on occasion of the Princess Royal's

(Continued on Page 3)

160th Batt'n's New O.C.

LIEUT.-COL. SUTHERLAND

(Reproduced by courtesy of Woodstock Sentinel-Review.)

Lt.-Col. Donald Sutherland of Woodstock, whose appointment to the command of the 160th Bruce Batt'n was noted in last week's Telescope, will be remembered by many Walkertonians from his visit to this town on the occasion of the military celebration on Fall Fair Day 1915 when he was one of the principal speakers, but he is best known to the people of Bruce as commanding officer of the 71st Batt'n with which unit many of our boys went to England. Col. Sutherland is of Scotch-Canadian ancestry having been born in Zora about forty years ago. He graduated in Medicine at the University of Toronto in 1903, and before the war practised in the village of Norwich. This will mean Col. Sutherland's third trip to France. He was with the first Battalion, first [illegible] Contingent, and after being [illegible] at Ypres returned home. He [illegible] a second time to France and was again wounded. A few months ago, having recovered from his injuries, he left his home in Norwich for England, only a few of his most intimate friends being aware of his departure.

To Keep Eggs Fresh Pack Them In WATER GLASS

A 15c tin is sufficient to keep 12 dozen eggs perfectly fresh for one year. Also in double size tins at 25c.

Hunter's Drug Store

Drugs and Kodaks Phone 33 C. P. R. Ticket Agency

THE REXALL STORE

To Every Purchaser of $1 Worth of Goods in our Store on SATURDAY, JUNE 9TH., we will give FREE, a 25c box of Nature's Remedy Tablets.

A. P. Sieveright

[illegible]ugs - Kodaks

WALL PAPERS OF QUALITY

The newest effects and a wonderful assortment for the Parlor, Living Room, Dining Room, Hall, Bed Room, Kitchen, at very reasonable prices.

McCrum's

A Harvard Brown Vici Kid Princess Shoe

Made with 7in Champagne Cloth top, and new heel. One of the latest styles for Spring and Summer.

Price $7.00

Ramsey The Shoeman

SETTING FIRE TO BARNS

Is the Charge Against Elderly Carrick Woman Who Shows Signs of Insanity According to the Neighbors' Testimony

Mrs. Carolina Miller, an eccentric old lady, charged with setting fire to Jos. Filsinger's big barn which was burned to the ground on May 6th, appeared before Magistrate James Tolton on Tuesday afternoon and was sent up for trial. She was brought before Judge Greig the following morning and elected to be tried by the judge. Date of trial was fixed for Friday, June 8th. Mrs. Miller will also be tried on a charge of setting fire to John Renwick's barn which was burned down on May 7th.

Mrs Miller, who lives near the Filsingers on Con 4, Carrick, wakened up the family the night their barn was burning, saying she could not bear to see the live stock burn. She acted peculiarly at the time and was accused a few days afterwards of being the incendiary. She then told a neighbor that she would burn her own house with her husband and herself in it rather than get caught. While visiting another neighbor's barn, she remarked in a joking way: Wouldn't this be a good spot to set fire to the barn. It is altogether probable that Mrs. Miller will be examined for her sanity.

The charges were laid in court here at the suggestion of the Provincial Fire Marshall, who had a detective several weeks ago in Carrick investigating the cause of the fires.

HE DIED OF WOUNDS

Popular Walkerton Lad, Effie Reichenbach, Paid the Price for Freedom on the Battlefield In France.

Walkerton people learned with deep regret on Thursday that Ethelred (Effie) Reichenbach, probably the youngest soldier that has ever left this town, had laid down his life on the battlefields of France. Effie was raised by his aunt, Mrs John Wingfelder since he was a mere babe and he went to school in town almost up to the time of his enlistment with the 34th Batt. in 1915. When he signed up he actually lacked a few months of being seventeen years old. Effie was a lively good-natured youngster and a favorite with everybody. In September of last year he was badly shell-shocked when an exploding shell buried him and some companions. His uncle, Sergt. Brown, who saw him shortly afterwards wrote home that he was a nervous wreck as a result of this terrible experience. Effie soon got back on the firing line again however, and was again wounded about April 22nd. As the telegram announcing his death in action was sent to his father, Joseph Reichenbach, whose address was Victoria B. C. but is now away on active service, particulars are still lacking here, but his uncle, Mr. John Reichenbach, has telegraphed to Ottawa for information.

NEWS ABOUT TOWN

Local news on every page.

Pte. D. Kelleher of Port Elgin was reported wounded in Saturday's list.

Young lady wanted for steady position. Apply at Telescope.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Mullen took in the sports at Mildmay on Monday.

Miss May Poole left on Saturday to visit friends in Guelph, Hespeler and Goderich.

Mrs. James Smith and two children of London are visiting her mother, Mrs. Hugh Fraser.

Tickets and plan of the Philharmonic Society Concert will be at McCrum's after Tuesday, 5th.

Mrs. J. Wells and her father-in-law returned to their home in Toronto after a month's visit with the former's parents Mr. and Mrs. H. Watts.

Show your interest in the boys in the trenches by coming to the Philharmonic Society Concert on June 12th under the auspices of the Soldiers Aid Society.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Weiss, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. F. Scholtz, motored to Wiarton on Saturday and spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Scholtz sr.

Mr. Robert Ritchie, Mrs. Edwin Ritchie and little son Harold, and her father, Mr. David Pinkerton of Essex, left on Thursday for their homes in Saskatchewan.

Sergt. D. G. Ross of Kincardine, who was mentioned in despatches by Sir Douglas Haig trained with the 160th Batt'n but on reaching England, got a transfer to the 18th Batt'n in France.

Local news on every page.

Mrs. Kilmer returned to Toronto last Wednesday.

Latest styles in wedding stationery at the Telescope.

Mrs. T. O. Scott of Hamilton is the guest of Miss Shaw.

Highest prices paid for wool. Cash [illegible] S. A. Rife & Co.

Chas. Van Hatten left this week for Oshawa to take a position in a munitions factory.

Mrs Lamont of Brussels is visiting her son, Mr. A. D. Lamont of the High School staff.

Get in touch with the granite and nickel ware sale on at Pattersons Bros. this week. Watch window display.

Our new serial, "Inside the Lines," a stirring war story by Earl Derr Biggers, starts in next week's Telescope.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Rogers are in Kingston attending the wedding of their son, Mr. James Rogers of Preston.

If you are going away for a visit or have visitors at your home let the Telescope know. Phone 48 day, 146 nights.

Watch for the opening chapters of our new serial, "Inside the Lines," by Earl Derr Biggers, in next week's Telescope.

Quite a number of young people from town attended the Patriotic dance at Cargill on Monday night. All report an enjoyable time.

The masons have half finished the brick work on Mr. John Bilger's new two storey red brick residence at the head of Gibson St.

Rev. Father A. J. Fischer, parish priest of Kitchener, motored up Saturday on a visit to his old home at Chepstow, and called on some friends in town.

Mrs. Joseph Black and little daughters, Sarah and Mary, spent a few days this week with Mrs. Black's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Halladay of Greenock.

Thos. Redford, a former Walkerton citizen, has sold his farm east of Elmwood in Bentinck to his son, Henry, and is removing to Allan Park where he has bought a residence.

Mr. Jos. L. Kroetch leaves on Monday for his home at Regina, Sask. stopping off at Toronto to spend a few days with his brother, Ed., who is manager of Jas. Applegath's big hat store on Yonge St.

Mr. A. H. Stevens, local agent for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. of New York, received a letter from his district manager last week warmly congratulating him for his good record for the month of April. Out of 56 agents in three districts of West Ontario, Mr. Stevens came no. 2 in the amount of ordinary business written.

Injured His Foot

Prin. Morgan had the misfortune to injure his foot on Monday by a box which he was standing upon in the cellar collapsing. He was able to resume his duties yesterday.

For Play Time

As well as for business you will find the same comfort, the same easy swing, and that snappiness of style in

Our Tailored Clothes

They retain their shape no matter how hard the service you give them. Come in and get a suit before your summer vacation.

Men's Furnishings

If you are particular about your collars, shirts, neckwear, underwear, sox, hats, caps, etc., come in and make selections here.

G. T. ROURKE

Quality Tailor and Men's Wear.

Phone 186, Walkerton, Ont.

CONTENTS

Of This Week's Telescope

1—News About Town.

2—Editorial.
War Pictures.

3—Separate School Report.
Telescope Western Letter.
Public School Report.

4—Local News.
Will Hold Inquest.
The Telescope Announces "Home Print"

5—Country Correspondence.

6—Women's Presbyterial.
Hints on Gardening.

7—Town and District News.
War Pictures.

8—Local News.

Break in Dam

The Saugeen Power Co. has sustained a heavy loss through a break in the big dam at Southampton.

Bread Back to 10c.

The local bakers dropped the price of bread from 12 to 10 cents on Monday after one week at the higher figure.

Joins the Artillery

Mr. John Bickle, nephew of Messrs H. A. and C. S. Stephan, left Monday morning for Cobourg to enlist in the Battery.

Sold Farm At Eden Grove

Mr. Jos. Lippert has sold the Burns farm of 98 acres at Eden Grove, to Senator Donnelly who will use it as a grass farm.

Paris Green Scarce

Buy your paris green before the season opens, as there is a scarcity and may be hard to get when you need it. Sold at Patterson Bros. Hardware.

Card Of Thanks

Mr. J. L. Kroetch and Mrs. Peter La France wish to thank their kind neighbours and friends for their aid and kind sympathy in the loss of their loving wife and daughter, Mrs. J. L. Kroetch (nee Pauline La France).

Wedding At New York

Miss Afra Schumacher daughter of Mr and Mrs J. J. Schumacher, left on Monday for New York, where she is to be married on morning, June 10, in in St Joseph's Church to Mr. Edward F. Peters son of Mr and Mrs. Frank Peters of New York City.

Young Folks Gone

Between our young men enlisting for Overseas and young girls leaving town to work in munition factories, Walkerton is nearly denuded of young people. According to the Assessor's figures there are only 75 persons of either sex between the ages of 16 and 21 years left. Pretty slim for a town of nearly three thousand!

Appeals Against Assessment

Only four small appeals were registered at Court of Revision against Assessor J. A. McGill's roll. Bank of Commerce appealed against its business assessment which the Court reduced by $800. The Curling Club appealed against a business of $250, which was struck off. Principal Morgan's income assessment was cut down by $200. Jos. Sutter appealed against the $500 rating on his house, but the Court could not see it that way.

Vogan—South

A quiet wedding took place at the home of Mr. J. W. South, at High Noon, Wednesday, June 6th, when his daughter, Miss Fanny Elizabeth, was united in marriage to Mr. Samuel Wilfred Vogan, of Walkerton. Both were unattended. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Thos. Wilson, the immediate relatives only being present. They left on the afternoon train for Montreal and Ottawa. On their return they will reside in Mr. Attwood's house on Colborne St. The Telescope joins with their host of friends in extending every best wish to Mr. and Mrs. Vogan.

Popular Officers.

A young Walkerton soldier of the 160th writes his parents, under date of May 19th:—Col. Weir has been transferred to our Reserve Batt'n and all they had against him was his age and we are very sorry to see him go. He kept his word that he would look after us and he did as far as he could go. We expect Major Moffat to be made Colonel and we hope he gets it. He sure deserves it. Did you know that he turned down a high command in the American Army in order to stay with us, and the boys will do anything at all for him. Our battalion holds the record of the British Army for fast work with trench mortars, also we hold the record for shipping and putting together machine guns blindfolded in 30 seconds."

HOME MISSIONS SHOULD

Be More "Homey" says Talented Lady Speaker—Christian People Should have Right Personal Feeling Towards Foreigners Coming in.

The Thirtieth Annual Meeting of the Walkerton Association is being held here this week with between sixty and seventy delegates in attendance.

The session opened with the Ladies' Meeting on Tuesday night. In the absence of the president and vice-president, Mrs. (Rev.) G. C. Rock took the chair and made a very capable presiding officer. On behalf of the Walkerton Mission Circle and Band she extended a hearty welcome to the delegates. More earnest prayer for peace was one of the thoughts presented in her brief address. Mrs. Norman Robertson presented greetings on behalf of Knox W. M. S. and Mrs. Eedy on behalf of the Methodist W. M. S.

The delegates enjoyed an inspiring talk by Miss Ellis B. A., the gifted principal of Moulton College, who spoke on Home Missions emphasizing our personal relation to the incoming foreigners. Home Missions should be more homey, she said. It was a distinctly personal matter with each one of us. Speaking of education, Miss Ellis expressed the belief that as education without religion had proven a failure, the work of our deonominational colleges will receive a new impetus.

Rev. A. B. Reekie, returned missionary from Bolivia, gave an interesting account of the work in South America, pointing out that there was a good opening there for nurses in the mission work.

A specially good feature of the meetings is the excellent musical program. Mrs. C. S. Stephan and Mr. A. S. Royce both sang at this service.

The General Session opened on Wednesday morning. The pastor, Rev. G. C. Rock, had charge of the devotional exercises and extended words of welcome to the delegates, Rev T. E. Meldrum responding.

Some of the Church's most able speakers are present. Addresses that should prove specially good are:—Rev. [illegible] McLean of Toronto, on "Western Missions," and Prof. Matthews of McMaster University, on "The War and After," Wednesday evening, and Prof. Matthews' Educational address at the Thursday evening session.

A report of the Convention will be published in next week's Telescope.

Mr. Sebastian Kirstine, South Line, brought home a new Chevrolet car from Oshawa this week.

Inspector John McCool preached at the Methodist Church on Sunday morning and gave a thoughtful discourse based on Paul's life experience. In the absence of Rev. C. Cosens who was attending Conference at Brantford, a joint service of Evangelical and Methodist congregations were held in the church at night. Rev. J. H. Grenzenbach delivered an inspiring message from the text:—"God So Loved the World".

Killed at Vimy

Word has been received of the death of Pte. Geo. Hayes. He was killed at Vimy Ridge. His mother lives in Kinloss. Pte. Hayes enlisted in the west. He has a brother in the 160th Bruce Battalion now in England.

Mechanics Wanted

Wanted immediately, cabinet makers, for chair work, also machine hands sanders, finishers, and upholsterers. Highest wages paid. Apply at once. The Elmira Furniture Co. Ltd. Elmira, Ont. 23—25.

Agents Wanted

Returned Soldier Preferred—We want a representative to call on farmers in the County of Bruce in the interest of the best known agricultural weekly in Canada. Permanent position to right man and good income guaranteed. Preference will be given to a returned soldier. A motorcycle or bicycle would be an advantage. Write for full particulars to Manager The Canadian Countryman Publishing Co., 14 McCaul St., Toronto.

'Twas a Dandy

Any local fisherman who may be getting ready to spring yarns about the biggest ever etc can just spare themselves the trouble because Albert Miller can tell one which has the virtue of being true and will certainly knock the spots out of any local yarns taken from fact or fiction this season. Albert's fish was a rainbow trout. He caught it in the tail-race of Truax's dam on Tuesday afternoon. It was 28 inches long and weighed 7½ lbs. Rainbow trout which are very scarce around here seldom exceed 14 inches in length.

WALKERTON TELESCOPE
Published Every Thursday
LORNE A. EEDY - PUBLISHER

Phone No. - 48
Phone No. (Nights) 146

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

Strictly in Advance $1.50
If not paid in Advance $2.00
United States, paid in advance..$2.00
(50c for Postage)
Great Britain, paid in advance..$1.50
France, paid in advance........$2.50
($1.00 for Postage)
50c additional if not paid in advance

WALKERTON, JUNE 7th, 1917

EDITORIAL COMMENT

BREAD is getting dirt cheap again. In Toronto last week the price came away down to 11 cents. P. S.—We used to get this same loaf for 5 cents.

+ + +

ARMAND Lavergne delivered another of his fiery speeches in Quebec on Sunday. He is apparently quite at liberty to say what he wishes, while in this country a farmer was pulled into court because he referred to a soldier as a bum. Is Quebec in Canada or out of it?—Guelph Mercury.

+ + +

THOSE merchants who complain bitterly of the competition of the Department Stores are the very ones who overlook the fact that they themselves can win success by taking a leaf out of the Catalogue House's book. Up to-date merchandizing and live aggressive advertising made the department store what it is to-day. The local merchant can meet its competition successfully by applying the same principles to his local field. Live merchants in hundreds of rural communities are proving it to-day.

• • •

PREACHERS are wrongfully blamed for putting their congergations to sleep of a Sunday morning. Nine times out of ten it is stuffy air that does it. It is unfair to the ministers as it is to the congfegregation to keep all the windows hermetically sealed as they appear to be in a good many town churches. There must be an element of truth in the whimsical statement of a Chicago editor that more people are sent to Heaven by ill ventilation in churches than by the average sermon. Open the windows and let us have some of God's fresh air!.

+ + +

THE campaigns that are being put on in various centres for the raising of Y. M. C. A. war funds are meeting with unusual success. It is safe to say that the war has established the Y. M. C. A. on a basis such as it never enjoyed before. It has followed the thousands of Canadian boys right to the firing line, and it has made them see that it was their own good it was catering to. The institution will reap the reward when our soldiers return for they will view the work from a new angle to what many of them did prior to their enlistment.

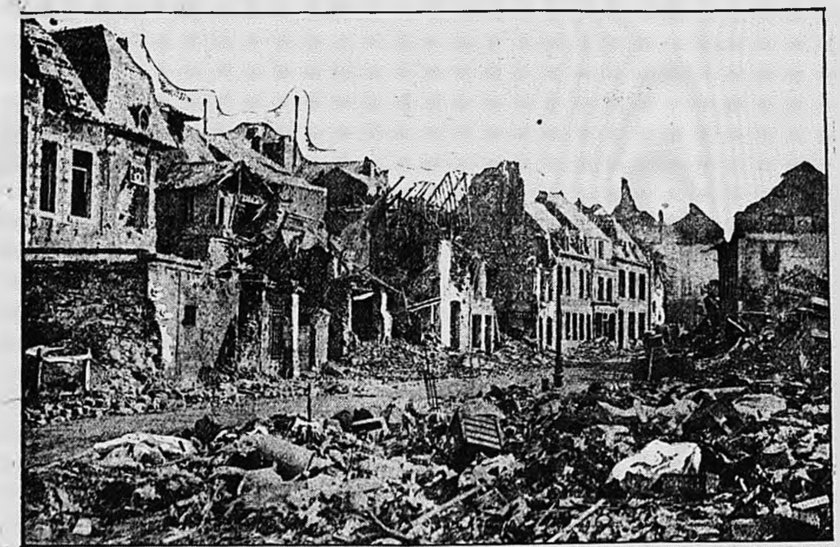
+ + +

AN exchange says home retail merchants can do much to curtail the inroads of the departmentals upon their legitimate business. So can the local newspapers if the retail merchants study their interests by using the newspapers. In a nearby town, where the local business men fell down in doing their part, a city departmental reorganizing the value of the newspaper in its district has contracted for a page advertisement for a year. To have kept that page for themselves meant but a small cost as compared with that which the weekly appearance of the announcement of the outside firm will mean to their business.

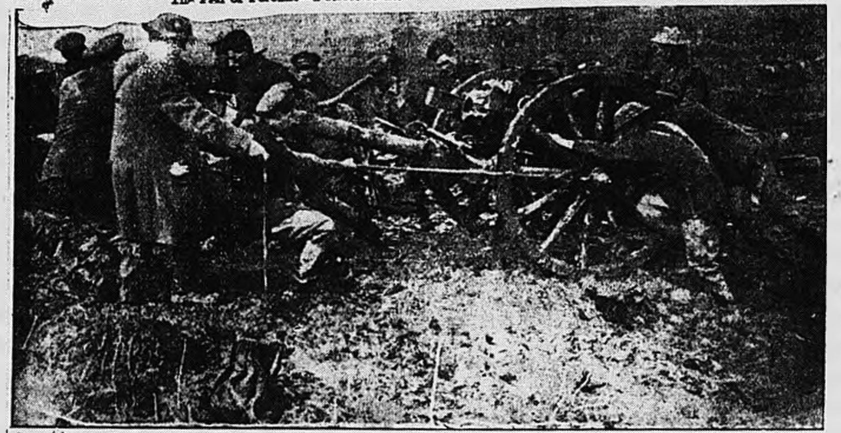
+ + +

SKIDDADLING to the United States for men between eighteen and forty-five years of age is now a more difficult matter than heretofore. The Government has put a ban on it and stringent regulations have been enacted. In addition to his ticket, the good offices of a photographer, an immigration inspector, four reputable citizens as references, a Justice of the Peace or Commissioner of Oaths, a bank manager, and either a Chief of Police, clergyman or Government officer are necessary. Ticket agents and Postmasters can provide the intending traveller with forms of applications for permits. The traveller, in filling the form, has to give his name and address, where born, his age, whether British by birth or naturalization, how long he has been at his present residence, his destination in the United States, the purpose of his journey, the time he expects to be absent, his height, weight, color of his hair and eyes, and his occupation. He has to affix a small photograph of himself to both the form of application and the form of travelling certificate. He has to swear before an authorized oath-taker to the correctness of his statements. His application has to be signed by himself and a bank manager, and also by either a Chief of Police, clergyman or Government officer. When the certificate is secured the traveller must keep it about him and produce it when called for.

EUROPEAN WAR PICTURES



The Fall of Peronne—a street scene. —Photo by courtesy of C. P. R.



The Recent British advance on the Western Front—our ever-moving Artillery—setting a Field Gun in position. —Photo by courtesy of C. P. R.

Did You Know?

Here are some striking facts about Canada. The following figures should make every Canadian from coast to coast feel a thrill of pride, as well as a sense of the true proportions and prosperity which the country has attained:

+ + +

Canada has the largest and richest nickel mines in the world.

+ + +

Canada's grain crop yield, 1916, 808,054,000 bushels.

+ + +

Canada's dairy production last year, $29,673,977, chiefly cheese. Increase of $6,721,417 in a year.

+ + +

Canada's exports to Great Britain nearly trebled in first two years of the war.

+ + +

Canada's enlistments up to November, 1916, 371,596.

+ + +

Canada has now 13,348 post-offices.

+ + +

Canada's estimated water power, contiguous to population centres, 17,750,000 horse-power. Only 1,713,000 h. p. developed.

+ + +

Canada has 3,059 grain elevators, 1,224 stations and 19 warehouses. Capacity, 180,988,000 bushels.

+ + +

Canada's net registered vessel tonnage, 27,972,660. Ranks tenth among Maritime Nations.

+ + +

Area sown to field crops, 1916, 24,510,070 acres.

+ + +

Canada has 2,990,525 horses, cattle, sheep and swine.

+ + +

Canada is as large as 30 United Kingdoms and 18 Germanies; twice the size of British India; almost as large as Europe.

+ + +

Canada is larger in area than the United States, including Alaska, by 111,992 square miles (Canada, 3,729,665; United States and Alaska, 3,617,673).

+ + +

Population—Rural, 3,925,562; urban, 3,451,141. Three-fourths of Canada's population is British born. Canada's 10-year population increase 34%; United States' 21%.

Fads and Fashions

Light camel's hair color is in favor.

+ + +

Many of the day frocks are very short.

+ + +

Scarf sashes show a Spanish influence.

+ + +

Satin and linen is a novel combination.

+ + +

A new wool material is called sackcloth.

+ + +

All-over lace is used for dainty neckwear.

+ + +

As dress collars become tiny, coat collars become large.

+ + +

Even bathing suits have girdles of contrasting color.

+ + +

There are very dainty collars and cuffs of colored linen.

+ + +

Very bold embroidery is used on cotton frocks this year.

+ + +

There are few allwhite collars used on the newest frocks.

+ + +

The newest girdle is of metal; it is in the form of a chain.

+ + +

Lovely rosaries are made of jade and amber beads combined.

+ + +

The open neck is more favored than high collars.

+ + +

A delft blue sackcloth is trimmed with beige tan kid.

+ + +

The two-toned hat is much smarter than the hat of one color.

+ + +

Icicles of crystal beads drip from the waists of black satin gowns.

+ + +

Dyed Irish lace is a most bewitching trimming for a gown.

+ + +

A blue-green is a favorite color for the new models of motor coats.

+ + +

A cherry-red straw hat braided with chenille in self color is very smart.

+ + +

Buttons and buttonholes that are never used trim the new coats.

+ + +

Buttonholes bound with a contrasting color are a fashion feature.

Blue stitchery is frequently the only ornament on black taffeta suits.

+ + +

Odd vests sometimes provide all the interest for a very simple costume.

+ + +

The tailored hat answers for so many occasions that it is indispensable.

+ + +

Linen and serge in the new corn yellow shade is a fascinating arrangement.

+ + +

Attention to details means a great deal to the smartly gowned woman of to-day.

+ + +

The smock has about disappeared and in its place we have the slip-on blouse.

+ + +

Jumper coats are made entirely without fastenings and slipped on over the head.

+ + +

Bright colored kid bands are used as an attractive trimming on some spring coats.

+ + +

Some white linen collars are embroidered with rose silk and finished with rose cords and tassels.

+ + +

Tops of frocks may be made of any soft material, while the lower parts are of serge, satin or tussore.

+ + +

Exquisite bead pendants and neck ribbons are made by the French soldiers and worn with afternoon dresses.

+ + +

A new idea in neckwear is to have the edges of the collars and cuffs bound with a bright-colored checked material.

+ + +

Close-fitting bodices cut square at the neck with a pleated and panelled skirt of chiffon give a very pleasant Dutch effect.

+ + +

Colored beads of all sorts—wooden, porcelain and composition—are revived for the rosary-fashioned chains now worn with one-piece frocks.

+ + +

Waistcoats promise to be extremely fashionable and to many of them collars are attached. For these waistcoats various materials are employed, the list including silk, cloth pique, linen or cretonne.

Timely Helps for the Housewife

The waxed paper drinking cups can be used for gelatine molds.

+ + +

All fruit salads should be thoroughly chilled before serving.

+ + +

Before cooking rice, grease the pan and the rice will not stick.

+ + +

Any form of brown bread, pretty nearly, is preferable to white bread.

+ + +

To banish roaches, use equal parts of plaster of paris and powdered sugar.

+ + +

If you keep chickens in a small run, be sure to give them plenty of green food.

+ + +

Pour a little vinegar over fresh fish before boiling it and it is not as likely to break.

+ + +

Always set the dining table long before starting the real preparations for cooking dinner.

+ + +

Let potatoes lie in cold water for a little while before paring if you wish them to be white.

+ + +

Grease the cup in which you measure molasses and every drop of molasses will come out.

+ + +

Every bathroom should have a clock in it as a gentle reminder to each occupant not to waste time.

+ + +

Sprinkle a little flour in the hot fat before frying with it and it will not be nearly so likely to spatter.

+ + +

When cooking asparagus cook a little more than is needed and put it in the ice box for a future salad.

+ + +

Syrup from spiced fruit can be used for basting meats. This will give the meat a new and interesting flavor.

+ + +

A clean and satisfactory method of mending broken china is said to be to melt lump alum and use while hot.

+ + +

Put cranberries through the meat-chopper before cooking them and they will not require straining afterward.

DENTAL

W. S. HALLADAY, L. D. S. D. D. S.
Dentist, Successor to Dr. Coram. Modern methods employed in all dental operations. Special attention to crown, bridge and inlay work. Three doors east of post office. Visits Ca gill 1st and 3rd Thursday afternoon each month.

C.L. GRANT, D.D.S.,L.D.
Graduate of Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario.
Dr. Lount's old stand.
Wisser Block - Walkerto

MEDICAL

DR. BROWN
Diseases of the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat, Neustadt, Ont. Will be at the Queen's Hotel, Walkerton, 1st Friday in each month from 2 to 6 p.m.

W. A. HALL, B.A., M.D., C.M.
Honor Graduate in Arts and Medicine at Queen's University. Member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons. Office and residence on corner of Colborne and Capley Streets.

INSURANCE &
REAL ESTATE

Fire, Life, Accident & Health, Plate Glass, and Guarantee Insurance in the best of Companies.

Real Estate—Several desirable residential properties for sale.

Money to Loan, Conveyancing and General Agency. Splendid Mortgage Loan Company Debentures for investment yielding good interest.

GEO. D. McKAY
Office Over Bell Telephone Agency
PHONE NO. - 179

INSURANC
FIRE, LIFE,
ACCIDENT,
AUTOMOBILE,
GUARANTEE.
MONEY to LOAN
REAL ESTATE
Town and Farm Property for
See my list before making a purch

OCEAN and RAI
TICKETS TO ANY PART
THE WORLD.
I represent the Canadian Nor Railway and all ocean stean companies — English, American Italian.
ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICEN
T. E. ATTWOOD
GENERAL AGENT
Walkerton - Onta

HOMESEEKER
EXCURSION

MAY 8th TO OCTOBER
Every
TUESDA
"ALL RAIL" - also by
THURSDAY'S STEAM
"Great Lakes Routes"
Your Future is in the Canadian Pacif
W. B. Howard, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, Ont.

Office
Stationery
For nice Stationery printed from new type at moderate prices. Try the
TELESCOPE

FIELD SEEDS

Our supply of Field Corn has just arrived. We have different varieties and the seed is excellent.

We also have a good supply of Turnip and Mangle Seed.

Don't forget we are selling Paint at 65c per quart.

S. W. Vogan

CANADIAN PACIFIC

Great Lakes Steamship Service
via Owen Sound
STEAMSHIP "MANITOBA"
leaves Owen Sound at midnight each THURSDAY (connecting train leaves Toronto 5.25 p. m.) for Sault Ste Marie, Port Arthur and Fort William.
SERVICE via PORT McNICOLL COMMENCES JUNE 2.

Plan Your Vacation Trip Now
POINT AU BARIL
MUSKOKA LAKES
KAWARTHA LAKES
LAKE MAZINAW
FRENCH and PICKEREL RIVERS
RIDEAU LAKES
SEVERN RIVER
are delightful resorts and easily reached via C. P. R.

For WINNIPEG and VANCOUVER
Leave Toronto 6.40 P. M. Daily via 'The Pioneer Route'

Particulars from Canadian Pacific Ticket Agents or
W. B. HOWARD, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, Ontario.

JUNE BRIDES

Will find the kind of Wedding Invitations and Announcements they are looking for in the Telescope Sample Book. New and up-to-date styles printed from new types.

.. THE ..
TELESCOPE

PUBLIC SCHOOL REPORT

Standing of the Pupils at Walkerton P. S. for the Month of May

GRADE VII.

Sr. IV.—Honours—V. Bush, G. Miller, G. McCarter.

Pass—E. Cryderman, G. Thompson, M. Royce, E. Bell, L. Johnston, W. George, V. Sieling.

Jr. IV.—Honours—B. Hunter, M. Bell, M. Godwin, E. Searle, M. McGregor, H. Wilson, M. Petteplace, F. Crawford, A. Reichenbach.

Pass—J. Ermel, C. Johnston, M. Lumley, K. Sutton, V. Anderson, C. Kerney.

H. Willoughby,
Principal.

GRADE VI.

Srs.—Honours—Irene Harrison, Eric Ramsey, Alma Searle, Jack Knepflar, Elmer Kolpin.

Pass—Mary Perdue, Dorothy Truax, Gladys Sutton, Edwin Faust, Earl Forsythe, Eddie Fennell.

Jrs. — Honours — Frances Nutting, Guy Ramsey.

Pass—Clifford Yates, Marie Schwindt Howard Craig, Norman Webb.

J. Stead.

GRADE V.

Sr.—Honours—Ila Moore, Waldon Forsythe, Morris McCarter, Franklin Bush.

Sr.—Pass—Jack Van Horne, Jack McConnell, Grace George, Charlie Wallace, Ethel Riley, Kathleen Perdue, Vinnie Dennie, Harry Myles.

Jr. — Pass — Arthur Royce, Willie Goode, Eldon Yates, Wallace Jerrome.

M. Ross.

GRADE IV.

Honours—W. Hehn, R. Hampson, J. Cotterman, R. Gowanlock, E. Webber, W. Hartman.

Pass—E. Singer, N. Forsythe, N. McCartney, D. Gowanlock, G. Dietsche, W. Hunt, R. Johnston, A. Reichenbach, H. Paull.

A. Warren.

GRADE III.

Jr. II.—Honours—K. Perdue, H. Moore, J. Hiscox, A. Buchlow.

Pass—E. Truax, S. Hehn, J. Webber, L. Mortimer, K. Fortune, V. Bolden, A. Beck, G. Thompson, E. Abel.

Sr. I.—Honours — R. Hunter, M. Shaw, E. Dietsche, V. Bell, M. Appel. Pass—H. Bush, L. Searle, H. George, M. Player, H. Ernest, S. Channing, N. Hanna, S Fennell.

A. Halladay,
Teacher.

GRADE II.

First Book—Honours—M. Beemer, E. Taylor, D. Lancaster, M. Jones, A. Kerney, M. Faust.

Pass—J. Godwin, M. Hunt, A. Craig, P. Webb, P. McConnell, E. Watts, A. Reichenbach, S. Anderson.

Primer—Honours— F. Hartman, G. Bilker.

Pass—F. McCarter, M. Graham, H. Royce, C. Buchlow, G. McGregor.

W. Thompson,
Teacher.

GRADE I.

Sr. Primer—Donovan Hynes, Mildred Silver, Dorothy Ernest, Girda Bowlby, Percy Nutting, Marjorie Bell, Hubert Dietz, Lola Hanna, Arthur Whitehead, Lennox Winters, Paul George, Henry Taylor, Milton Ramsey, Ernest Nutting, Helen Richenbach.

Mid Primer—Florence Leeson, Beverley Trimble, Franklin Spieran, Clayton Riehl, Dorothy Webb, Dorothy Trimble, Eldon Knepflar, Wilbur Hampton.

Jr. Primer—Earl Ferguson, Violet Gibson, Dorothy Leake, Gladys Gibson, Reuben Truax, Violet Bannister.

A. D. Thompson,
Teacher.

Profitable Amusement

First Bachelor Girl—It's an outrage! I was singing just now when this slipper flew in through the window.

Second Ditto—Sing another verse, dear, and perhaps you'll get the mate to it.

+ + +

THE SONS OF INDIA

India, in common with the rest of the British Empire, has yielded her sons "to the drum-beats of duty, the sabres of doom."

Gathered like pearls in their alien graves,
Silent they sleep by the Persian waves.
Scattered like shells on Egyptian sands,
They lie with pale brows and brave broken hands,
They are strewn like blossoms mown down by chance
On the blood-brown meadows of Flanders and France.

+ + +

ANOTHER WOMAN

The colonel believed in soldiers being bachelors, so he usually refused his men permission to marry.

One applicant turned away looking so downcast that even the officer's stern heart was touched.

"Look here, my man," he said, "come to me again in a year's time, and if you still want to be married, I'll give my consent."

The year passed.

Again the private applied; the colonel was quite taken aback.

"Well, well, I really must give you permission," he smiled. "I never expected to find such constancy in either man or woman."

The private saluted.

"Thank you, sir," he said gratefully; "but, please, sir, it ain't the same woman."

OUR WESTERN LETTER

Written for the Telescope By an Old Bruce Boy.

The month of May introduced itself here with a very heavy snow storm lasting some thirty hours. We then got two weeks of beautiful warm Spring weather ending in a heavy thunder storm which turned into another thirty hours snow storm. Since then the weather has been wet and unsettled which has kept back seeding. A fair amount of seed is in the ground but the amount is away behind the usual acrage for this time. A good many farmers figure on putting a lot of their land in oats to cut for hay as it will be too late for grain. This is the 20th of May and the month is trying to end as it began with a snow storm.

We had quite a frost last night enough to put a skin of ice on the horse trough and over the puddles.

I met a man last week who is just up from Southern Alberta. He tells me that lots of farmers there are this year sowing right on the stubble and let it go at that.

Apparently the elegible Thomas Cats have left these parts and either gone Overseas with the Thomas Atkins or to the U.S.A. to be conscipted. At any rate we hear our Tabbies nightly singing—"Where is my wandering boy to-night?"—but the answering—"Come into the garden, Maud"—is never heard.

We are having an ocular demonstration of the difference in creamery management. A creamery north of us closed some 4 or 5 years ago for lack of patronage, and the creamery near us was going back every year. The owner ran it on the principle—"Give as little for the cream as possible and do your patrons when a chance offers." The first two years he had six teams collecting cream, besides a lot of individual patrons who delivered direct. His patronage gradually fell off until last year he hardly got enough to dirty his churn. The new proprietors were up against a hard proposition as lots of farmers had quit milking and let their calves suck. They are however getting things going, being satisfied with the overrun for profit. Their price for cream is high already, they are making as much butter in a week as the other man made last year in a month. So satisfied are they with results that they are now opening the creamery which has been closed north of here. Hardly any butter goes to the stores for trade as it is now pays better to take cream to the creamery.

What is "one man's food is another man's poison" is an old saying. What is an innocent amusement to some people is a deadly sin to others, some people look on dancing as an invention of the devil, others consider it a harmless pastime. The minister's wife who has a large family of marriageable daughters, none of whom are married or engaged to be, was speaking to a farmer's wife who has also 4 daughters [illegible] married and others soon to be. "How is it," she asked "that your daughters and so many of the girls around here are either married or going to be soon, while my girls who are just as attractive in every way have never as far as I know even had an offer."

"Well" replied Mrs. Farmer "there are lots of balls and parties given by and for the young people, but you never let your girls attend. If you would let them go to a few of the balls I believe they would soon be on the road to matrimony." "No thank you" replied the ministeress with dignity "If I cannot get my girls husbands without balls they can remain unmarried."

From the spring thaw and continuous rains the roads here are in a fearful mess. When the deep snow went, culverts were washed away and roads badly cut up. As a Provincial election is now on, the road gangs are being worked when the population is denser and more votes can be swung. I have hogs that should have gone to market six weeks ago but I cannot get them over the roads and the Lord only knows when I will get them out.

TO GET RID OF CROWS

Mr. G. N. Payne of Victoria County, Ont. vouches for the following plan of getting rid of crows:—

"As the time is near for corn planting, farmers will be trying out different ways of baffling crows. I have used poisoned eggs for the last six years, and am satisfied that I have not lost six hills of corn in that time. About six eggs are enough for a large field. It is not necessary that they be fresh. I put a small hole in one end with a penknife and then work in what strychnine I can lift on a pen point. I place the egg hole end up in the part of the field that the crows are most likely to frequent. It is just as efficient for any kind of crop as it is for corn, for there is nothing that crows are as fond of as eggs.

We were troubled for some years with cotton-tail rabbits, and we tried the strychnine on pieces of sweet apples. It never missed. Just as sure as we put the apples out at night we found the rabbits dead in the morning.

Don't think you have to poison all the crows. If one gets it that will suffice, no more will light on the field. Two years ago we would have lost five acres of peas if it had not been for the poisoned eggs."

+ + +

Those sending parcels to men overseas would do well to pay attention to the postage they are told is necessary. The local post-office clerks cannot, at least, do not, watch every parcel to see whether or not it is for France or England, and frequently one pays excess postage— which soon counts up when one is sending many parcels.

The Society Editress Please Note

Blind "Pete" Decker, city editor of the once-a-week "Nugget City Night-owl," was giving instructions to his cub reporter on the subject of weddings.

"Keep 'em short," was his advice, "and remember you-all have five points to remember when you-all are reportin' on a weddin'. Who her is and who he is, who done it and what it was done and what they eta afterward."

THE WIFE OF ALL WORK

A British matron—one of those numerous, perplexed, and harassed mothers who daily threaten their swarm of little ones that they will "run away and leave them," but who never do, thus pours out her complaint:—

"I never dreamed of such a fate
When I, a lass, was courted—
Wife, mother, nurse, seamstress, cook, housekeeper, chambermaid, laundress, and [illegible] generally, doing the work of eight,
For the sake of being—supported!"

FOR KING AND COUNTRY

PTE. "EFFIE" REICHENBACH

Gallant young nephew of Mr. John Wingefelder who died of wounds in France, aged 18 years.

SEPARATE SCHOOL REPORT

Honor Roll of Pupils in the Various Forms for the Month of May

ROOM IV.

Senior IV.—Kathleen Oberle, Cecilia Cunio, Margaret Yack, Mary Gillen, Madeleine Weiler, Clement Wilhelm, Melvin Schmidt, George Lettner, Harold Walker, Robert Wilhelm, Margaret McCurdy, Wilbert Weiler, Frances Ernst, Thomas Monahan, Leonard Kelly, Rose McGarity.

Jun. IV.—Louisa Lippert, Rita Weiss, Florence Obrecht, Melinda Schumacher, Arthur Schefter, Lizzie O'Connor, Loretta Schumacher, Gladys Jarvis, Willie Batte, Henry Flach, Gladys Fehrenbach, Adeline Becker, Albert Ruetz, Fred Irwin, Albert Weiler, Tommy Reichenbach, Earl Weiss, Agnes Ward.

ROOM III.

Sen. III.—Clarence Weiler, Edwin Schmidt, Loretta Schuet, Edna Sutter, Eleanor Weber, Alex McNab, Lyal Cousins, Herbert Schnurr, Aloysius Zettler, Arthur Waechter, Cyril Oberle, Mary Zettler, Wilbert Freiburger.

Jun. III.—John Sweeney, Laverne Yaeck, Griselda Becker, Arthur Sutter, Hilda McNamara, Bernice Lambertus, Loretta Kuennemann, Gladys Eckenswiller, Willard Walker, Clara Giesler, Alvin Cunio, Harry Buchlow, Audrey McNeill, John Obrecht.

ROOM II.

Sr. II.—Loretta Gillen, Agnes Weber, Joseph Gillen, Kathleen Obrecht, Albert Giesler, Albert Batte, Cleopha Weiler, Norman Freiburger, Howard O'Neil, Katie Sidle.

Junior II. — Vera Oberle, Leona Schnurr, Erwin Lobsinger, Tony Cunio, Arthur Klein, Helen Wilhelm, Roy Walker, Andrew Fehrenbach, Marie Ernewein, Lilian Freiburger.

ROOM I.

Mary Giesler, Lionel Rich, Albert Diech, Lilian Koler, David McNab, Isabel Zettler, Bernice Mullen, Joseph Huck, Charles Schnurr, Joseph Wilhelm, Fred Lymbery, Martina Weiler, Eileen Ernewein.

Jun. I.—Arthur Weiler, Iona Weiss, Charles O'Malley, Annie Lettner, Wilbert Mullen, Verna Schmidt, Arthur Schiestel, Edgar Oberle, Clarence Schnurr, Clarence Weiler, Harry Schnurr, Mamie Huck, Eileen Freiburger, Dominic Gillen, James King.

How He Felt

The two girls were talking with a young lieutenant who had got a bullet through his arm.

"And what were your emotions during the first battle?" asked one girl.

"What were my emotions?"

"Yes. How did you feel?"

"Oh, slightly bored," was the reply.

Not Fussy

Mrs. Briggs brought home a new girl from the intelligence office and instructed her in her duties.

"And do you have to be called in the morning?" she asked.

"I don't has to be, mum," replied the new girl, hopefully, "unless you just happens to need me."

From Mexico to France

Corp. Chester Bryce of the 13th Cavalry has moved 1.000 miles towards Walkerton, to Fort Riley Kansas. Chester expects to visit his home, next month and will be leaving shortly for France under the command of General Pershing. Chester says he will be getting his chance at the Huns, even if it is in the American Army.

Snow in May

During the past 45 years snow fell on twenty years in May on the following dates:—

In 1875 on the 1st; [illegible], 11th; 1882, 2nd; 1885, 3rd and 9th; 1888, 13th and 14th; 1889, 1st and 28th; 1890, 6th; 1891, 4th and 5th; 1894, 28th; 1895, 12th and 14th; 1901, 12th; 1903, 1st; 1904, 15th; 1906, 7th and 9th; 1907, 10th and 27th; 1908, 2nd; 1909, 1st and 2nd; 1912, 13th; 1916, 15th; 1917, 9th and 23rd.

The Submarine Menace

Maxim's announcement that he has perfected a device which will make ships immune from the attack of submarines' torpedoes is one of the most encouraging pieces of news the Allies could receive. If his promise is fulfilled, it means that the last possible chance of Germany averting defeat has been swept away, and merchantmen's crews will in future be able to laugh at the U-boat, especially if the vessels can be fitted with the device immediately.

Wet Days

Gray sodden clouds obscure the sky; the damp earth has no chance to dry; the east wind murmurs and complains, and every hour or two it rains. The water's dripping from the eaves; the soul of man within him grieves; he takes the pessimistic view, and all the outlook makes him blue. "Cheer up," I cry, with sunny smile, "these wholesome rains are all the style. They'll make the wheat and pumpkins thrive, and keep the garden sass alive. They'll bring us bumper crops of corn, as sure as you are born. They'll fill the mow and crib and barn!" He says, "I do not care a darn. I've had enough of rain to spare. I want the good old sun to shine. My heart, like yours, is [illegible] [illegible], when nature sends [illegible] [illegible] [illegible], refreshing all the [illegible] that grow; but what's the use. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] up this [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] good for squash and pumpkin vine!"

INQUEST WILL BE HELD

Into the Death of Mrs. Norman Webb, Wife of 160th Soldier Who Died Very Suddenly Tuesday Morning.

Mrs. Norman Webb, West Ward, was taken suddenly ill on Monday night and removed from her home near the Brewery to the County Hospital. Shortly after midnight she passed away. Dr. Porter, Coroner, acting in consultation with Crown Attorney Dixon, ordered that an inquest be held. A coroner's jury was empanelled with Major John Henderson as foreman. After viewing the body at Myles' undertaking rooms, the jury ordered a post mortem examination of the remains, and adjourned until the coming Friday night. The post mortem examination was made yesterday morning by Drs. Sinclair and Farewell, and their evidence will be taken at the inquest.

Mrs. Webb, whose maiden name was Jennings, was 35 years of age. She came here as a young girl with her parents, since deceased. Her husband, who is now with the 160th Batt'n in England, was employed at the Rattan Factory before enlisting. Besides her husband, she leaves three children, the oldest being a boy of fourteen years.

+ + +

Town and District

Read the ads.

Local news on every page.

It will pay you to read the ads.

Mrs. Trusler is visiting at Stratford.

Bowling started on the local green last week.

Mrs. Jos. Zettel is visiting friends at Kitchener.

Mr. Joseph Truax was a visitor in town Monday.

Mrs. J. H. Appel is visiting in Toronto this week.

Miss Agnes Obrecht has returned home from Hamilton.

Miss McDonald, teacher at Erin, spent the week-end with friends here.

Mr. James Warren's many friends will regret to learn that he continues poorly.

Mrs. Farquhar Shaw spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Shaw.

Mr. Ivan McGill was visiting at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. McGill.

The framework is almost completed on Harvey Damm's new brick-veneer residence.

Rev. Dr. Johnston of Montreal spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. James Warren this week.

Mrs. H. M. Lay spent a few days at Ottawa with her mother, Mrs. John King, the past week.

Read the advertisements in The Telescope. It will help you in your shopping and save you money.

Miss Helen and Mr. Norman Jennings of Owen Sound are here attending the funeral of their sister, Mrs. Webb.

Mr. and Mrs. James Whitehead, and Mr. John Whitehead attended Disciples Convention at St. Thomas the past week.

Messrs A. S. Royce and Wm. VanHorne will be delegates from Walkerton to the C. O. F. Convention at Hamilton on June 19th.

Mr. W. J. F. Ross and his friend, Wm. Benjamin, motored up from Forest and spent a couple of days at Mr. R. H. McKay's this week.

The man or woman who regularly reads the advertisements in the Telescope, is the man or woman who gets the most profit out of the paper.

Left For Guelph.

Sappers Herman Runstadtler, Mel. Kain, Jim McKinnon, and Bob MacGregor, left on Tuesday afternoon to report for duty with the Guelph Battery.

Children's Entertainment.

Next Sunday ev'g the Annual Children's Entertainment will be given at the Evangelical Church. A good program of dialogues, recitations, choruses etc. will be provided. Everybody is cordially invited.

+ + +

CARD OF THANKS

Mr. and Mrs. P. Ritchie and family desire to express their sincere thanks to their many friends and neighbors for their kindness and sympathy in their bereavement.

+ + +

In Memoriam

In loving memory of my dear sister, Annie Victoria Eidt, who passed away on June the 9th, 1916.

"Gone But Not Forgotten."

—Mrs. W. C. Johnston, Elmsford, N.Y

"All Home Print"

THE TELESCOPE appears this week as an all home-print for the first time in its history. Heretofore, like the majority of town weeklies, we have had only one half of our pages printed in this office and local happenings have had to be confined to the four outside pages. From this time forward "local news on every page" will be a feature of the Telescope. Nowadays when most families take several papers, and nearly every home gets a daily, purely local town matter is the thing that counts in a town weekly, and the more space the publisher can devote to local and district news and the interests of his community the better he is serving his readers. With this fact in mind we have always looked forward expectantly to the time when our volume of business would justify us in taking this step forward. Our all Home print means more work for the editor, more work for the printers and greater expense but it is an improvement which we believe every reader will be quick to recognize and appreciate.

LOU ANDERSON IS HOME

Member of Family Whose Bravery Matches Their Prowess on Baseball Field Returns Invalided From England.

Pte. Lou Anderson arrived home on the 9.25 p. m. train Tuesday and was given an enthusiastic welcome by a great crowd of citizens at the station. Lou is feeling pretty well just now but is rather deaf as the result of exposure and has also been suffering from sciatica which developed in France. The deafness became severe before he left Bramshott. In fact he would never have got to France at all, had he not succeeded in evading the final examination. Lou was in France five months, when he was invalided back to England. Before leaving the Old Land he went down to see his brother Fred, and met some old friends including Lieut. "Hub" Henderson, who he says is looking fine. Speaking of his old commanding officer, Lt.-Col. Sutherland, who is to lead the 160th to France, Lou says, he is one of the finest men one could ever serve under and a man everybody could admire. He wouldn't ask his men to go where he wouldn't go himself. With the Col. it was not "go on" but "come on boys."

Lou is one of the Anderson brothers who a few years ago put Cargill on the baseball map. All four boys enlisted to fight for King and Country. "Jack" is in a Military Hospital in England, with a serious case of shell-shock. Fred is at Bramshott. Will, the eldest and last, who is a married man with a family, signed up lately at London and is now in training for Overseas.

MENTIONED IN DESPATCH

Major Roy Robertson of Walkerton Singled Out For Special Praise by Sir Douglas Hague.

Walkerton boys have won distinctions of various kinds in the War. The first to be mentioned in despatches by the British Commander-in-chief is Major Roy Robertson, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Robertson, whose name appeared in Thursday's newspapers in a despatch from Sir Douglas Hague. Major Robertson, who is a graduate of Toronto University in Engineering as well as Law, practised law at Vancouver, B. C. but happened to be home on a visit when the war broke out. He offered his services to his old Engineering Company at Toronto, and went Overseas in Command of No. 9 Field Co., Canadian Engineers. It is reported but not yet verified that Major Robertson has been further honored by promotion to the rank of Lieut.-Col.

+ + +

BRANT COUNCIL.

Minutes of Brant Council May 28th, 1917.

The Municipal Council of Brant Township met on Monday the 28th day of May. Members all present, minutes of last meeting of council read and declared correct.

Rowand-Johnston—That the members of this council do now go into committee of the whole with the Reeve in the chair as a court of revision to determine the various appeals against the assessment roll for the current year.—Carried. The members of council then took the court of revision oath and were duly constituted a court of revision.

Johnston-Rowand—That after consideration of the appeals against the assessment roll we authorize the clerk to make the following changes with red ink in the roll, and that in all other appeals the assessment be sustained. Mrs. Powers of Cargill, reduced $1200, Wm. Barry reduced $100.

Gregg-Rowand—That this council do now adjourn as a court of revision and resume general business.—Carried.

Rowand-Johnston—That the assessment roll as revised be accepted and that the same be the basis upon which the rates and levies for the current year be struck and that the assessor be paid his salary in full of $125.00.—Carried.

Gregg-Rowand—That a grant of $40 be made to the Vesta Red Cross Society, cheque to be issued to Miss Viola Hanmore.

Johnston-Findlay—That a grant of $40.00 be made to the Red Cross workers of polling div. No 9, cheque to be issued to Mrs. Archie Weir, treasurer.—Carried.

Johnston-Gregg—That a grant of $50.00 be made to the Brant Branch of the Preparedness League, cheque to be issued to Jas. A. Lamb, treasurer.—Carried.

Willoughby-Rowand—That a grant of $1.000 be made to the overseas branch of the Y. M. C. A., payment to be made about the middle of November 1917.—Carried.

Rowand Findlay—That John Whitehead, Sr., be appointed a Director of the District Board of Agriculture of South Bruce.—Carried.

Johnston-Gregg—That the reeve and clerk issue orders on the treasurer for all accounts passed at this meeting of council.—Carried.

Accounts passed as follows:—

Chas. Parker, 127 yds. of grv'l, 1916	$ 12 70
C. L. Lamb, repairs to plow broken on road	3 00
A. J. Ashley, repairs to plow broken on road	4 00
Harry Threndyle, repairs for south grader	13 90
Traill Bros., spikes by Percy McGarrity	50
Wilfrid Atkinson, rep. road	2 00
Thos. Kerry, rep. road	3 25
D. W. Gregg, Sr., 9 nights light of lantern	2 25
Herb Napper, rep. road	4 00
J. H. Brown " "	6 50
Wm. Dalgarno, rep. culvert	2 00
Jas. Watson, " "	1 00
Wm. Frook " "	5 00
R. Murray, rep. road, 6th con. bridge	42 00
Robertson & McNab, damage to cutter and fur-lined coat re Father Zettler	15 00
Louis Gateman, damage to horse in snowbank	50 00
Miss Viola Hanmore, grant to Red Cross Society	40 00
Mrs. Archie Weir, grant to Red Cross Society	40 00
Jas. A. Lamb, grant to Preparedness League	50 00
W. A. Rowand, presentation to Brant soldiers	10 00
Sidney Parker, salary as Assessor	125 00
Dr. Bricker, B. O. H. Meeting and Telephoning	5 50
M. A. McCallum, B. O. H. Meeting, telephoning and postage	5 40
W. M. Rowand, B.O.H. meet'g.	2 30
D. Willoughby. " "	2 80

Rowand-Johnston—That this council do now adjourn to meet on Monday, the 11th day of June, for the transaction of general business.—Carried.

M. A. McCallum,
Township Clerk.

BORN

HARRISON—To Mr. and Mrs. Robert Harrison, on Sunday June 3rd, a son.

TANNER—In Brant, on Sunday, June 3rd, to Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Tanner, a son.

Walkerton Markets

(Revised. Wednesday, June 6)

Hay, per ton,	10.00 to	12 00
Oats, per bsh.	75 to	80
Wheat " "	2.25 to	2.25
Barley, " "	1 20 to	1 20
Hogs per cwt,	15.00 to	15 60

FARMING AND LIVE STOCK

SELECTING BROOD SOWS.

Points That Indicate Fecundity and Good Constitution.

Prospective brood sows should be selected from the best animals in the herd, always taking those whose mothers are gentle, good milkers and prolific, writes a correspondent of the American Agriculturist. The sow should have a smoother forehead and lighter, finer neck than the male. The forehead should be broad between the eyes, the throat clean and trim, neck moderately thin, shoulders smooth and deep, the back wide and straight and deeply fleshed with ribs well sprung; sides straight and deep, hams deep and well rounded, body rather long, but compact, and legs moderately short and strong. Select those with wide, deep chests and well sprung ribs, as it indicates strong constitution, a very important essential with good brood sows. It is not the fat, plump sows of the herd that make the best mothers, but rather the long bodied, more vigorous ones which show quality and have good grazing and feeding powers. Brood sows should not be overrefined and delicate, as it is apt to lead to a weak constitution and possibly sterility.

The successful breeder will never change an old sow for a young gilt until he is obliged to. The former will give two good litters annually, one early in the spring and the other in September or October. Handle the brood sows carefully at all times and keep them as gentle as possible. The picture shows mature brood sow with litter.

Previous to farrowing the main demands upon a brood sow are those for building up new tissue. This means there should be plenty of protein in the ration, secured by feeding nitrogenous feeds. A few days previous to farrowing change to a sloppy food and bulky in character, like bran, and do not feed overgenerously. This will assist in avoiding constipation, so likely to occur at farrowing time and soon after. A box of charcoal, salt and ashes should be kept where they can get at it at all times summer or winter. A farmer who gives sows access to this mixture and varies the ration occasionally, providing sufficient protein, will not be troubled with sows eating their pigs.

Immediately after farrowing feed the sow sparingly. The first day or two give her nothing but a thin slop. Then a little more nutritive food can be given, like skimmilk along with equal parts of cornmeal and middlings. By the time the pigs are two weeks old the sow should receive a full ration, practically all she will eat up clean, for the demands upon her at this time, if she has a good litter, are heavy, and there is nothing more important in the swine business than giving the youngsters a good start.

A good breeding sow should be kept in the herd as long as she gives good service, which may be six to eight years.

Remedy For Cowpox.

Cowpox is a highly infectious disease and must run its course. It is easily spread among animals, and even man may become infected if the discharge gets into a fresh wound on the hands, in which case regular vaccination, the same as for smallpox, results. Bathe udder twice a day with a warm 5 per cent solution of creolin and when dry apply a little carbolated vaseline. Affected animals should be milked and cared for after the others to avoid infecting healthy ones. The hands should also be washed in the creolin solution after working with them. It is well to separate the diseased ones entirely from the healthy to prevent spreading.

Rest For the Cow.

To give the calf and its mother a fair chance a cow should be carefully dried off six weeks before the date of calving. This allows her to feed well her unborn calf and to get ready for her period of milk production.—Wisconsin Agricultural College.

LIVE STOCK NOTES.

Be very careful in the selection of the sire for your pigs. Use the best pure bred of your desired breed within reach. Good blood goes a long way to make for success in litters.

Study your horses. Some require more roughage than others to keep them in condition.

Keep the ewes very thrifty by watchful, careful feeding.

Be sure that your ewes do not crowd through narrow doors. Crowding or jamming may kill an unborn lamb and possibly the ewe.

If a pig has a cough give it some oilmeal in its feed. Oilmeal is a laxative, and it will often help a slight cold.

Keep the colts well bedded and clean. A manure laden colt is a rebuke to its owner.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson XI.—Second Quarter, For June 10, 1917.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, John xix, 16-30. Memory Verses, 26, 27—Golden Text, I Cor. xv, 3—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

Pilate seems to have tried again and again to release Him, and his wife also sent him word to have nothing to do with that just man, for she had suffered many things in a dream because of Him (Matt. xxvii, 19). Peter testified after Pentecost that Pilate was determined to let Him go (Acts iii, 13). He evidently thought when he asked them to choose between Christ and Barabbas as to which he should release unto them that they would surely ask for Christ. But they cried out, "Not this man, but Barabbas," although Barabbas was a robber and murderer (chapter xviii, 40; Acts iii, 14). Pilate's fear to touch Him increased when the Jesus said that His crime was that He said He was the Son of God (verse 7). When Pilate asked Him about this Jesus at first made no reply, but a little later said to him, "Thou couldest have no power against Me except it were given thee from above; therefore he that delivered Me unto thee hath the greater sin" (verse 11).

The first part of this reply must refer to the will of God, the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, that which His hand and His counsel determined before to be done (Acts ii, 23; iv, 28), the last part to the high priest who delivered Him to Pilate. There are degrees of sin and degrees of punishment for the lost, as there are degrees of rewards for the righteous (Luke xii, 48; Rev. xxii, 12). When the Jews cried out, "If thou let this man go thou art not Caesar's friend; * * * we have no king but Caesar" (verses 12-15), Pilate took water and washed his hands before the multitude, saying, "I am innocent of the blood of this just person; see ye to it." Then the people said, "His blood be on us and on our children." Then he released Barabbas, scourged Jesus and delivered Him to be crucified (Matt. xxvii, 24-26). Why did he scourge Him after he declared Him innocent? Why did he deliver Him to the brutal soldiers to be mocked and spit upon and so ill treated? Even a guilty man is protected from injustice at the hands of his enemies as a rule. If we cannot reply to the why, let each one at least say it was all for me, the Holy One of God suffering in my stead. When we see the Son of God, the Creator of all things, the Judge of all mankind, receiving such treatment at the hands of the civil and religious authorities and remember that they are just the same today, what should be our attitude to them? When we hear Pilate say, "Behold the man!" and "Behold your king!" (verses 5-14) we think of the true testimonies of the Spirit, "Behold the man whose name is The Branch!" and "Behold, thy king cometh!" (Zech. vi, 12; ix, 9).

So Pilate delivered Jesus to be crucified, and they took Him and led Him away, and He, bearing His cross, went forth (verses 16, 17). They met one Simon, a Cyrenian, coming into the city and compelled him to turn about and help Jesus bear the cross or bear it for Him (Luke xxiii, 26). We remember that He said, "If any man will come after Me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow Me" (Matt. xvi, 24). Let us not forget that the cross is never anything beautiful, but a cruel thing signifying a painful and lingering death. Many women followed Him, bewailing and lamenting Him, but He told them not to weep for Him, but for themselves and their children because of the things that would come upon them (Luke xxiii, 27-31). Having reached Golgotha, they crucified Him and two evildoers with Him, one on either side and Jesus in the midst, and thus He was numbered with transgressors, all for me.

The four soldiers divided His garments among them, but for His coat they cast lots, thus fulfilling another Scripture (verses 23, 24; Ps. xxii, 18). Perhaps three more awful words were never written than these, "They crucified Him" (verse 18), when we consider who He was that they crucified, the Prince of Life, the Lord of Glory (Acts iii, 15; I Cor. ii, 8), and that He submitted to be a curse for us that we might not perish (Gal. iii, 13). We have in our lesson three of His seven sayings on the cross (26, 28, 30); but, taking them in order from all the records, we have first forgiveness, even for those who crucified Him; then glory for even a penitent thief; then provision for His own mother, suggesting the supply of all we can need between salvation and glory. The fourth was at the beginning of the darkness, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken Me?" and the other three at the close of those awful six hours, "I thirst," "It is finished," "Father, into thy hands I commit My spirit."

When the Jews asked Pilate to have the bodies removed that their Sabbath day might not be desecrated (oh, the utter hypocrisy of it all!) the soldiers broke the legs of the two malefactors, but found Jesus dead already, so they did not break His legs, but a soldier pierced His side, and thus two Scriptures were fulfilled, Ex. xii, 46; Zech. xii, 10. The last part of the chapter describes His burial by Nicodemus and Joseph in Joseph's new tomb, and thus was fulfilled the saying, With the rich in His death (Isa. liii, 9).

SEVEN YEARS TORTURE

Nothing Helped Him Until He Took "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

ALBERT VARNER

Buckingham, Que., May 3rd, 1916.

For seven years, I suffered terribly from Severe Headaches and Indigestion. I had belching gas from the stomach, bitter stuff would come up into my mouth after eating, while at times I had nausea and vomiting, and had chronic Constipation. I went to several doctors and wrote to a specialist in Boston but without benefit. I tried many remedies but nothing did me good. Finally, a friend advised "Fruit-a-tives". I took this grand fruit medicine and it made me well. I am grateful to "Fruit-a-tives", and to everyone who has miserable health with Constipation and Indigestion and Bad Stomach, I say take "Fruit-a-tives", and you will get well".

ALBERT VARNER.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At dealers or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

FOR "LIVERISHNESS" USE MILBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS

THEY NEVER FAIL TO DO GOOD.

Mrs. J. Shellsworth, Halifax, N.S., writes: "I take pleasure in writing you concerning the great value I have received by using your Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills for a sluggish liver. When my liver got bad I would have severe headaches, but after using a couple of vials of your pills I have not been bothered with the headaches any more."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills clean away all waste and poisonous matter from the system, and prevent as well as cure all complaints arising from a liver which has become inactive.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c. a vial, or 5 vials for $1.00, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

ELLIOTT Business College

Yonge and Charles Sts., Toronto.

It will pay you well. We were asked to fill 120 positions in two months and 210 during two other months. Write for catalogue. Enter now.

W. J. Elliott, Principal.

WE PHOTOGRAPH MEN AS MEN ARE

It's a business matter and there is no fuss or bother. Your family, friends and business associates want your portrait.

FRASER STUDIO

HAD WEAK HEART

COULD NOT WORK

COULD NOT SLEEP.

Many women are kept in a state of fear of death, become weak, worn and miserable and are unable to attend to their household, social or business duties, on account of the unnatural action of the heart.

To all such sufferers Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills give prompt and permanent relief.

Mrs. J. Day, 234 John Street South, Hamilton, Ont., writes: "I was so run down with a weak heart I could not even sweep the floor, nor could I sleep at night. I was so awfully sick sometimes I had to stay in bed all day as I was so weak. I used three and a half boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and I am a cured woman to-day, and as strong as anyone could be. I am doing my own housework, even my own washing. I doctored for over two years but got no help until I used your pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

PATENTS PROMPTLY SECURED

We solicit the business of Manufacturers, Engineers and others who realize the advisability of having their Patent business transacted by Experts. Preliminary advice free. Charges moderate. Our Inventor's Adviser sent upon request. Marion & Marion, New York Life Bldg, Montreal; and Washington, D.C., U.S.A.

NEIGHBORING;VILLAGES & COUNTRYSIDE

News of the Week Collected by a Staff of Live Correspondents

OTTER CREEK

Mr. Geo. Watke is having a barn-raising to-day.

Alf. Weber's little son, Clarence, was run over by an auto on the street at the Mildmay Celebration on Monday. A lady driver ran over him at the entrance to the grounds. Fortunately the little fellow escaped with a bad cut in the head.

Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Schmidt of Deem- rton motored over to Mr. Henry Wolfe's on Sunday.

Quite a number followed the crowd to Mildmay on the fourth of June where Otter Creek school took second prize in drilling.

Mrs. Nelson Yost and son are visiting at her home here at Mr. Henry Dippel's.

Miss Mary Smith spent the week-end in Mildmay.

Mr. Henry Russworm is at present helping to put up the foundation of Mr. m. Hill's new residence on the tenth cession.

s. Ferdinand Wickie and daught- p visiting at Mildmay for a week.

and Mrs. George Eickmier were ng at Mr. D. Gress' over Suuday.

thrilling incident occurred not miles from Walkerton and not ty five miles from Mildmay when ung farmer tried his luck at fish- The pole was not long enough his arms too short, so he ventured n old raft when suddenly a gust of d came and took him over the water. ere was no oar in his hands so he ook his fishing pole and got over the st way he could with all the fish in s pocket after a bad shaking up.

(Intended for last week.)

Miss Margaret Bilger of Walkerton was visiting at Mr. John Smith's over Sunday.

Mr. Harry Housfeld has dug out the foundation for his new residence.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Klein and son of Mildmay were visiting at Mr. John Fenner's over Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Taylor were visiting at Mr. Sebastian Kirstine's on Sunday.

Miss Janet Hutton, and Miss Hilda Biermith were renewing friends on the tenth Saturday past.

The warm weather the last few days is affecting Nature alright. The leaves are coming out. Now only three weeks behind last year. Hay and pasture is also about three weeks behind.

The wheat around here has been for the last month under the influence of the North Western Weather-man. It well shows that he got the best end of the stick as the wheat around here will be just a half a crop.

SOLWAY

Miss Eleanor McGarrity was home from Durham for the week-end.

Mr. A. Koher spent the week-end at his home near Mildmay, and took in the celebration in that town on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lambertus left yesterday to spend a week with friends in Kitchener, Waterloo and Hamburg.

Mr. and Mrs. E. O'Connor and Miss Lizzie, spent Sunday with friends in North Brant.

Joshua Mitchell took in the celebration in Mildmay on Monday.

Mr. A. McWalnney spent the week-end with friends in the burg.

(Intended for last week.)

Miss Bert McGarrity who has been spending the last three weeks in Dornoch and Mr. Jim Vassey of that town motored over on 24th and spent the day at Fairbanks Farm.

Mr. and Mrs. Hossfeld spent Monday with friends in Mildmay.

Wedding bells are ringing.

The engagements were announced from the Roman Catholic pulpit on Sunday morning of Mr. Joseph Lang to Miss Rose Kunkel from near Cargill and Mr. Frank Lang to Miss Tillie Graff from near Walkerton.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Knoll spent Sunday at the home of the latter's parents Mr. and Mrs. Spitzig near Chepstow.

Mr. Walter and Miss Gladys Lambertus made a trip to Mildmay on Monday.

Mrs. Jno. Whitehead and Master Norman spent Sunday at Mr. B. Michell's.

Miss Katherine McCallum and her nephew Master Jack McTavish left on Saturday for Toronto.

CHEPSTOW

Rev. Fr. Fischer of St. Mary's Church, Kitchener, spent a few days of the past week with his Mother and relatives.

Jas. Coumans of St. Michael's Coleg. Toronto, is home for the vacation

Mr. Alois Eromwein who was dangerously ill with pneumonia has sufficiently recovered to be around again.

Mr. Albert Whitman and Irene McNab are under the doctor's care suffering from severe types of the same malady.

Miss Mary Fritz of Kitchener, is on a short visit to her sister Mrs. Jos. Cashanette.

Our sports, as usual, turned out en masse at the holiday attractions in the neighboring towns on Monday.

The engagement of Emma, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. Fischer to Mr. Edward Kelly, has been announced, marriage to take place on June 19th.

Mr. Albert Boegel of Regina, Sask. arrived on Monday and expects to visit here sometime before returning with Mrs. Boegel and little son, who have been here for the past six months

BRANT AVENUE

A few of the young folks of this neighborhood took in the Big Celebration at Mildmay on Monday and report having had a dandy time as the weather was more pleasant than on the 24th.

As Saturday night is our young people's delight to get to town and amuse themselves in various ways, and some of those who wheeled down stayed a little late and that heavy rain made them "walk home with their wheels." Try and be careful next time boys and don't stay out so late.

Our local drover shipped 2 carloads of hogs by C. P. R. this week. They dropped somewhat in price. Even so, it's a big net compared with a few years ago.

Miss Cecilia Ruetz arrived home from Kitchener on Tuesday, to assist her on the farm.

Mr. Wm Riley purchased a fine black team from Irwin Bros. a few days ago, a pair of "beauties" they are. Wm. is sure a lover of good horses.

Mr. Leonard Long traded one of his bay drivers off last week to Mr. George Frederick of Dunkeld for his black driver, both are well pleased with their deals.

HANOVER

Cadet Stafford Pritchard, son of J. Pritchard of Weston, formerly G. T. R. operator at Hanover, was instantly killed last Thursday afternoon near Barrie when his aeroplane crashed to the ground from a height of 400 feet. He was learning to fly in connection with the Aviation School at Camp Burden, with a view to qualify for flying operations in France.

G. H. Christiansen, who has been learning chemistry at the Hanover Portland Cement Co. went to Toronto to enlist in the 67th Battery but failed to pass the physical examination. Young Christiansen, who is a nephew of Rev. Mr. Henkel, Lutheran minister of Brant township, was born in Germany and his mother is at present living there, having gone to Germany just prior to the outbreak of the war, and was unable to return. The young man has just turned eighteen.

Pte Gilbert Liddle of this town writes home that he had a narrow squeak at Vimy Ridge. No less than three shots pierced his helmet.

GLAMIS

Mr. McFadyen of Sunderland has been renewing acquaintances in this locality.

Misses Mary Deehan, and Agnes Reid, spent over Sunday at the latter's home near Pinkerton.

Messrs Jack McKeeman, Murd. Thompson, George McKay, Bert Greer, and Allan McKinnon took in the sports at Lucknow on Monday.

Messrs Dan C. and Finnie McKinnon, purchased new Ford Cars from Irwin Patterson of Tiverton last week.

Mr. Joseph Ferris Jr. has sold his young driver to Chas. F. McKinnon.

Miss Belle McGregor, 6th Bruce, spent the week-end with her friend, Miss Flossie McLennan.

James Gilchrist of Kincardine, Sundayed at his home.

A few of the I. O. O. F. brethren from here attended Divine Service in Underwood on Sunday afternoon.

Mr. James Lamont and sister, Mrs. Burnett, Sundayed at George Webb's.

Mr. D. N. McLean made a business trip to Toronto last week.

Mr. Charles McKinnon left on Saturday morning on an extended visit to Cape Breton, the West and other points.

Messrs D. A. McLean and Jack McKeeman took the following delegates to Hanover on Thursday to the Bruce Presbyterian, of The Women's Missionary Society Convention, Mesdames, W. H. McNally, Alex McKennitt, W. J. McKeeman, (Rev) P. Raith, James Thompson, Misses Maude McKay, Elizabeth Campbell, and Phyllis Moffat.

Mrs. W. H. Gilchrist was removed to Walkerton Hospital on Monday where she will undergo an operation. All hope for her recovery.

Rev. G. C. Little of Paisley conducted Prepartory Services in St. Pauls Church on Friday evening. Sacrament was observed on Sunday.

The I. O. O. F. Brethren purpose holding their annual parade here on Sunday morning, June 17th. They will attend Worship in the Baptist Church.

A few here attended the funeral of the late Mrs. Archibald McFadyen, Boundary East, Tiverton on Thursday.

CARGILL

Mr. and Miss Fowlie motored to Orillia on Saturday to attend a cousin's wedding. Mrs. Fowlie and Miss Margaret spent the holiday in Drayton.

Mr. Roy Stewart of the Royal Bank staff, Hanover spent the week-end with his friend Mr. Lorne Carr here.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Ruttle spent the holiday with the latter's parents Mr. and Mrs. Gowanlock near Walkerton.

The dance given in the Forresters Hall on Monday evening was a decided success. A large crowd attended, coming from all the neighbouring towns. The dance did not break up until the wee small hours of the morning.

Capt. G. S. Hanmore of Toronto called on the burg on Tuesday.

The members of the Girls Auxiliary are going to hold their meetings in the rooms above Keeling & Co's. store. They intend having a sale of home-made baking on Saturday of this week.

Mr. James Alexander of Elmwood spent the holiday at his home here.

Some of the members of the Girls Auxiliary sold candy and flowers at the dance on Tuesday night and made the neat sum of $5.45.

Pte. McKinnon and Miss Zettel of Walkerton visited the former's sister Mrs. Martin Beater, on Monday.

MILDMAY

Miss Zetta Liesemer of Baden spent the week-end at her home here.

Mr. George Brahler who has been working for the past few months at Grand Rapids, Mich. is visiting at his home here for a few weeks.

The celebration on June 4th held under the auspices of the Bruce County Preparedness League was what might be termed a grand affair as far as the size of the crowd was concerned. The gate receipts amounted to over $289.00. The local Red Cross Society conducted a lunch counter and from the numbers of people who patronized this we are sure they made a nice sum of money. At 1.25 p. m. the parade of the school children took place. There seemed to be over three hundred in the parade. About 2 o'clock Mildmay and Ayton played the first baseball match Mildmay winning by one run the score being Walkerton and Harriston took the field next and played a fast game, Walkerton winning, the score being 7—1. Mr. Moore of Neustadt umpired the first game and Ed. Wittich umpired the second. As the machine gun crew and bombing squad of London did not appear there was no exhibition and almost everybody was disappointed over this. At 7 o'clock the auto parade took place. Mr. Rudy Kaufmann got the prize for the best decorted Ford. Dr. Wilson for the best decorated Overland. About seven cars took part in the parade. The concert in the evening was real good and the hall was crowded. Proceeds were $85.00. In the school children's competition the Mildmay Separate School took 1st prize, Otter Creek got 2nd and the Mildmay Public School got 3rd. The Separate School got the silk flag valued at $12.00 donated by the Robert Simpson Co. The Mildmay Public School got the Nelson Shield.

Messrs. John and William Vollick have bought one of the new 32 h. p. torpedo body Overlands from the local agent, Peter Reuber.

Mildmay and Moltke played the first league game in Moltke on Friday evening last. The Moltke boys won the score being 4—2. Mr. J. T. Kidd of Mildmay acted as umpire.

Mrs. Conrad Reis of Wroxeter was a visitor in town on Sunday.

PINKERTON

Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Gale attended the Presbyterial at Hanover on Thursday.

The sacrament of the Lord's supper will be dispensed in the Presbyterian Church on Sunday next. Preparatory services will be conducted by Rev. Mr. Muun of Port Elgin on Friday afternoon at 3.30.

A number from here attended the play "The Village Doctor" in Paisley on Friday night.

Mrs. Jas. McCrea of Paisley spent a few days with her mother Mrs. Murray.

Work has commenced on the new saw-mill here and part of the equipment has arrived.

The Red Cross Society wishes to express sincere thanks to the ladies who collected for its aid and also to those who contributed so generously. The amounts collected were:—Mrs. Gilchrist and Mrs. H. Clark $84.00, Mrs. Mutrie and Mrs. Cruickshank 55.00, Mrs. A Reid and Mrs. W. Alexander 56.25, Mrs Gale and Mrs. Pinkerton 43.80. Total $239.05. This money is to be used for Red Cross and general Patriotic purposes.

* * *

BRANT

S. S. No. 1.

Sr. IV.—Malcolm Tolton 66, Helen Tolton 52, Jim Rennie 43.

Jr. IV.—Wallace Johnston 60, Stanley Tolton 54, Caroline Misch 53, Georgia McLennan 50.

Sr. III.—Leander Geisler 63, Mary Tolton 58, Eric Wilton 55, Russel Childs 52, Ernie Glinz 50.

Jr. III.—Jessie Long 54.

Sr. II.—Mary Hodgson 68, Andy Johnston 58, Paul Misch 58, Albert Schultz 49, Emma Stade 45.

Jr. II.—Florence Childs 65, Ross Johnston 47, Alice Hodgson 46.

Jr. I.—Earl Johnston, Andrew Waechter, Beata Misch.

Sr. Pr.—Alwena Glinz, Annie Johnston, Harry Lunday, Wallace Riley, Hilda Schultz.

Jr. Pr.—Jean McLennan, Millard Fisk, Louis Misch, Elmer Riley, Tom Lunday, Doris Waechter.

Ruby E. Norrish.
Teacher.

* * *

S. S. NO. 7.

Sr. IV.—Lillie Scott, Dan McKeeman

Jr. IV.—Jack McKeeman.

Sr. III.—Maurice Young, Florence Smith, Tom Young, Verna Blue, Arthur Young.

Jr. III.—Lela Kerry, Harry Scott, Edith Blue, Marjorie Brown, Frank Desmond, Nelson Kerry.

Sr. II.—Edmunds, Mansel Napper, Gertie Greenaway, Melvin Pearson, Marjorie Young.

Jr. II.—Joe O'Reilly.

Sr. Ist.—Annie Kauffman.

Jr. Ist.—Dorothy O'Reilly, Grace Kerry.

Pr. Sr.—Verna Young, Vera Gallinger.

Pr. (b) Wallace Napper, Henry Young.

Pr. (a) Mary Young, Daisy Kerry, Clara Edmunds, James Cassidy.

No. on Roll 36. Av. Att. 30.

Blanche I. Powell,
Teacher.

* * *

S. S. No. 4.

Sr IV.—Graeme Kirstine, Sybil Schwandt.

Jr IV.—Ralf Metcalfe, Eva Tanner, Lola Tanner.

Sr. III.—Belva Tanner, Ruth Krueger Minnie Schwandt, Lillian Litt, Viola Lippert.

Jr. III—Allen Tanner, Grace Kirstine, Edith Smith, Elmer Woods, Oscar Tanner, Beulah Woods, Esther Schwandt, Earl Litt.

Jr. II.—Clinton Lippert, Burns Kirstine.

Jr. I.—Hugh Kirstine, Florence Kuhl, John Allardyce.

Sr. Pr.—Lawrence Keip, Josephine Litt, Roy Tanner.

Jr. Pr.—Dorothy Tanner, Elma Fritz, Gordon Tanner, Madeline Lippert, Howard Mc Keluy. No. on roll 25.

J. Hamilton,
Teacher.

* * *

S. S. No. 5.

Sr. IV.—Florence Norton, Margaret Hossfeld, Adela Brocklebank.

Sr. III.—Edward Lindenschmidt, Graham Holm, Jack Rudolph, Stanley Brocklebank, Norman Racher, Harry Richardson.

Jr. III.—Henry Hossfeld, Robert Racher, Mabel Dietrich, Sarah Cupskey.

Sr. II.—Justus Holm, Allen Ernest Annie Brocklebank, Mabel Craig, Basil Rudolph.

Sr. I.—Melinda Hossfeld, Myrtle Brocklebank, Kathleen Richardson, Kathryn Hanmyre.

Sr. Pr.—Gweneth Richardson, Viola Ernest.

Jr. Pr.—Wilfred Hanmore

Report is based on examination work not on attendance.

N. MacLennan,
Teacher.

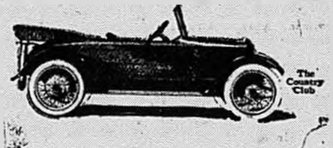
Office
Stationery

For nice Stationery printed from new type at moderate prices. Try the

TELESCOPE

Overland

Fours



Smart—Economical

IT is an ideal car for people of taste and refinement—the great sweeping success of the year.

The Overland Country Club is the smart sport model of the small car class.

Grey body, black and nickel trim, and the price includes wire wheels with one extra.

Have a look at the Country Club right away—and a demonstration.

$1110

Overland Country Club

Four passenger Individual front seats
31 horsepower
Cantilever rear springs

Five wire wheels
4 inch tires
Auto-Lite starting and lighting
106-inch wheelbase

Other Overland Fours

The Light Four
Touring $975
Roadster $950

Model 85-Four
Touring $1190
Roadster $1170

All prices f. o. b. point of shipment
Subject to change without notice

J. E. McGregor, Phone 142
Durham Street, Walkerton

GOLD DUST
digs deep after germs

Gold Dust not only cleans but sterilizes.

Soap merely washes over the surface, leaving a greasy film behind it.

Gold Dust "goes to the bottom," and insures absolute purity, and sanitary safety. Why not sanatize your home, as well as clean it?

Soap needs muscle help; Gold Dust does all the hard part of the task without your assistance.

Gold Dust is a good, honest, vegetable-oil soap, to which are added other purifying materials in just the right proportions to cleanse easily, vigorously, and without harm to fabric, utensils or hand.

"Let the GOLD DUST TWINS do your work"

Gold Dust is sold in 5c size and large packages. The large package means greater economy.

Made by THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY, LIMITED, Montreal
Makers of Fairy Soap (the oval cake)

HOMESEEKERS' EXCURSIONS
LOW RETURN FARES
TO WESTERN CANADA
ONCE A WEEK

Convenient Service. Modern Electric Lighted Equipment
Standard and Tourist Sleeping Cars and Colonist Coaches
For Tickets, Reservations, Literature and Information, apply to
W. E. ATTWOOD, INSURANCE, WALKERTON.
Or write R. L. Fairbairn, G.P.A., 68 King St. E., Toronto.

CANADIAN NORTHERN RAILWAY

FIGHTING GARDEN FOES

Destroy Them or They May Destroy Your Crop.

SPRAYING A READY REMEDY

In This Column the Amateur is Introduced to Insects and Fungus So That He May Know Them by Their First Names.

(By R. C. JOHNSTON, Vegetable Specialist, Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Garden Foes.

Unfortunately the backyard vegetable grower has some difficulties to overcome. It will not be all pleasure and profit which he must look forward to because there are innumerable insects and fungus diseases which cause much worry and trouble and necessitate the use of extraordinary methods to prevent or control. Most of these troubles may be overcome by spraying the plants with remedies which can be secured from seed stores and other firms handling them.

The following is a list of the more common vegetables and the insects and plant diseases attacking them with remedies or preventives.

ASPARAGUS. Beetles, Blue, black or yellowish colored, about one-half inch long, which appear early in May and feed on the young shoots. Keep the bed closely cut in the spring or allow poultry to run through it. After cutting season is over, spray with arsenate of lead. Encourage the lady bird bettle which destroys many of these insects.

Anthracnose or Pod Spots. Brown or reddish spots on the foliage and pods. Found on low damp ground. Plant only seeds which have no signs of the disease. Pull up and burn diseased plants as they appear.

CABBAGE, CAULIFLOWER, AND BRUSSELS SPROUTS. Root Maggot. A small whitish colored maggot one-quarter of an inch long. Looks something like a grain of wheat, found just below the surface of the ground either close to or on the roots. They eat the roots, causing the plant to drop over. Apply a solution of corrosive sublimate one-half ounce dissolved in five gallons of water, at the rate of half a teacupful over each plant once a week for five weeks after they are set out, commencing three or four days after planting.

Cut Worms and White Grubs. Greyish white grubs which work at the surface of the soil cutting off the plants. They may be trapped by spreading a mixture of poison bran over the surface of the soil close to the plants. A pail of bran with sufficient paris green to highly color it, should be moistened with molasses until it crumbles readily in the hand. This moisture should be kept on the ground during the early part of the season.

Worm. A small greenish worm three-quarters of an inch long, which appears quite early in the season. Dust with pyrethrum or hellebore powder when the plants have headed, or dust with a teaspoonful of paris green mixed with three tablespoonful of flour when young. A piece of burlap may be used for this purpose or an empty can with holes punched in the bottom.

Aphis, also called louse. Small greyish insects which multiply rapidly. They may appear at any time in the season. Spray forcibly with a solution made from steeping one pound of tobacco refuse in one gallon of water. This solution may be used on all plants on which Aphis are found.

CELERY. Blight. Black spots appear on the foliage followed by wilting of the plant and a soft root on the stock. Spray each week with a mixture of Bordeaux mixture covering the entire plant.

CUCUMBER. Striped Beetle. Black and yellow striped beetle which feeds ravenously on the tender leaves of the plant in the very early stage of growth. Dust leaves when wet with ashes or air-slaked lime.

Squash Bug. Dark brown bettle which sucks the juice from the plant. Hand pick and destroy. Found on the leaves.

MELONS. Cucumber insects usually attacks and may be destroyed as given above.

ONION. Onion Maggot. A white maggot similar to the cabbage root maggot. No effective means of control. Spread charcoal over the ground or try the corrosive sublimate solution as recommended above.

Blight. A violet color, patches appearing on the leaf of the onion. Some advise spraying with Bordeaux mixture from the time the onion plant in three inches high.

POTATO. Colorado Beetle or Potato Bug. Dust with paris green when the dew is still on the plant, or place a teaspoonful in a watering can of water and pour over the plant. If possible have the plant dusted with paris green before the bug appears.

Scab. Easily recognized by characteristic roughness of the skin. Immerse the uncut tuber just before planting in a solution of two fluid ounces of formalin with two gallons of water. Dry, cut, and plant.

Blight. Brown spots distributed over the leafy surface, usually found in July. If they are not prevented from growing, the whole plant will be destroyed. Spray once a week for four or five weeks with Bordeaux mixture from July 1st.

RADISH. Root Maggot. Use the same remedies as given for cabbage and onion maggot.

TOMATO. Tomato Worm or Horn Blower. A large worm which rapidly defoliates the plant. Hand pick and destroy.

Blight. Black spots appearing on the leaves which spread rapidly and cause the whole plant to die. Keep the plants growing vigorously.

Next Week's Telescope

Will Contain the Opening Chapters of Our New Serial

INSIDE THE LINES

By Earl Derr Biggers and Robert Wells Ritchie

"Inside the Lines" first appeared as a stirring war drama of today, the best of its kind since "Secret Service." Its author, Earl Derr Biggers, is known to fame as the author of "Seven Keys to Baldpate." His later play has been novelized by Robert Wells Ritchie, and opens at the outset of the present great war drama in Europe. Caught by the swirl of events, a lovely American girl is detained in Europe and becomes innocently enmeshed in the machinations of spies and of the secret service of two contending nations. Every chapter is replete with mystery and incident, skillfully woven threads that blend to a surprising climax.

THE KAISER'S LINEAGE

IS ONE OF HOPELESS INSANITY. FROM THE FIRST KING OF PRUSSIA TO THE LAST IS ONE MASS OF IDIOCY—WILHELM II. IN STRAIT-JACKET.

Many British people when discussing the various brutalities that have been committed by order of Wilhelm II, the German Emperor, say, "Oh, he's as mad as a hatter", and there the matter drops without anybody really going into facts as to why he is mad or from what source he inherits his madness. To begin with he is directly descended from Frederick I., first King of Prussia, who was hopelessly deformed and who died in 1713. His son, Frederick Wilhelm I., was a helpless imbecile, while his grandson, Frederick Wilhelm II. was a man whose chief recreation was to be seen in the company of women of the underworld. The latter's son, Frederick Wilhelm III., was so hopelessly insane that in 1858, he was taken off the throne and a regent appointed to reign in his stead

A Line of Idiots

Frederick Wilhelm I.'s neice married the King of Bavaria and had two sons—Ludwig II., King of Bavaria, who died a raving idiot in 1886, and Otto, the present King of Bavaria, whose symptoms are precisely the same as his brother's. When Frederick Wilhelm died in 1861, his brother Wilhelm became King of Prussia, and in 1871 after the Franco-Prussian war was declared Emperor of Germany. His son, the diseased, but kindly Frederick III., died the same year he came to the throne, in 1888, and was succeeded by his son, the present Emperor. The following description of the Emperor is from Mr. Arnold White who on many occasions has interviewed him:—

He is of short stature, about 5 feet, 5 inches in height. He wears a restless, nervous, somewhat fierce countenance, and constantly glares at perfectly harmless individuals as if they were suspected anarchists. He suffers from infantile paralysis in his left arm, and has a constant discharge from his ear which savors of meningitis

In a Strait-Jacket

The Emperor in 1892 was the victim of several epileptic fits, and a story is told of how on one occasion he was put in a strait-jacket. It was on the royal yacht Hohenzollern that he commanded the captain to go below, saying that he would take charge. When the captain told him it was a dangerous trip owing to the rough sea, the Kaiser said, "God will inspire me." But on the second officer refusing to leave his post as watchman, the Kaiser attempted to choke him and throw him overboard. In the struggle the Emperor slipped, and howled with pain. After a while he started to foam at the mouth and so a strait-jacket was put on him, and he was taken below. In his private life his vanity is akin to madness. His mind is unable to bear any kind of criticism. His latest orders sanctioning murder and rape are too well known to be dilated on.

This is the man who says God will lead him on to victory

RAISED $2,163.

Encouraging Reports Presented at Annual Meeting of Bruce Presbyterial.

The annual meeting of the Bruce Presbyterial W. M. S. was held in Hanover on Thursday. Mrs. A. M. McNabb of Underwood presided. More than one hundred delegates were present. Encouraging reports were presented from the different departments. Contributions from all sources totalled $2,163. Addresses on the work in Honan, China, were delivered by Mrs. Menzies and Miss Winnifred Warren. The former gave a vivid word-picture of the home life of the Chinese women. She emphasized the fact that China's only hope is in being evangelized by her own people. Eleven Canadian missionaries, she said, from Honan have already entered the war.

Southampton was selected as the place of meeting.

The officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: Honorary president, Mrs. Norman Robertson; president, Mrs. Thomas Wilson, Walkerton; first vice, Mrs. McNabb, Underwood; second vice, Mrs. McLean, Hanover; third vice Mrs. Keith, Glamis; corresponding secretary, Miss Scott, Paisley; recording secretary, Miss Miller, Paisley; treasurer, Mrs. McLaren, Port Elgin; mission band secretary, Mrs. Warren, Walkerton; stranger secretary, Mrs. Young, Tara; supply secretary, Mrs. A. Warren; messenger secretary, Mrs. J. A. McArthur, Paisley; home helper secretary, Miss Tolmie, Southampton.

✢ ✢ ✢

A Natural Conclusion

"You do still love me?"
"Yes."
"And you haven't fallen in love with any girl up at college?"
"No."
"Do you love me as much as ever?"
"Yes."
"And will you always love me?"
"Yes."
"And there's no one else?"
"No"
"Just me?"
"Yes."
"How can you sit there and lie so?"

—Williams Purple Cow

✢ ✢ ✢

WRITTEN IN A HOSPITAL

I tried to hop
A moving car
It didn't stop
And here I are.

CROP TO PLANT LATER

Provide for Winter as Well as Immediate Needs.

CABBAGE AND OTHER THINGS

Good Food Products Can Be Secured by the Amateur by a Little Labor and a Small Expenditure.

(By R. C. JOHNSTON, Vegetable Specialist, Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Besides growing many vegetables for immediate use the backyard garden should produce some vegetables which can be stored for consumption during winter months. Some, of course, do not need to be planted as early as the plants which were described last week. Possibly a week should elapse from the time the lettuce is planted before these should be sown.

BEETS, CARROTS, PARSNIPS, AND SALSIFY. These include the most important members of the root vegetables. They are usually grown for winter purposes, though beets and carrots are relished by many in their earlier stages of growth. All these demand practically the same attention. The seeds should be sown in straight rows at a depth of about three-quarters of an inch. When the plants have reached a height of two inches they should be carefully thinned out so that they stand, beets and parsnips three to four inches apart, carrots and salsify two or three inches apart. It will be found that the parsnips are very slow growers, and for this reason it is sometimes advisable to plant a few seeds of lettuce with the parsnip seeds so that they will serve as a marker. The young beet plants may be used as spring greens. It is necessary that the soil be cultivated at intervals during the summer months so that the crops may grow. They do not as a general rule require as heavy watering as some of the other vegetable crops. In the fall the beets should be pulled up and the tops twisted off close to the head, not cut off with a knife as in the case of carrots, parsnips, or salsify, which should have the tops cut about one-half inch from the roots preparatory to storing for winter use.

CORN. In planting corn holes about two or three inches deep should be made with a hoe. Five or six kernels of corn should be dropped in this and covered with soil, which should be gently firmed by tramping on it. When the shoots are about three inches high all excepting the three sturdiest should be pulled out. The soil should be drawn up around the stalks as they grow, to give them support. When the kernels on the cob appear full of milk they are ready to use. It is also a good practice to cultivate the soil often around the corn, for expert growers claim that the crops corn and cabbage faster and better when plenty of cultivation is given.

CABBAGE. Cabbage is one of the most widely grown vegetables. The cabbage plant requires a supply of moisture, and yet if the cabbage soil is too wet the plant will be injured. Cabbage does particularly well on new land, and some growers claim that the cabbage grows without an abundant supply of manure in the soil better than many other vegetables. It is considered a good practice for backyard gardeners to purchase plants which have been grown in hot-beds or hot-houses and transplant them directly into the permanent bed. This saves considerable trouble. It is necessary when setting cabbage plants to set them fairly deep so that they will not be whipped about by the wind. They may be set eighteen inches apart, and there should be quite a good deal of soil around the roots. When they are ready to be set out a hole may be made with a dibber or a sharpened stick. The roots may be watered after they have been set. One of the most important features of growing cabbage consists in the attention given to cultivation of the soil. There may be some occasions when the head will split, this may be stopped or prevented if the head is taken in the hands and turned forcibly from one side to another.

CAULIFLOWER. The cauliflower is treated in much the same way as cabbage, the plants being grown and set out in the same manner outside. They are treated practically the same as cabbage until it is noticed that a little white flower has commenced to grow. The dry leaves of the plant should be brought together at the top and tied with a piece of string so that these little white flowers are protected from the rays of the sun and the rain. All cauliflower heads should be treated in this manner when they are about two inches in diameter.

BRUSSELS SPROUTS. Brussels sprouts are perhaps the most hardy of the cabbage family. If it is impossible to secure brussels sprouts plants a few seeds may be planted about May 15 at a depth of about one inch. These should be transplanted to the permanent bed about the 15th of June. They should be set eighteen inches in the row and two feet between the rows. It is well to keep the patch clean, and the surface soil should be stirred frequently. It is unnecessary to trim off the leaves as the plants grown in the garden.

SWISS CHARD. Swiss chard can be grown easily from seed, in rows twelve inches apart, the young plants being thinned to six or eight inches apart. The advantage of this plant is that the leaves may be pulled off close to the root and new leaves shoot up, which may be consumed during the season. The roots are used for greens and the stem of the leaf as asparagus. A few plants should be sufficient for a small family.

Spring Styles

As shown in our Superior Tailored Clothing are covered by one brief sentence "The, and cheapest to be had in town."

We'd like to measure you for your spring suit or overcoat.

Hats, Caps, Ties, Shirts, Sweater Coats, all furnishings at Slaughter prices.

WOODMAN & CO.
Next to Vogan's Hardware

CENTRAL Business College
STRATFORD, ONT.

Ontario's Best Business College

Students may enter our classes at any time. Commence your course now and be qualified for a position by midsummer. During July and August of last year we received calls for over 200 office assistants we could not supply. Our graduates are in demand. Write at once for our free catalogue.

D. A. McLACHLAN
PRINCIPAL

Read the Ads.

PATENTS
PROMPTLY SECURED

[illegible] others who realize the advisability of having their Patent business transacted by Experts. Preliminary advice free. Charges moderate. Our Inventor's Adviser sent upon request. Marion & Marion, New York Life Bldg., [illegible] and Washington, D.C., U.S.A.

The Time The Place The Price

NOW is the time, Men, while our range of Spring Cloths is complete.

THIS is the place for ordered clothes. Style and fit guaranteed.

THE PRICE is right and to suit every purse.

T. PYE
Clothier & Furnisher.

GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY SYSTEM

ATTRACTIVE TRIPS
To
Muskoka Lakes
Algonquin Park
Maganetawan River
Lake of Bays
Karwartha Lakes
Georgian Bay

Round trip tourist tickets now on sale from stations in Ontario at very low fares with liberal stop overs.

Berth reservation and full particulars at all Grand Trunk Ticket Offices or write C. E. HORNING, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, Ontario.

WEEK-END
Graniteware Sale
THURS., FRI. & SAT. OF THIS WEEK

We are offering our entire stock of Granite and Nickelware at big reduced prices.
Take this opportunity of getting your summer supply of Graniteware while this sale is on. This will be your last chance to get graniteware at these prices.
Watch for window display.

PATTERSON BROS.
Hardware Stoves Graniteware

THE CANADIAN BANK OF COMMERCE

SIR EDMUND WALKER, C.V.O., LL.D., D.C.L., President
JOHN AIRD, General Manager
H. V. F. JONES, Ass't General Manager

CAPITAL, $15,000,000 RESERVE FUND, $13,500,000

FARMERS' BUSINESS

The Canadian Bank of Commerce extends to Farmers every facility for the transaction of their banking business, including the discount and collection of sales notes. Blank sales notes are supplied free of charge on application.

H. M. LAY, Manager Walkerton Branch.

Ask Our Local Dealer

When installed according to plans furnished by us, the Sunshine Furnace will heat your home comfortably, healthfully and economically. Ask our local dealer to tell you how it's done, or write for free booklet.

McClary's
SUNSHINE FURNACE
LONDON TORONTO MONTREAL WINNIPEG VANCOUVER
ST. JOHN, N.B. HAMILTON CALGARY
SASKATOON EDMONTON

For Sale by Patterson Bros.

POETS' CORNER

OPPORTUNITY FOR ALL

Have you got a patch of ground on which a garden might be made?
Have you got a pig, a chicken or a cow?
Have you tested out your muscle with a bright and busy spade?
If you haven't done so, are you learning how?
If you're over old or young to go where shells are on their way,
Or if the doctor labels you unfit;
If you can't pick up a rifle and go forward to the fray,
There is still a chance for you to do your bit.
There is still a chance for service which can never be denied.
Though you can't be marching when your country calls.
A uniform we know is now the Nation's greatest pride.
But there's dignity in common overalls.
When a soldier is selected, we must see that he is fed,
And we want to have him dressed in clothes that fit.
Though we cannot all be heroes, every one can go ahead
There is sure to be a chance to do your bit.

Town and District

Read the Ads.

Say, wife, where's my old straw ut?

Mrs. George Alexander of Elen Grove has been visiting friends in town.

Misses Tillie and Minnie MacGregor returned to Paris after visiting their parents here.

Miss Jessie Hallett, who was the guest of Mrs. (Rev.) G. C. Rock, returned to her home at Toronto last week.

Mrs. Chas. Dankwardt who is home from Toledo, Ohio, was the guest of her friend, Miss C. Mosack, on Sunday.

A town is judged to a great extent by its appearance. Is your part of Walkerton as trim and tidy as it might be?

Miss Hattie Long has been reengaged for the coming year as teacher of S. S. No. 1, Brant and Greenock, at an increased salary.

With everyone trying to do his "bit" these days th[illegible]re's no excuse for a man trying to e[illegible] down the storm windows.

Miss Mary Ca[illegible] of Walkerton and her sister Mrs. Thomas Hastie of Bentick, were in town on business last week.

Many a mother who "did'nt raise her boy to be a soldier," will nevertheless be proud to see him in line for King and Country.

Digging a garden in peaceful Canada has some points over digging a trench in front of the German army in France.—Goderich Signal.

Mr. George Yarck, janitor at the Hospital, who was operated upon for appendicitis Saturday, is reported to be making a good recovery.

Wesley Hutson, a highly respected farmer of Kincardine Tp. died on Tuesday morning of last week as the result of a kick in the abdomen by a horse.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Dyke and their daughter, Mrs Milton Hauck, are leaving shortly to make their home at Kitchener, where Mr. Hauck has a good position in a factory.

The merchants of Walkerton are paying 35 cts. per dozen for eggs. The hen should be respected as well as the pig. Never at this time of the year have eggs commanded such a price.

The triplet children of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Phelan of Kingscote, now six months old, have been honored in receiving the King's bounty of £1 ($5) each. The little folks are thriving well, and are rarely lonesome, says The Dundalk Herald.

A story is told of a Guelph man who stayed out late the other night. He wasn't certain how his wife felt about it, so asked a French neighbor to find out. A note was sent to him that read "Elle en est furieuse." The chap knows quite well his wife's name is not Ellen, so he's trying to figure out whether she was speaking of the price of potatoes or leaving orders for the milkman.

Is Rapidly Recovering.

While at Brantford last week the publisher of the Telescope had the pleasure of meeting Rev. D. A. Walker B. A., the former pastor of the Methodist Church here, and was glad to find him greatly improved in health. Mr. Walker stated that he is making wonderful progress. His congregation at Preston offered to engage supply for a whole year but Mr. Walker expects to resume his work on October 1st. He attended Conference last week, and acted as Ass't-Secretary of Conference.

EUROPEAN WAR PICTURES

On the front in France—an officer carrying a 200-lb German shell.
—Photo by courtesy of C. P. R.

Royal Engineers Bridging in the Balkans.
—Photo by courtesy of C. P. R.

On the Western Front — the man on the right remembers this place of barbed wire entanglement when he had to get through it in the early days of the Somme Battle at Ovilliers.
—Photo by courtesy of the C. P. R.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Lambertus spent last week in Huron township visiting the latter's brothers Messrs. John and James McCormick, also her brother-in-law, Mr. Edward Creech.

Annual Garden Party

The Annual Garden Party of the Pinkerton Presbyterian Church will be held on June 18 on the Manse grounds. The R. Clark and family of Blockhead Comedians. Tea served from 6 to 8 o'clock. A good programme will be provided. Admission 25c. Children 15c.

Lost All Officers

In the desperate battle for possession of the Pimple from which the Germans were potting at the victorious Canadians on Vimy Ridge, a Brant boy, Pte. Albert Condy, had a part. His battalion, the 78th of Winnipeg, won the Pimple but suffered severely in the encounter, losing all its officers, killed or wounded.

Perino—Roether.

Miss Gretchen Roether, a popular young Walkerton lady, was united in marriage on May 24th at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. Leeson, Culloden, to Mr. Edward Perino of Detroit, Mich. The ceremony being performed by Rev. Thos. Murry of Verschoyle. The bride was a native of Walkerton and practised nursing here until recently. Her many friends here will wish the young couple every happiness.

TO MY SOLDIER SON

Boy of my heart, I am lonely without you,
Long seems the time since you went from my side;
'Midst the war's tumult that rages about you
Strong in heart, fearless, unscathed may you ride.

I miss you at eve when the shadows are falling,
And through the house every sound echoes drear;
I miss you at morn when the mall'd thrush is calling—
His sweet notes hold sadness when thou art not here.

Ah, oft in the dear past ere man's call to duty,
Hand-in-hand we would wander through woodland and dale
How the fresh young boy-heart of you joyed in its beauty
And you sought for new treasures in brooklet and vale.

Our lives held few pleasures, for wealth it was lacking,
But love was abundant, our spirits were bold:
Your rollicking laughter and shrill, boyish whistle
Were to me sweeter music than clinking of gold.

Sudden and swift was the joy of home shattered
When sound of the war trumpet rang o'er the foam;
'Twas the voice of the Motherland, calling her children—
"Come Sons of the Blood, you are wanted at home."

Quick you heeded the call to the flag of your country,
The standard of Britain 'neath which you were born;
In the fairest of lands by God e'er created—
Our Canada, where I, too, first saw the morn.

Years cannot alter, nor distance e'er sever
The love that Canadians hold for their home.
Roam where they may, when the wanderings over Straight back to the Land of the Maple they come.

How young you were, dear, when the war trumpet sounded,
But bravely you answer'd its notes' strident ring:
You laid down your boyhood and took a man's burden—
To fight for your country, your God and your King.

I miss you, I miss you, my laddie, my darling,
And absence doth only my longing enhance;
I pray God in mercy to guard and defend you
As you fight for our Empire somewhere in France.

ALGONQUIN PARK

No better place could be devised for a real holiday for red-blooded men and women than Algonquin Park, north of the City of Toronto. It is situated about two hundred miles an unspoiled territory of nearly two million acres, starred with beautiful lakes and intersected by winding streams. No reserve in Canada can approach it in the wealth of attractions it offers to the lover of out-of-doors.

Away up in the Highlands of Ontario, two thousand feet above the level of the sea, the Park is a wonderful spot in which to renew the energies of a tired body or refresh a wearied spirit. Its tonic air filters through hundreds of square miles of pine, balsam and spruce; the days are unusually long with bright sunshine, while the cool evenings are a time of enchantment. The Park is a paradise for the fisherman and canoeist; the excellence of its sport draws anglers from every part of the Dominion and from every state in the Union, while the canoeist can travel for hundreds of miles in his own light craft and be in a veritable kingdom of his own.

The accommodation in the park is such that the most varied tastes can be pleased. There are hotels for those who want to be in the wilderness—yet enjoy all the comforts that good service and social companionship can bring: there are groups of log cabin camps, comfortably furnished and ideal for family parties, with central lodges containing recreation and dining rooms where you may dine and find everything ready for you on your return from the tramp: or if you have planned to camp under your own canvas you may step into a canoe at one of the little railway stations, and after a short paddle find a site unmarred by the hand of man yet within easy reach of the Park outfitting stores.

Many families now go into the Park expressly for the camping, making their headquarters at the hotels long enough to get supplies and camping outfit ready for the trip. Then in canoes, and with guides or without them, they launch out into the deep woods, camping where fancy prompts.

A handsome illustrated publication telling you all about this famous Park is issued by the Grand Trunk Railway and a copy can be had free on application to C. E. Horning, Union Station, Toronto, Ont.

Showing a Roof Covered with Brantford Slates in Solid Color.

There is Safety Under This Roof

Have you ever had a fine job of decorating spoiled by a leaking roof? If you have, you certainly are in a position to appreciate the value of a roof that is positively water-proof. Some of the troubles common to wooden shingles to-day are that they are apt to split, warp or blow off as well as leak, soon after they are put on. Years ago they were good, but the quality has since gradually depreciated as the available supply of suitable timber became exhausted.

Brantford Slates have none of the faults of wooden shingles. They cannot rust. They do not allow rain to be driven under them as do metal roofs. They do not require rigid supporting as do the common tile or slate roofs. On the other hand Brantford Slates afford the utmost protection with little weight. They are made on a long-fibred felt "base" which is thoroughly saturated under pressure with asphaltum or mineral pitch. Crushed quarried slate particles are then deeply embedded in the surface of this "base", making it water-tight and fireproof.

Brantford Roofing

Brantford Slates are made in the natural slate colors of green, red, black and grey. The colors never fade and the slates do not require painting nor repairing. These slates are pliable and fit readily around gables and into the angles of any roof. This means a continuous roof without seams or joints. Sparks die on Brantford Slates. When you have these slates "on" you are done with the job. Remember they don't require painting or staining and may be selected to harmonize with almost any exterior color design, and the price is not beyond your reach. We would be pleased to send you samples and our Roofing Booklet.

Brantford Roofing Company, Limited
Brantford, Canada

For Sale by S. W. Vogan

WRIGLEY'S
THE PERFECT GUM

Let us make you acquainted with the new, luscious flavour—

It's all that the name suggests!

Wrigley quality—made where chewing gum making is a science.

Now three flavours

Chew it after every meal

Get it wherever confections are sold

Sealed Tight—Kept Right!

MADE IN CANADA

The Flavour Lasts

JP 13

NOW IS UNDOUBTEDLY THE TIME TO BUY SUCH HOUSE-FURNISHINGS AS

FLOOR RUGS, LINOLEUMS & OILCLOTHS.

Prices have advanced as much in the last few months as during all the two preceding years. These recent advances and the difficulties in transportation will make today's prices impossible for the immediate future

Cover Your Floors with These New Brussels and Tapestry Rugs.

Whether for the Dining Rooms, Living Room, Parlor or Bedroom, any room that you wish to make comfortable and comely at a low cost, Brussels and Tapestry rugs offer their good services. They are famous for wear, are easily kept fresh and bright and to these practical advantages, a most pleasing appearance.

Superior Quality Brussels Rugs

9x9, 9x10½, 9x12, 10½x13½ at $18.00 to $28.50.

Canadian Oilcloths

Extra good patterns. Best quality Canadian Make. 1, 1¼, 1½, 2 and 2½ yards wide.

New Lace Curtains

Pretty new designs. 60c, 75c, $1 to $3 a pair.

And About Linoleums

We have it on good authority that for some time no British Linoleums will be shipped. We have a big stock of the best Scotch makes in extra select patterns. Two and four yards wide. Per sq. yard 69c, 75c and 81c.

New Marquisette Curtains

Plain strong centres with new dainty borders. Cream and Ecru at $3 to $6 a pair.

Best Quality Tapestry Rugs

9x9, 9x10½, 9x12, 10½x12, 10½x13½, and 12x12, at $9.50, $10 00, $12.50, $15.00 to $24.50.

STEPHAN BROTHERS

KNEW QUEEN VICTORIA

(Continued from Page 1)

marriage. For a time he held the position of mail-carrier and every day carried the royal letters a distance of two and a half miles.

Has Spinning Wheel She Used.

Mr. Symons has in his possession a rare old curiosity in a spinning wheel at which Queen Victoria has sat and spun. His wife, Mrs. Symons, has used the wheel all her life, and even yet in occasion, will spin a batch of yarn on the old wheel once used by royalty.

Mr. Symons is now in his seventy-seventh year but hale and hearty. All his faculties are pretty well preserved with the exception of his hearing. The old Scotch tunes are still running in his head and as he chats of the old times when he used to do the Highland Fling he can sing the notes, though he cannot do the steps which used to come so easy to him. His recollections of old Scotland and the Balmoral estate are all pleasant ones. The "gradation" or class distinction is the one thing that did not appeal to him in his early days, and which drove him as well as many another brawny young old-countryman to the New Land of equal opportunity. Mr. Symons was about nineteen years of age when he left Scotland. He was one of the pioneers who settled Greenock Township going in on a blazed trail. The account of his experiences on the bush farm on which by dint of undomnitable perseverance he developed into a successful and prosperous farmer would make a separate story by itself.

JUNE WEDDINGS

LANG—KUNKEL.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the R. C. Church, Chepstow on Tuesday morning when Rose, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Kunkel was united in marriage to Mr. Jos. Lang of Brant, Rev. Fr. Goodrow officiating. After the ceremony the party repaired to the home of the bride's parents where a dainty repast was partaken of and where the immediate friends and relatives were entertained through the day. The happy couple will reside on the groom's farm in Brant.

+ + +

ROGERS—CRAWFORD.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Rogers went to Kingston on Tuesday to attend the wedding of their eldest son, James Harris Rogers, to Miss Rhea Crawford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Crawford of Kingston. The ceremony was quietly performed at 10.30 o'clock Wednesday morning by the Anglican rector, only the immediate relatives being present. Mr. and Mrs. Rogers will make their home at Preston where Mr. Rogers is Superintendent of the local Hydro Electric Power System. His many old Walkerton friends extend to Jim congratulations and best wishes.

+ + +

HESCH—HODGSON

At St. Clements R. C. Church. Preston at nine o'clock Mond. June 4th. Mr. Herbert S. Hesch, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eng. Hesch, formerly of Walkerton, was united in marriage to Miss Mildred Hodgson of Preston, daughter of Mr. Thos. Hodgson. The bride was given away by her cousin Mr. Vincent Keatning of Dundalk. Miss Josie Rurdel of Woodstock was bridesmaid, while Mr. Eddie Ernewein, formerly of Walkerton, acted as groomsman. Afterwards a sumptuous breakfast was served at the bride's home, the happy couple leaving on the afternoon train for a wedding trip to Walkerton and other points. The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome manicure set, to the bridesmaid a cameo ring, and to Mr. Keating, cuff links. The groom is well-known here, having been raised in Walkerton and learned the barbering with A. P. Johnston. He is now in partnership with his father, as Hesch & Son, tobacconists and tonsorial parlors, Preston. The many old friends of the family here wish Herb and his bride every best wish.

+ + +

MARKLE—SOUTH

A quiet wedding took place at First Methodist Church, Hamilton, at High Noon, on Saturday, June 2nd, when Miss Edna L. South, daughter of Mr. J. W. South of Walkerton, was united in marriage to Mr. Harry S. Markle, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Markle of Hamilton. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Chas. L. McIrvine pastor of the Church. The affair was very quiet owing to the recent death in Action at Vimy Ridge of the bride's cousin. The bride who was unattended, was given away by her father, and looked very pretty in a brown corded silk travelling suit with hat to match, carrying a bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley. Many beautiful and costly gifts testifying to the esteem in which the young couple held in Hamilton, were received at the home of the bride's uncle and aunt, with whom she has made her home the last few years. Mr. and Mrs. Markle left on the afternoon train for points east on their wedding trip. On their return they will make their home in Toronto, where Mr. Markle has a responsible position with the Murray-Kay Co.

More Subscriptions.

Mr. Geo. D. McKay, Treasurer of Y. M. C. A. Overseas Campaign Fund, acknowledges the following further subscriptions. Miss Ruth I. Robertson $10, Charles Procknow, 50 cents.

West Looks Good.

Mr. John Mawhinney, who returned this week from a trip West with a load of horses for Irwin Bros. states that the crops looked fine in the country through which he passed. They have had good growing weather lately and crop prospects are a great deal better West than East.

Two Nephews Fall in Battle.

Mr. Levi Greenhow has received the sad news, that his two nephews, Edwin and Edison Greenhow, have been killed in Action in France. Edwin fell fighting in the memorable charge at Vimy Ridge and his younger brother made the supreme sacrifice on April 28th. The two boys were the only sons of his brother, Mr. William Greenhow, who lives near Regina. Three of Mr. Greenhow's nephews now fill soldiers' graves in Flanders.

Had Pneumonia

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP CURED HIM.

A cough is an early symptom of pneumonia. It is at first frequent and hacking, and is accompanied with a little tough, colorless expectoration, which soon, however, becomes more copious and of a rusty red color, the lungs become congested and the bronchial tubes filled with phlegm making it hard for the sufferer to breathe. Males are more commonly attacked than females, and a previous attack seems to give a special liability to another.

On the first sign of a cold or cough you should get a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup and thus prevent the cold from developing into some serious lung trouble.

Mrs. E. Charles, North Toronto, Ont., writes: "Two years ago my husband had a very bad attack of pneumonia, and the doctors said he was getting consumption. A friend came in to see me and told me to get Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I got three bottles, and they seemed to quite clear his chest of the phlegm, and now he is fine and well.

I shall never be without it in the house as it is a very valuable medicine."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c. and 50c.

The genuine is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

WOMEN WAR WORKERS

Young women can render the country real service by preparing to take positions in Business Offices and Banks and relieve young men for war service. Fifty thousand men will be called up very soon under the Militia Act for home defence. Who will take their places in the Business Offices and Banks? Young women should prepare now at the

NORTHERN Business College

OWEN SOUND, ONTARIO

Spring Term Opens April 10th. Circular free.

C. A. FLEMING, F. C. A., Principal

Thos. A. Edison's latest invention, known as the New Edison, is the instrument to which the New York Globe refers as "the phonograph with a soul." We cordially invite you to visit our store and permit us to demonstrate that the New Edison is utterly different from any and all talking machines.

R. L. GIBSON

JEWELER WALKERTON

JEWELLRY OF ALL KINDS

Watches,
Clocks,
Cut Glass
Silverware
and Jewellry
of all kinds.

C. A. FOX, & SON

IF YOU WANT a good, Reliable Boot. —Try a pair of our Cushion Soles made of solid leather.

FIRST CLASS REPAIRING

C. PETTEPLACE

Read the Ads.

WORTHY GROCERIES LOW PRICES

These features explain the phenomenal success of our great food market. We are well stocked with the choicest and as usual the price is low.

GOODE & McKAY

The People's Grocery

PHONE 67 WALKERTON

Summer Straws Are Selling Now

Real Straw Hat Weather is here and we are ready with exceptional values in summer hats for boys and girls and youths and men. In spite of the advance in price we can show new style hats at 25c, 35c, 50c, 60c, 75c, 85c, $1.00, $1.25, to $5.00. Come and choose now before sizes are broken.

Pretty Parasols for these sunny days, plain black and fancy colors, 75c, $1.00, 1.25, 1.50, 2.00 to $5.00.

Embroideries in beautiful new designs, Flouncings, All-Over and Corset Cover Embroideries, still at old values.

Wash Dresses for girls 50c to $3.50 each.

Another lot just in of those lovely sheer voille Blouses. New styles at $2.00, 2.25, 2.50, 3.00 and $3.75.

Bathing Suits, old dye, for men and boys. 50c & 75c.

Rain Coats for men, women, boys and girls, at $5.00, 6.00, 7.50, 8.00, 10.00, 11.00 and $12.00. See these values.

Anything you may require in House Furnishings you will find here as we made big preparations this season. You will find the prices right.

McBURNEY & CO.

THE PEOPLE'S STORE

Patriotism and Fashion

Patriotism demands that you spend your money and make every dollar go as far as possible. You can serve both the dictates of duty and fashion by making your own clothes.

Dress with smart individuality in the most advance styles by using Butterick Patterns.

Illustrated Instructions with each pattern SHOW you just how easy it is.

See for yours[illegible]

Butterick Pattern Department

Phone 53 J. H. APPEL Walkerton

OPENING AND CLOSING STORE

On and after Wednesday June 6th this Store will be open

Wednesday Evenings Until 9 O'clock

and will close

Thursday Afternoons at 1 O'clock

during the summer months. I will have special attractions for Wednesday evenings to give the public an opportunity to do their buying in the evening. All orders taken will be delivered Thursday morning.

C. PATRICK

PHONE 165 WALKERTON

HAD INDIGESTION.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS CURED.

That grand old remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, has been on the market for over forty years and we claim, without any fear of contradiction, that there is not another medicine on the market to-day that can compare with it for the cure of all disturbances of the stomach.

Mrs. S. Turple, Colborne, Ont., writes: "I am writing to say that I have used your Burdock Blood Bitters. For a long period I suffered with indigestion, and nothing I took ever gave me any relief, only for a short time. I bought several bottles of B. B. B. from our druggist, Mr. Gettis, and can honestly say I can eat or drink anything I want without experiencing any bad after-effects. I may say that it is the only medicine I ever got any relief from."

Burdock Blood Bitters is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

The Central Grocery

Flour

All grades and sizes.

Potatoes

For Seed; different varieties.

Granulated Sugar

$8 50 per 100 lbs.

W. G. Searle

Phone 161 Walkerton

WALKERTON TELESCOPE

VOL. XLIX, NO. 24 WALKERTON TELESCOPE, WALKERTON, JUNE 14th, 1917 $1.50 A YEAR IN ADVANCE

All Home Print - Local News on Every Page From 1 to 8

SIXTY-ONE RECRUITS

Eleven Sign up for 160th Company, Balance in Other Branches of Service—Classes to be Called Under Conscription

Up to the present week, the recruiting campaign which was launched recently, has obtained sixty-one men in Bruce County for all branches of the service. Of this number eleven have enlisted, for the reinforcement company of the 160th Bruce Battalion, the greater portion of the balance going to the artillery. Orders from District Headquarters on Monday stated that recruiting for the artillery must be discontinued at once, which will mean that in the future the majority of recruits will go to the Bruce Battalion.

Conscription is the important question at Ottawa and throughout the Dominion at the present moment and the public will find interesting the following table of classification for selective conscription, embodied in the proposed Conscription Bill, brought before the House by Sir Robert Borden.

Class 1.—20 to 23 inclusive, Single or widowers with no child.

Class 2.—24 to 29 inclusive, Single or widowers with no child.

Class 3.—30 to 35 inclusive, single or widowers with no child.

Class 4.—20 to 23 inclusive, married or widowers with children.

Class 5.—24 to 29 inclusive, married or widowers with children.

Class 6.—30 to 35 inclusive, married or widowers with children.

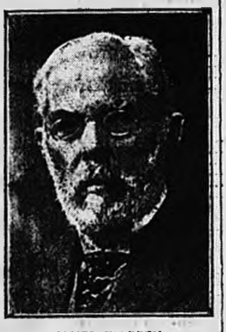
Class 7.—36 to 42 inclusive, unmarried or widowers with no child.

Class 8.—30 to 42 inclusive, married or widowers with child or children.

Class 9.—43 to 46 inclusive, single or widowers without children.

Class 10.—43 to 46 inclusive, married or widowers with child or children.

Worthy Citizen Gone



JAMES WARREN

Who was called away without warning at his home here early Friday morning in his 87th year.

Successful Concert

A crowded house greeted the Philharmonic Society on their first appearance at the town Hall on Tuesday evening. The program of choruses was interspersed by excellent individual members including vocal selections by Mrs. C. S. Stephan, recitations by Miss Florence Cunningham and Miss Jean Norrish, cornet solo by Mr. C. B. Robinson and piano solos by Miss Edna Kennedy of Owen Sound. The entire program was greatly enjoyed by the audience and no little credit is due to the talent and ability of the conductor, Mr. E. H. Leeson, for the success of the concert. The young ladies of the Soldier's Aid realised $140 by the sale of tickets which will be devoted to sending parcels of "sweets" to the soldiers in the trenches.

GONE TO HIS REWARD

James Warren, County Engineer, Died Suddenly Early Friday Morning—Had Been up Though Poorly the Last Two Weeks.

Very quietly and unexpectedly Mr. James Warren, one of Walkerton's oldest and most revered citizens, was called away early Friday morning. Mr. Warren had been poorly for about two weeks but had been up and around as usual. The previous evening he took his supper with the family as usual and chatted to a rather late hour. About two o'clock in the morning he got up to shut a door that was rattling. When he returned, Mrs. Warren heard him making a choking sound in his throat. A moment later he had passed away.

In Mr. Warren's death every movement for the moral, religious or civic good of the community loses a staunch friend and active supporter. In social reform he was a pioneer leader in this town. He championed temperance when it was anything but a popular cause but his sincerity and high motives were so manifest that he never made enemies. He never lost hope in the success of the cause and was greatly gratified that he lived to see the day when the views he had advocated throughout a lifetime, were crystallised into the laws of the land. Mr. Warren was active in the work of the Lord Day alliance. For years he was the Walkerton representative of the Bible Society. He was a leader in the work of the Committe of One Hundred and in spite of his years took part in the monstrous parade which stormed the Ontario Legislature last year.

(Continued on Page 4)

OUR NEW HOME PRINT

Telescope from First to Last is Now All Local—"Patent Inside" is Discarded—Eight Pages for Local News Instead of Four.

The Telescope appeared last week for the first time in its history as an "all home print" newspaper. Heretofore, like the majority of town weeklies, we have had only one half of our pages printed in this office and local news has had to be confined to the four outside pages. Under the new arrangement ALL EIGHT pages are LOCAL pages and all are printed at home. The "patent inside" section has dropped, and only one or two of its most popular fixtures retained. The pages are smaller but quite large enough for present requirements as they give us nearly FORTY PER-CENT more space to devote to local matter than we have ever had before. Nowadays when families subscribe to several papers and nearly every home gets a daily, a town paper best serves its community by being as thoroughly local in its character as possible. It was with this fact in mind that we have always looked forward to the time when our volume of business would justify us in making our paper local from first to last. So now we have launched our "All Home Print". To be sure it means more work for the editor, more work for the printers, and a good deal more expense than the big "patent inside sheet" which we have discarded but it is an improvement which we believe our readers will heartily appreciate. We have also ordered a complete new supply of type, part of which has already arrived and is used in this week's Telescope.

NEWS ABOUT TOWN

Read the ads.

Local news on every page.

Mrs. Jos. Weiler is spending a few days in Toronto.

Latest styles in wedding invitations at the Telescope.

Get your Paris Green and Arsenate of Lead at Hunters.

Miss Etta Ernest spent the week-end with friends in Hanover.

Miss M. Havill leaves this week to spend two months with relatives in Vancouver.

Mrs. V. Kaufman and son Albert Miller, visited with friends at Dunkeld on Sunday.

You can save money by following closely the merchants advertisements in the Telescope.

Miss Hannah Lang of Buffalo, and Mr. George Anstett of Chepstow, spent Sunday with friends in town.

Mr. Bert Dunlop of Paisley and his sister, Ellen, were visitors at the home of Mr. James Cowanlock on Sunday.

Mr and Mrs. Tony Graf and family, also Mr. Edward Graf of Kitchener, were here attending the funeral of their brother, Lawrence.

Local news on every page.

Miss Doris Graef of Clifford is visiting Mrs. F. G. Eidt.

Coun. and Mrs. Alex. McCarter spent Sunday at Vesta.

Miss Ruby Norrish was a visitor in Shelburne on Sunday.

Mr. Ed. McLeod of Detroit is spending this week with his mother here.

The Upper and Lower School exams are now in progress at the High School.

The Entrance Examinations will be held on Thursday and Friday of next week.

Mr. and Mrs. Lou Anderson spent the week-end with the latter's sister in Paisley.

Miss M. Siebabo attended the funeral of the late Rev. S. Young in Clifford last week.

Mr. Charlie Ernest and his son, Wilfred, of Toronto spent the week-end at their home here.

Mr. H. M. Lay motored to Goderich on Tuesday to attend the funeral of the late Mrs. Cameron.

Miss Greta Leech spent the week-end with her friend Miss Frieda Messerschmidt of Hanover.

L. A. Eedy went to Toronto Tuesday to attend a director's meeting of the Canadian Press Association.

A barn raising takes place at Mr. Henry Brindley's, Greenock, to-day. Mr. Wm. Petteplace was the framer.

Messrs. Harry Giesler and Clarence Smith motored to Ayton on Sunday and returned Monday with a big haul of trout.

Miss Mae Cryderman of the Durham High School Staff spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Cryderman.

Many old friends in town have enjoyed meeting again Mrs. R. J. Hepburn of Montreal, who is the guest of Mrs A. P. Sieveright.

Rev. J. R. Wilson of Rothsay, brother of Rev. Thomas Wilson, Walkerton, has received a call to a large church in the West.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Rennie, and Jim and Mrs. F. G. Eidt attended the funeral of the late Rev. Steven Young in Clifford on Friday last.

J. E. McConnell, of McConnell & Ferguson, London, writes:—Think you are to be complimented on your decision to have an all home print paper.

Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Schwindt and family motored to Berlin and Stratford on Sunday. On the return journey they were accompanied by their son Oscar who has completed his term at the Stratford Normal.

New 160th Commander

LIEUT.-COL. DON. SUTHERLAND

We have been fortunate in securing a good photograph in uniform of Col. Sutherland which we here reproduce for our readers.

Engagement Announced

The engagement is announced of Miss Ruth Fairburne Howie, younger daughter of Mrs. D. B. Howie, Walkerton, to Mr. A. W. Partridge, Fairview Farm, Barrie.

Lang—Graff

The wedding was solemnized at the Walkerton R. C. Church on Tuesday morning of Miss Otillie Graff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Graff of Walkerton to Mr. Frank Lang of Brant.

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Smith announce the engagement of their elder daughter, Cora Florence to Mr. George Bingleman of Simcoe, the marriage to take place the latter part of June.

Thrown From Rig

Mrs. Frank Sadlo and Miss Annie Brennan of Riversdale were thrown out of their buggy while driving through Kinloss, their horse taking fright at an auto. Miss Brennan sustained a fractured rib and Mrs. Sadlo was badly shaken up.

A Double Accident

A steer belonging to Mr. Albert Waechter, got through the fence of the pasture onto the road where it by some means broke its neck. When Mr. Brindley, the Greenock mail-driver came along, his horse took fright and bolted for the ditch breaking [illegible] to bits.

Engagement Announced

The engagement is announced of Miss Anna Loretto, daughter of the late Mr. John Brennan and Mrs. Brennan, North Bay, to James Andrew Lambertus, Phm. B. North Bay, son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Lambertus, Walkerton, Ont. the marriage to take place quietly June 25th.

Lawn Box Social

A lawn box social under the auspices of the Catholic Ladies of Centre Brant will be held on Mr. Ed. O'Connor's lawn, Solway, on Wednesday evening, June 20th, commencing at 7 o'clock when a good program will be rendered and refreshments served. Admission 25c and 10c, ladies bringing boxes free.

Buggy Turned Somersault

A peculiar accident happened on the narrow roadway near Vesta on Saturday. A young man and his lady friend were out driving when their horse became frightened and went over the steep bank. The buggy is reported to have turned a complete somersault without injuring the occupants beyond a few scratches. The animal was instantly killed. The roadway at the point where the accident occurred is exceedingly dangerous and should be protected to safeguard the public.

BORN

INCH—At the Bruce County Hospital Walkerton on Sunday, June 10th, to Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Inch of Saskatoon (nee Stella Lewis) a daughter.

A SAD DROWNING

Twelve Year Old Walkerton Lad Perished in the Mill Race Three Days Before his Sister's Wedding.

A sad drowning accident occurred in the mill-race just below the dam about 2.30 p. m. on Saturday afternoon in which Mr. Adam Graf's twelve year old son, Lawrence, lost his life. Lawrence was along with a crowd of boys about his own age who were fishing at the dam. He had brought along a bathing suit and went in swimming alone in the race. He told his companions that he could swim but the water was so chilly that he no doubt took cramps and quickly sank in the deep water. One of the small boys reached out a fishing pole but he was apparently too overcome to grasp it. The body was recovered by letting the water out of the race and by this time life had long been extinct. Deep sympathy is felt for the parents in their very sad loss. The fact that the young lad's sister's wedding had been announced for Tuesday morning served to intensify the tragic nature of the sad affair. Funeral service was held at Walkerton R. C. Church on Monday morning.

To Rent

Eight room dwelling, on Jane Street, Walkerton, formerly occupied by John Lockhart.—Apply Geo. D. MacKay.

Electrical Demonstration

An Electric demonstration will be given at the office of The Walkerton Electric Light and Power Co., commencing Thursday, June 21st at 3.00 p. m. and continuing until Saturday noon. The company cordially invites you to come and have a cup of tea with them and see how cooking, washing, ironing etc. is done by electricity, as we have a lady expert from Toronto supervising this demonstration. When you take into consideration the high cost of fuel and the low rate at which the company will give the current, cooking or washing by electricity is a point in economy worth considering.

Married In Philadelphia

The marriage took place in Philadelphia on Wednesday afternoon last June 6th of a former popular Walkerton girl in the person of Miss Daisy Wettlaufer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Wettlaufer of Walkerton to Dr. John Franklin Reeves of that city. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful presents, including a purse of gold of $350 from the groom's parents. After the ceremony the young couple left on an extended honeymoon trip to Atlantic City and New York. Both Dr. and Mrs. Reeves have signed up for Overseas service in the United States army, the Dr. being 1st Lieutenant in a Medical Corps and his bride a nurse in service of the Red Cross.

Adventures on Farm

Leslie McConnell, who is finishing his High School term on the farm at Jno. Hogg's out in Carrick is finding rural life exciting enough to suit the most fastidious. Leslie's first adventure happened the first week he was out in the country, when a large-sized cow landed him with a kick in the stomach that nearly put him down and out. But that little affair was tame to what happened to him last Wednesday afternoon. When the storm came up he climbed into a rig in the driving shed to get out of the rain. He hadn't been there long when a lightning bolt came in through the door, scattering spades and shovels in all directions and striking Les. in the hand with a blow that has made it so numb he couldn't move it. The hand is still very sore but getting better.

CONTENTS

Of This Week's Telescope

1—News About Town.
2—Editorial.
Soldiers' Letters.
3—Town and District.
Opening chapter of new Serial, "Inside the Lines."
4—Local News.
5—Country Correspondence.
6—Baptist Convention.
News About Town.
7—Town and District News.
Report of Coroner's Inquest into death of Mrs. Webb.
8—McBurney's Anniversary Sale Ad.

To Keep Eggs Fresh
Pack Them In WATER GLASS

A 15c tin is sufficient to keep 12 dozen eggs perfectly fresh for one year. Also in double size tins at 25c.

Hunter's Drug Store
Drugs and Kodaks Phone 35 C. P. R. Ticket Agency

THE REXALL STORE
Rexall Toilet Goods
Increase the delight of summer days
Harmony and Violet Dulce Talcums,
Disappearing and Cold Creams,
Rexall "Nice" for Excessive Perspiration, 25c
A. P. Sieveright
Drugs - Kodaks

WALL PAPERS
OF QUALITY
The newest effects and a wonderful assortment for the Parlor, Living Room, Dining Room, Hall, Bed Room, Kitchen, at very reasonable prices.
McCrum's

A
Harvard Brown Vici Kid
Princess Shoe
Made with 7in Champagne Cloth top, and new heel. One of the latest styles for Spring and Summer.
Price $7.00
Ramsey
The Shoeman

For Play Time
As well as for business you will find the same comfort, the same easy swing, and that snappiness of style in
Our Tailored Clothes
They retain their shape no matter how hard the service you give them. Come in and get a suit before your summer vacation.
Men's Furnishings
If you are particular about your collars, shirts, neckwear, underwear, sox, hats, caps, etc., come in and make selections here.
G. T. ROURKE
Quality Tailor and Men's Wear.
Phone 186, Walkerton, Ont.

WALKERTON TELESCOPE

Published Every Thursday
LORNE A. EEDY - PUBLISHER

Phone No. - 46
Phone No. (Nights) 146

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

Strictly in Advance	$1.50
If not paid in Advance	$2.00
United States, paid in advance (50c for Postage)	$2.00
Great Britain, paid in advance	$1.50
France, paid in advance (1.00 for Postage)	$2.50

50c additional if not paid in advance

WALKERTON, JUNE 14th, 1917

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE Ontario Hydro Electric took another stride in its great work by buying out the Ontario Power Company and preparing to generate electricity, as well as distribute it. The amount of money involved in the deal was $22,663,000, and possession will be taken on August 1. John Joseph Albright of Buffalo, N. Y., was the principal owner of the Ontario Power Company, and it is his 90 per cent of the stock that has been acquired on the basis of $80 per share, with a par value of $100. The Hydro Electric investment in Ontario is now, in round numbers, $70,000,000.

✦ ✦ ✦

AN agreement has been made between the merchants and townspeople of Renfrew whereby he delivery horses and drivers are to be released to help along food production and the people will carry their parcels home. The arrangement is evidence that the people in that town are thoroughly seized of the seriousness of the food outlook and are willing to put themselves to some inconvenience in order that food shortage may be lessened. Were this plan generally adopted it would not only be of valuable assistance in the present emergency but might lead to a permanent reduction in the delivery system which is greatly abused and has become a very serious item in the cost of doing business and in the increase in prices of foodstuffs.

✦ ✦ ✦

THE Toronto Globe, in a survey of the coal situation, notes that coal buying is too hasty, that there is no need of a buying panic, and that this sort of thing is tending to raise the price of coal. The increased wage scale is 24 and 30 cents a ton. The U. S. commission says this is a steadying factor in the coal industry, and that the May prices at the mine provide for this increase. Prices for May at the mines are quoted at $3.61 a net ton for egg, $3.84 for stove, and $3.93 for chestnut coal. The coal situation is declared to be absolutely dependent upon the railroads, and the congestion there is used as an argument for local prices. Increased freight rates are also pointed out as a cause for abnormal prices. It is possible that the difficulty with the railroads will be solved by important large quantities of waterbone coal. If this is done to any appreciable extent, it is stated that prices will develop a downward tendency.

✦ ✦ ✦

SITUATION AT OTTAWA

(Toronto Star.)

Liberal members at the capital are clinging to the hope that a common ground of agreement on the question of recruiting may be reached. With the Conscription bill coming down, there is noticeable a decided closing up of the reform ranks. Differences of opinion are being temporarily subordinated to a desire for party union until the details of the bill have been discussed. What ever spit may come later, the party is certainly more united to-day than it has been for weeks past. Many members still think a compromise possible.

Those Liberal members who are opposed to immediate conscription are not speaking kindly of Toronto's big Liberal rally. "We never know there are Liberals in Toronto unless the party is in trouble," said one. "And then they are against us." Another remarked: "That manifesto calling the meeting was altogether too much like the anti-reciprocity manifesto of 1911."

Liberals in general believe, and Conservatives privately acknowledge, that the resignation of the Hon. E. L. Patenaude is not such a handicap to the Government as the declaration of Hon. Albert Sevigny, M. P., that for his part he will not resign. The Conservatives want to be rid of Sevigny whereas they would have liked to keep Patenaude. But Sevigny will not get out unless he is kicked out.

Quebec is just now a problem for both parties. Some Conservative members are now advocating a new way of dealing with that Province. They say: "Let Quebec, if such is her desire, be excluded from the operation of the Conscription Act. But let it be on the understanding that as a consequence Canada will get rid of bilingualism in Parliament and schools. If Quebec makes such a choice, then we will see to it that there shall be only one official language in Canada. If we are going to divide on Conservative conscription, we might as well divide on bilingualism, too, and clean up both difficulties at the same time."

Soldiers' Letters

WOUNDED IN JAW AND ARM.

Pte. Wilfred McKay writes his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carl McKay from Edinburgh War Hospital, Bangour, Scotland:—

I got wounded in the left jaw, and some teeth knocked out, but it is getting along nicely now only I can't eat anything hard on account of the swelling. I also got wounded in the left arm, the muscle taken nearly all off. The wound is about nine inches long, and about three at the widest part. The doctors say I am very lucky as it didn't touch a bone or an artery or I would have lost an arm. The doctors say it will be six or eight months before it is better and they will have to graft skin on my arm. I am able to walk so that isn't too bad. This is quite an nice hospital just out of Edinburgh at Bangour. I am to have an X Ray on my face one of these days to see if all the shrapnel is out which I hope it is. I suppose you sent that parcel along. I won't get it now but it will go to the boys. I wish you would send me the paper. Well, mother I have told you all for this time, will write again in a few days. Hoping to hear from you as soon as you get this.

Wilfred

✦ ✦ ✦

BRUCE COLORS IN BRAMSHOTT CHURCH

Cap't Roy Whitehead of the 160th Battalions from Witley Camp on May 1st writes to Mr. M. A. Halliday, of Chesley, who donated the colors for the Bruce Battalion as follows:—

Dear Mr. Halliday,

Doubtless you will be surprised to get a few lines from me over here, but I want to write you re the disposition the battalion is making of the Colors.

As we would be unable to take them with us to France, it was the unanimous opinion of the officers that they be deposited in Bramshott Parish church till we return from France whenever that may be. We all thought this a peculiarly appropriate spot since the four boys of the battalion who died while we were at Bramshott last winter were all buried in the Churchyard there. The names are: Pte. N. Haug, Tiverton; Pte. S. Hooey, Chesley; Pte. R. E. McDonald, Wiarton; Pte. Colvin, Teeswater. The Battalion will march over there this Thursday about 8 miles from here. The ceremony of depositing, which is really as impressive as receiving them was, will be gone through and we will return to camp that afternoon. Dinner of course will be served to the men from the Field Kitchens which always accompany the Battalion now on long marches or tactical manoeuvres thro' the country.

We have no definite idea just when we will go to France. Some say the Division will be over by the end of this month, but there is nothing to go by. We are all equipped and fully prepared to move on an hour's notice, and the boys all seem anxious to be in the thick of it and be doing their bit, and fill a lot of the gaps that the heavy fighting has caused.

✦ ✦ ✦

GUNNER HINSPERGER IMPROVING

The following is an extract of a letter written from a London Hospital by Gnr. A. W. Hinsperger to his mother at Mildmay:—

"Slowly as the days pass, slowly but surely I am improving, continuing under the very efficient and gentle treatment kindly meted out by the good sisters and nurses employed here. It will not be very long before I will be on my pedestal again.

Hospital life is, as you know, not the most exciting and intelligent occupation in the world, nevertheless I have no reasonable ground for complaint, rather to the contrary, it's all praise of the very best kind for the people and this place. There are a number of blind people being treated here. From here they are sent to St. Dunstan's, an institution where it is said these unfortunate people are taught trades and occupations of various descriptions. The articles produced are placed in open competition with articles produced by men who can see.

This country in general has evidently resigned itself to the war at last, and now it seems a recognized fact that it is a fight to a finish. No doubt things are about the same old way around home, with the exception that the price of foodstuffs has soared to some extent. Such is also the case in this country, and many things are difficult to obtain even at those exhorbitant figures, but no real want is experienced, even though the nation is on rations. It is more of a precaution than urgent necessity.

There are plenty of visitors to the ward daily, bringing flowers, cigarettes and reading matter, so all in all you can see we fare not badly at all.

Well, so long, good people. Keep up heart, and everything will turn out satisfactorily. Yours as ever,

"Misch."

THE MERCHANTS BANK OF CANADA

Statement of Liabilities and Assets at 30th April, 1917.

LIABILITIES

1. To the Shareholders

Capital Stock paid in	$ 7,000,000.00
Rest or Reserve Fund	7,000,000.00
Dividends declared and unpaid	178,365.00
Balance of Profits as per Profit and Loss Account submitted herewith	421,292.96
	$14,599,657.96

2. To the Public

Notes of the Bank in Circulation	9,483,468.00
Deposits not bearing interest	27,101,587.86
Deposits bearing interest (including interest accrued to date of statement)	65,000,494.42
Balances due to other Banks in Canada	628,863.06
Balances due to Banks and banking correspondents in the United Kingdom and foreign countries	3,004,690.72
Bills payable
Acceptances under letters of credit	411,806.78
Liabilities not included in the foregoing
	$121,130,658.82

ASSETS

Current Coin	$ 4,706,486.82
Deposit in the Central Gold Reserves	2,500,000.00
Dominion Notes	7,050,790.50
Notes of other Banks	793,867.00
Cheques on other Banks	5,676,[illegible].67
Balances due by other banks in Canada	2,036.32
Balances due by Banks and banking correspondents in the United Kingdom	61,226.79
Balances due by Banks and banking correspondents elsewhere than in Canada and the United Kingdom	2,412,100.10
Dominion and Provincial Government securities, not exceeding market value	5,[illegible],807.19
Railway and other Bonds, Debentures and Stocks, not exceeding market value	3,904,251.24
Canadian Municipal Securities, and British, Foreign and Colonial public securities, other than Canadian	11,383,106.20
Call Loans in Canada on Bonds, Debentures and Stocks	4,687,983.57
Call Loans elsewhere than in Canada	3,661,430.47
	$63,[illegible]
Current Loans and Discounts in Canada (less Rebate of Interest)	66,737,908.74
Current Loans and Discounts elsewhere than in Canada (less Rebate of Interest)	377,589.42
Liabilities of customers under letters of credit as per contra	411,806.78
Real Estate other than bank premises	294,107.07
Overdue debts, estimated loss provided for	149,030.08
Bank Premises, at not more than cost less amounts written off	4,617,409.23
Deposit with the Minister for the purposes of the Circulation Fund	375,000.00
Other Assets not included in the foregoing	135,049.02
	$121,130,658.82

[illegible]

K. W. BLACKWELL, Vice-President. E. F. HEBDEN, Managing Director. D. C. MACAROW, General Manager.

Report of the Auditor to the Shareholders of The Merchants Bank of Canada

In accordance with the provisions of sub-Sections 19 and 20 of Section 56 of the Bank Act, I report to the Shareholders as follows:—

I have examined the above Balance Sheet with the Books of Account and other records of the Bank at the Chief Office and with the signed returns from the Branches and Agencies.

I have checked the cash and verified the securities of the Bank at the Chief Office against the entries in regard thereto in the books of the Bank as on 30th April, 1917, and at a different time during the year and found them to agree with such entries. I have also attended at some of the Branches during the year and checked the cash and verified the securities held at the dates of my attendances and found them to agree with the entries in the Books of the Bank with regard thereto.

I have obtained all the information and explanations I have required. In my opinion, the transactions of the Bank which have come under my notice have been within the powers of the Bank, and the above Balance Sheet is properly drawn up so as to exhibit a true and correct view of the state of the Bank's affairs according to the best of my information and the explanations given to me, and as shown by the books of the Bank.

VIVIAN HARCOURT,
(of Deloitte, Plender, Griffiths & Co.),
Auditor.

Montreal, 21st May, 1917.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson XII.—Second Quarter, For June 17, 1917.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, John xx, 1-18—Memory Verses, 15, 16—Golden Text, I Cor. xv, 20—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

As the next lesson will be the quarterly review, we must endeavor to summarize the last two chapters in this lesson. It may be a little difficult to arrange all the events of the resurrection day and of the forty days before His ascension in their correct order, but that is a grand and comprehensive saying in Acts i, 3, "He showed Himself alive by many infallible proofs." Then in John xx, 31, the reason of John's gospel, "These are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that believing ye might have life through His name." In His great prayer He said to His Father, "This is Life Eternal that they might know thee, the only True God, and Jesus Christ whom Thou hast sent" (John xvii, 3). He is alive forevermore, has the keys of hades and of death and has all power in heaven and on earth (Rev. i, 18; Matt. xxviii, 18), and it is for us to show these facts in our lives that others may know Him too. It does seem an amazing thing that even Peter and John had not received any of His sayings that He would rise from the dead on the third day (verse 9), though he had again and again so plainly said so (Matt. xvi, 21; xvii, 22; xx, 18, 19). Neither had Mary Magdalene nor the other women received these truths, with the one exception of Mary of Bethany.

How wonderful that He should appear first to Mary Magdalene and call her by name! (Mark xvi, 9; John xx, 16.) His reason for not allowing her to touch Him is so clearly and simply stated in xx, 17, that we cannot but wonder that it does not satisfy every one. The other women met Him a little later and held Him by the feet and worshiped Him (Matt. xxviii, 9, 10), so that between these two appearings He must have been to His Father and returned. Between His death and resurrection He was surely with the Father, according to Luke xxiii, 43, 46, but He was on His way to His Father in His resurrection body when He appeared to Mary and called her by name. Some time that day He had a special interview with Peter, then the walk to Emmaus with the two, and in the evening He appeared in the midst of those who were gathered in the upper room, with the doors shut for fear of the Jews. He showed them His hands and His side and twice said, "Peace be unto you" (xx, 19-23). He also commissioned them to go in His name and proclaim the forgiveness of sins. See also Acts xiii, 38, 39. It was on that evening that He said, "A Spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see Me have; handle Me and see that it is I Myself," and He ate a piece of broiled fish and honeycomb before them (Luke xxiv, 39-43).

Thomas missed a whole week of peace because he was not with the others that evening. But a week later Jesus came again and with the same "Peace be unto you" and asked Thomas to do just what he had said to the others he would need to do before he could believe that Jesus was risen from the dead. He saw and believed and exclaimed, "My Lord and my God." Jesus said, "Blessed are they that have not seen and yet have believed" (xx, 24-29). We should walk by faith, not by sight, for it is as we believe that we see (John xi, 40; II Cor. v, 7). In chapter xxi we have the record of the seven who went fishing, led into it by Simon Peter, perhaps because they were hungry, had no money and, it may be, had not seen the Lord for some time. Well, their toil was fruitless, for they caught nothing. So it is always without Him—nothing. In the morning some one called from the shore, "Have ye any meat?" and they had to answer, "No." At his bidding they cast the net on the right side of the ship and caught 153 great fishes without breaking the net. Then John recognized the Lord.

When they came ashore, before they brought the fish that they had caught, they found that their need had been anticipated, and they saw a fire of coals with fish laid thereon and bread. And Jesus said, "Come and break your fast." Greater faith in Him might have saved them the night of fruitless toil, for the blessing of the Lord maketh rich, and toil addeth nothing thereto (Prov. x, 22, R. V.). It was at that time Jesus three times asked Simon Peter, "Lovest thou Me?" perhaps because of his threefold denial, and gave him the thrice repeated command, "Feed My sheep and My lambs." He also told Peter by what manner of death he should glorify God, reminding us of Paul's determination that Christ should be magnified in his body either by life or death (xxi, 18, 19; Phil. i, 20). As Peter inquired what His plan for John was, Jesus replied: "If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee? Follow thou Me" (xxi, 21, 22).

The following verse makes it plain that Jesus never meant death when He spoke of His coming. Many are too much concerned about others instead of following Jesus fully themselves. Note that whether it was weeping Mary, or the fearful disciples, or doubting Thomas, or the disappointed fishermen, the cure for all was the revelation of Jesus Himself.

When boiling a custard add about half a teaspoonful cornstarch; this will insure its not burning.

If you wish to paint tinware, first rub the tin with pumice stone or sandpaper and apply a thin coat of varnish.

"JUNE"

SILVERWARE
For the Bride

The enduring gift, the useful gift, the one that pleases most.

What will it be—A cake basket, a fruit spoon, a bread tray, a salad set, a tea service, or a complete service of table silverware.

We have silverware which make exquisite wedding gifts in a variety of forms.

The price ranging from a dollar up. You can secure any pieces you want from our open sets of celebrated ware. Also beautiful pieces of Pearl handled goods.

R. L. GIBSON
JEWELER WALKERTON
Agent for The New Edison Phonograph.

A tiny amount of lemon juice added to cream while whipping will help it to "fluff" more rapidly.

The dishcloth is a poor thing with which to wipe pots and pans; it is not free from soap and grease.

BRONCHITIS
WAS SO BAD
Coughed Every Few Minutes.
DR. WOOD'S
NORWAY PINE SYRUP
CURED HER.

Bronchitis starts with a short, painful, dry cough, accompanied with a rapid wheezing, and a feeling of oppression or tightness through the chest. At first the expectoration is a light color but as the trouble progresses the phlegm arising from the bronchial tubes becomes of a yellowish or greenish color, and is very often of a stringy nature.

Bronchitis should never be neglected. If it is some serious lung trouble will undoubtedly follow.

Get rid of it by using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. This well-known remedy has been on the market for the past 25 years.

It cures where others fail.

Mrs. Geo. Letton, Uxbridge, Ont., writes: "I have had bronchitis so bad I could not lie down at night; and had to cough every few minutes to get my breath. I had a doctor out to see me, but his medicine seemed to do me no good. I sent to the druggist for some good cough mixture, and got Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. One bottle helped me wonderfully. I stopped coughing, and could lie down, and rest well at night. I cannot praise it too much."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; 3 pine trees the trade mark; price 25c. and 50c. Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

DENTAL

W. H. HALLADAY, L. D. S. D. D. S.
Dentist, Successor to Dr. Coram. Modern methods employed in all dental operations. Special attention to crown, bridge and inlay work. Three doors east of post office. Visits Cargill 1st and 3rd Thursday afternoon of each month.

C.L. GRANT, D.D.S., L.D.S
Graduate of Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario.
Dr. Lount's old stand.
Wisser Block - Walkerto

MEDICAL

DR. BROWN
Diseases of the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat, Neustadt, Ont. Will be at the Queen's Hotel, Walkerton, 1st Friday in each month from 1 to 4 p.m.

W. A. HALL, B.A., M.D., C.M.
Honor Graduate in Arts and Medicine at Queen's University. Member the College of Physicians and Surgeons. Office and residence on corner Colborne and Cayley Streets.

INSURANCE &
REAL ESTAT

Fire. Life. Accident & Health. Plate Glass, and Guarantee Insurance in the best of Companies.

Real Estate—Several desirable residential properties for sale.

Money to Loan, Conveyancing and General Agency. Splendid Mortgage Loan Company Debentures for investment yielding good interest.

GEO. D. McKA
Office Over Bell Telephone Age
PHONE NO.

INSURANC
FIRE, LIFE,
ACCIDENT,
AUTOMOBILE,
GUARANTEE.
MONEY to LOA
REAL ESTAT
Town and Farm Property
See my list before making a

OCEAN and
TICKETS TO ANY PA
THE WORLD.
I represent the Canadian Railway and all ocean companies — English, Ame Italian.
ISSUER OF MARRIAGE L

T. E. ATTWO
GENERAL AGENT
Walkerton - On

HOMESEEKE
EXCURSIO

MAY 8th TO OCTOBER
Every
TUESDA
"ALL RAIL" - also by
THURSDAY'S STEA
"Great Lakes Route
(Season Navigation)
Your Future is in th
[illegible]
Canadian P
W. B. Howard, Distric
er Agent, Toronto

Office
Stationery
For nice Stationery a ad from new type moderate prices. Try
TELESCOPE

Fulfills Every Claim

No furnace can do more than satisfy—but the "Sunshine" furnace absolutely and invariably does satisfy fully and completely when properly installed. Ask our local dealer to show you this good furnace, or write for free booklet.

McClary's
SUNSHINE FURNACE
LONDON TORONTO MONTREAL WINNIPEG VANCOUVER
ST. JOHN, N.B. HAMILTON CALGARY
SASKATOON EDMONTON

For Sale by Patterson Bros.

FIELD SEEDS

Our supply of Field Corn has just arrived. We have different varieties and the seed is excellent.

We also have a good supply of Turnip and Mangle Seed.

Don't forget we are selling Paint at 65c per quart.

S. W. Vogan

CANADIAN PACIFIC

Great Lakes Steamship Service
via Owen Sound
TEAMSHIP "MANITOBA"
aves Owen Sound at midnight ch THURSDAY (connecting ain leaves Toronto 5.25 p. m.)
Sault Ste Marie, Port Arthur
Fort William.
VICE via PORT McNICOLL
OMMENCES JUNE 2.

Plan Your Vacation Trip Now
POINT AU BARIL
MUSKOKA LAKES
KAWARTHA LAKES
LAKE MAZINAW
FRENCH and
PICKEREL RIVERS
RIDEAU LAKES
SEVERN RIVER
are delightful resorts and easily reached via C. P. R.

WINNIPEG and VANCOUVER
Toronto 6.40 P. M. Daily via 'The Pioneer Route'

Particulars from Canadian Pacific Ticket Agents or
. B. HOWARD, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, Ontario.

HOT WEATHER GOODS

NOW IS THE TIME to buy your summer goods, while there is a good selection to choose from.

We have a good assortment of
Hammocks, Lawn Mowers, Screen Doors and Screen Windows & Refrigerators.

We also have the three best Oil Stoves on the market, the New Perfection, Jewel, and Florence Automatic. Call and let us show them to you.

PATTERSON BROS.
Hardware Stoves Graniteware

HE CANADIAN BANK OF COMMERCE

SIR EDMUND WALKER, C.V.O., LL.D., D.C.L., President
D, General Manager H. V. F. JONES, Ass't General Manager

TAL, $15,000,000 RESERVE FUND, $13,500,000

FARMERS' BUSINESS

The Canadian Bank of Commerce extends to Farmers every ility for the transaction of their banking business, including e discount and collection of sales notes. Blank sales notes re supplied free of charge on application. 554

H. M. LAY, Manager Walkerton Branch.

Inside the Lines

By EARL DERR BIGGERS and ROBERT WELLS RITCHIE

Copyright, 1915, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

PROLOGUE

"Inside the Lines" first appeared as a stirring war drama of today, the best of its kind since "Secret Service." Its author, Earl Derr Biggers, is known to fame as the author of "Seven Keys to Baldpate." His later play has been novelized by Robert Welles Ritchie, and the story opens at the outset of the present great war drama in Europe. Caught by the swirl of events, a lovely American girl is detained in Europe and becomes innocently enmeshed in the machinations of spies and of the secret service of two contending nations. Every chapter is replete with mystery and incident, skillfully woven threads that blend to a surprising climax.

CHAPTER I.

Jane Gerson, Buyer.

"I HAD two trunks—two, you ninny! Two! Ou est l'autre?"

The grinning customs guard lifted his shoulders to his ears and spread out his palms. "Mais, mam'selle"—

"Don't you 'mais' me! I had two trunks—deux troncs—when I got aboard that wabbly old boat at Dover this morning, and I'm not going to budge from this wharf until I find the other one. Where did you learn your French, anyway? Can't you understand when I speak your language?"

The girl plumped herself down on top of the unhasped trunk and folded her arms truculently. With a quizzical smile the customs guard looked down into her brown eyes, smoldering dangerously now, and began all over again his speech of explanation.

"Wagon-lit?" She caught a familiar word. "Mais oui; that's where I want to go—aboard your wagon-lit, for Paris. Voila!" The girl carefully gave the word three syllables. "Mon ticket pour Paree!" She opened her patent leather reticule, rummaged furiously therein, brought out a handkerchief, a tiny mirror, a packet of rice papers and at last a folded and punched ticket. This she displayed with a triumphant flourish.

"The guard, you see, does not understand good French."

"Voila! Il dit 'Miss Jane Gerson'—that's me—moi-meme, I mean. And il dit 'deux troncs.' Now, you can't go behind that, can you? Where is that other trunk?"

"Pardon, but if I may be of any assistance"—

Miss Gerson turned. A tallish man in a gray lounge suit stood heels together and bent stiffly in a bow, nothing of the beau or the boulevadier about his face or manner. Miss Gerson accepted his intervention as heaven sent.

"Oh, thank you ever so much! The guard, you see, doesn't understand good French. I just can't make him understand that one of my trunks is missing, and the train for Paris"—

Already the stranger was rattling incisive French at the guard. That official bowed low and, with hands and lips, gave rapid explanation. The man in the gray lounge suit turned to the girl.

"A little misunderstanding, Miss—ah"—

"Gerson—Jane Gerson of New York," she promptly supplied.

"A little misunderstanding, Miss Gerson. The customs guard says your other trunk has already been examined, passed and placed on the baggage van. He was trying to tell you that it would be necessary for you to permit a porter to take this trunk to the train before time for starting. With your permission"—

The stranger turned and hallooed to a porter who came running. Miss Gerson had the trunk locked and strapped in no time, and it was on the shoulders of the porter.

"You have very little time, Miss Gerson. The train will be making a start directly. If I might—ah—pilot you through the station to the proper train shed. I am not presuming?"

"You are very kind," she answered hurriedly.

They set off, the providential Samaritan in the lead. Through the waiting room and on to a broad platform, almost deserted, they went. A guard's whistle shrilled. The stranger tucked a helping hand under Jane Gerson's arms to steady her in the sharp sprint down a long aisle between tracks to where the Paris train stood. It began to move before they had reached its midlength. A guard threw open a carriage door, in they hopped, and with a rattle of chains and banging of buffers the Express du Nord was off on its arrow flight from Calais to the capital.

The carriage, which was of the second class, was comfortably filled. Miss Gerson stumbled over the feet of a puffy Fleming nearest the door, was launched into the lap of a comfortably upholstered widow on the opposite seat, ricocheted back to jam an elbow into a French gentleman's spread newspaper and finally was catapulted into a vacant space next to the window on the carriage's far side. She giggled, tucked the skirts of her pearl gray duster about her, righted the chic sailor hat on her chestnut brown head and patted a stray wisp of hair back into place. Her meteor flight into and through the carriage disturbed her not a whit.

As for the Samaritan, he stood uncertainly in the narrow cross aisle, swaying to the swing of the carriage and reconnoitering seating possibilities. There was a place, a very narrow one, next to the fat Fleming; also there was a vacant place next to Jane Gerson. The Samaritan caught the girl's glance in his indecision, read in it something frankly comradely, and chose the seat beside her.

"Very good of you, I'm sure," he murmured. "I did not wish to presume"—

"You're not," the girl assured, and there was something so fresh, so ingenuous, in the tone and the level glance of her brown eyes that the Samaritan felt all at once distinctly satisfied with the cast of fortune that had thrown him in the way of a distressed traveler. He sat down with a lifting of the checkered alpine hat he wore and a stiff little bow from the waist.

"If I may, Miss Gerson—I am Captain Woodhouse of the signal service."

"Oh!" The girl let slip a little gasp, the meed of admiration the feminine heart always pays to shoulder straps. "Signal service; that means the army?"

"His majesty's service, yes, Miss Gerson."

"You are, of course, off duty?" she suggested, with the faintest possible tinge of regret at the absence of the stripes and buttons that spell "soldier" with the woman.

"You might say so, Miss Gerson. Egypt—the Nile country—is my station. I am on my way back there after a bit of a vacation at home—London I mean, of course."

She stole a quick side glance at the face of her companion. A soldier's face it was, lean and school hardened and competent. Lines about the eyes and mouth—the stamp of the sun and the imprint of the habit to command—had taken from Captain Woodhouse's features something of freshness and youth, though giving in return the index of inflexible will and lust for achievement. His smooth lips were a bit thin, Jane Gerson thought, and the outshooting chin, almost squared at the angles, marked Captain Woodhouse as anything but a trifler or a flirt. She was satisfied that nothing of presumption or forwardness on the part of this hard molded chap from Egypt would give her cause to regret her unconventional offer of friendship.

Captain Woodhouse in his turn had made a satisfying, though covert, appraisal of his traveling companion by means of a narrow mirror inset above the baggage rack over the opposite seat. Trim and petite of figure, which was just a shade under the average for height and plumpness; a small head set sturdily on a round, smooth neck; face the very embodiment of independence and self confidence, with its brown eyes wide apart, its high brow under the parting waves of golden chestnut, broad, humorous mouth and tiny nose slightly nibbed upward. Miss Up to the Minute New York, indeed! From the cocked red feather in her hat to the dainty spatted boots Jane Gerson appeared in Woodhouse's eyes a perfect, virile, vividly alive American girl. He'd met her kind before; had seen them browbeating bazaar merchants in Cairo and riding desert donkeys like strong young queens. The type appealed to him.

The first stiffness of informal meeting wore away speedily. The girl tactfully directed the channel of conversation into lines familiar to Woodhouse. What was Egypt like? Who owned the pyramids, and why didn't the owners plant a park around them and charge admittance? Didn't he think Rameses and all those other old pharaohs had the right idea in advertising—putting up stone billboards to last all time? The questions came crisp and startling; Woodhouse found himself chuckling at the shrewd incisiveness of them. Rameses an advertiser and the pyramids stone hoardings to carry all those old boys' fame through the ages! He'd never looked on them in that light before.

"I say, Miss Gerson, you'd make an excellent business person, now, really," the captain voiced his admiration.

"Just cable that at my expense to old Pop Hildebrand, of Hildebrand's department store, New York," she flashed back at him. "I'm trying to convince him of just that very thing."

"Really, now—a department shop! What, may I ask, do you have to do for—ah—Pop Hildebrand?"

"Oh, I'm his foreign buyer," Jane answered, with a conscious note of pride. "I'm over here to buy gowns for the winter season, you see."

"And this Hildebrand, he sends you over here alone just to buy pretties for New York's wonderful women! Aren't you just a bit—ah—nervous to be over in this part of the world—alone?"

"Not in the least," the girl caught him up. "Not about the alone part, I should say. Maybe I'm fidgety and sort of worried about making good on the job. This is my first trip—my very first as a buyer for Hildebrand. And, of course, if I should fall down"—

"Fall down?" Woodhouse echoed, mystified. The girl laughed and struck her left wrist a smart blow with her gloved right hand.

"There I go again—slang; 'vulgar American slang,' you'd call it. If I could only rattle off the French as easily as I do New Yorkese I'd be a wonder. I mean I'm afraid I won't make good."

"Oh!"

"But why should I worry about coming over alone?" Jane urged. "Lots of American girls come over here alone with an American flag pinned to their shirt waists and wearing a Baedeker for a wrist watch. Nothing ever happens to them."

Captain Woodhouse looked out on the flying panorama of straw thatched houses and fields heavy with green grain. He seemed to be balancing words. He glanced at the passenger across the aisle, a wizened little man, asleep. In a lowered voice he began:

"A woman alone—over here on the continent at this time! Why, I very much fear she will have great difficulties when the—ah—trouble comes."

"Trouble?" Jane's eyes were questioning.

"I do not wish to be an alarmist, Miss Gerson," Captain Woodhouse continued, hesitant. "Goodness knows we've had enough calamity shouters among the Unionists at home. But have you considered what you would do—how you would get back to America in case of—war?" The last word was almost a whisper.

"War?" she echoed. "Why, you don't mean all this talk in the papers is"—

"Is serious, yes," Woodhouse answered quietly; "very serious."

"Why, Captain Woodhouse, I thought you had war talk every summer over here, just as our papers are filled each spring with gossip about how Wagner is going to retire from the game or the Yanks are going to be sold. It's your regular midsummer outdoor sport over here this stirring up the animals."

Woodhouse smiled, though his gray eyes were filled with something not mirth.

"I fear the animals are—stirred, as you say, too far this time," he resumed. "The assassination of the Archduke Ferd"—

"Yes, I remember I did read something about that in the papers at home. But archdukes and kings have been killed before and no war came of it. In Mexico they murder a president before he has a chance to send out 'At home' cards."

"Europe is so different from Mexico," her companion continued, the lines of his face deepening. "I am afraid you over in the states do not know the dangerous politics here; you are so far away; you should thank God for that. You are not in a land where one man—or two or three—may say, 'We will now go to war,' and then you go, willy nilly."

The seriousness of the captain's speech and the fear that he could not keep [illegible] his eyes sobered the girl. She [illegible] out on the sun drenched plains [illegible] Pas de Calais, where toy vill[illegible]hedged fields and squat farmhouses lay all in order, established, seeming for all time in the comfortable doze of security. The plodding manikins in the fields, the slumberous oxen draw[illegible] harrows amid the beet rows, [illegible] circling over the straw hutches [illegible] the tracks' sides—all this denied [illegible] possibility of war's corrosion.

"Don't you think everybody is suffering from a bad dream when they say there's to be fighting?" she queried. "Surely it is impossible that folks over here would all consent to destroy this." She waved toward the peaceful countryside.

"A bad dream, yes. But one that will end in a nightmare," he answered.

(Continued on Page 6)

Town and District

Port Elgin's Band has had to suspend until after the war. Enlistments have taken many players, and for the first time in many years Port Elgin will be without the attraction of a good band.—Times.

160TH. VETERINARY OFFICER

Capt. Wm. Walks, who recently went overseas with the C. A. V. C. has been appointed veterinary officer to the 160th Bruce Battalion, at Witley Camp.

SOLDIERS LETTERS

Readers in receipt of letters from soldiers are invited to make use of The Telescope columns to give friends the latest tidings from the boys overseas. Every soldier has scores of acquaintances interested in his welfare and anxious for news of his life in the firing line, and publication of the letters in The Telescope is the easiest means of reaching these friends .. Care will be taken to avoid publication of any information coming under the ban of the censorship, and the original letters will be carefully preserved and returned.

DAHMS—PFOHL

A quiet, wedding took place at the Evangelical parsonage on Tuesday afternoon of last week, when Miss Lula M., third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Pfohl of Carrick, became the wife of Mr. Ira D. Dahms of the 6th concession. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. J. H. Grenzenback in the presence of a small number of the intimate friends of the contracting parties. The bride was assisted by her sister, Miss Mildred Pfohl, and Mr. Wilfred Dippel performed a similiar duty for the groom. The happy young couple will reside on the 6th concession of Carrick. Their friends extend congratulations.

FIFTY YEARS IN MINISTRY

Rev. [illegible] Young of Clifford, whose death occurred very suddenly last week was well known in Walkerton having preached here on many occasions. He was in his 80th year and in September 1916, completed his 50th year in the pulpit. He was pastor at Clifford for 24 years. He resigned his charge about 8 years ago, but continued to supply vacancies until a year ago when his eyesight failed and he was obliged to give up the work. He was Moderator of the Synod of Toronto and Kingston in the year 1893. / In 1867 he married he married Miss E. Buckham of Ottawa who predeceased him 17 months ago. He leaves behind to mourn his loss two sons and two daughters, Miss Katie at home; Mrs. W. Holliston and John B., of Saskatoon, Sask., and William J., of Calgary, Alberta.

ASSUMING COUNTY BRIDGES

A High Court decision rendered recenty is of considerable interest to all County Councils. A bridge in Ashfield township, Huron County was declared by the County Judge to be of the proper dimensions to be assumed by the County, but the case was appealed and the High Court ruled that the County was not liable for the maintenance of the bridge in question. The Bruce County Council has been assuming a great many bridges in recent years, and piling up its debenture debt for the purpose of building and maintaining them. Warden Izzard, County Clerk, [illegible], Reeve Wilkinson [illegible] and Reeve Filsinger of Carrick paid a visit to the Ashfield bridge on Monday, and as a result of what they saw quite a number of bridges are almost certain to be thrown back on the local municipalities.—Mildmay Gazette.

KINCARDINE TALKING HYDRO

Will Kincardine get Hydro-Electric Power? This is a question that has long been asked. It looks now as if there was a possibility of the town getting it. Mr. J. B. Watson, who is going to put up a new factory here, was in Toronto and interviewed the Commission. He had the good fortune to have Mr. T. C. James promise to come here on Wednesday evening and that gentleman and the Council will talk the matter over. If the people should decide to have Hydro-Electric, it would come here from Hanover-Walkerton way and could be installed by the first of September. Mr. James will be asked to give us an estimate on what it would cost to put the present line system in shape to carry hydro. It is possible that the town would be asked to take from 200 to 2[illegible] horse power at about $30.00 per h. p. This would give us plenty of power for all purposes and also allow it to be sold to the manufacturers, some of whom would be glad to run it in place of coal.—Kincardine Reporter.

THE TOWN COUNCIL

Much Routine Handled at June Session of Local Fathers—Meeting Ends With a Kick-up.

(See also page 3.)

The usual quiet discussion of the Council Chamber suddenly took on a very emphatic tone, when Coun. McCarter pointed out that Major Henderson was using the grounds at the South of the Town Hall for a driveway up to his garage and stated very pointedly that he should not be permitted to do so.

The question came up when Coun. Truax arose and stated that he and Coun. McCarter had agreed to allow Major Henderson to cut down certain trees to the North of his property and he had since learned that the work had been stopped by a member of the Council.

Coun. McCarter said it was a mistake. He had not given his consent. He had not understood it that way. But he noticed that Major Henderson was using the town property for a driveway and it should be stopped.

Coun. Russell said it certainly should be stopped. What member of the Council would tolerate it for a moment if it was his own private property.

Coun. Truax asked why one citizen only should be singled out for that sort of treatment.

Somebody mentioned Mr. Goode. also running over town property.

Couns. McCarter and Russell moved that the Chief notify John Henderson and Robt. Goode that making a driveway over town property would not be permitted and that they be given two weeks to make a driveway over their own property.

Coun. Truax called for the yeas and nays. The motion was carried on the following division:—

Yea—McCarter Sanderson, McKinnon, Russell—5.

Nay—Truax, Mayor Johnston.

News About Town

Local news on every page.

County Council meets at Chesley next week.

Mr. A. J. Hartman of Guelph spent Sunday with his family here.

Mr. O. E. Klein went to Guelph on business on Tuesday.

Mr. O. E. Klein's eldest boy, Gerald. is ill with an attack of grippe.

Rev. D. McLennan went to Wiarton on Children's Aid Society business Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Huether, of Guelph, spent the week-end with the latter's mother, Mrs. Todd.

Miss Barbara Wingfelder, who is training for a nurse in Detroit, is here visiting her parents.

Don't miss the opening chapters of the Telescope's new war serial "Inside the Lines" in this week's paper.

Mr. and Mrs. Alf. Atkins and daughter Pearl, motored here from Owen Sound on Sunday and spent the day at Mr. J. J. Schmacher's.

Mr. R. B. Ferguson received a cablegram from his daughter, Nursing Sister Annie Ferguson, on Tuesday stating that she had landed safely at Liverpool.

Rev. A. Johnston of Shallow Lake, occupied the pulpit of Knox church on Sunday last, Rev. Wilson conducting anniversary services in the Shallow church.

Miss Vera Hildred spent the week-end at the home of her sister, Mrs. A. Wesley. Miss Hildred rendered a appreciated solo in Knox church day evening.

L[illegible]ded Safely

Mr. D. McKerracher had a card from Miss Thirsk's uncle at Toronto stating that his niece had arrived safely in England.

Paris Green Scarce

Buy your paris green before the season opens, as there is a scarcity and may be hard to get when you need it. Sold at Patterson Bros. Hardware.

Lawn Social

A lawn social will be held at the home of Mr. August Pietsch in Brant on Friday evening June 29th, under the auspices of the Brant Ladies Hospital Aid. Proceeds in aid of Hospital.

Wedding To Day

The marriage takes place at Chesley to-day, of Mr. William Patterson, hardware merchant of Walkerton, to Miss Brown, sister of Reeve Wm. Brown of Chesley.

Lightning Strikes Manse.

During the severe electric storm of Wednesday evening last, a bolt of lightning struck the Manse. Mrs. Wilson sustained a slight shock but fortunately very little damage was done.

Annual Camp Meeting.

The Annual Camp Meeting of the North District of the Evangelical Church will commence at the camp grounds in Carrick on Wednesday, June 27th and will continue until Sunday July 1st. The first service will be held at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening.

THEIR GOLDEN WEDDING

Celebrated on Saturday by two Highly Esteemed Residents of the Township of Brant, Mr. and Mrs. David Thompson.

Fifty years ago the 10th of June, a sturdy young yeoman of King Township, near Toronto, named David Thompson and Miss Hannah Beatson, a blushing young bride, of the same township were united in the holy bonds of wedlock by Rev. Mr. Adams. The bridesmaid on that occasion, Miss Emma Beatson, now Mrs. Cullum, is still living, in Kansas, U. S. A. On Saturday last the jubilee anniversary of that happy event was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thompson, con. 9, Brant.

Many ups and downs have occurred in the enterevening years, but providence has been kind to the couple who that day plighted their troth. A fine young family grew up around their fireside in Brant and have gone out to take their own places in the world as good and worthy citizens. Mr. Thompson's assets at first consisted of a stout pair of arms, a good character, and a determination to overcome the difficulties of pioneer life. Faithful and intelligent work has brought prosperity in a large measure, and the aging couple are in a position to enjoy a comfortable old age and to see their family well started in life.

The children are:—Herbert, on the homestead; Mrs. H. S. Brocklebank, and Mrs. Alex. McIntyee of Brant; Hannah at home; Pauline, nurse, at Toronto.

On Saturday last the golden wedding anniversary was celebrated by a supper at which the members of the family and the grandchildren were present. Presentations were made to the father and mother in honor of the occasion and a happy time spent. The Telescope unites with the very many friends of this highly esteemed couple in wishing them long life and many happy returns of their wedding anniversary.

Local news on every page.

Don't miss the opening chapters of the Telescope's new war serial "Inside the Lines" in this week's paper.

Lost

A cameo pendant in Walkerton on Saturday night, June 9th. Finder please leave at this office.

Military Medal

Mr. M. G. Dippel has received the Military Medal won by his son, Gunner Louis Dippel on the Somme Front. Louis sent it home for safe keeping.

Read Every Page

Under our new home print arrangement the Telescope is now local from first to last. Don't look for all the local news on the outside page. A peep into the inside will reveal the fact that all pages are local and some of the best items are on the inside.

Married in Saskatchewan

Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Bell of Davyroyd, Sask, formerly of Brant have announced the marriage of their daughter, Elizabeth Frances, to Mr. Norman S. Symons of Readlyn Sask. which took place on Friday June 1st. Mr. and Mrs. Symons will reside at Readlyn Sask.

Water Tank Collapsed

The Grand Trunk water tank fell to the ground on Monday night about ten o'clock, collapsing with a roar that could be heard in all parts of the town. The tank has stood for a good many years and it is thought that the foundation gave way under the heavy weight of water, the tank being about full at the time. Fortunately it fell clear of the track and did no damage of any account. What remains of the big structure after its high-dive resembles an ordinary pile of slabs.

Pretty June Wedding.

A very pretty June wedding was solemnized in the Walkerton Lutheran Church at three o'clock yesterday afternoon, when Emma Matilda, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Ernest of Brant was united in marriage to Mr. Theodore Schauss, of Walkerton. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. H. Meuig of New Hamburg, in the presence of immediate relatives only. After the ceremony the wedding party repaired to the home of the bride's parents, at Prospect Hill Farm where a sumptuous wedding supper was served. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and costly presents testifying to the esteem in which the young couple are held by their many friends. Mr. and Mrs. Schauss will reside in Walkerton.

✣ ✣ ✣

THE JUNE SESSIONS

June sessions at Court House Tuesday, Judge Widdifield of Owen Sound presiding.

McKenzie, a farmer of Teeswater, suing C. P. R. and school section for damages for cattle killed, which he claims got on to track by school not maintaining a proper fence.

After a lengthy hearing the court ordered the C. P. R. to pay the plaintiff $275.00 damages, but found the school board not liable.

Clark & Son of Mount Forest appeared for McKenzie and McMurchy & Spence of Toronto for C. P. R.

MAJ. MCLEAN MOFFAT TOO

Members of 160th Batt'n Try to Have Popular Second in Command Retained but Cablegrams do not Reach Destination.

The impression recently spread among the members of the 160th Bruce Batt'n that Major Moffat, second in command, was also to be relieved of his command following the retirement of Lt.-Col. Weir. The idea of losing Major Moffat, who next to the Col. was the popular idol of the Battalion, did not please the officers and men, and cablegrams were despatched to Canada urging that every influence be brought to bear to have the Major retained in his command. The cablegrams never reached their destination for reasons that may be easily surmised but letters are now arriving from the members of the Battalion. Some well-informed people interpreted the changes to mean that the 160th will shortly be broken up to meet the need for reinforcements in the first four Canadian Divisions in France.

✣ ✣ ✣

Bought Drug Business.

Mr. Oscar E. Seigmiller son of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Seigmiller of Walkerton, who for several years, was drug clerk for H. G. Hunter, has purchased the drug business of the late John Coates in Mildmay. Oscar's many friends in Walkerton wish him success in his venture.

Farmers Will Speak.

The Bruce Preparedness League hopes to get some good suggestions from farmers for the Greater Production Campaign at the annual meeting at Chesley next week. Prominent farmers are expected to address the gathering and the results of the discussion will be forwarded in crystallized form to the Organization of Resources Com. at Toronto. Conscription will be one of the live issues up to be talked about.

Costly Carelessness.

A young farmer walked into a local shoe store one day recently and bought a pair of shoes for which he gave his cheque on a local Bank. The merchant was not acquainted with his customer, and when the Bank officials stated that they had no such account on their books, the merchant came to the conclusion that he had been fleeced and issued a warrant for his arrest. Chief Ferguson found the young man lived in North Brant and went out to arrest him when it was discovered that the whole trouble was due to a bit of carelessness on the part of the farmer, who had a bank account at a neighboring town and neglected to change the headline on the Walkerton cheque. However as a warrant had been issued, it was necessary for him to come to town and square the thing away. The victim is reported to be a young man of excellent character but it is safe guessing he will not make the same mistake another time.

✣ ✣ ✣

DID YOU "CATCH ON"?

What's happened the Telescope? was a question that greeted the publisher several times the past week. The question came from those who had overlooked the announcement of our "All Home Print" and who as usual threw the paper aside after reading the outside local pages. Did you look at the inside pages? Of course not, I don't read them. That is the very reason, my friend, why we have changed the form of the Telescope because—you don't read the patent inside sheets. Open your Telescope and you will see that every page from first to last is now a local page. It means more space devoted to local news, and a better all-around local newspaper. Overlook the inside pages and you miss some of the best items.

Those readers who saw the announcements of our new Home Print, and "caught on" realized at once that the Change means a big improvement—better all-round service for our readers.

✣ ✣ ✣

GONE TO HIS REWARD

(Continued page .)

He was a director of the Children's Aid Society. He constantly urged the value of good reading for the rising generation and frequently wrote letters to the papers under the pseudonym of "Citizen" along this line. He was Chairman of the Public Library Board at the time the new Building was erected, and devoted a good deal of time to the Library right up to the time of his death. In church and sabbath school-work he was a life-long faithful servant. He never turned a deaf ear to any call for help of any kind from any good movement either in church or everyday life. In his quiet, unaffected way he was a daily example of right living and a force for christian citizenship in the community.

His Early Days

Mr. Warren was of Scottish ancestry, first seeing the light of day on a bush farm near Acton in 1837, shortly after his parents had arrived from Inverness. In the Scottish settlement which took form around that neighbourhood, many stalwart lads developed a manhood which has made them leaders of national repute. Dannie Mann, now Sir Donald, was one of these, his parents being school chums of Mr. Warren. The father of Rev. T Albert Moore, Social Service Supt. of the Methodist Church, was another fellow scholar at the little school. The seven Warren boys of which James was the youngest, were all men of rugged physique, and three of them lived past the four score mark. The only surviving brother, who lives in Nebraska, is now past his nineitieth year.

Mr. Warren entered the office of Winter and Abery, Civil Engineers, at Milton in 1859 and completed his course with them. In 1864 he removed to Lucknow which was then a small settlement in the Bruce bush, but an important grain market. In 1870–71, Mr. Warren was engaged on the survey of the Wellington, Grey, and Bruce R'y. and located the line from Mount Forest to Wingham. He then spent some time locating mining claims for prospectors in the district, north of Port Arthur.

In the Northwest

In 1872 he was engaged by the Dominion Government to assist in surveying the Northwest Territories which had just been organized. Year after year until about 1910, he headed surveying parties through the unknown wilds, from Lake Superior to the Rocky Mountains, mapping out boundaries in the trackless prairies. Mr. Warren had many interesting experiences in those days but never once did he get into difficulties with the denizens of the prairies. He went on the principle that an Indian with a full stomach was always your friend, and when occasionally Redskins happened along, he ordered the cook to fill them up. Unfriendly Indians could easily steal the outfit's horses, but never once in his career did Mr. Warren have a horse stolen from him. He took a fatherly interest in the young lads from the School of Practical Service who accompanied him on these occasions. When some smart student from the School wanted to improve on Mr. Warren's methods, instead of sitting on the fellow, he usually let him try out his bright idea and "hang himself with his own rope," a most effective way of dealing with the overconfident youth. He never spared an encouraging word and he followed the careers of these lads with interest after they had gone out into the engineering world.

Until 1892 Mr. Warren made his home at Kincardine, where he met his wife, whose maiden name was Lillian Johnston, Besides his wife, he leaves three daughters:—Agnes and Ruth. at home; Winnifred, Mission teacher, now home from China.

Funeral Services.

Service was held at the home on Sunday evening, conducted by Rev. G. C. Rock assisted by Rev. D. McLennan. Mr. Rock pointed out the great consolation contained in the Gospel for those who trusted as the late Mr. Warren had done. On Monday morning the remains were taken by early G. T. R. train to Kincardine for interment, the following gentlemen acting as pallbearers:—Messrs. R D. Warren of Toronto, and James Warren of Acton, nephews: Messrs. E. T. Gibson, D. McKechnie, Norman Robertson, H. M. Lay.

Funeral service at Kincardine was held on Tuesday afternoon service being conducted by Rev. Dr. Johnston of Montrea brother-in-law of the deceased.

✣ ✣ ✣

BORN

Lorentz—In Carrick, on June 6th, to Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Lorentz, a son.

Schaefer—In Carrick, on June 3, to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Schaefer, a daughter.

Niesen—In Carrick, on May 31, to Mr and Mrs. Michael Niesen, a daughter.

Hesch—In Mildmay, on May 31, to Mr. and Mrs. Jos. A. Hesch, a son.

Lewis—In Carrick, on May 31, to Mr. and Mrs. William Lewis, a son.

Dietrich—In Carrick, on May 27th to Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Dietrich, a son

Peltier—In Carrick, on June 2, to Mr and Mrs. Edward J. Peltier, a daughter.

✣ ✣ ✣

THE WESTERN FAIR.

The dates for the Western Fair, London, Ont., are September 7th to 15th this year. Several thousand prize lists, maps, hangers and other advertising material will be mailed from the General Offices, Dominion Savings Building, in a few days. Any person not receiving a prize list should drop a line to the Secretary asking for one, and also stating the kind of entry form required. If space is required in any of the buildings for an exhibit it should be applied for at once in order that suitable arrangements may be made. The programme of attractions will be of a very high order and will be fully announced later. All information regarding any department of the Exhibition will be promptly given on application to the Secretary, A. M Hunt, Dominion Savings Building, London, Ont.

JUST BOY

Bubbling all over with sunshine and laughter,
Joy of the here and the dream of hereafter;
Rosy-cheeked, tawny-skinned, chin like a berry,
Eyes that are stars, all a-twinkle and merry;
Boy, boy, just little boy—
God keep him young in that land that is fair
With nothing to worry and nothing to care;
Whatever of beauty this life has within it,
He sees it and gets at its sweet in a minute;

Rollicking, roystering, bale little fellow,
With cheeks of the sunrise 'neath blown locks of yellow;
Boy, boy, just little boy—
God give him happiness all along the way,
He dances down life in his gladness to-day!

Sparkling and springing with motion and rapture,
A butterfly born for the morning to capture
And hold in the cup of their blossoms, distilling
The beauty and bubble of life 'round him spilling;
Boy, boy, just little boy—
Fashioned for fun with the sun in his soul,
God keep him sweet while the swift mornings roll!

Cheeks that are streaked with the delible marking
Of little soiled finger so fit for skylarking;
Lips that are flageolets trembling and squealing
With infinite measures of rare boyhood feeling—
God keep him dancing and prancing before us
Till the boy in us answers and echoes the chorus!

—The Bentztown Bard.

✣ ✣ ✣

Time to Cook Vegetables

Thirty minutes— Asparagus, peas, potatoes of medium size, summer squash, tomatoes.

Forty-five minutes— Young beets and carrots, onions, young parsnips, medium potatoes, baked, sweet potatoes, boiled.

One hour—String and shelled beans, cauliflower, oyster plant, winter squash steamed or baked, young turnips.

Two hours—Old carrots, beets and turnips.

Six to eight hours or more—Dried beans, lentils, and peas, baked in the oven, with water added.

PALPITATION
OF THE HEART
SHORTNESS OF BREATH
CURED BY
MILBURN'S
HEART AND NERVE PILLS.

Mrs. S. Walters, Matapedia, Que., writes: "I wish to let you know how much good I have received by taking your Heart and Nerve Pills. I was suffering from palpitation of the heart and shortness of breath. The trouble with my heart was caused by stomach trouble.

I had tried all kinds of medicine, both patent and doctors', but I found none relieve me like Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I believe anyone suffering like I did should use them. I only used four boxes and I now feel like a different person."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have been on the market for the past twenty-five years and have a most wonderful reputation as a remedy for all heart and nerve troubles.

Price 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

HIS HEART BADLY AFFECTED

"Fruit-a-tives" Soon Relieved This Dangerous Condition

632 Gerrard St. East, Toronto.

"For two years, I was a victim of Acute Indigestion and Gas In The Stomach. It afterwards attacked my Heart and I had pains all over my body, so that I could hardly move around. I tried all kinds of Medicine but none of them did me any good. At last, I decided to try "Fruit-a-tives". I bought the first box last June, and now I am well, after using only three boxes. I recommend "Fruit-a-tives" to anyone suffering from Indigestion".

FRED J. CAVEEN.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

The Central Grocery

Flour
All grades and sizes.

Potatoes
For Seed; different varieties.

Granulated Sugar
$8 50 per 100 lbs.

W. G. Searle
Phone 161 Walkerton

CENTRAL
Business College
STRATFORD, ONT.

Ontario's Best
Business College

Students may enter our classes at any time. Commence your course now and be qualified for a position by midsummer. During July and August of last year we received calls for over 200 office assistants we could not supply. Our graduates are in demand. Write at once for our free catalogue.

D. A. McLACHLA
PRINCIPAL

JEWELLR
OF ALL KINDS

Watches,
Clocks,
Cut Glass
Silverware
and Jewellry
of all kinds.

C. A. FOX, & SON

THE PEOPLE'S STORE

DO YOUR BIT

It is Everyone's Duty to Build up the Community in Which he Lives.

This can best be done by patronizing the industries of your vicinity.

The conveniences that are in the Stores and their Services are the "Magnetic Forces" which draw the people into the Community.

You can "Do Your Bit" by purchasing your needs at the local Stores.

If we just haven't the Article in Stock it is your asking that will bring it to us.

We are now in a position to Cater to your Wants.

Phone 53 J. H. APPEL Walkerton

NEIGHBORING VILLAGES & COUNTRYSIDE

News of the Week Collected by a Staff of Live Correspondents

GLAMIS

Miss Margaret McLennan of Grace Hospital, Detroit, is home on a short vacation.

Mr. Thomas McIntosh of Stratford was here seeing his father last week who we regret to report is critically ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Adam Miller, son and daughter, Mrs. Walker, and Mr. James Miller of Creemore motored here Saturday and spent over Sunday at Mr. Curries.

On Thursday last the Red Cross met at the home of Mrs. Neil McKay, where she served a tea in aid of Red Cross funds. The sum of $13.45, was realized.

Miss Reta McKinnon has been re-engaged as teacher in the village school for another year.

Miss Beatrice Johnston of Toronto is a guest of her friend Miss Florence Webb.

Mr. and Mrs. and Miss Agar of North Bruce Sundayed at John Wrightson,s.

Messrs. J. E. McCauley. James McLennan, George McKinnon, Misses E H. Howe-n, Margaret McKinnon and Laura Cunningham attended the Baptist Association in Walkerton last week.

Miss Daisy Cronin spent a few days with her sister-in-law Mrs. James Cronin of Kincardine,

Mrs. R. F. Harrison is spending this week with Chesley relatives.

Mr. and Miss Beacock of Wiarton visited his sister Mrs. W. J. Graham last week.

The Ladies Missionary Society met at the home of Mrs. (Capt.) P. McKinnon on Wednesday.

Miss McDougall has returned to her home in Paisley.

Mr. and Mrs. George Harrison of Chesley Sundayed at J. C. McIntyre

A number from here took in the play "The Village Doctor," given by the Tiverton Dramatic Club in Pinkerton on Tuesday. All report a good evenings entertainment.

An auto load of friends from Howick sundayed at Alex McKennitt's.

Alex Kirktown and sons have purchased a Ford car from Irwin Patterson.

Mr. James Begg has disposed of his Ford car and is now running a Chevrolet.

The following is the report of Glamis Red Cross Workers Society for March April and May. Donations of Material—Mrs. Webster, 2 pillows and cases; Miss McLeod, 2 pillows and flannelette; Mrs. Russel, cotton; Mrs. N. McKay, 2 pillow covers and cotton. Donations of Money—Mrs. Drehan's Tea, $12.02; Mrs. N. McKay's Tea; 13. 45; Receipts of songs sold by M. Deeham. 1 50; Mrs. Dan McKinnon, 2.00; Mrs. W. McNally, 1.00; Jack McNally, 1.00; Mrs. Neil McKay, 2.00; Collections at meetings, 2.97. Material forwarded to the Canadian Red Cross at oronto:—120 prs. socks, 24 pyjamas owels, 34 comfort bags, 48 y bags. Mrs. Dave wing a tea, proceeds Thursday June 14th. meeting is on June 21. socks ready to return send them in if poss- nningham on or before Society expect to have at to pack that day ke, personal property d pillow cases.

Laura Cunningham,
Secretary.

DMAY

of Elora visited at rents here over Sun-

risti ceremony was ob- Catholic congregation nday

Young People's Alliance of the ngelical church held a rally on Sun- evening. The program consisted of oruses, speeches etc. Messrs. J. A. hnston and Ed. Wittich sang a duet ry acceptably. Mr. Ed. Wittich oke on what was necessary to make Y. P. A. a success. Professor Wm. wn of Columbia University New gave an address on the idea of and before he spoke he placed the ian Flag and Stars and Stripes gether over the pulpit. This impressive to the congregat- one was delighted with rown's speech.

W. Geild, pastor of the Methodist church left on Monday morn- ng to spend a few days in Guelph. Mr. eild has been stationed at Mildmay for coming year.

he Epworth League of the Meth- st church after not having any meet- s for the past four months had the meeting on Wednesday June 6.

Mr. Shickler contractor has completed the foundation of William Hill's new house on the 10th con. Schwalm and Son have their carpenters on the job erecting the framework now.

Moltke is slated to play a game of baseball in the Mildmay park on Tuesday evening this week.

Mildmay was defeated in the first game with Moltke and are determined to win Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Hubnstein of New Hamburg are spending a few days in town. Mr. John Huhnstein's condition is very low and no hope at all is held out for his recovery, so a message was sent to his son Peter to hurry to his father's home as death was expected any time.

The Drug business of the late John Coates has been disposed of to Oscar E. Seigmiller of Walkerton an honour graduate of Toronto College of Pharmacy.

Mrs. E. Witter is seriously ill this week.

Mr. Ruschert of Kitchener and Miss Emma Diebel of Elmira visited the home of the latter over Sunday. They made the trip motorcycle.

A very severe electrical storm passed over here on Wednesday. It struck in Mr. John Hoggs' driving house where his hired man, Les. McConnel was in. A bolt of lightning came down and struck the building, the implements being shifted from their places and be, as a result from the shock, has his arm in a sling.

Buster Brown and Sunny Jim were certainly pleased to see so many out Saturday night.

The wedding of Mr. Ira D. Dahm to Miss L. M. Pfohl of Carrick, took place at the Evangelical personage at Walkerton, Tuesday June 5th, 1917 at 4 o'clock. The groom was supported by Wilfred Dippel and the bride by Miss Mildred Pfohl. The happy young couple will reside on the groom's farm on the sixth concession of Carrick. Good wishes for a long and happy life.

The farmers are washing sheep and find the water very cold for this time of the year.

Mr. Edward Fenner shipped two settings of Indian-runner duck eggs to Mr. Jonas Murray of Manitoulin Island.

Mr. Thos Hutton was busy sawing wood with his circular saw and gasoline engine for his father last week.

Rev. Thomas Wilson, pastor of Knox church Walkerton, showed Lime Light Views in the S. S. No. 3 Carrick, on the training of soldiers at Valcartier, the voyage overseas, some of the smaller battles in Europe, different types of machine guns, the Kings, Czars and Emperors, and different leaders of armies in Europe.

CARGILL

Dr. F. A. Parker of Wingham pent Sund ay at the home of Mr. C. W. Keeling.

Mrs. W. J. Clark of Pickering who has been visiting her daughter Mrs. F. F. Balsdon returned to her home in Pickering on Saturday.

Mr. James Fowlie of Orillia visited his brother R. A. Fowlie on Friday.

We are sorry to know that Mr. M. L. Ziegler is confined to his house with a swollen face we wish him a speedy recovery.

Mr. J. D. Schnett purchased a new Shetland pony and cart in Harriston on Monday.

Mrs. Geo. Keeling and Mrs. Bartle and children of Davidson Sask. are visiting at the home of Mr. C. W. Keeling.

Mrs. P. McNaughton of Latchford, Sask. is visiting at the home of Mrs. Agnes Keyes,

Mr. H. Gilce motored to Chesley on Monday night.

The members of the Girl's Auxiliary had a sale of home made baking on Saturday afternoon. They made $12.65.

Mrs. M. Bell and Misses M. and J. Hood visited in Walkerton on Tuesday

Mr. Jas. Alexander of Oshawa is spending a few days at his home here

Trimmed and untrimmed hats going at reduced prices. Call and see them L. M. Kenna.

PINKERTON

Mrs. (Rev.) W. Richardson and son of Arthur are visiting her parents at the Manse.

School has been closed here for a few days, Miss Diehl, the teacher, having contracted German measles.

Mrs. J. Walker of Toronto is visiting at Mr. T. Houstn's.

Mrs. Jas. Murray is visiting friends at Molesworth.

Miss Alma Reid of Toronto is spending a few days at her home here.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Wilson of Toronto are visiting at Mr. Adam Reid's.

Mr. R. L. Garland of Palmerston spent Sunday at his home here.

Anniversary services will be conducted in the Presbyterian Church here next Sunday morning and evening by Rev. Mr. Hilts of Chesley.

The Tiverton Dramatic Club presented the play "Untangling Tony" in the C. O. F. Hall here, to a crowded house and a goodly sum was realized for the Red Cross Society.

OTTER CREEK

Mr. and Mrs. Voigt and daughter of Brant, were visiting relatives here on Sunday.

Mrs. Riech and daughter were visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Holfarth on Sunday.

This community is overflowing with the sound of Wedding Bells.

Mr. and Mrs. Rumich and daughter of Brant, were visiting relatives here on Sunday.

Mrs. Peter Hutton of Bruce, is visiting at her home at Mr. Thomas Hickling's.

Miss Mabel Pfohl of London spent a few days at her home here.

Mr. Ferdinand Wickie is very seriously ill with LaGrippe.

Mr. Capel of Brant, made a business trip here.

Master Armond Frye of Walkerton, spent Sunday with his friends here.

Miss McKinnon of Bruce, is visiting her sister, Mrs. James Hutton.

FORMOSA

The marriage took place at the church on June 4th of Miss Matilda Anthony, daughter of Mrs. Jos. Anthony of Ambleside to Mr. Jerome Illig, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Father Brohman. The young couple will reside in Walkerton, where the groom has a position as fireman at the Knechtel Furniture factory.

HANOVER

Mr. D. E. Weir, former C. P. R. station agent at Hanover, has taken a position at Leanchoil, B. C.

Rev. W. I. McLean and Mrs. McLean left last week for Montreal to attend the Presbyterian General Assembly in Erskine church. Mrs. McLean will also visit relatives in Quebec

The members of the Hanover Junior League were given an auto ride to Walkerton through the kindness of members and friends of the church.

Thirty-two members of the R. C. Congregation enrolled in the Holy Name Society.

William Mahn, an employee of the Cement Works, was wound around a shaft and badly bruised about the head and body. His clothes were literally torn off him. Fortunately he succeeded in getting free before being seriously injured.

A very impressive marriage ceremony was conducted in Salem Evangelical church, on Tuesday, June, 5, at high noon, when Miss Rosina, youngest daughter of Louis Eydt of Hanover, and Mr. Herman Hartwick of Tonawanda, N. Y., were joined in holy wedlock by Rev. A. W. Sauer.

The hardware stores of H. Cross & Sons and W. J. Sarvis were burglarized last week. The articles taken in each case would appear to indicate that the thefts were perpetrated by boys. The local police are working on the case and expect to make an arrest shortly.

Max Lockie, a popular ex-Hanover boy, who enlisted in Calgary in the 78th Artillery, is reported wounded. His father, Mr. James Lockie, who is now residing in Buffalo has received work to this effect. The Post yesterday received a letter from Mr. J. A. Lockie of Buffalo which stated: "Have a telegram from Ottawa saying brother Maxwell had been shot in hand and head and was in the Moore Hospital."

RIVERSDALE

Misses. Frances Lockridge and Jean Kennedy and Messrs. Eugene Dietrich, Cleo. Beninger and J. C. Shoebottom of Wingham Sundayed with friends here.

Mrs. L. Beninger is visiting friends and relatives in Rochester and Buffalo.

Mr. and Mrs. Scharbach spent Sunday at Mr. Lenahans of Westford.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Kelp made a flying trip through the burg on Sunday.

CHEPSTOW

Miss Johanna Lang of Buffalo, N. Y. returned to her home last week.

Albert Anstett who had been chef in a Muskoka lumber camp has returned to his home and will boost production rather than cater to the ravenous appetites of the northern axemen.

Rev. Fr. Kuntz of Kitchener assisted in the Corpus Christi ceremonies which were observed here on Sunday.

Keen regret is occasioned through the tragic drowning at Walkerton on Saturday of Lorne, youngest son of Mr and Mrs. Adam Graf. former residents of this place. A number from here attended the funeral service at Walkerton on Monday morning.

F. J. Phelan of the Galt Collegiate Staff is home for the vacation which opens somewhat earlier owing to numerous enlistments of the Students for farm work.

Leo Goodrow of Hamilton is the guest of his brother, Rev. Fr. Goodrow at the parsonage this week.

The engagement of Johanna second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Lang to Geo. son of Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Anstett, was announced from the R. C. pulpit on Sunday, marriage to take place June 26.

BRANT

MAPLE HILL.

Jr. IV.—Pearl Sickel, Craigie Leach, Wilmer Glauser.

Sr. III.—Allan Burrell, Reuben Harnock, Laverne Brockelbank, Mayme Pinkney.

Jr. III.—Douglas Walker, Graham Pinkney, Anna Schilling, Grace Leach.

Jr. II.—Audrey Pinkney, Laurena Schilling, Gertrude Harnock.

Sr. I.—Ornell Pfohl.

Sr. Pr.—Edith Cooke, Emma Fisk.

Jr. Pr.—Margaret Fisk.

Pr.—Verna Lyttle, Mary Schilling, Doris Sickel, Chester Cunningham, Elmer Pfohl, Richard Burrell.

E. M. Teeple,
Teacher.

+ + +

GREENOCK COUNCIL

Knox's Hotel Pinkerton May 28th '7.

Council met as per adjournment as a Court of Revision, all the members present, the Reeve in the Chair.

After taking and subscribing the oath of members of said Court of Revision, appeals were deposed of as follows

Jas. Cunningham, Lot 27, Con. 8, Assessment reduced $400.00

E. C. Wilkins, Assessment on Prop. sustained

Saw mill property assessed to L. Schwass, was changed to John Wrightson, and Assessment of $400.00 on Mill was struck off.

Assessment of Pt. Lot. 35 Con. 8 changed from Mrs. Barnes to W. Neil.

The following names were added to the Roll, Alex McSween, Lot 8, Glamis plan, Tenant, Albert Brich, Lot 4 Con. 9 Farmers son

The following pathmastes were changed: T. Hanley changed to Jacob Letzgus, H. Lambertus changed to Geo. Bester, G. Bester changed to W. Austett.

Moved by Thos. Symon, Sec'd by G. W. Gilchrist, that the clerk be instructed to alter the Assessmnt Roll in accordance with the decisions of this Court and that the Reeve be instructed to sign the same as the Revised and corrected Assessment roll of the Township of Greenock for the year. A. D. 1917 and that this Court do now adjourn sine die. —Carried.

Thos. H. Purday, Clerk.

Council met at adjournment of Court of Revision. The minutes of last meeting were read and adopted.

Th following accounts were presented for payment.

John J Cassidy, Bal. Salary as Assess- 340. Postage, 3.50 $43.50; Jas. Symon rep. bridge Con. 3 $1.00; J. McTeer, Drawing tile and piting in Con. 4 $9.00; Wm. Taylor, Drawing tile and putting in on Base Line $10. 00; A. E Knox Room for Council meeting $1.00.

Symon—Campbell—That the forgoing Accounts being found correct, be paid, and that the Reeve sign checks for same. —Carried.

Gilchrist—Symon—That this Council grant the sum of Thirty-five dollars to the Red Cross workers of Union S. S. No 10 Bruce and Greenock, also the same amount to the Red Cross Workers of Riversdale. —Carried.

Checks for above were issued in favor of Mabel Nelson and Gare McDonald.

Sawyer—Campbell — That this Council do now adjourn to meet at Riversdale on Monday, the 26th day of June 1917 for general business.—Carried.

Thos. H. Purdy, Clerk

+

QUICK RETURNS

Our neighbor killed his Thomas cat,
For reasons all his own:
Then he was sorry for the deed,
He felt so sad and lone.

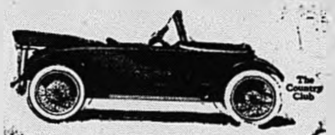
Next week he advertised for one,
And e'er he got replies
The old cat turned up home again—
It pays to advertise!

+ + +

WHO is the young lady who invaded a local drug store to ask for a package of Beaton Pal of Bean seed?

Overland

Fours



Smart—Economical

IT is an ideal car for people of taste and refinement—the great sweeping success of the year.

The Overland Country Club is the smart sport model of the small car class.

Grey body, black and nickel trim, and the price includes wire wheels with one extra.

Have a look at the Country Club right away—and a demonstration.

$1110

Overland Country Club

Four passenger	Five wire wheels
Individual front seats	4-inch tires
32 horsepower	Auto-Lite starting and lighting
Cantilever rear springs	106-inch wheelbase

Other Overland Fours

The Light Four	Model 85-Four
Touring $975	Touring $1250
Roadster $950	Roadster $1230

All prices f. o. b. point of shipment
Subject to change without notice

J. E. McGregor, Phone 142
Durham Street, Walkerton

GOLD DUST

digs deep after germs

Gold Dust not only cleans but sterilizes.

Soap merely washes over the surface, leaving a greasy film behind it.

Gold Dust "goes to the bottom," and insures absolute purity, and sanitary safety. Why not sanatize your home, as well as clean it?

• Soap needs muscle help; Gold Dust does all the hard part of the task without your assistance.

Gold Dust is a good, honest, vegetable-oil soap, to which are added other purifying materials in just the right proportions to cleanse easily, vigorously, and without harm to fabric, utensils or hand.

"Let the GOLD DUST TWINS do your work"

Gold Dust is sold in 5c size and large packages. The large package means greater economy.

Made by THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY, LIMITED, Montreal
Makers of Fairy Soap (the oval cake)

HOMESEEKERS' EXCURSIONS

LOW RETURN FARES TO WESTERN CANADA

ONCE A WEEK

Convenient Service. Modern Electric Lighted Equipment

Standard and Tourist Sleeping Cars and Colonist Coaches

For Tickets, Reservations, Literature and Information, apply to W. E. ATTWOOD, INSURANCE, WALKERTON.
Or write R. L. Fairbairn, G.P.A., 68 King St. E., Toronto.

CANADIAN NORTHERN RAILWAY

THE TOWN COUNCIL

Hold Regular Meeting on Monday Evening — Nightwatchman Gets Increase—Other Routine Business

It took the Council about two hours Monday night to clean up the June business, mostly routine matters.

All the Councillors were present except chairman Sam Vogan of the Finance Com. who had a perfectly good excuse, being away on his honeymoon.

Nightwatchman Swanston, who has been receiving only $1.60 a night for his services since 1913, asked for an increase to $2 a day. After a good deal of discussion his request was granted.

The British Sailors Relief Fund wrote explaining the organization of their Canadian canvass work.

The local Preparedness League reported that 14 bags of potatoes had been paid on Oct. 15th to Mr. A. O'Neil and 78 bags had been given out on the one-third crop plan the town to get one-third of the crop in payment for the seed potatoes.

Caretaker R. K. Sutton wrote suggesting that the town go in for level cultivation at the cemetery as done in many large places. "Lot-owners in the Walkerton Cemetery", he wrote, "are planting trees and shrubs, enclosing their lots with railings etc. and raising the ground to said lots. I take this opportunity to urgently request that the Council take this matter up, as these trees and shrubs by their roots and branches are in the road and a general nuisance, as are also fences on lots, and recommend that the council go in for level cultivation instead of raising the lots. A good many leading cemeteries in other towns and cities are going in for level cultivation as the lots can be cleaned much quicker, and with less than half the expence, and also that the general appearance is much better."

He requested that the Council obtain the services of a surveyor to put in stakes so that the Caretaker can keep on the line according to the plan of the Cemetery. The matter was left over until next Council to give the Committee a chance to look into it.

The Finance Committee recommended the payment of a long list of accounts.

A request from Miss Kate McCormick that her property at the end of the Durham St. oiling line be not oiled. —Granted.

News About Town

Local news on every page.

Chesley's tax-rate will be 32 mills.

Latest styles in wedding invitations at the Telescope.

Mr. Andrew Kirstine, South Line, has bought a Chevrolet car.

Mrs. Robt. Smith of Hanover visited old friends in town last week.

The South Bruce Farmers' Picnic will be held at Teeswater on Friday.

Pte. Jack Giles of Tiverton "died of wounds" in France, according to Monday's casualty lists.

Mrs. Rudolph of Hanover, and Mrs. Bush of Walkerton, were in town Monday.—Durham Chronicle.

Don't miss the opening chapters of the Telescope's new war serial "Inside the Lines" in this week's paper.

Mr Roy Heipel who was formerly employed at the Bobbin Factory left for Harriston to take a position in the Pork and Bean Plant.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Zettel of Chepstow will be sorry to learn that their little daughter Blanch, who has been very ill with pneumonia and indigestion, is not improving very satisfactorily.

Mr. Jos. Cox, G. T. R. conductor, was taken suddenly ill at his home here last Friday, and for a time his condition was serious, but we are pleased to report that he has recovered and was able to be out on Monday.—Southampton Beacon.

Our Home Print

J. G. Elliot of the Kingston Whig, President of the Canadian Press Association, writes us:—"I am very glad you have made the Telescope all home print. You have the right idea."

Mechanics Wanted

Wanted immmediately, cabinet makers, for chair work, also machine hands, sanders, finishers, and upholsterers. Highest wages paid. Apply at once. The Elmira Furniture Co. Ltd. Elmira, Ont. 23—25.

Rounding Them Up

The Chesley Enterprise says:—Sergeant Taggart has been rounding up a lot of young men in town who do not want to wait for selective conscription or any other kind before joining the colors. The Enterprise gives a list of eleven young men who have signed [illegible]

Arm Shattered By Bullet

Harry Heffernan, an old Walkerton boy, was among the invalided soldiers who returned on the same boat as Lou Anderson. Harry, whose home is at Guelph, had the bone in his left arm shattered by a bullet, and at first it was thought it would be necessary to amputate it. There is new hope of saving the injured limb by a grafting operation.

CALL ON GOVERNMENT

To Make Race-Track Gambling Unlawful and to Prohibit Manufacture and Use of Liquor—Baptists Have Fine Meeting

The Baptist Convention held here last week proved to be an inspiring and helpful gathering for the sixty or more delegates of the Walkerton district who were here for three days, reporting on the year's work, and planning for the coming year.

The mission reports presented showed that the Association had advanced materially in this department during the past year. In fact the only unfavorable thing about the gathering was the weather.

An outstanding address was that of Dr. I. G. Matthews of McMaster University on "The War and After". He outlined the duty of the Church in the new condition that would follow. Rev. W. R. Merrill of Toronto gave a talk on Sunday School problems which led to much discussion. This was followed by a thoughtful address by Rev. J. F. Dingman on the Supreme Need of the Church.

The addresses by Rev. W. A. MacLean of Toronto on "Western Missions;" Rev. A. B. Reekie on "Foreign Missions," and Rev. C. H. Schutt of Toronto on "Home Missions" placed the needs of the field and our responsibility before the delegates in a way that must make for enlarged vision of the mission question.

Rev. G. C. Rock was elected moderator for Ordination, and Rev. T. E. Meldrum, Clerk. After a two hours examination, it was unanimously agreed to ordain the candidate, Mr. John Marshall of Monk. The charge to the candidate was given by Rev. G. F. Dingman, ordination prayer by Rev. C. H. Schutt of Toronto. The hand of fellowship was extended by Rev. T. E. Meldrum. The ordination service was closed with the benediction. by the newly ordained minister.

Rev. G. M. Holmes of Goderich was elected moderator for the ensuing year and J. J. Cook of Mount Forest secretary.

The association expressed itself vigorously in a resolution calling on the Government to make racetrack gambling an unlawful act, and forward a copy to Sir Robert Borden, Hon. Mr. Hearst and the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario.

A protest was made against allowing any war-time encroachments of the Lord's Day act.

A resolution was passed calling on the Dominion Government to pass an act prohibiting the use of liquor in any form as a beverage, and to prohibit its importation, sale or manufacture.

CORRECTION.

In the "Bruce Herald and Times" it was stated last week that the late Mrs. Norman Webb was a life long member of the Baptist Church. For any person to be a member of a Baptist Church, they must make a profession of faith in Christ as personal Saviour, submit to the ordinances as He appointed them, and lead a consistent Christian life. As the late Mrs. Webb fulfilled none of these conditions she was never at any time in any sense a member of the Baptist Church.

Signed. G. C. Rock,
Pastor.

+ + +

IS EATON COMING?

(Orangeville Sun.)

Since the T. Eaton Co. of Toronto has opened up an agency in Brampton and will deliver goods twice daily in that town it is being asked on all hands if they will come to Orangeville. We have been informed that it is the intention of the gigantic concern to plant an agency in every important town in the country and that this burg is billed to have a local representative of the T. Eaton Co. here in attractive quarters before many weeks pass by. In fact it is said that a representative of the big store has already been in town looking over the ground and locating a site for the agency. Whether a building will be erected or one rented for the purpose we do not know, but just what effect the establishment of the Eaton agency in this town will have on local merchants is hard to say. That thousands of dollars have been going out of Orangeville for years to the departmental stores is a well-known fact. but with increased facilities that an agency would afford makes one come to the conclusion that many more thousands would naturally follow suit.

How is the local merchant going to meet this accentuated competition? Is he going to lie down, dry up and blow away or is he going to put up an intelligent battle for the trade that logically is his? Merchants in every town where the big store puts out its tallons will do well to make an organized effort to hang onto the trade they still retain and meet this new menace in an intelligent way. In order to do this it will require brains, complete co-operation and the putting aside all considerations. It is up to the merchants, however, to meet the old enemy and stave off his latest gas and liquid fire attacks.

Inside the Lines

By EARL DERR BIGGERS AND ROBERT WELLS RITCHIE

Copyright, 191[illegible], by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

"Tell me, Miss Gerson, when will you be through with your work in Paris and on your way back to America?"

"Not for a month, that's sure. Maybe I'll be longer if I like the place."

Woodhouse pondered.

"A month. This is the 10th of July. I am afraid— I say, Miss Gerson, please do not set me down for a meddler—this short acquaintance and all that—but may I not urge on you that you finish your work in Paris and get back to England at least in two weeks?" The captain had turned and was looking into the girl's eyes with an earnest intensity that startled her. "I cannot tell you all I know, of course. I may not even know the truth, though I think I have a bit of it, right enough. But one of your sort—to be caught alone on this side of the water by the madness that is brewing! By George, I do not like to think of it!"

"I thank you, Captain Woodhouse, for your warning," Jane answered him, and impulsively she put out her hand to his. "But, you see, I'll have to run the risk. I couldn't go scampering back to New York like a scared pussycat just because somebody starts a war over here. I'm on trial. This is my first trip as buyer for Hildebrand, and it's a case of make or break with me. War or no war, I've got to make good. Anyway"—this with a toss of her round little chin—"I'm an American citizen, and nobody'll dare to start anything with me."

"Right you are!" Woodhouse beamed his admiration. "Now we'll talk about those skyscrapers of yours. Everybody back from the States has something to say about those famous buildings, and I'm fairly burning for first hand information from one who knows them."

Laughingly she acquiesced, and the grim shadow of war was pushed away from them, though hardly forgotten by either.

So the afternoon sped, and when the sun dropped over the maze of spires and chimney pots that was Paris each felt regret at parting.

"To Egypt, yes," Woodhouse ruefully admitted. "A dreary deadly 'place in the sun' for me. To have met you, Miss Gerson, it has been delightful, quite."

"I hope," the girl said as Woodhouse handed her into a taxi—"I hope that if that war comes it will find you still in Egypt, far away from the firing line."

"Not a fair thing to wish for a man in the service," Woodhouse answered, laughing. "I may be more happy when I say my best wish for you is that when the war comes it will find you a long way from Paris. Goodby, Miss Gerson, and good luck."

Captain Woodhouse stood, heels together and hat in hand, while her taxi trundled off, a farewell flash of brown eyes rewarding him for the military correctness of his courtesy. Then he hurried to another station to take a train not for a Mediterranean port and distant Egypt, but for Berlin.

CHAPTER II.

From the Wilhelmstrasse.

"IT would be wiser to talk in German," the woman said. "In these times French or English speech in Berlin"— She finished with a lifting of her shapely bare shoulders sufficiently eloquent. The waiter speeded his task of refilling the man's glass and discreetly withdrew.

"Oh, I'll talk in German quick enough," the man assented, draining his thin half bubble of glass down to the last fizzing residue in the stem. "Only just show me you've got the right to hear and the good fat banknotes to pay, that's all." For an instant—half the time of a breath—a flash of loathing made the woman's eyes tigerish, but at once they changed again to mild bantering.

"So? Friend Billy Capper of Brussels has a touch of the spy fever himself and distrusts an old pal?" She laughed softly, and one slim hand toyed with a heavy gold locket on her bosom. "Friend Billy Capper forgets old times and old faces—forgets even the matter of the Lord Fisher letters"—

"Chop it, Louisa!" The man called Capper lapsed into brusk English as he banged the stem of his wineglass on the damask. "No sense in raking that up again—just because I ask you a fair question—ask you to identify yourself in your new job."

"We go no further, Billy Capper," she returned, speaking swiftly in German. "Not another word between us unless you obey my rule and talk this language. Why did you get that message through to me to meet you here in the Cafe Riche tonight if you did not trust me? Why did you have me carry your offer in—to headquarters and come here ready to talk business if it was only to hum and haw about my identifying myself?"

"Louisa—Louisa, old pal; don't be hard on poor Billy Capper," he mumbled. "I'm down, girl—away down again. Since they kicked me out at Brussels I haven't had a shilling to bless myself with. Can't go back to England—you know that; the French won't have me and here I am, my dinner clothes my only stock in trade left and you even having to buy the wine." A tear of self pity slipped down the hard drain of his cheek and splashed on his hand. "But I'll show 'em, Louisa! They can't kick me out of the Brussels shop like a dog and not pay for it! I know too much, I do!"

"And what you know about the Brussels shop you want to sell to the—Wilhelmstrasse?" the woman asked tensely.

"Yes; if the Wilhelmstrasse is willing to pay well for it," Capper answered, his lost cunning returning in a bound.

"I am authorised to judge how much your information is worth," his companion declared, leveling a cold glance into Capper's eyes. "You can tell me what you know and depend on me to pay well or—we part at once."

"But, Louisa"—again the whine—"how do I know you're what you say? You've flown high since you and I worked together in the Brussels shop. The Wilhelmstrasse—most perfect spy machine in the world! How I'd like to be in your shoes, Louisa!"

She detached the heavy gold locket from the chain on her bosom, with a quick twist of slim fingers had one side of the case open, then laid the locket before him, pointing to a place on the bevel of the case. Capper swept up the trinket, looked searchingly for an instant at the spot the woman had designated and returned the locket to her hand.

"Your number in the Wilhelmstrasse," he whispered in awe. "Genuine, no doubt. Saw the same sort of mark once before in Rome. All right. Now listen, Louisa. What I'm going to tell you about where Brussels stands in this—this business that's brewing will make the German general staff sit up." The woman inclined her head toward Capper's. He, looking not at her, but out over the rich plain of brocades, broadcloths and gleaming shoulders, began in a monotone:

"When the war comes—the day the war starts—French artillerymen will be behind the guns at Namur. The English"—

The Hungarian orchestra of forty strings swept into a wild gypsy chant. Dissonances, fierce and barbaric, swept like angry tides over the brilliant floor of the cafe. Still Capper talked on, and the woman called Louisa bent her jewel starred head to listen. Her face, the face of a fine animal, was set in rapt attention.

"You mark my words," he finished, "when the German army enters Brussels proof of what I'm telling you will be there. Yes, in a pigeonhole of the foreign office safe those joint plans between England and Belgium for resisting invasion from the eastern frontier. If the Germans strike as swiftly as I think they will the foreign office Johnnies will be so flustered in moving out they'll forget these papers I'm telling you about. Then your Wilhelmstrasse will know they've paid for the truth when they paid Billy Capper."

Capper eagerly reached for his glass and, finding it empty, signaled the waiter.

"I'll buy this one, Louisa," he said grandiloquently. "Can't have a lady buying me wine all night." He gave the order. "You're going to slip me some banknotes tonight—right now, aren't you, Louisa, old pal?" Capper anxiously honed his cheeks with a hand that trembled. The woman's eyes were narrowed in thought.

"If I give you anything tonight, Billy Capper, you'll get drunker than you are now, and how do I know you won't run to the first English secret service man you meet and blab?"

"Louisa, Louisa, don't say that!" Great fear and great yearning sat in Capper's filmed eyes. "You know I'm honest, Louisa. You wouldn't milk me this way—take all the info I've got and then throw me over like a dog!" Cold scorn was in her glance.

"Maybe I might manage to get you a position—with the Wilhelmstrasse." She named the great secret service office under her breath. "You can't go back to England, to be sure, but you might be useful in the Balkans, where you're not known, or even in Egypt. You have your good points, Capper. You're a sly little weasel—when you're sober. Perhaps"—

"Maybe I might manage to get you a position."

"Yes, yes; get me a job with the Wilhelmstrasse, Louisa!" Capper was babbling in an agony of eagerness. "You know my work. You can vouch for me, and you needn't mention that business of the Lord Fisher letters: you were tarred pretty much with the same brush there, Louisa. But, come, be a good sport; pay me at least half of what you think my info's worth and I'll take the rest out in salary checks if you get me that job. I'm broke, Louisa!" His voice cracked in a sob. "Absolutely stony broke!"

She sat toying with the stem of her wineglass while Capper's clasped hands on the table opened and shut themselves without his volition. Finally she made a swift move of one hand to her bodice, withdrew it with a bundle of notes crinkling between the fingers.

"Three hundred marks now, Billy Capper," she said. The man echoed the words lovingly. "Three hundred now and my promise to try to get a number for you with my people. That's fair?"

"Fair as can be, Louisa." He stretched out clawlike fingers to receive the thin sheaf of notes she counted from her roll. "Here comes the wine—the wine I'm buying. We'll drink to my success at landing a job with—your people."

"For me no more tonight," the woman answered. "My cape, please." She rose.

"But, I say!" Capper protested. "Just one more bottle—the bottle I'm buying. See, here it is all proper and cooled. Marks the end of my bad luck, so it does. You won't refuse to drink with me to my good luck that's coming?"

"Your good luck is likely to stop short with that bottle, Billy Capper," she said, her lips parting in a smile half scornful. "You know how wine has played you before. Better stop now while luck's with you."

"Hanged if I do!" he answered stubbornly. "After these months of hand to mouth and begging for a nasty pint of ale in a common pub—leave good wine when it's right under my nose? Not me!" Still protesting against her refusal to drink with him the wine he would pay for himself—the man made that a point of injured honor—Capper grudgingly helped place the cape of web lace over his companion's white shoulders and accompanied her to her taxi.

"If you're here this time tomorrow night and sober," were her farewell words, "I may bring you your number in the—you understand; that and your commission to duty."

"God bless you, Louisa, girl!" Capper stammered thickly. "I'll not fail you."

The orchestra was booming a ragtime, and the chorus on the stage of the Winter Garden came plunging to the footlights, all in line, their black legs kicking out from the skirts like thrusting spindles in some marvelous engine of stagecraft. They screeched the final line of a Germanized coon song, the cymbals clanged "Zum-m-m!" and folk about the clustered tables pattered applause. Captain Woodhouse, at a table by himself, pulled a wafer of a watch from his waistcoat pocket, glanced at its face and looked back at the rococo entrance arches, through which the late comers were streaming.

"Henry Sherman, do you think Kitty ought to see this sort of thing? It's positively indecent!"

The high pitched nasal complaint came from a table a little to the right of the one where Woodhouse was sitting.

"There, there, mother! Now, don't go taking all the joy outa life just because you're seeing something that would make the minister back in Kewanee roll his eyes in horror."

Out of the tail of his eye Woodhouse could see the family group wherein Mrs. Grundy had sat down to make a fourth. A blocky little man with a red face and a pinky bald head, whose clothes looked as if they had been whipsawed out of the bolt; a comfortably stout matron wearing a bonnet which even to the untutored masculine eye betrayed its provincialism; a slim slip of a girl of about nineteen with a face like a choir boy's—these were the American tourists whose voices had attracted Woodhouse's attention. He played an amused eavesdropper, all the more interested because they were Americans and since a certain day on the Calais-Paris express a week or so gone he'd had reason to be interested in all Americans.

"Henry, I tell you he does look like Albert Downs—the living image!" This from the woman, sotto voce.

"Sh, mother! What would Albert Downs be doing in Berlin?"

"Well, Kitty, they say curiosity once killed a cat, but I'm going to have a better look. I'd swear"—

Woodhouse was slightly startled when he saw the woman from America utilize the clumsy subterfuge of a dropped handkerchief to step into a position whence she could look at his face squarely. Also he was annoyed. He did not care to be stared at under any circumstances, particularly at this time. The alert and curious lady saw his flush of annoyance, flushed herself and joined her husband and daughter.

"Well, if I didn't know Albert Downs had a livery business which he couldn't well leave," floated back the hoarse whisper, "I'd say that was him setting right there in that chair."

"Come, mother, bedtime and after—in Berlin," was the old gentleman's admonition. Woodhouse heard their retreating footsteps and laughed in spite of his temporary chagrin at the American woman's curiosity. He was just reaching for his watch a second time when a quick step sounded on the gravel behind him. He turned. A woman of ripe beauty had her hand outstretched in welcome. She was the one Billy Capper had called Louisa. Captain Woodhouse rose and grasped her hand warmly.

"Ah! So good of you! I've been expecting"—

"Yes; I'm late. I could not come earlier." Salutation and answer were in German, fluently spoken on the part of each.

"You will not be followed?" Woodhouse asked, assisting her to sit. She laughed shortly.

"Hardly, when a bottle of champagne is my rival. The man will be well entertained—too well."

"I have been thinking," Woodhouse continued gravely, "that a place hardly as public as this would have been better for our meeting. Perhaps"—

"You fear the English agents? Pah! They have ears for keyholes only; they do not expect to use them in a place where there is light and plenty of people. You know their clumsiness." Woodhouse nodded. His eyes traveled slowly over the bold beauty of the woman's face.

(To be Continued)

COULD NOT SWEEP
BACK WAS SO S

Women are coming to understand [illegible] weak, lame and aching backs fro[illegible] they suffer so much excruciati[illegible] and agony are due to wrong actio[illegible] kidneys.

On the first sign of any wea[illegible] the back Doan's Kidney Pills [illegible] taken.

Mrs. L. Gonshaw, 563 Mann[illegible] Toronto, Ont., writes: "I [illegible] pleasure in writing you, stating [illegible] it I have received by using D[illegible] ney Pills. About three years [illegible] terribly afflicted with lame [illegible] was so bad I could not even s[illegible] floor. I was advised to use D[illegible] ney Pills, and before I had ta[illegible] there was a great improvem[illegible] back was completely cured [illegible] recommend 'Doan's' for [illegible]

Doan's Kidney Pills are [illegible] oblong grey box, the tra[illegible] Maple Leaf, so accept no ot[illegible] Price 50c. per box, 3 box[illegible] at all dealers, or mailed dire[illegible] of price by The T. Mi[illegible] Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering, direct speci[illegible]

RE ore o'clock lock al attrac-
e an op-
All orders
K
ERTON

CENTRAL Business Co
STRATFORD, ONT.

Ontario's B
Business Co

Students may enter our any time. Commence now and be qualified by midsummer. D August of last year calls for over 200 offic we could not supply. ates are in demand. for our free catalogue.

D. A. McLAN
PRINCIP.

GRAND TRUN
ATTRAC
TRI
To Muskoka Lake
Algonquin Par
Maganetawan
Lake of Bays
Karwartha Lak
Georgian Bay
Round trip tourist on sale from station at very low fares stop overs.
Berth reserva and full particulars Trunk Ticket Offices E. HORNING, Distri er Agent, Toronto, O

Spring Styles

AS SHOWN
Superior
Clothing are co
one brief senten and cheapest to town."

We'd like to you for your sprin or overcoat.

Hats, Caps, Ti
Sweater Coats,
ings at Slaughter

WOODMAN
Next to Vogan'

The Time
The Place
The Price

NOW is the time, Men, while our range of Spring Cloths is complete.

THIS is the place for ordered clothes Style and fit guara teed.

THE PRICE right and to suit every purse.

T. PYE
Clothier & Furnisher.

ART CLOTHES
COOK BROS. & ALLEN LIMITED

YOU should give the conscientiousness of this store a proper place in your consideration—we're conscientious in our service to you—we feel the responsibility your confidence puts upon us. It means that in you can get value and satisfaction tailored to your measure from a choice of a wide range of fabrics and models.

ART CLOTHES

WE have a knack of doing the unusual in the clothes. We put more into them than you get in any other line—better style, better tailoring, better cloth. We keep pounding away on the advisability of wearing Art Clothes—we're earnest about it—we believe in it sincerely. And when we once get you to believe, you'll have a [illegible] satisfaction out of your clothes.

Thos. Pye
Tailor - Walkerton

suits, ... persons ...
Robertson ... for Red Cross
Next regula...
All who have...
are requested ...
ible to Mrs. C...
that day. Th...
a good shipm... consisting of so...
bags, towels a...

MIL...

Mr. Ed. Diebe... the home of his... day.

The Corpus C... served by Roma... last S...

...AR WORKERS

...u can render the country by preparing to take ...siness Offices and Banks ...ung men for war service. ...and men will be called up ...ler the Militia Act for ... Who will take their ... Business Offices and ...ung women should prepare the NORTHERN ...siness College

...VEN SOUND, ONTARIO

...Term Opens April 10th. Cir...

...EMING, F. C. A., Principal

...LLIOTT ...siness College

... Charles Sts., Toronto.

...you well. We were asked ...sitions in two months and ...two other months. Write ...e. Enter now.

W. J. Elliott, Principal.

W... OTOGRAPH MEN AS M... AN ARE

It's a business matter and there is no fuss or bother. Your family, friends and business associates want your portrait.

FRASER STUDIO

IF YOU WANT a good, Reliable Boot. —Try a pair of our Cushion Soles made of solid leather.

FIRST CLASS REPAIRING

C. PETTEPLACE

PATENTS
PROMPTLY SECURED

We solicit the business of Manufacturers, Engineers and others who realize the advisability of having their Patent business transacted by Experts. Preliminary advice free. Charges moderate. Our Inventor's Adviser sent upon request. Marion & Marion, New York Life Bldg. Montreal; and Washington, D.C., U.S.A.

CARRICK COUNCIL

Town Hall, May 28th., 1917

Carrick Council met this date pursuant to adjournment, all the members present. The Reeve in the chair. The minutes of last meeting were read and adopted.

The Court of Revision was then constituted, all the members being duly sworn. The following appeals were heard and disposed of:—

Henry Halter's assessment was reduced $150; A. Oppermann's assessment was reduced $300; Geo. Kuenemann's assessment was reduced $200, Chas. Buhlman's assessment was sustained; Marion Hogg's income assessment was struck off, being absent; Wesley Stemler and Jos. A. Hesch had dogs struck off the roll.

Finance Report

The following accounts were referred to the Finance Committee and recommended to be paid:—

Sawyer Massey Co., shear for grader, $11.70; Formosa Elec. Light Co., street lights for six months, $57.56; P. Diemert, filling bridge, blind line, $5.40; Printing and Advertising, $6.60; Hy Schmidt, hauling lumber, $1.75; Isaac Gowdy, rep. grader, $7.20; S. F. Herringer, sal as assessor, $140.00; Hy. Schultheis, work on road drag, $2.70; M. Filsinger, 1 mtg and 2 days R. & B., $7.75; L. Doering 1 mtg, $2.75; J. Montag, 1 mtg, $2.75; A. Lewis, 1mtg, 1½ dys R. & B., $6.50; C. Wagner, 1mtg, $2.75.

Statute Labor

D. W. Clubine, 154½ hrs work, $27.04; Gus. Schnurr, 30½ hrs work, $4.53.

Mr. John Renwick, secretary of Trustee Board of Union P. S. S. No. 2 Howick and Geo. McIntosh, secretary of Trustee Board of P. S. S. No. 11, Carrick, were heard in connection Mr. E. J. Peltier's appeal.

Lewis—Montag—That Mr. E. J. Peltier's assessment be divided equally between the two above named School Sections, and that the Clerk prepare a by-law confirming the same. —Carried.

Messrs. E. Siegner and B. Goetz, representing the local branch of the United Farmers of Ontario, asked the Council for the free use of the hall for their monthly meetings.

Montag— Wagner—That the U. F. O. be given the free use of the hall, they to pay fuel and light. —Carried.

By-law No. 13 was read a first time

Doering—Lewis—That By-law 13 be now read a second and third time and finally passed. —Carried.

Communication from the Normanby Council was read, asking that all monies and work expended on Boundary Roads be supervised by Commissioners, instead of by Statute Labour. —No action taken.

Montag—Doering—That Messrs. Filsinger and Lewis be a Committee to look after the construction of the Darling and Kunkel bridges. —Carried.

Lewis—Wagner—That the Council do now adjourn to meet again on Monday, the 25th day of June next for the transaction of general business. —Carried.

+ + +

Don't miss the opening chapters of the Telescope's new war serial "Inside the Lines" in this week's paper

CONSTIPATION
THE COMMONEST ILL.

Constipation is one of the commonest ills of mankind and one too often allowed to go unchecked until some serious complication sets in.

If the bowels are properly looked after there will be no constipation, jaundice, sick or bilious headaches, heartburn, coated tongue, sour stomach, floating specks before the eyes, etc.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills will keep the bowels regular and cure all liver ills.

Mr. Philip McLeod, Turbot, N.S. writes: "I suffered from constipation ever since I can remember, and for years had pains in the left side of the back. If I walked across the kitchen floor I would have to sit down and rest. That I think was terrible for a man of 20 years of age. The condition of my system was shown by pimples breaking out on my face. I suffered so much pain and stiffness in my back I am sure my system was full of poison. Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills have entirely cured me.

I thoroughly recommend them to everybody."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c. a vial, 5 vials $1.00, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

A CRIMINAL OPERATION

Was Performed Upon Mrs. Norman Webb By Some Person or Persons Unknown — Jury Asks Crown Attorney to Investigate

The Coroner's inquest into the death of Mrs. Norman Webb was held at the Town Hall Friday night. After hearing a number of witnesses, the jury found that Mrs. Webb met her death as the result of a criminal operation performed by some person or persons unknown and recommended the Crown Attorney to discover and prosecute the offender.

Mrs. Griff Jones and her two daughters, neighbors of the deceased, and Mrs. Wm. Yates, were the first witnesses called. They told how they had been summoned by Mrs. Webb's little boy who told them his mother was very sick. They found Mrs. Webb in an upper room in what appeared to be a state of convulsions. Dr. Hall was the first doctor on the scene. He felt her pulse and stayed only a few minutes. He left as soon as Dr. Stalker came saying that as she was Dr. Stalker's patient he would leave the case to Dr. Stalker.

Dr. Stalker said he at once saw the woman's condition and suspected a criminal operation. She was in an unconscious state uttering sharp cries at intervals which seemed to indicate hysterics rather than pain. He suspected hysteria and waited to give her condition a chance to develope. He left the home about five o'clock without giving the patient anything, went to the Hospital, arranged for the ambulance, returned to the Webb home with the ambulance about 8.30 p. m. and had her taken to the hospital. He ordered morphine to get her some rest and quiet. He then left to visit a patient in the East Ward. While there he was called to the phone about ten o'clock by the Hospital and told that she had taken one or two convulsions. He returned to the Hospital and stayed with her until she died possibly at one o'clock.

Dr. Farewell, who with Dr. Sinclair, made a post mortem examination of the remains, stated that death had been brought about by acute sepsis. An attempt had been made to bring about an abortion with a sharp instrument and decomposition had set in resulting in the entire system being filled with poison. Dr. Sinclair coincided with Dr. Farewell's evidence.

The jury, after a few minutes consideration brought in their verdict as stated above. The jurymen were; — Major Henderson, foreman; R. K. Sutton, Carl McKay, A. McCartney, Con. Reichenbach, Thos. Pye, Robt. Irwin, Wm. George, Wm. Patterson, B. Ellinghausen, Richard Lee, John Cunio.

THE MERCHANTS BANK

Made Wonderful Progress During the Past Year—Increase in Assets of Nearly 25 Millions

The Merchants Bank of Canada during the year ending April 30th, 1917, established a record of progress which is exceptional even in these days of generally expanding bank business. In those twelve months the total assets of the bank increased by 25 per cent., rising from $96,301,361 to $121,130,530—and this on top of substantial though less spectacular increases in every preceding year without any break as a result of the war.

This brilliant expansion was brought about by equally remarkable advances in all classes of deposits and in note circulation. The non-interest bearing deposits advanced about ten million dollars, from $17,181,950 to $27,101,587, the interest-bearing deposits about the same amount from $54,920,009 to $65,000,481, and the note circulation took on an additional two million dollars; while a three-million dollar growth in the balances due to correspondents abroad made up the total of 25 millions which roughly represents the addition to the funds of the public placed in charge of the Merchants Bank during the year.

Against these public liabilities, which now total about $106,530,000 there are held liquid assets (consisting of cash, call loans, bank balances and high-grade securities) to the extent of $52,041,621, an increase of eleven millions during the year; so that the proportion of liquid assets to liabilities is 49.9 per cent., while no less than 15 per cent. of the liabilities is held in the form of actual cash current coin, Dominion notes, and coin or Dominion notes deposited in the central Gold Reserve.

Profits for the year much exceeded those of recent years, amounting to $1,120,808.84, thus allowing for the payment of war taxes, Pension Fund contribution and several donations, the dividend of $700,000 and an appropriation of $100,000 for writing down bank premises, and still leaving nearly $170,000 to add to the profit-and-loss balance. The whole report must be a source of gratification to Mr. D. C. Macarow, the general manager, and to the board of directors.

This Week's Telescope

Contains the Opening Chapters of Our New Serial

INSIDE THE LINES

By Earl Derr Biggers and Robert Wells Ritchie

"Inside the Lines" first appeared as a stirring war drama of today, the best of its kind since "Secret Service." Its author, Earl Derr Biggers, is known to fame as the author of "Seven Keys to Baldpate." His later play has been novelized by Robert Wells Ritchie, and opens at the outset of the present great war drama in Europe. Caught by the swirl of events, a lovely American girl is detained in Europe and becomes innocently enmeshed in the machinations of spies and of the secret service of two contending nations. Every chapter is replete with mystery and incident, skillfully woven threads that blend to a surprising climax.

WRIGLEY'S

Now THREE Flavours

Get a package of the new "JUICY FRUIT"— See what a joyous, lasting flavour has been crowded in to give you a great, BIG 5 cent package of refreshment!

Private Seal— he guards the gum!
MADE IN CANADA
Sealed Tight— Kept Right!
WRIGLEY'S SPEARMINT PERFECT GUM MINT LEAF FLAVOR
WRIGLEY'S JUICY FRUIT CHEWING GUM THE FLAVOUR LASTS
WRIGLEY'S DOUBLEMINT CHEWING GUM

—THE FLAVOUR LASTS—
Chew it after every meal!

Are You Ready for the Warm Weather ?

It has been slow in coming but that's all the more reason why it will come quick and plenty. You ought to be ready with everything needed for the warmest of summer sunshine.

Here are Some of the Most Important Lines, Reasonably Priced

White Blouses

Fine White Voile and Organdie. Embroideried fronts, large collars, lace edge trimmed. $1.00, $1.25 & $1.50.

Middies & White Skirts

Made from fine quality white Palm Beach Cloth and Pique.

Women's and Misses Middies

Plain white and white with Club stripe collars. Some have belts. $1.00, $1.25 & $1.50.

Women's Skirts

All white Palm Beach Cloth and Pique, also colored sports stripes. Very prettily made with two pockets. $1.25, $1.50, $2. to $3.50.

Women's Underwear

Two piece and Combinations. Fine Egyptian yarn. Short sleeve and sleeveless. Vests & Drawers. 10c to 75c. Combinations. 50c, 75c, $1.00 & $1.25

Women's Summer Hose

Silk ankle, black and white, extra quality lisle elastic top. 50c, 60c & 85c.

For The June Bride

Beautiful materiels in Ivory Crepe. Crepe Miranda, Crepe Georgette, Duchess Satin, Lace Flouncings, Nets, Pearl and Applique trimmings. All the very latest materials.

Men's Underwear

Balbriggan & Athletic Shirts and Drawers. Each 50c. Combinations $1.00 & $1.25.

First of the New Straw Hats For Men and Boys.

Sennit and Fancy Straw Sailors in new and becoming shapes, easy fitting leather sweat bands. Each $1.00, $1.50 and $2.00.

Soft Straws, 75c & $1.00.

Boys' Fancy Straw Hats

Good quality and good looking with fancy band. 50c, 75c & $1.00.

STEPHAN BROTHERS

OPENING AND CLOSING STO

On and after Wednesday June 6th this S will be open

Wednesday Evenings Until 9 O

and will close

Thursday Afternoons at 1 O'c

during the summer months. I will have spec tions for Wednesday evenings to give the publ portunity to do their buying in the evening.
taken will be delivered Thursday morning.

C. PATRIC

PHONE 165 WALK

WORTHY GROCERIES LOW PRICES

These features explain the phenomenal success of our great food market. W are well stocked with the choicest and usual the price is low.

GOODE & McKA

The People's Grocery

PHONE 67 WALKERTO

---

15 Days

McBurney's Mammoth

Anniversary Sale

15 Days

Commencing THURSDAY JUNE 14th, and Ending SAT. JUNE 30th

The Annual Event. Everybody Watching for It. Our Anniversary Sale.

Startling Sensational Snaps in Every Department of Our Store

We announce one of the greatest opportunities it has been our privilege to offer you opportunities not to be overlooked. You cannot miss them. Come at your e est convenience and share in the maruelous Bargains. We quote below some of the interesting items on sale, but you will find many others not included in this li

Prints

English and Canadian Prints, very scarce goods, worth 22c to 25c yd. Anniversary prices, 15c, 16c, 18c and 20c yd.

Percales

Heavy 36 inch Percales, light and dark Colors—Suitable for house dresses. Selling at 20c. and 22c yd.

Fancy Cotton Crepes, Etc.

Fancy Cotton Crepes, Voilles, Gingham and Chambrays—15c 18, 20c and 25c yd.

Embroideries

8c, 10c, 12½c Embroideries, a splend'd lot to choose from. Anniversary price 5c yd.

15c, 20c and 25c Embroideries, Laces and Insertions. Anniversary price 10c yd.

200 yds Corset Cover Embroideries, bought at a price Reg. 35c, 40c and 50c. Anniversary price 25c yd.

White Flannelettes

White Flannelettes at special prices 10c, 11c, 12½c, 16c, 18c, 22c and 25c. We are very fortunate in having these to offer you at less than mill prices.

Ladies' Hose

Fast black Ribbed Cotton Hose in all sizes. Sale price 15c pr.

Tan Silk Ankle Hose worth 50c for 25c pr.

Ladies Full Fashioned Seamless Lisle Hose. Only 25c pr.

Wonderful Waist Prices

Broken Assortment, all sizes in the lot. Reg. $2.25 for $1.75, $2.00 for $1.50, $1.50 for $1.10, $1.25 for 98c, $1.00 for 75c, 85c for 65c.

About 3 doz. Ladie's Waists slightly soiled. Reg. prices 50c to $2.00. Anniversary prices 25c and 50c each.

Yarns

Secure your yarns now for next winter or for present knitting at last season's prices. White, Grey, Khaki and Black.

Towels

White Turkish Towels 20c for 15c each. 20c Turkish Towelling on sale at 15c yd.

10 doz. White Huck. Towels, size 18 x 36 and 20 x 40, worth 35c each. Sale price 25c each.

Ladies' Raincoats

Ladies' $8.00 Rainproof Coats, nice silky poplin finish, all sizes in the lot. Colors Navy, Tan, Grey, Brown and Black. Anniversary price $5.75 each.

Girls' plain and fancy check raincoats with cap to match, only $5.00 each.

Ladies' Parasols

5 doz. Ladies' $1.00 Black Parasols on Sale at 75c each.

Pretty Parasols in plain light and fancy Colors, 4.50 for $3.25 $4.00 for 2.95, $3.00 for $1.95, $2.25 for $1.50. $2.00 for $1.25, $1.50 for 95c, $1.25 for 75c, 85c for 59c. Come early for choice ones.

Misses' and Ladies' Skirts

Misses Navy and Black Cheviot Skirts on sale at $1.50 and $2.00 each.

Ladies' Black Skirts in Cheviot, Ladies cloth and serge $7.50 for 4.95, $5.00 for 3.95.

Lace Curtains

$2.00 Lace Curtains on Sale at $1.25 pr.
$2.50 " " " $1.50 pr.
$2.25 " " " $1.25 pr.
$1.50 " " 3 yds long $1.25 pr.

—Splendid Silk Specials—

$2.00 Heavy Black Corded Silk, 36 inches. Sale price—$1.65.
$2.00 Heavy Black Duchess Silk, 36 inches. Sale price—$1.65
$1.75 " " " " 36 inches. Sale price—$1.49
$1.60 Black Paillette 36 inches. Sale price—$1.20

Plain Black and Colored Taffetas, plain Paillette and Fancy Silks at remarkably low prices.

—Remnants—

You will notice a big saving on all short ends of goods on the Remnant Table. Also a few short ends of Oilcloths and Linoleums.

Men's Cotton Gloves, 10c

15 doz. Mens' Cotton working gloves, reg. 15c pr. Anniversary price only 10c pair.

10 doz. 20c Cotton Gloves on sale 15c pr.

Men's Cashmere Hose

10 doz. Cashmere Hose worth 35c for 25c pr.

Boys' Jerseys and Sweaters

Boys' Cashmere and Ribbed wool Jerseys and Sweaters a old prices. A saving of 35 to 50% on present prices—Colors, Car inal, Navy, Brown, Khaki, Grey and Maroon, 75c, 85c, 90c, $1.00 to $1.50 each.

Ties and Collars

50c Ties and Summer Stock Collars, broken assortment, clearing at 15c. each.

Men's Silk Hose

Mens' Black Silk Lustre Half Hose on Sale at 25c pair.

Mens' Black pure Thread Silk Half Hose on Sale at 50c pair.

Mens' Linen Collars worth 20c, 15c each, 2 for 25c.

Shirts

10 doz. Mens' $1.00 and $1.25 Shirts, light and dark designs, stiff and French Cuffs. Sizes 14 to 17, on Sale 65c each.

Underwear

Mens' Union Balbriggan Suits, worth $1.50, on Sale at $1.00 per suit.

Balbriggan and Fine Mesh Shirts and Drawers worth 75c, on Sale at 50c each.

Straw Hats

Exceptionally low prices on Mens', Boys' and Childrens' Straw Hats. Just in Season. See window display.

Tapestry Rugs

Tapestry Rugs. Sizes 1½ yds x 2¼ yds, 2¼ x 3, 3 x 3, 3 x 3½, 3 x 4 at $8.00, $10.00, $11.00, $12.00, $15.00 to $20.00.

Some Surprising Prices on Mens' Suits

Ask to see Mens' Suits. On Sale, at $10.00, $11.00, $12.00 $13.00, $14.00, $15.00 and $16.00.

Rugs

Union Rugs at $6.00, $8.00 and $11.00

Velvet, axminster, Wilton, and Brussel's Rugs, at a saving of 25 to 50 per cent on present prices. Secure your Rugs now during this Sale. Curtain Netts; Scrims, Bungalow Netts, Marquisettes and Voilles, at low prices for Anniversary Sale.

THURSDAY MORNING, JUNE 14th, starts this Stupendous Sale. Commence to cut the High Cost of Living now by anticipating your dry goods needs and buying at this Sale. Tell your friends, they will thank you. Come in the morning if possible. The earlier the better and get your share before assortment is broken.

Wisser Block McBURNEY & CO. Walkerton

WALKERTON TELESCOPE

VOL. XLIX, NO. 25 | WALKERTON TELESCOPE, WALKERTON, JUNE 21st, 1917 | $1.50 A YEAR IN ADVANCE

All Home Print ▌ Local News on Every Page From 1 to 8

HIGH SCHOOL PROMOTIONS

List of Successful Students in the Different Forms Who Will take a Step up Higher

The following are the names of pupils promoted. These promotions are based on the year's record card on the final examinations, but do not necessarily hold good unless the pupils concerned attend regularly from the beginning of next term. The names are given in order of merit.

FORM I TO FORM II.

Honors—Charles McNab, Sylvia Grenzebach.

Pass—S. Reichenbach, E. Pinkney, A Condy, N. Shaw, B. Thompson, S. Bremner, G. Van Horne, I. Moore, L. Bryce, F. Young, A. Waechter, L. Wallace, L. Elder, W. Lettner, M. Pinkerton, G. Lambertus, L. Hergott, W. Inglis, F. Garner, F. Brocelbank, A. Chisholm.

Promotions from Form II cannot be made until the results of the Lower School Examinations are announced by the Department. Of the few taking only Matriculation Course N. Lay and William Ramsey have been promoted to Form III.

Curio From Vimy

Chester Cunningham has sent home an interesting souvenir from Vimy Ridge in the form of a paper knife. The blade is made out of the casing of an 18 lb. shell and the handle from a French cartridge and bullet. It bears the inscription "Vimy Ridge," 10th T. M. B."(Trench Mortar Battery.) It was skillfully made by a front line soldier. Chester says the boys are now stationed in a field and like open air sleeping for a change. Ted Wilhelm was on 10 days leave in England at time of writing. He asked the address of his brother, David Cunningham, who is now in England on his way to the Front.

BIT BROKE: HORSE BOLTED

Mr. George Childs and Family of Brant Thrown Violently From Their Rig While Driving to Church Sunday Morning

Mr. and Mrs. George Childs and two young children were the victims of a rather serious runaway accident on Sunday morning. They were driving to the Methodist church from their home in Brant. On Yonge St. their horse's bit broke causing it to run away. When it came to the customary turn at Mr. Benton's corner the animal turned so quickly that the buggy was overturned and the occupants thrown precipitately to the ground. Several citizens witnessed the accident and Mr. Benton had the ambulance on the spot in a short time. Mr. Childs who was in an unconscious condition, was found to have fared the worst. He was quite seriously bruised about the head, and his shoulder and thigh were injured. Mrs. Childs escaped with two bad bruises on the head. The children were more fortunate. Florence was slightly bruised in her side but Russel escaped without a scratch. Mr. Childs is still confined to the County Hospital but is expected out in a few days.

Here Over Sunday

Mr. Frank Morrison, Gen. Secretary of the American Federation of Labor, was a visitor in town over Sunday, coming in on the late train Saturday night and leaving on the early morning train Monday. Mr. Morrison was at one time a printer's devil on the Telescope. To-day he is secretary of an organization comprising several million members. Whenever his business finds him in a border city, he takes advantage of his comparative nearness to Walkerton to spend a few hours in the little old home at the top of the East Ward hill where his aged father and mother still live.

FRONT WHEEL COLLAPSED

Pinkerton G. T. R. Agent and Family had a Miraculous Escape from Death in Motor Accident Near Seaforth

Fred Phillips, Grand Trunk Agent at Pinkerton, his wife and child, and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Timmerman, had a miraculous escape from death in an auto accident on Sunday forenoon while motoring from Seaforth to Stratford.

The car was running at a fast clip about a mile out of Seaforth when one of the front wheels collapsed and the car landed in the ditch. The occupants were unable to extricate themselves and had to await assistance from passers-by. The party was conveyed to Seaforth for medical attention. Mr. Phillips was considerably bruised and the ladies and child suffered from shock, and the thrilling experience. The latter had to wait over at Seaforth until Monday before completing their journey.

A PUBLIC RECEPTION

Tendered Lou Anderson who Gave Best Talk yet on Life At the Front—Presented With Address and Gold.

Pte. Lou Anderson who arrived home last week from the Front, was given a rousing public reception at the Town Hall on Thursday evening.

Mayor A. P. Johnston occupied the chair, and the presentation of an address and ten dollar gold piece on behalf of the Town and the Preparedness League was made by Mr. John Rowland and Rev. R. Perdue.

Pte. Anderson told the audience something about his experiences and life in the trenches in an interesting way. It was the best speech that Walkerton has heard yet from a returned soldier.

The speeches were interspersed by a good program of music and readings, contributed by Misses Ermel, Dippel, Jean Norrish and the orchestra composed of Miss Oberle, John Korman and C. B. Robinson.

NEWS ABOUT TOWN

Local news on every page.

Miss Stella Blough is visiting friends at Listowell.

Monday, July 2, will be Dominion Day this year.

Wedding invitations in latest styles at the Telescope.

Mr. John Arscott paid a visit to Toronto this week.

Miss Jessie Patterson left on Tuesday to join her father in Aylmer.

Miss Beattie of the Elite returned to her home for the summer last week.

Don't forget that paris green is scarce. Buy all you need at Patterson Bros.

Mrs. John Weiler spent Sunday at the home of her brother, Mr. Smith of Cargill.

Mrs. Arch. Todd is visiting her daughter, Mrs. J. B. Huether at Guelph,

Mr. and Mrs Millard Stauffer and children of Toronto were visitors here this week.

Mrs. Frank Ryan left Wednesday to spend a month with her mother at Kitchener.

Mr. Abott of Riversdale left on Tuesday to attend the C. O. F. Convention at Hamilton.

Mr. Martin Kerney returned home from Cleveland, Ohio, where he had been working.

Mrs. L. Yack and son George of Greenock are the guests of Mr and Mrs. Val. Kaufmann.

Mr Edward Graf and Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Graf and family returned to Kitchener, after spending a week with the former's parents here.

Rev. G. C. Rock takes Anniversary Services in Tiverton next Sunday, and Rev. C. Waddell of Tiverton will occupy the pulpit of the Baptist Church here.

Mr. Harry Leech left on Wednesday morning to report at Royal Grenadier Headquarters, Toronto.

Miss Mattie Desmond, nurse of Toronto and her friend Miss Doyle are visiting with friends in town.

Miss Madge Sinclair, Art Teacher of Clinton High School, has returned home for the summer vacation.

Miss Ruby Norrish has been re-engaged for the coming year as teacher at Johnston's Corners School.

Don't forget the Electrical demonstration at the office of The Walkerton Electric Light & Power Co. to-day.

The Mennonites have been holding Camp meetings in Mr. Emke's grove a mile south of Elmwood the past week.

Sappers Hermie Runstadtler and Jim McKinnon of the Guelph Artillery spent the week end at their homes here.

Will Ramsey left on Friday for Toronto to take a position for the summer vacation in the G. T. R. freight offices.

Mrs. Herron and Mrs Graham of Toronto were here over Sunday to see their aged mother, Mrs. McKelvie, who is seriously ill with erysipelas.

Mr. John D. Little of Brant, is visiting his daughter, Mrs. Bruce Robertson at Barrow Bay. Mr. Little intends taking a three months trip to the West shortly.

Miss Vera Norrish of the Niagara Falls Collegiate staff spent the beginning of the week at her home here and left on Thursday for Toronto where she is engaged in examining papers.

A missionary from the Grand Ligne French Mission, Quebec, spoke at the Baptist Church on Sunday. He stated that conditions were bad in the adjoining province, politically and nationally.

It pays to buy your groceries, fruit and meats, at the store where you get the most for your money. We sell only goods of guaranteed quality, satisfied customers are our best testimonial.—Goode & McKay.

Mrs. Errol Tovell and son, Frank, of Claresholm, Alta. who have been visiting in the East, spent a few days this week with Mrs H. Tovell. Mrs. Tovell's husband, an old Walkerton boy, is now at the Front.

Mrs. James L. Smith and children of London, returned to their homes after spending a month with her mother here. She will be accompanied as far as Palmerston by her mother, Mrs. Hugh Fraser, who will visit friends in Ripley and Palmerston.

Wool Wanted

Highest price, 52c a lb.—Jno. Arscott.

Boy Wanted

Apply to G. T. Rourke, tailor and men's wear.

Girl Wanted

For general housework. No washing. Apply Mrs. R. M. Player.

Notice

Prairie Pride Flour is a standard brand for bread bakers, get our price on one or five bags. At all up-to-date grocers or at the mill.—Pletsch Bros.

Notice

A meeting of the 24th of May 1916 Celebration Com. will be held on Friday ev'g June 22nd, at 8 o'clock in the Council Chamber for the purpose of disposing of the large tents now in possession of the committee. All are invited to attend. Geo. D. McKay, Sec

BRUCE COUNTY COUNCIL

Will Likely Carry Good Roads By-Law at Present Session—Preparedness League Favors Conscription

County Council is meeting at Chesley this week.

On Tuesday the Council heard a deputation from the County Hospital Board, composed of: Messrs H. M. Lay, A. E. McNab, and N. Robertson who asked for a $3,000 grant. Referred to Finance Committee.

It is understood that the Council has practically settled upon putting the Good Roads By-law through at this meeting.

The Council took a trip to the Eugenia Falls Power Plant yesterday.

The Bruce Preparedness League held its annual meeting on Tuesday. The President, Judge Klein, sent his regrets that he would have to drop out of the executive owing to ill-health. Officers were elected as follows:—Hon. Pres. Judge Klein; President, W. D. Cargill, M. P. P.; Vice-Presidents (All Local Chairmen); Secretary, A. E. McNab; Treas., E. Roy Sayles.

The League heard some profitable discussion on agricultural problems and passed resolutions which will be forwarded to the Central Committee.

A resolution favoring Conscription was passed.

Returning From England

Lt.-Col. W. J. Douglas, formerly Commanding Officer of the 32nd Batt'n is one of the Canadian officers who are returning home from England. Col. Douglas spent some time at the Front and was badly shell-shocked.

Staff Re-engaged

The High School Board decided at a meeting held last week to re-engage all the members of the Staff for the coming year. The salary of Mr. A. D. Lamont B. A., Mathematics Master, was increased from $1150 to $1200

Awarded A Medal

Nursing Sister Jessie Wilson, daughter of Rev, and Mrs. Thos. Wilson of Walkerton, has been awarded a medal for long and faithful service with the Red Cross at the Front. Miss Wilson has now been in France for two years.

Read Every Page

Under our new home print arrangement the Telescope is now local from first to last. Don't look for all the local news on the outside page. A peep into the inside will reveal the fact that all pages are local and some of the best items are on the inside.

Lawn Social

A lawn social will be held at the home of Mr. August Pletsch in Brant on Friday evening June 29th, under the auspices of the Brant Ladies Hospital Aid. Proceeds in Aid of Hospital. Admission 20c. Children 10c. The ladies will provide candy, cake and lunch as usual.

Doubled Amount Asked

Rev. C. W. Cosens appealed to the Methodist Congregation Sunday morning on behalf of Calgary Central Church which is in financial difficulties. Walkerton was asked for $25, but the response on Sunday together with two private subscriptions previously forwarded, totalled $51.31.

Women's Institute

The Women's Institute will hold their summer meeting at the home of Mrs. N. C. McKay on Wednesday June 27th. Miss E. M. Collins of Ancaster will be present to address the women. This is the picnic meeting and the ladies will kindly provide the lunch. Everybody invited.

A WALKERTON OFFICER

Capt. G. H. D. Martyn Gets Appointment as Supervisor of Ordinance Issues of All Canadian Hospitals in England.

Capt. G. H. D. Martyn has received an important promotion in England, his new position being that of Supervisor of Ordinance Issues for Canadian Hospitals throughout England. His duty will be to inspect and report on Quartermaster's Departments of these various Hospitals. Capt. Martyn has been Q. M. of the Military Hospital at Shorncliffe up to May 28th when his new duties began. The D. D. S. advised Capt. Martyn that the Supervisorship was a big undertaking and would entail a great deal of travelling but that his experience at Shorncliffe would be a great help. Albert Earwaker, who has been associated with Capt. Martyn at Shorncliffe will accompany him to his new post, being attached as sergeant.

Jack's Military Medal

Mrs Patrick McGarity of Brant has received from her son, Jack McGarity, the Military Medal which was awarded him for gallant conduct on the battlefield. The part that the McGarity family is taking in the struggle for liberty deserves to go down in the history of Brant. Another son, Dan, now fills a hero's grave in Flanders, and the members of the family who have been left at home, are foremost in devoting their time and energy to patriotic and soldiers' work.

First War Decoration

The first War decoration to reach Walkerton since the beginning of the big Conflict, and in fact the first to be awarded to a Walkerton boy, came last week by registered mail to Mr. M. G. Dippel, being the Military Medal won by his son, Louis Dippel for gallantry on the Somme Front and sent home for safe keeping. This much coveted trophy is a silver piece of simple but handsome design, about the size of a half-dollar. On one side it bears the laurel wreath, and the words "For Bravery in the Field." and on the reverse side the head of King George V. King of Great Britain and Emperor of India. While its intrinsic value is small, the manner in which it was won, makes it of value beyond all price.

Walkerton Boy Wounded

Will Lindsay, a former Walkerton boy, has been reported wounded in France on June 9th. The first message which came to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Lindsay, Moscow Farm, Culross, stated that he was seriously wounded. A later message said that the injury was gunshot wound in the neck. Will was well-known in Walkerton, having gone to High School here and later joined the staff of the Bank of Commerce. He enlisted with the 59th Batt'n at Peterboro. At first he was in the Paymaster's Office but being anxious to get to the Front, he joined a special draft of the 75th and landed in France within two months. Will is a nephew of Mrs T. E. Attwood of Walkerton.

Tamblyn—Price

On June 16th a quiet wedding took place in St Paul's Methodist Church Toronto, when C. Alice (Kit) Price, youngest daughter of the late Dr. J. E. and the late Mrs. Price, former prominent residents of Walkerton, became the wife of Staff-Sergt. W. J. Tamblyn, eldest son of the late John and Mrs. Tamblyn of Blyth. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. Dr. E. Medd of Chatham, uncle of the groom, assisted by Rev. Newton Powell, pastor of the church. The bride, who was attended by her small niece, Isabelle Langford, was given away by her uncle, Mr. J. H. Gordon of Hamilton. During the signing of the register Miss Gertrude C. Sirrs of North Toronto sang, Mr. Knight, organist of the church, playing the Wedding March. The ushers were Sergt.-Major J. Lavelle Smith of Toronto and Mr. E. H. Munroe of Oakville. After the ceremony the guests motored to a tea shop, where the breakfast was served. The groom, who is a member of the Toronto public school staff, is on furlough from overseas, and will shortly return to train for a commission in the Royal Flying Corps. The bride, who is the youngest sister of Mrs Crawford Patrick, and comes of a well-known Walkerton family, has the best wishes for herself and husband of a very large circle of old friends here. Mr. and Mrs. Tamblyn are expected to pay a short visit to Walkerton after their trip.

CONTENTS

Of This Week's Telescope

1—News About Town.
2—Editorial. Soldier's Letter.
3—Town and District. Serial Story
4—Local News.
5—Country Correspondence.
6—Oddfellows Decoration News About Town.
7—Philharmonic Concert Telescope Letter Box
8—Local

Penslar
DYNAMIC TONIC

A true nerve food, supplying phosphorus and the needed lime and magnesia salts. Restores vitality and vigor to the nervous system, renews bodily strength, brings back your old-time energy and vim.

Dynamic Tonic also contains iron in a form which permits the system to take it up readily and enrich the blood.

If you are not strong, you owe it to yourself to get Dynamic Tonic and see how it will build you up.

Hunter's Drug Store
Drugs and Kodaks | Phone 35 | C. P. R. Ticket Agency

THE REXALL STORE
Rexall Toilet Goods
Increase the delight of summer days
Harmony and Violet Dulce Talcums,
Dissappearing and Cold Creams,
Rexall "Nice" for Excessive Perspiration, 25c
A. P. Sieveright
Drugs - Kodaks

WALL PAPERS
OF QUALITY
The newest effects and a wonderful assortment for the Parlor, Living Room, Dining Room, Hall, Bed Room, Kitchen, at very reasonable prices.
McCrum's

A
Harvard Brown Vici Kid
Princess Shoe
Made with 7in Champagne Cloth top, and new heel. One of the latest styles for Spring and Summer.
Price $7.00
Ramsey
The Shoeman

For Play Time
As well as for business you will find the same comfort, the same easy swing, and that snappiness of style in
Our Tailored Clothes
They retain their shape no matter how hard the service you give them. Come in and get a suit before your summer vacation.
Men's Furnishings
If you are particular about your collars, shirts, neckwear, underwear, sox, hats, caps, etc., come in and make selections here.
G. T. ROURKE
Quality Tailor and Men's Wear.
Phone 186, Walkerton, Ont

WALKERTON TELESCOPE
Published Every Thursday
LORNE A. EEDY - PUBLISHER

Phone No. - 48
Phone No. (Nights) 146

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

Strictly in Advance $1.50
If not paid in Advance $2.00
United States, paid in advance .. $2.00
(50c for Postage)
Great Britain, paid in advance .. $1.50
France, paid in advance. $2.50
($1.00 for Postage)
50c additional if not paid in advance

WALKERTON, JUNE 21st, 1917

EDITORIAL COMMENT

RALLY round the hoe.

+ + +

THE question of the hour:—"Are your potatoes up yet?"

+ + +

IT is Canadian soldiers and not Canadian politicians who are winning fame

+ + +

DON'T read American history—make it," is one of Uncle Sam's stirring calls to the young men of the country.

+ + +

"IF this knighthood and baronet business keeps up in Canada," says the Ottawa Citizen, "the rest of us will just naturally becomes valets."

+ + +

GEORGE HOWARD, Sales manager of the Pullman Car Company, rates newspaper advertising as ten times more valuable than magazine advertising.

+ + +

Men who make the mistake of marrying a girl like a magazine cover expecting her to go to work like a cook-book, must look for hard biscuits —Port Hope Guide.

+ + +

THE Orillia Times has issued a very creditable issue, to mark the 50th anniversary of journalism in Orillia. Probably no town in Canada is better served than Orillia by its local papers.

+ + +

THE WEEKLY SUN very wisely remarks: "It is the duty of all good citizens, who are permitted or deemed worthy to lead the people, at this critical time, to speak with moderation and above all not to say foolish things."

+ + +

MR. JOHN NELSON, publisher of the Vancouver World, paid a visit to his old home near Paisley last week. Mr Nelson has only recently entered the ranks of newspaper owners but already he is one of the most powerful leaders of public opinion in British Columbia. He championed Prohibition when it was an unpopular policy and had the satisfaction of seeing it win out in a short time. Nelson is a clean-cut manly fellow, with a forceful personality, and is regarded as a coming big man at the Coast. Twenty years or so ago he was a printer's devil in the office of the Paisley Advocate.

+ + +

FRESH AIR and sunshine are about the only commodities that have not been hit by the H. C. of L. Perhaps it is because they are "free, gratis, for nothing," that some people don't appreciate these blessings. If folks don't understand the value of fresh air in the house nowadays, the children who study hygiene at school soon tell them about it. But it is when you go to church or to public gatherings that the bogley of tradition hits you squarely between the eyes. We are not one of those who believes that the atmosphere takes on a sacred quality by being confined within the holy edifices where we worship on Sunday.

+ + +

NOT so many years ago, a young farmer lad, living near Brantford, presented himself as a probationer for the Methodist Ministry. His application was turned down by the District Meeting which declared that he would never make a preacher. The young lad persisted in preparing himself for the life work to which he felt called. After leaving College he went across the line and joined the American Methodist Church. Today he occupies the highest office within the gift of the Church, that of Bishop. Bishop Nicholson has proven to be a keen student along scientific lines as well as a man of great spiritual gifts. When he returned to his home town of Brantford last month as a guest of Conference, this man who had been judged unfit to make a minister, gave the assembled ministers the most scholarly and finest inspirational address of a life-time.

+ + +

DISCARDED PATENT "INARDS"

(Collingwood Bulletin)

The Walkerton Telescope has discarded the "patent inards" and is now all home print. Editor Eedy says the change means more work for the editor and greater expense, but it is an improvement which he hop[illegible] preciated. And so it sh[illegible] Telescope is a good week[illegible] the county town of Br[illegible]

ONTARIO AFFAIRS

NOBODY SEEMS TO LIKE THESE TITLES

Unfavorable and Sarcastic Comments on Another Hereditary Title—Like Plain "Misters"

If a man wishes to bring down upon himself the disapproval of the press and the people of Canada, one effective way in which he can do it is to accept an hereditary title. It was only a few months ago that a flood of protest and unfavorable comment came at the bestowal on a Canadian of such a title.

"In the free democracy of Canada," Mr. Rowell said at that time, "we are not improving conditions by importing hereditary titles passing from father to son. If this is the first, I hope it may also be the last." This statement, and the sentiments expressed in it, were echoed and re-echoed throughout Canada. The Ottawa Journal Press (Conservative) said: "The public attitude in Canada is well expressed in the comment of Mr. Rowell," and The Christian Guardian said that they would like to second with all the emphasis they might, the remarks made by Mr. Rowell regarding the granting of Canadian hereditary titles.

Now there is another flood of protest because another hereditary title has been granted. "A lot of Cheap John titles in the paper this morning. They are getting as common as dandelions," was the comment of the Toronto Telegram. "The hereditary title ought to be kept out of Canada. This country does not want a little aristocracy of its own," was the comment of the Mail and Empire, and the Liberal press joined in its disapprobation. The Toronto Star points out that at the recent conference in Washington, France was represented by M. Viviani, Great Britain by Mr. Balfour, the United States by Mr. Wilson and Mr. Lansing, and Canada by Sir Thos. White and Sir George Foster. In this case these are only lifetime titles. "No matter what may be said about them," the Star thinks, "there is surely no defence for this new practice of distributing hereditary titles in Canada." "They are conferred," says the Star, "in defiance of a public opinion that is, we venture to say, practically universal throughout Canada."

COMBINES AGAIN

Discussion of them Revived by Report

Combines as a factor in the high cost of living are again attracting attention. W. F. O'Connor, Federal Commissioner investigating the cost of living, in his report recently published, thinks that the provinces have exhibited "little or no interest in the enforcement of laws against accumulations of products, unjust prices and combines." He thinks that the provincial authorities are primarily responsible for the enforcement of the law respecting the cost of living.

The government of the province of Ontario is particularly affected by this charge. They have immediately denied Mr. O'Connor's allegations and claim that they have done all they could under the law.

The Liberals in the Legislature have been criticising the government on this question of combines year after year.

Their resolution this session was as follows:—

"In view of the present high cost of living and the increasing burden upon the working classes and those in receipt of limited incomes, due to the high cost of the necessaries of life, this House condemns the abandonment by the government of the investigation and prosecution of the illegal combines formed to limit competition and to enhance prices . . . It is the duty of the government to investigate all alleged illegal combinations in restraint of trade and to prosecute vigorously all those who appear to be violating the law."

This resolution was voted down by the government.

WOMEN'S POWERS DEVELOP RAPIDLY

Among the women who are organizing in order to study public questions and to be able to fulfil their new responsibilities of citizenship, are those of the city of St. Catharines and the surrounding district.

At a meeting of the riding committee recently held, attended by both men and women, it was decided, first, that women should be added to the Executive of the St. Catharines Liberal Association, and secondly, that women's Liberal Clubs for educational and patriotic purposes should be formed in St. Catharines, Merritton and other points in the constituency.

It was interesting at this meeting to see the development of women's opinion. At first they said modestly that this was a new field for them and that they would just have to feel their way, slowly and cautiously. While this is undoubtedly true, yet before the meeting was far in progress the women, including several from country points in the riding, were taking a leading part in the discussion, were showing the keenest intelligence on the matters before the committee, and by their own action had established themselves securely as important factors in the work.

This same thing is occurring all over the province and the adaptability of women i[illegible] revealed everywhere.

Mrs. Hys[illegible] [illegible]zing Secretary [illegible] the Onta[illegible] Liberal Asso[illegible] [illegible] a number of [illegible] including South [illegible] orth and S[illegible] [illegible]d Halter[illegible]

SOLDIER SIGHT-SEEING

In Old London and Edinburgh Sends an Interesting Account of His Visit to His Friend, the Telescope.

In order that you may know a little of my recent trip to Edinburgh and London I am writing you a hurried description of my six days' leave, from March 28th to April 3rd.

After receiving my pass and ticket, I entrained at Purfleet at 3.45 p.m. Six o'clock found me in London, that vast metropolis of 7,500,000 people. Many stations were passed before Fenchurch, my destination, was reached. Taking a tube (underground railway) I enjoyed the subterranean trip to King's Cross, a few minutes' ride from Fenchurch. Then, after partaking of some good coffee and other things I caught the 7.45 p.m. train for Edinburgh. As the blinds were drawn little could be seen of the country. I remember passing Newcastle, the famous coal centre. Edinburgh was reached at 5.45 a.m. Wending my way to the street I found that the weather was inclement as it was snowing heavily. A Y.M.C.A. man guided a number of us to his resting hut. Not contented with my quarters I set sail for another haven of rest. Finding Waverly hotel to be a favorable point I anchored and disembarked. I was somewhat surprised but pleased with the great width of the streets in that city. Having made my toilet and breakfasted, I began to inquire and examine the capital. A guide-book in the hotel gave me an idea of the places that I should like to see.

Edinburgh Castle

Wending my way up to Edinburgh Castle I passed over the draw-bridge unto the esplanade or parade ground where soldiers were forming fours, etc. Passing through the inner gates and mounting some stairs, I passed into the historic pile proper. In front and around were silent cannons pointing at and through the loop-holes. At 11 a.m. the inner part was opened. St. Margaret's Chapel (a small old building) was very interesting. Here Mary Queen of Scots worshipped. Here many are baptized during the present day. Leaving there, I went to Mary's part of the castle. Here I found her bedroom and furniture. Her rooms were small.

Passing down out of that historic pile a guide told me to visit St. Gile's Cathedral.

St. Gile's Cathedral.

It was a very beautiful building. The great soaring arches, the stained windows and immense pillars compelled one to stand in awe and compare it with the pictures seen of the churches of the 15th and 16th centuries. Here some devoted and honored Scotch people were buried. As the Parliament Buildings were near, I visited them next. They were quite large and beautiful. From there I passed down the street, admiring the beautiful structures of man.

Holyrood Palace.

A short walk brought me to Holyrood Palace, the home of the Scottish Kings, and where His Majesty the King stays while in Edinburgh. In front was a beautiful fountain. The palace was large and beautiful. Passing into the Cathedral part of it (now somewhat in the state of ruin or decay) I saw the graves of Lord Darnley, James IV. and others. This Palace had been almost destroyed by the English, but was rebuilt. Going up the stairs down which Rizzio's dead body had been thrown by Lord Darnley, I passed over the spot where Rizzio was murdered. I was shown into Mary Queen of Scot's supping room and her bedroom, in which was her bed. Lord Darnley's bed in his room did not escape my notice. My guide criticized my frequent use of England instead of Great Britain. Next I went into the banquetting hall. A place on the wall marked the entrance to Mary's secret stairway. One suspected of treason would be caught by an eavesdropper in this secret stairway. The walls of the Palace were beautiful, decorated with pictures, drawings and tapestry, the latter of which had covered the entrance to the secret stairway. The remainder of the Palace was closed to the public. Leaving there I went to a movie booth to rest and ascertain the sort of movie found in Edinburgh. Before going further I should mention that the Scottish people are very hospitable and very interested in the Canadian soldiers. At night I attended a review. Soon after I was peacefully reclining on a soft cosy bed.

On the morrow I caught an electric train and went to Port Seton on the sea, about 8 miles from Edinburgh. On my way I passed Robert Burns' monument. Returning I mounted Sir Walter Scott's Monument. Four flights of stairs carried me to the top. From here I could obtain an excellent view of the city of Edinburgh. Far below looking like dots were the people, rushing hither and thither. At 1 p.m. a cannon fired from the Castle gave the exact time to the city and ocean liners.

John Knox's House.

Leaving the monument I sought out John Knox's house. A nice old Scotch lady acted as my guide. Taking me to the inner recesses of that old building. I saw some of Knox's works, his study, bedroom, furniture and some of his old clothes. Many pictures showing him at different periods of his life adorned the walls. Leaving there I went to the Museum. Here I found statues, vases, paintings, carvings, of the 13th, 14th and 15th centuries, armour of the knights of old, animals local and foreign, models of engines, etc. Among the animals were a skeleton of a whale suspended from the roof, and an elephant 11 feet, 5 inches in height. In the evening, taking the train, I journeyed back to London.

Westminster Abbey, London.

Arriving there in the morning I breakfasted and took a tube to Charing Cross. I detrained at the Cross, [illegible] and obtained lodgings at a Y.M.C.A. Having studied my map of London and aided by the city police, I found that beautiful historical Abbey of Westminster. The vast soaring arches, beautiful carvings and stained windows alone make it a place of note. Nearly all our famous men of history are buried there—such men as Milton, Dickens, Wellington, William Pitt the Younger, early English and some modern Kings. Here one sees the banners carried to battle and brought home battered and torn. One is filled with awe at being so near such celebrities.

Leaving that beautiful historic building I went to the Parliament Buildings. One is almost lost in wonder and amazement, not only at the beauty of the place, but at the thought that this is the place where the British Empire's destiny is determined.

Sights of London.

From this I went to Whitehall Palace. In this beautiful palace on exhibit were large guns, old and new, armour of knights of old, of horses, swords, and models of ships, etc. I was shown the place in which Charles I was executed. Next I saw some of London's famous bridges—The London Bridge, Westminster and Charing Cross. Trafalgar Square, upon which is situated Nelson's monument, is not far from Westminster Bridge. St. Paul's Cathedral claimed my attention next. It was a very beautiful building. Here hung a number of ancient banners captured by the British. It was almost equal in magnificence to Westminster. The builder, so I am informed, spent 33 years in making it as one sees it now. It is supposed to seat 7,000 people. As they were holding service there I had an opportunity to be a listener. In almost any place in that building one could hear equally well. I was permitted to go up to the gallery, about 93 feet from the floor. Next I went up, out unto the promenade or walk outside. Here one could obtain a good view of London. Far, far beneath was the hurrying of many feet. At night I went to the Savoy Theatre and saw a splendid play. The next morning, in spite of the heavy fog I made my way to King's Way Hall, one of the many churches in that city. The streets were sadly lighted. Happily for me the fog lifted and the afternoon became bright and pleasant. I next visited Petticoat Lane (the home and market of the Jews). Here on Sunday (their Monday) they sell from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. During that time the street resembles one of our modern tall fairs. Many articles can be purchased very cheaply. To a casual observer one would think the Jew to be poorly situated financially, but such is not the case. The Jew sells almost anything and everything. At night this street is the home of the pickpocket.

John Wesley's Church.

My guide next directed me to John Wesley's Church, Susanna Wesley's grave, also John Bunyan's and De Foe's. The latter two are buried in Bunhill Cemetery. At night I went to John Wesley's Church and saw his cylindrical-shaped pulpit. The pulpit has a stairway leading up to it. At the top of the stairway is a door which is the entrance to the pulpit. I was fortunate enough to see his grave and monument.

The Palace and Tower.

Next morning, in spite of the inclemency of the weather, I went to Buckingham Palace (His Majesty's the King's home in London.) It is a large beautiful building with Queen Victoria's monument in front. Going next to the Tower of London, I was escorted to the Bloody Tower, where the Princes were murdered and buried for a while. Next I saw the beautiful crown jewels, the swords of the Allies, Kitchener's last letter, Sir Walter Raleigh's cell, the scaffold site where Annie Bolyeen was executed. My memory does not serve me well enough to mention the very many other things of note. The Castle wall or Tower was 15 feet thick at the bottom and 11 feet at the top. From there I went to the Zoological gardens, situated at the extreme end of Regent's Park. Here I saw representatives of nearly all the known animals and plants. I was able to see the lions and tigers fed. They are fed once a day. The very large collection of parrots and other kinds of birds were beautiful to see. Catching a bus, I went back to the Y.M. The next morning I saw the changing of the Guards at Buckingham Palace. Everything was done like clockwork. At the Royal stables I also saw the horse guards changed. The men looked very beautiful in their steel helmets, red plumes and long, flowing red cloaks.

More Sight Seeing.

Next I went to Guildhall (where the Mayor of London speaks.) Here I saw some famous modern paintings. On my way I passed Charles Dickens' "Old Curiosity Shop." At night I visited Madame Tussaud's exhibit. Here one could see all the renowned personages of the early and modern ages. The Kaiser and the late Emperor of Austria could be seen. His Majesty the King, late Queen Victoria, the Canadian Premier, Pres. Wilson and others. In the Chamber of Horrors is found King John signing Magna Charta, the execution of the Princes and many other things.

Purfleet, England.

FIGHTING THE FOOD SHORTAGE

New Industries From Vegetable Fats

C. P. R. Working Out A Solution

THE seriousness of the food situation throughout the world has been frequently emphasized by the press and no one disputes the fact that the world seems steadily marching toward a period of starvation. Efforts are being made in all civilized countries along different lines to avert such a disaster and to devise means of overcoming a situation created by the war.

There have been food crisis in nearly every great war, and these have frequently given rise to new processes of sufficient merit to be continued in peace times, as for example, the manufacture of sugar from sugar beets, and the substitution of vegetable for animal fats as in oleomargarine.

Oleomargarine has been under discussion in Canada for some time and needs no further comment, except perhaps to point out that under the present regulations prohibiting the manufacture of this material there are undoubtedly many in the Dominion who are not getting the fats requisite for the proper maintenance of the body, because they are unable to purchase this fat at the present price of butter. In many countries where oleomargarine has been used for years a larger and ever larger percentage of vegetable fat is being substituted for the animal fat, and the day seems not far distant when hydrogenated vegetable oils may entirely replace animal fats for certain food purposes.

Arthur D. Little, Limited, the organization of analytical chemists which on the instigation of Lord Shaughnessy has been making an exhaustive study of Canadian natural resources have been investigating the utilization of vegetable fat in materials which have proven satisfactory substitutes for cream for all purposes excepting butter making; and where whipped cream is required. The material is especially adapted to the manufacture of ice cream and can be produced much cheaper than cow's cream, a quantity of which through the use of such a substitute may be made available for other food purposes.

Dry milk, while a very important article of commerce, is known chiefly to bakers, hotels and ice cream manufacturers. A good product is now being manufactured in Ontario, but recognizing the advisability of establishing drying plants in smaller units and of a size that could be supported by the local community, work is being carried on with this requirement in mind. The installation of such plants would make it possible for dairymen to find a constant market, although they might be located at a distance so great from large centres of population as to make it impossible to sell liquid milk. For example, in Alberta the dairy industry is growing and would undoubtedly develop to a wonderful extent if drying plants requiring small amounts of capital could be established.

The same is true of vegetables, and mixed farming would be encouraged in the west if the farmer had a home market for his produce. Milk is 85% water, and many vegetables run as high or even higher in their moisture content. They are perishable, require special handling, and a large portion of the crop is composed of sizes too small to market. There are objections to the drying processes now employed and it is important, to perfect a method of drying vegetables and yet leave them fresh. Such material when placed in warm water soon absorbs the moisture which has been removed, and the vegetables when cooked in the water in which they have been placed give the same results as do fresh vegetables. The drying process must leave the vegetable with its natural color and with all the flavor with which it comes from the garden. The dried product must not be cooked or discolored, and should provide the housewife with a cleaned, peeled, ready-prepared material, which will keep without refrigeration or special storage, and enable her to avoid all the losses which accompany the use of most fresh material.

The utilization of that portion of fruits which is considered below standard, and, therefore, unprofitable to ship, is another problem which is receiving the consideration of Arthur D. Little, Limited. For example, a considerable part of every apple crop falls into such classifications as windfalls, seconds and thirds, poorly formed or poorly colored fruit, and as this proportion of the crop increases the selling price of the standard apple also increases. Methods for preparing a high grade sweet cider are under consideration, as well as the production of other apple products to utilize the portion of the crop considered unsaleable or inferior by fruit dealers.

(1) Drying machine and constant level feed tan[illegible] showing milk in sheet.
(2) Packing Department—Filling cans in fo[illegible] ground and heap of powdered dried milk.

The desirability of increasing the food content [illegible] farm produce is obvious. It may be pointed out that [illegible] starch content of potatoes grown in Germany is m[illegible] higher than that of potatoes on this continent, twice [illegible] high in fact. The cultivation of certain hybrids [illegible] ducing larger and better varieties of berries, etc., show[illegible] also be encouraged, and while this phase of the proble[illegible] scarcely comes within the province of the chemist, it [illegible] under consideration as a part of the general study.

Encouraging progress has been made in the vario[illegible] fields outlined above, and definite announcements are [illegible] pected in the near future.

A SOLDIER'S SOCK

Twenty thousand little stitches,
Go to make a soldier's sock,
That's not counting all the hitche[illegible]
Nor the moments by the clock[illegible]

Forty thousand little stitches,
Then it takes to make a pair,
And it means a heap of riches,
If you count the thought that's ther[illegible]

There's a little wisp of laughter,
Just to keep your spirits gay.
There's a thread of tough resistance,
For to give you strength by day.

There's a filament of firelight,
Stretching out across the sea,
Just to warm in the cold night,
And a glow of cheer to be.

There's a smooth, soft strand of comfort,
Meant to ease the toughest road,
And a friendly common feeling,
That would like to share your loa[illegible]

Forty thousand little stitches,
Then it takes to make a pair,
And they all are closely woven,
With the armour of a prayer.

UNSIGHTLY PIMPLES
COVERED HIS FACE.
B. B. B. Cured Him.

All diseases and blemishes of the sk[illegible] are caused by the blood being in an i[illegible] pure condition

The best blood cleansing medicine [illegible] the market to-day is Burdock Bloo[illegible] Bitters, a medicine that has been on t[illegible] for over 40 years, so you do not exper[illegible] ment when you buy it.

Mr. Lennox D. Cooke, Indian Pat[illegible] N.S., writes: "I am writing you a fe[illegible] lines to tell you what Burdock Bloo[illegible] Bitters has done for me. My face was covered with pimples. I tried different kinds of medicine, and all seemed to fail. I was one day to a friend's house, and there they advised me to use B. B. B. so I purchased two bottles, and before I had them taken I found I was getting better. I got two more, and when they were finished I was completely cured. I find it is a great blood purifier, and I recommend it to all."

B. B. B. is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

HOOPING COUGH
he Infant's Most angerous Disease.

Whooping Cough, although specially a ase of childhood, is by no means con-to that period but may occur at time of life. It is one of the most erous diseases of infancy, and yearly more deaths than scarlet fever, oid or diphtheria, and is more on in female than in male children.
ooping Cough starts with sneezing, ing of the eyes, irritation of the t, feverishness and cough. The ing attacks occur frequently but generally more severe at night.
the first sign of a "whoop," Dr.
od's Norway Pine Syrup should be ministered, and weeks of suffering vented, as it helps to clear the bronial tubes of the collected mucous and legm.

Mrs. Nellie Barley, Amherst, N.S., rites: "I have much pleasure in saying hat there is no cough syrup like Dr.
Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. My little irl took whooping cough from a little irl who has since died with it. I tried ots of things but found 'Dr. Wood's' o give the greatest relief. It helped her raise the phlegm, and she is now better.

My young brother is also taking the ough, and I am getting 'Dr. Wood's' to work again."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is ut up in a yellow wrapper; 3 pine trees the trade-mark; price 25c. and 50c.
Refuse substitutes.

Manufactured only by The T. Mil-urn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Homeseekers'
Excursions
very Monday till October 29th.
LOW FARES
FROM TORONTO
TO

Albreda	$54.00
thabasca	48.90
monton	47.00
ttler	47.00
nora	39.75
th Battleford	43.75
gina	40.50
rward	40.25
katoon	42.25
uphin	37.75
berne	53.00
lgary	47.00
mrose	46.75
Anna	46.00
eetown	43.50
erkton	38.25
oose Jaw	41.00
rince Albert	43.50
andon	37.00
Winnipeg	35.00

For Tickets, Reservations, Literature and information, apply to
W. E. Attwood, Insurance, Walkerton, or write R. L. Fairbairn,
G.P.A., 61 King St. E., Toronto.

NADIAN NORTHERN

HOMESEEKERS'
EXCURSIONS

MAY 8th TO OCTOBER 30th
Every
TUESDAY
"ALL RAIL" - also by
THURSDAY'S STEAMER
"Great Lakes Routes"
(Season Navigation)

Your Future is in the West

The fertile prairies have put Western Canada on the map. There are still thousands of acres waiting for the man who wants a home and prosperity. Take advantage of Low Rates and travel via

Canadian Pacific

W. B. Howard, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, Ont.

ELLIOTT
Business College
Yonge and Charles Sts., Toronto.
It will pay you well. We were asked to fill 126 positions in two months and 240 during two other months. Write for catalogue. Enter now.
W. J. Elliott, Principal.

WE PHOTOGRAPH MEN
AS MEN ARE
It's a business matter and there is no fuss or bother. Your family, friends and business associates want your portrait.
FRASER STUDIO

Office
Stationery
For nice Stationery printed from new type at moderate prices. Try the
TELESCOPE

Inside the Lines

By EARL DERR BIGGERS
AND
ROBERT WELLS RITCHIE

Copyright, 1915, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

CHAPTER III.

Billy Capper at Play.

"THE man Capper will do for the stalking horse—a willing nag," went on the woman in a half whisper across the table. "You know the ways of the Wilhelmstrasse. Capper is what we call 'the target.' The English suspect him. They will catch him; you get his number and do the work in safety. We have one man to draw their fire, another to accomplish the deed. We'll let the English bag him at Malta—a word placed in the right direction will fix that—and you will go on to Alexandria to do the real work."

"Good, good!" Woodhouse agreed.

"The Wilhelmstrasse will give him a number and send him on this mission on my recommendation. I had that assurance before ever I met the fellow tonight. They—the big people—know little Capper's reputation, and, as a matter of fact, I think they are convinced he's a little less dangerous working for the Wilhelmstrasse than against it. At Malta the arrest—the firing squad at dawn—and the English are convinced they've nipped something big in the bud, whereas they've only put out of the way a dangerous little weasel who's ready to bite any hand that feeds him."

Woodhouse's level glance never left the eyes of the woman called Louisa. It was alert, appraising.

"But if there should be some slip-up at Malta," he interjected; "if somehow this Capper should get through to Alexandria, wouldn't that make it somewhat embarrassing for me?"

"Not at all, my dear Woodhouse," she caught him up, with a little pat on his hand. "His instructions will be only to report to So-and-so at Alexandria. He will not have the slightest notion what work he is to do there. You can slip in unsuspected by the English, and the trick will be turned."

For a minute Woodhouse sat watching the cavortings of a dancer on the stage. Finally he put a question judiciously:

"The whole scheme then is"—

"This," she answered quickly. "Captain Woodhouse—the real Woodhouse, you know—is to be transferred from his present post at Wady Halfa, on the Nile, to Gibraltar. Transfer is to be announced in the regular way within a week. As a member of the signal service he will have access to the signal tower on the rock when he takes his new post, and that, as you know, will be very important."

"Very important!" Woodhouse echoed dryly.

"This Woodhouse arrives in Alexandria to await the steamer from Suez to Gib. He has no friends there—that much we know. Three men of the Wilhelmstrasse are waiting there whose business it is to see that the real Woodhouse does not take the boat for Gib. They expect a man from Berlin to come to them bearing a number from the Wilhelmstrasse—the man who is to impersonate Woodhouse and as such take his place in the garrison on the Rock. There are two others of the Wilhelmstrasse at Gibraltar already. They, too, are eagerly awaiting the arrival of 'Woodhouse' from Alexandria. Capper, with a number, will start from Berlin for Alexandria. Capper will never arrive in Alexandria. You will."

"With a number—the number expected?" the man asked.

"If you are clever en route—yes," she answered, with a smile. "Wine, remember, is Billy Capper's best friend—and worst enemy."

"Then I will hear from you as to the time and route of departure for Alexandria?"

"To the very hour, yes. And now, dear friend"—

Interruption came suddenly from the stage. The manager, in shirt sleeves and with hair wildly rumpled over his eyes, came prancing out from the wings. He held up a pudgy hand to check the orchestra. Hundreds about the tables rose in a gust of excitement, of questioning wonder.

"Herren!" The stage manager's bellow carried to the farthest arches of the Winter Garden. "News just published by the general staff: Russia has mobilized five divisions on the frontier of East Prussia and Galicia!"

Not a sound save the sharp catching of breath over all the acre of tables. Then the stage manager nodded to the orchestra leader, and in a fury the brass mouths began to bray. Men climbed on table tops, women stood on chairs, and all—all sang in tremendous chorus:

"Deutschland, Deutschland ueber alles!"

• • • • • • • •

The night of July 20. The scene is the table cluttered sidewalk before the Cafe Pytheas, where the Cours St. Louis flings its night tide of idlers into the broader stream of the Cannebiere, Marseilles' Broadway—the white street of the great Provencal port.

Around the news kiosk at the Cafe Pytheas corner a constant stream eddied. Men snatched papers from the pile, spread them before their faces and blundered into their fellow pedestrians as they walked, buried in the inky columns. Now and again half naked urchins came charging down the Cannebiere, waving shinplaster extras above their heads — "L'Allemagne s'arme! La Guerre vient!" Up from the Quai marched a dozen sailors from a torpedo boat, arms linked so that they almost spanned the Cannebiere. Their red tasseled caps were pushed back at cocky angles on their black heads, and as they marched they shouted in time: "A Berlin! Hou—hou!"

The black shadow of war—the first hallucinations of the great madness—gripped Marseilles.

For Captain Woodhouse, just in from Berlin that evening, all this swirling excitement had but an incidental interest. He sat alone by one of the little iron tables before the Cafe Pytheas sipping his boc, and from time to time his eyes carelessly followed the eddying of the swarm about the news kiosk. Always his attention would come back, however, to center on the thin shoulders of a man sitting fifteen or twenty feet away with a wine cooler by his side. He could not see the face of the wine drinker. He did not want to. All he cared to do was to keep those thin shoulders always in sight. Each time the solicitous waiter renewed the bottle in the wine cooler Captain Woodhouse nodded grimly, as a doctor might when he recognized the symptoms of advancing fever in a patient.

So for two days, from Berlin across to Paris, and now on this third day here in the Mediterranean port, Woodhouse had kept ever in sight those thin shoulders and that trembling hand beyond the constantly crooking elbow—not a pleasant task. He had come to loathe and abominate the very wrinkles in the back of that shiny coat. But a very necessary duty it was for Captain Woodhouse to shadow Mr. Billy Capper until the right moment should arrive. They had come down on the same express together from Paris. Woodhouse had observed Capper when he checked his baggage, a single shoddy handbag, for La Vendee, the French line ship sailing with the dawn next morning for Alexandria and Port Said via Malta. Capper had squared his account at the Hotel Allees de Meilhan, for the most part a bill for absinth frappes, after dinner that night and was now enjoying the night life of Marseilles in anticipation evidently of carrying direct to the steamer with him as his farewell from France all of the bottled laughter of her peasant girls he could accommodate.

Woodhouse, who watched, noted only one peculiarity in Capper's conduct. The drinker nursed his stick, a plain, crook handled malacca, with a tenderness almost maternal. It never left his hands. Once when Capper dropped it and the waiter made to prop the stick against a nearby chair the little spy leaped to his feet and snatched the cane away with a growl. Thereafter he propped his chin on the handle, only removing this guard when he had to tip his head back for another draft of champagne.

Eleven o'clock came. Capper rose from the table and looked owlishly about him. Woodhouse quickly turned his back to the man and was absorbed in the passing strollers. When he looked back again Capper was slowly and a little unsteadily making his way around the corner into the Cannebiere. Woodhouse followed, sauntering. Capper began a dilatory exploration of the various cafes along the white street. His general course was toward the city's slums about the Quai. Woodhouse, dawdling about tree boxes and dodging into shadows by black doorways, found his quarry easy to trail, and he knew that each of Capper's sojourns in an oasis put a period to the length of the pursuit. The time for him to act drew appreciably nearer with every tipping of that restless elbow.

Midnight found them down in the reek and welter of the dives and sailors' frolic grounds. Now the trailer found his task more difficult, inasmuch as not only his quarry, but he himself, was marked by the wolves. Dances in smoke wreathed rooms slackened when Capper lurched in, found a seat and ordered a drink; dock rats drew aside and consulted in whispers. When Capper retreated from an evil dive on the very edge of the Quai, Woodhouse, waiting by the doors, saw that he was not the only shadower. Close against the dead walls flanking the narrow pavement a slinking figure twisted and writhed after the drunkard, now spread eagling all over the street.

Woodhouse quickened his pace on the opposite sidewalk. The street was one lined with warehouses, their closely shuttered windows the only eyes. Capper dropped his stick, laboriously halted and started to go back for it. That instant the shadow against the walls detached itself and darted for the victim. Woodhouse leaped to the cobbles and gained Capper's side just as he dropped like a sack of rags under a blow from the dock rat's fist.

"Son of a pig! This is my meat; you clear out!" The humped black beetle of a man straddling the sprawling Capper whipped a knife from his girdle and faced Woodhouse. Quicker than light the captain's right arm shot out; a thud as of a maul on an empty wine butt and the Apache turned a half somersault, striking the cobbles with the back of his head. Woodhouse stooped, lifted the limp Capper from the street stones and staggered with him to the lighted avenue of the Cannebiere, a block away. He hailed a late cruising fiacre, propped Capper in the seat and took his place beside him.

"To La Vendee, Quai de la Fraternite!" Woodhouse ordered.

The driver, wise in the ways of the city, asked no questions, but clucked to his crowbait. Woodhouse turned to make a quick examination of the unconscious man by his side. He feared a stab wound. He found nothing but a nasty cut on the head, made by brass knuckles. With the wine helping, any sort of blow would have put Capper out, he reflected.

Woodhouse turned his back on the bundle of clothes and reached for the malacca stick. Even in his coma its owner grasped it tenaciously at mid-length. Without trying to disengage the clasp Woodhouse gripped the wood near the crook of the handle with his left hand, while with his right he applied torsion above. The crook turned on hidden threads and came off in his hand. An exploring forefinger in the exposed hollow end of the cane encountered a rolled wisp of paper. Woodhouse pocketed this, substituted in its place a thin clean sheet torn from a cardcase memorandum, then screwed the crook on the stick down on the secret receptacle. By the light of a match he assured himself the paper he had taken from the cane was what he wanted.

"Son of a pig!"

"Larceny from the person—guilty," he murmured, with a wry smile of distaste. "But assault—unpremeditated."

The conveyance trundled down a long spit of stone and stopped by the side of a black hull spotted with round eyes of light. The driver, scenting a tip, helped Woodhouse lift Capper to the ground and prop him against a bulkhead. A bos'n, summoned from La Vendee by the cabby's shrill whistle, heard Woodhouse's explanation with sympathy.

"Occasionally, yes, m'sieu; the passengers from Marseilles have these regrets at parting," he gravely commented, accepting the ticket Woodhouse had rummaged from the unconscious man's wallet and a crinkled note from Woodhouse's. Up the gangplank, feet first, went the new agent of the Wilhelmstrasse. The one who called himself "captain in his majesty's signal service" returned to his hotel.

At dawn La Vendee cleared the harbor for Alexandria via Malta, bearing a very sick Billy Capper to his destiny. Five hours later the Castle liner Castle Claire, for the Cape via Alexandria and Suez direct, sailed out of the old port, among her passengers a Captain Woodhouse.

CHAPTER IV.

32 Queen's Terrace.

JUST before the Castle Claire raised the breakwater of Alexandria came a wireless, which was posted at the head of the saloon companionway:

Germany declares war on Russia. German flying columns reported moving through Luxemburg on Belgium.

The fire was set to the grain.

Upon landing Captain Woodhouse's first business was to go to a hotel on the Grand square, which is the favorite stopping place of officers coming down from the Nile country. He fought his way through the predatory hordes of yelling donkey boys and obsequious dragomans at the door and entered the palm shaded court which served as office and lounge. Woodhouse paused for a second behind a screen of palm leaves and cast a quick eye around the court. None of the loungers there was known to him. He strode to the desk.

"Ah, sir, a room with bath overlooking the gardens on the north side—very cool." The Greek clerk behind the desk smiled a welcome.

"Perhaps," Woodhouse answered shortly, and he turned the register around to read the names of the recent comers. On the first page he found nothing to interest him, but among the arrivals of the day before he saw this entry: "C. G. Woodhouse, Capt. Sig. Service; Wady Halfa." After it was entered the room number—210.

Woodhouse read right over the name and turned another page a bit impatiently. This he scanned with seeming eagerness, while the clerk stood with pen poised.

"Um! When is the first boat out for Gibraltar?" Woodhouse asked.

"Well, sir, the Princess Mary is due to sail at dawn day after tomorrow," the Greek answered judiciously. "She is reported at Port Said today; but, of course, the war"— Woodhouse turned away.

"But you wish a room, sir—nice room with bath, overlooking"—

"No."

"You expected to find a friend, then?"

"Not here." Woodhouse returned brusquely and passed out into the blinding square.

He strode swiftly around the statue of Mehemet Ali and plunged into the bedlam crowd filling a side street. With sure sense of direction he threaded the narrow alleyways and bystreets until he had come to the higher part of the mongrel city, near the Rosetta gate. There he turned into a little French hotel, situated far from the disordered pulse of the city's heart. A sort of pension it was, known only to the occasional discriminating tourist. Maitre Mouquere was proud of the anonymity his house preserved and abhorred poor, driven Cook's slaves as he would a plague. In his Cap de Liberte one was lost to all the world of Alexandria.

Thither the captain's baggage had been sent direct from the steamer. After a glass with Maitre Mouquere and a half hour's discussion of the day's great news Woodhouse pleaded a touch of the sun and went to his room. There he remained until the gold of sunset had faded from the mosque of Omar's great dome and all the city from Pharos and its harbor hedge of masts to El Meks winked with lights. Then he took carriage to the railroad station and entrained for Ramleh. What South Kensington is to London and the Oranges are to New York, Ramleh is to Alexandria—the suburb of homes. There pretty villas lie in the lap of the delta's greenery, skirted by canals, cooled by the winds off Aboukir bay and shaded by great palms—the one beauty spot in all the hybrid product of east and west that is the present city of Alexandria.

Remembering directions he had received in Berlin, Woodhouse threaded shaded streets until he paused before a stone gateway set in a high wall. On one of the pillars a small brass plate was inset. By the light of a nearby arc Woodhouse read the inscription on it, "Emil Koch, M. D., 32 Queen's Terrace."

He threw back his shoulders with a sudden gesture, which might have been taken for that of a man about to make a plunge, and rang the bell. The heavy wooden gate, filling all the space of the arch, was opened by a tall Numidian in house livery of white. He nodded an affirmative to Woodhouse's question and led the way through an avenue of flaming hibiscus to a house set far back under heavy shadow of acacias. On every hand were gardens, rank foliage shutting off this walled yard from the street and neighboring dwellings. The heavy gate closed behind the visitor with a sharp snap. One might have said that Dr. Koch lived in pretty secure isolation.

Woodhouse was shown into a small room off the main hall, by its furnishings and position evidently a waiting room for the doctor's patients. The Numidian bowed and disappeared. Alone, Woodhouse rose and strolled aimlessly about the room, flipped the covers of magazines on the table, picked up and hefted the bronze Buddha on the onyx mantel, noted, with a careless glance, the position of the two windows in relation to the entrance door and the folding doors, now shut, which doubtless gave on the consultation room. As he was regarding these doors they rolled back, and a short, thickset man, with a heavy mane of iron gray hair and black brush of beard, stood between them. He looked at Woodhouse through thick lensed glasses, which gave to his stare a curiously intent heat.

"My office hours are from 2 to 4, afternoons," Dr. Koch said. He spoke in English, but his speech was burred by a slight heaviness on the aspirates, reminiscent of his mother tongue. The doctor did not ask Woodhouse to enter the consultation room, but continued standing between the folding doors, staring fixedly through his thick lenses.

"I know that, doctor," Woodhouse began apologetically, following the physician's lead and turning his tongue to English. "But, you see, in a case like mine I have to intrude"—it was "haf" and "indrude" as Woodhouse gave these words—"because I could not be here during your office hours. You will pardon?"

"My office hours are from 2 to 4."

Dr. Koch's eyes widened just perceptibly at the hint of a Germanic strain in his visitor's speech—just a hint quickly glossed over. But still he remained standing in his former attitude of annoyance.

"Was the sun, then, too hot to permit you to come to my house during regular office hours? At nights I see no patients—positively none."

"The sun—perhaps," Woodhouse replied guardedly. "But as I happened just to arrive today from Marseilles and your name was strongly recommended to me as one to consult in a case such as mine"—

"Where was my name recommended to you and by whom?" Dr. Koch interrupted in sudden interest.

Woodhouse looked at him steadily. "In Berlin—and by a friend of yours," he answered.

"Indeed?" The doctor stepped back from the doors and motioned his visitor into the consultation room.

(To be Continued.)

Town and District

Local News on every page.

It is expected that Hydro power will be turned on at Elmwood in July.

The Telescope received a shipment of 400 lbs. of paper from Windsor Mills, Quebec, last week.

The housewife who gets the most value out of the Telescope is the one who reads the merchants ads throughout every week.

Paisley has a new postmaster, W. R. Barnett, who has been appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mrs. Saunders.

Mr. Frank Morrison, Secretary of Federation of Labor, of Washington D. C., spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chris. Morrison. He returned to Washington on Monday.

Dr. and Mrs. Stalker and Mr. Harvey Lucas spent the week-end at the latter's home in Markdale. Dr. Stalker and Mr. Lucas fished on Saturday and caught 62 speckled beauties.—Hanover Post.

Mr. and Mrs. Dave Frook and son of Cargill were visitors of the former's sister, Mrs. Wm. Gateman, on Friday, as were also Mrs. Monk and children of Elmwood, Mr. and Mrs. John Tanner and family and Miss L. Hilgartner of Waterloo.—Hanover Post.

Found Boys Well

Ted Wilhelm in a letter to his parents states he is on 10 days leave. He was at Witley Camp with the 160th Batt. and says he found the boys all well.

Shipping Machinery Away.

Mr. John Connors was here from Boston this week, arranging to ship two or three more carloads of the Bindertwine Factory machinery to that city.

New Cement Tank.

The G. T. R. construction gang arrived here yesterday morning to start work on the new water tank to replace the old affair which collapsed last week. The new tank will be of cement.

Carrick Camp Meeting.

That time-honored institution, the Carrick Camp Meeting, will begin this year on Wednesday, June 27th. Bishop S. C. Breyvogel D. D. of Reading, Pa., a well-known leader in the Evangelical Church, will take part.

Low Fares to Western Canada

If you are going West, take advantage of the low Homeseekers Excursion Fares offered by the Canadian Northern Railway, good, leaving Toronto every Monday. For literature and all information, apply to T. E. Attwood, Town Agent.

Former Walkerton Boys

Two old Walkerton boys, Errol and Roy Tovell, have been fighting with the Canadians in France and word was received here lately that Roy was wounded in the gallant charge at Vimy Ridge and is now in a Hospital in England. The Tovell boys enlisted in the West, where they had been living for several years.

Now In France

Walter Bryce, son of Mr. Robt. Bryce, who went to England in 1915 as a Divisional Signaller is now in France. Latterly he had been connected with the Telegraphy Department at Crowborough. Walter writes home that he has passed his final test and is now a full-fledged operator and sure is glad to get to France.

University Honors Dr. O'Hagan

Dr. Thomas O'Hagan was honored by Notre Dame University, Indiana, with the degree of Doctor of Laws on the occasion of its Diamond Jubilee, on June 11th. Three years ago Laval University conferred upon Dr. O'Hagan the degree of Doctor of Letters. His many old friends in Bruce will learn with pleasure of the recognition that the Doctor's talents are winning in the world of letters.

Family of Fighters

The 102nd Anniversary of the Battle of Waterloo, which was celebrated on Monday, recalls the fact that many of those who first rushed to the colors in Canada were direct descendants of the men who shouldered their rifles and marched off to defend the liberties of Europe from the tyrant a century ago. Walkerton's first volunteer, Charlie Sutton, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Sutton, was the great great grandson on his mother's side of a Waterloo veteran, Wm. Matthews and the memory of his brave ancestor's example no doubt helped Charlie to the decision to enlist as soon after War was declared. In Charlie's grandfather on his mother's side the fighting spirit again came to light. He lived in the U. S. and when the Civil War broke out he was found fighting on the side of liberty and human rights.

+ + +

Attend Port Elgin's Dominion Day Celebration

Again this year, Port Elgin people are planning the big celebration. The fact that this is Canada's Jubilee year has been taken into consideration, and all profits over and above expenses will go to the Red Cross. We are planning for the biggest day's races ever held, also many other features, with the usual superb program of fireworks.

DAIRY AND CREAMERY

DISEASES OF CALVES.

Cause, Prevention and Treatment of Infectious Dysentery.

Diarrhea, or scours, is probably the most common disease of calves. Great care must be taken at all times to prevent this condition, as it always hinders the growth and development of the animal and in addition is often hard to cure, says farmers' bulletin 777. This disease is the result of disturbance of the digestive apparatus of the calf and may be caused in a number of ways, the more important of which are the following: Irregular feeding, overfeeding, sudden change of feed, fermented feeds, feeding dirty or sour milk or milk of diseased cows, the use of dirty milk pails or feed boxes, and damp, dirty stables. As soon as scours is discovered it is best to separate the affected calf from the others and carefully disinfect the pen. The feed should be reduced immediately at least one-half, milk pails cleaned and sterilized, feed boxes cleaned and disinfected and any other causes mentioned above eliminated.

WEIGHING MILK TO FEED TO CALVES.

A number of preparations are used to treat this disease, a few of the more common of which are blood meal, a teaspoonful at a feed; white of egg; limewater, etc. A dose of four drops of formalin to each quart of milk has been used to advantage, and a drench of three ounces of castor oil followed by a teaspoonful of a mixture of one part salol and two of subnitrate of bismuth also is recommended. Ordinary white clay, mixed with water to the consistency of thick cream and given in doses of quarter or even half a pint three times a day, has been used recently, with excellent effect.

White scours, or infectious dysentery of the calf, generally affects a number of calves in a lot and first appears shortly after birth as a diarrhea with light colored offensive droppings. During the course of this disease the calf wants to sleep all the time and cannot be induced to suck or drink. It is also very much weakened by the disease and usually dies within three or four days. There is no specific method of curing the disease known to the department. Ordinary white clay mixed with water to the consistency of thick cream and given in doses of a quarter or even half a pint three times a day has been found by veterinarians to be very valuable. Manufacturers of biological products, however, are now selling a potent serum which they claim to be effective in both prevention and cure.

Prevention consists in the use of sanitary precautions, such as clean, dry and disinfected pens for calving and careful disinfection of the navel of the calf at birth, painting the cord with tincture of iodine and tying it with silk thread. As this disease is of so serious a character that it may cause the loss of a season's crop of calves, the details for the control of an outbreak should be referred to the state live stock official or to a qualified veterinarian in the community.

Ration For Sows.

In districts where corn is plentiful there is a temptation to feed sows almost exclusively upon corn. Such a method of feeding cannot give the best results. Many farmers and breeders will not appreciate this. It is also rather too fattening and heating to feed in large quantities to a sow during gestation. A ration of equal parts ground corn, ground oats and wheat middlings, with a supplement of tankage, linseed meal or skimmilk, is a good one.

Keep Cows Off Soft Pasture.

We sometimes think we are gaining by letting the cows go out to pasture early. But just go around after the cows and see the big holes they tramp in the earth, and every step they take they push some good grass roots down where they won't get out all summer. Wait a bit longer. That will be where you will be the gainer.

News About Town

Local News on every page.

To-day is the longest day of the year.

Rev. R. Perdue is attending Anglican Synod at London.

Pte. Lou Anderson is leaving Friday for treatment at London.

Wool wanted. Highest prices. Cash or trade. S. A. Rife & Co.

Mr. Dave Heffernan of Detroit is here renewing acquaintances.

Miss Cecelia Schnurr of Mildmay, spent Sunday at her home here.

Miss Martina Dumm left on Friday to visit friends at Preston and Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted. Schauss left for their new home at Stratford on Monday.

Mr. Harry Huffman of Kitchener, spent over Sunday at Mr. Chis. Ernest's.

Mrs. Lou Wenzil and babe of Hanover, are here for a week at Mr. Alt. Hebu's.

Mr. John Lambertus is having a new verandah built around the front of his residence.

Prin. Morgan is still confined to his house as the result of a fall over two weeks ago.

Rev. Thos. Wilson will conduct Preparatory services in Durham on Friday evening.

Local News on every page.

Miss Helene Whitehead is visiting at Guelph.

Miss Margaret Bilger has taken a position at J. H. Appel's

Mr. and Mrs. Lou Anderson are moving into their house on Napier St.

Letters to the Telescope for publication must bear the name of the writer.

Mrs. Miller and her daughter of Hanover are here visiting her sister, Miss Baird.

Pte. William Anderson who enlisted at London recently has been rejected for Overseas.

Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Arscott returned on Tuesday from Toronto where they spent the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Ritchie and Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Ritchie, motored to Wingham one day recently.

Mrs. Bonnyman was taken to the Bruce County Hospital last week in a serious condition from cancer.

An interesting collection of German war relics taken in the Somme Offensive is on display in Cunlo's barber shop window.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernie Bonnell motored down from Owen Sound on Sunday and spent the day with Mr. and Mrs. Walter Jasper.

Mrs. J. Bolden, East Ward, left Friday on an extended visit to her daughters, Mrs. R. G. Disney and Mrs. J. Ellis of Owen Sound.

Lost

On 14th con. Carrick on Friday evening, pillow and quilt which dropped from waggon. Will finder kindly leave at John D. Bell's or Philip Grenz', 14th, Carrick.

Mechanics Wanted

Wanted immediately, cabinet makers, for chair work, also machine hand, sanders, finishers, and upholsterers. Highest wages paid. Apply at once. The Elmira Furniture Co. Ltd. Elmira, Ont. 23—25.

Recuperating In Germany.

Pte Herbert Zettel, nephew of Mr. Jos. Zettel, writes from Germany that he is now able to do a little farm work. Herb. is recuperating from shrapnel wounds in the hip. He was in the hospital nine months.

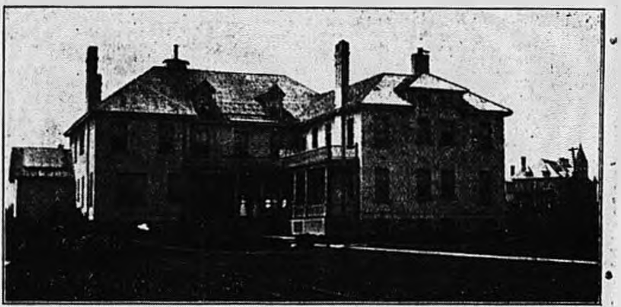
Toronto Detective Here

A detective from the Attorney General's dept., Toronto was here the past week investigating the death of Mrs. Norman Webb, following the finding of the Coroner's jury last week that she had died as the result of a criminal operation.

Earl Kirkby At Wittley

One of the 160th boys writes home that he recently ran across Earl Kirkby, a former Walkerton boy, at Wittley Camp. Earl is a son of C. P. R. Engineer Kirkby, who was formerly located here. Earl enlisted at Toronto with the 204th Beavers and was transferred to the 106th Batt'n which is now stationed at Wittley Camp.

Bruce County Hospital which is Asking the County Council for $3000 Grant



Lady Superintendent, Miss L. E. Sutherland

Board of Trustees

President—David Traill, Hardware Merchant, Walkerton.
1st Vice-Pres.—D. Izzard, Warden of Bruce.
2nd Vice-President—A. P. Johnston, Mayor of Walkerton.
Sec.-Treas.—H. M. Lay, Manager of The Canadian Bank of Commerce, Walkerton.
R. E. Truax, M. P., Walkerton.
David Robertson, K. C., Walkerton.
S. W. Vogan, Merchant, Walkerton.
L. C. Benton, Mgr. Can. Furniture Mfrs., Walkerton.
Andrew Oberle, Drover and Exporter, Walkerton.
J. J. Schumacher, Mgr. Farmers' Central Mutual Fire Insurance Company, Walkerton.
Norman Robertson, County Treasurer.
Geo. D. McKay, Insurance, Walkerton.
H. Pletsch, Walkerton Flour Mills.
R. E. Clapp M. D., Court Registrar.

Mr. William Ritchie of Paisley, visited Night Watchman Swanston's on Monday.

Mrs. (Rev.) Thos. Wilson and Master George left on Tuesday to spend a week at London.

Martin Cassidy's barn near Riversdale is reported to have been struck by lightning Tuesday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace motored up from Guelph and spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs J. G. Lamb of Brant.

Messrs A. S. Royce and Wm. Van Horne left on Tuesday to attend the C. O. F. convention at Hamilton.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Kelm of Port Elgin, motored to Walkerton and spent Sunday with friends here and at Chepstow.

Mr. and Mrs. Lou Anderson were at Paisley last week attending the funeral of the latter's sister, Miss Olive Salter of Toronto.

Mrs. McKechnie and little daughters, Audrey and Mona, of Toronto, are visiting Mrs. McKechnie's parents, Mr. and Mrs John Kappler.

Coun. and Mrs. McCarter and daughters Gladys and Mrs. J. Bergman, and Mrs. Beattie motored to Eugenia Falls on Sunday.

Messrs R. E. Truax, B. Scherer, F. Godwin, H. Truax, A. J. Miller and little Reuben Truax, motored to Chepstow and Cargill on Sunday.

A Walkerton lady who is doing her bit to help the soldiers is Miss Krug. During the past year she has [illegible] no less than [illegible] pairs of [illegible].

Mr. William Finlayson has arrived from the West to see his sister, Mrs Bonnyman, who is in a serious condition with cancer at the County Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Dave Ritchie, and little daughter, motored over from Teeswater last week in their new McLaughlin car on a visit to Mrs. Ritchie's parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. Ritchie.

Miss Mary Kelly of Windsor and Messrs John and Dick Kelly of Toronto attended the wedding of their brother, Edward, which took place at Chepstow on Monday.

Where there is a live business there is good cause for it—our aim is "Pure Goods," "Honesty" and "Cleanliness." We please others we can please you—the leading Grocery, Walkerton.—Goode & McKay.

A highly respected Formosa lady who was thought to be slightly deranged was examined by Drs. Porter and Hall. Her condition was found to be due largely to physical disturbance which will in time right itself. In the meantime her relatives have sent her to a church institution at Dundas.

The Southampton list of Voters for 1917 has been published, it differs from former years inasmuch as all women having the property qualification to entitle them to vote at municipal elections are placed in part 1. of the list along with the men who have a similar property qualification.

Left For Overseas

Mr. Will Pengelly left this week for Overseas with the Cobourg [illegible] here.

Injured in the Hip.

Harry Miller, a former Walkerton boy, who has been working with his uncle at Sanborn, North Dakota, the past four years, writes home that he was rather badly injured in the hip a couple of weeks ago and has been laid up ever since.

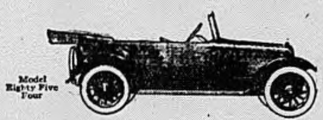
Dumped In Mud River

Two Chepstow men had an unexpected dip in the Mud River while fishing last week. A wire across the stream which they didn't notice upset their canoe, dumping them precipitately in the "drink." Both got badly soaked and one of the twain lost his cap and a nice string of fish which they had caught.

Patterson—Brown.

At the home of Reeve Brown, Chesley, a very pretty wedding was solemnized on Thursday, June 14th at high noon, when his youngest sister, Miss Anna Brown, was united in marriage to William Patterson, a popular young merchant of Walkerton, formerly of Chesley, Rev. W. E. Phillips, B. A., officiating. The bride, who was given away by her brother, wore her travelling suit of pearl grey silk, and hat to match. Little Miss Muriel Brown, niece of the bride, from Owen Sound, dressed very daintily in white, was flower girl. Miss Winnifred Patterson, sister of the groom, played the Wedding March. After the ceremony a dainty lunch was served. Mr. and Mrs. Patterson left on the afternoon train for Toronto and other points, and on their return will reside at Walkerton, where Mr. Patterson is engaged in the hardware business.

Overland
Fours



Simplified Driving

THIS MODEL is a great family car because it is so easy to handle. All electric controls are on the steering column—within natural reach. The wheel is large and easy to steer with. The shifting lever and emergency brake can be reached without changing your driving position.

So it is just as easy for your wife or daughter to drive this Overland Eighty-Five Four as it is for you. And as you know, that cannot be said of all cars.

Step in today for a demonstration.

$1250

Overland Model Eighty-Five Four
35 horsepower
112-inch wheelbase
Cantilever rear springs
Vacuum gasoline system
4-inch tires
Brewster green body
Auto-Lite starting and lighting system

Other Overland Fours
Model 85-Four Roadster, $1230
Country Club Sport Model, $1110
Light Four Touring, $975
Light Four Roadster, $950

All prices f. o. b. point of shipment
Subject to change without notice

J. E. McGregor, Phone 142
Durham Street, Walkerton

GOLD DUST
digs deep after germ

Gold Dust not only cleans but sterilizes.

Soap merely washes over the surface, leaving a greasy film behind it.

Gold Dust "goes to the bottom," and insures absolute purity, and sanitary safety. Why not sanatize your home, as well as clean it?

Soap needs muscle help; Gold Dust does all the hard part of the task without your assistance.

Gold Dust is a good, honest, vegetable-oil soap, to which are added other purifying materials in just the right proportions to cleanse easily, vigorously, and without harm to fabric, utensils or hand.

"Let the GOLD DUST TWINS do your work"

Gold Dust is sold in 5c size and large packages. The large package means greater economy.

Made by THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY, LIMITED, Montreal
Makers of Fairy Soap (the oval cake)

HOMESEEKERS' EXCURSIONS
LOW RETURN FARES
TO WESTERN CANADA
ONCE A WEEK
Convenient Service. Modern Electric Lighted Equipment
Standard and Tourist Sleeping Cars and Colonist Coaches
For Tickets, Reservations, Literature and Information, apply to
W. E. ATTWOOD, INSURANCE, WALKERTON.
Or write R. L. Fairbairn, G.P.A., 68 King St. E., Toronto.
CANADIAN NORTHERN RAILWAY

NEIGHBORING VILLAGES & COUNTRYSIDE

News of the Week Collected by a Staff of Live Correspondents

MILDMAY

and Mildmay played a game all in the Mildmay park cu y evening June 12th. After a e of ball Moltke won the score -1. A feature of the game e one handed catch by Nor- itfleisch. Mr. Moore of Neu- pired the game.

n. F. Wendt and Miss Dora ent Sunday in Wroxeter.

. Berscht and his son Russel y, Alta. are spending a few e home of his mother-in- Liesemer.

he farmers are performing d work this week and last The roads are in better con- this year than a year ago and fresh gravel on the bad spots ill soon be in excellent shape.

George Mackie of the Elora as purchased a second hand ouring car from Liesemer and leisch.

John Riptke and daughter, Pearl ruce township, visited at dt's on Friday and Satur- .

al baseball aggregation d to Ayton on Friday even- loth to cross bats with the nine. It was a rather one- ame as the score 14—5 indicates. y however won and gave the tes an unpleasant surprise einert of Neustadt umpired the Mildmay's lineup was as foll- . Fred Weiler; C., George , 1st B., Ed. Witter; 2nd B., endt; 3rd B., Jack Devlin; S. chs; L. F., Ed. Wittich; C. F., Young; R. F., Wm. Berry. eature of the game was Mild- good batting.

J. A. Johnston was in Toronto hursday and Friday last week on ness.

r. John Wendt of the Elora road in Walkerton serving on the jury Wednesday June 13th.

ev. J. S. Burn and Miss Edna Voel- attended the Sunday School con- ntion at Elmwood last Thursday d Friday.

Mr. George Schwalm Sr. after being uite ill for the past three or four onths is improving nicely and is able o be out once more.

Miss Myrtle Lambert of Toronto is spending a few weeks at her home here.

Carrick Camp Meeting will start on Wednesday, June 27th.

Mrs. Norman Sweltzer (nee Miss Mary Yandt) of Lethbridge is in town and will spend the coming month with relatives here.

Mr. George Brahler who recently returned home from Detroit has gone to Kincardine where he has accepted a position in a furniture factory.

Mr. A. Kramer was in Toronto last week attending the Ontario Coal Dealer's convention which was held in the King Edward Hotel.

Mr. Ed. Diebel of Elora spent three or four days in town last week.

SOLWAY

Misses Myrtle Day and Bella Rome from near Teeswater, visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Casslick last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lambertus returned last week from visiting friends in Kitchener.

Miss E. McGarrity spent Sunday at her home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Stroeder spent Sunday at the home of Mr. Jos. Stroeder, near Forthosa.

Mr. Roy Casslick spent a few days last week with friends in Greenock.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Norton visited at Mr. Jno Craig's in Greenock one day last week.

Misses B. and N. McGarity attended the Lawn Social near Durham on Friday evening.

Miss E. Zettler from near Chepstow, spent a few days last week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Knoll.

Miss Emma Knoll is home from Guelph for the holidays.

BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hamel (nee Annie Hossfeld) on Friday, June 1st, a daughter.

BRANT AVENUE

After the past two weeks of rapid growth our crops are looking fine. The fall wheat appears to be a half crop at least and hay is also doing fine, these last few warm rains having been of great value.

Our pathmaster started plowing up some of the roadside on Saturday and they are putting the Grader on this week to have it look up-to-date as our beat is noted by the autoists for having the finest surface.

A large number from this vicinity took in the Garden Party and Box Social at Solway on Wednesday evening and sure had a splendid time.

Our farmers have mostly all their root crop in now, and are busy working up their summer-fallows and hoeing mangolds etc.

GLAMIS

Mr. R. F. Harrison of Calgary, Alberta, is spending a week at the home of his father-in-law, J. C. McIntyre.

Capt. P. McKinnon made a business trip to Kingston on Friday.

Misses Mary Deehan, Pearl Kirktown and Master Clarence McLennan, are trying the Entrance Exam in Paisley this week. All wish them success.

The I. O. O. F. Service on Sunday was largely attended, a number of brethren from other lodges were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. McIntosh Jr. of Stratford were here for his fathers funeral on Saturday.

Mrs. R. J. McNally of Kintore spent over Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson.

The Union Sunday School picnic will be held at Inver Huron Beach on Tuesday July, 3rd. Don't forget the date. Come along and bring your basket.

Rev. P. Reith of St. Pauls Church, and Rev. Mr. McKenzie of Kinloss exchanged pulpits on Sunday.

Quite a number from here attended the Garden Party in Pinkerton on Monday night.

Mrs. Janet Gilchrist has spent the past week on, 18th Greenock.

On Sunday the following visitors were in the burg, and vicinity. Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Colwell and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Woods and daughter Muriel of Lorne, Masters Alvin and Harold Ramshaw, Bervie, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Avery, Armow. Mr. and Mrs. John Wittig, Mr. and Mrs. Dave Wittig, Miss Wittig, and Mr. McKay, Underwood, Mr. and Mrs. Harrison, Chesley, Mr. and Mrs. Weiler, Mr. and Mrs. Smith, Walkerton, Mr. and Mrs. Semple and daughter Tiverton, Mr. and Mrs. Robt. McKay, 6th Bruce.

Congratulations to Miss Nora C. McNally in her success in her Faculty Exams.

Mrs. Angus McGregor of Kincardine spent the past week with her son on 4th con. Bruce.

Mrs. J. D. Robertson served a Red Cross Tea in her home on Thursday afternoon. The sum of $13.40 was realized for Red Cross purposes.

Corp. Alex McPhail arrived here from Camp Borden on Saturday, returning on Monday. He will leave Camp this week for Regina.

Miss Lily McKenzie of Kincardine, spent a few days with her cousin, Miss Margaret Currie.

A number from here attended Memorial Service for Pte. Jack Gillis, in Tiverton on Sunday evening.

On Thursday last Mr. Thomas McIntosh aged 73 years, passed away at his home Lot 31, con. 14 Greenock Twp., Glamis, after several weeks illness. The late Mr. McIntosh was one of our highly respected citizens of this neighborhood and by his death we as a community have lost a good friend and kind neighbor. Besides his sorrowing wife he leaves to mourn his loss, a family of three daughters and two sons. Mrs. Draper, Stratford, Mrs. Thos. Gamble, 14th con. Greenock, Mrs. W. H. Gilchrist, 2nd. con. Bruce, David at home, Thomas of Stratford.

The funeral which was held on Saturday from his late residence to Purdy's Cemetery was largely attended.

To the bereaved ones deep sympathy is extended.

CARGILL

Mr. Lorne W. Carr who has been the popular ledger-keeper in the Royal Bank here for some months received a move to Ripley on Tuesday. Lorne has many friends and will be missed in the village. We wish him every success in his new office.

Miss J. A. Cargill is spending a few days in Toronto.

Miss Gladys M. Keeling attended the wedding of her friend, Miss C. A. Price in Toronto on Saturday afternoon, returning Monday at noon.

Mr. M. L. Ziegler made a business trip to Toronto on Monday.

Mrs. George Shrumm and daughter, Nora, arrived here Monday night to attend to the shipping of their furniture to Sarnia, where they will reside in the future.

Mr. B. Andrews of Palmerston, spent the week-end with friends here.

A number of the young people attended the garden party on the Manse lawn in Pinkerton on Monday.

Pte. H. L. Loughleen of the C. A. M. C. London, spent the week-end at his home here. Harold expects to go overseas very soon.

Mrs. Weedmark of Beachburg is visiting her daughter, Mrs. W. M. Cameron.

Messrs John Clancy and W. D. Cargill attended the annual meeting of the Bruce Preparedness League in Chesley on Tuesday.

PINKERTON

Anniversary services were held in the Presbyterian Church here on Sunday last, and were conducted by Rev. Mr. Hilts of Chesley. Two excellent discourses were delivered to large congregations. On Monday evening the Annual Garden Party was held on the Manse Grounds. In spite of the weather a large crowd gathered but after a first class supper had to seek shelter from the rain in the church, where the programme was given. The chief entertainers were Mr. Clark and his family who kept the crowd laughing all the time. About $112.00 were taken in at the gate and the booth.

Messrs Adam Reid and Amsey Gregg attended the High Court Meeting of the C. O. F. at Hamilton this week.

Miss Alma Reid left on Saturday for a visit to Saskatoon and other points in the West.

Word was received last week by Mrs. S. Garland that her son, Edgar, had been "dangerously wounded". Edgar enlisted with a Western Battalion and has been at the front for some time. At the time of writing, no more word has been received but all hope that his wounds may not prove too serious.

Mrs. (Rev.) W. Richardson returned to Arthur after a short visit at her home here.

HANOVER

Mrs. John Plantz passed away at her home on June 11th from diabetes in her 57th year.

The Lutheran Synod of Canada comprising 34 ministers and 27 lay delegates has been meeting here the past week.

Word has been received that the 248th Greys have arrived safely in England

The crack Hanover Band has disbanded owing to financial difficulties and also dissatisfaction among some of the members.

The marriage of Miss Ida Maycock daughter of Mr. Joseph Maycock of the 2nd of Bentick to Mr. James Casement of Hanover took place at the Baptist parsonage in Hanover, Rev. John Leypoldt officiating.

A very quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized on Tuesday, June 12 when Miss Elsie Lesso became the wife of Mr. Mark Kroldart, both of Hanover. The ceremony was performed at one-thirty in the Lutheran Church by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Denef.

A note in the Toronto Mail and Empire of last week states that the colors of the 147th battalion were that day deposited in Northumberland Abbey, England, by Lieutenant-Col. McFarland. The ceremony was a properly dignified one. The abbey was selected as the repository for the colors because of interest to Grey county residents will likely soon be received in letters from the men still in England.

GREENOCK

S. S. NO. 3

Class IV — Gertrude O'Hagan, honours; Wilfred Kroeplin, honours; Anthony Diebold, honours.

Jr. IV.—Evelyn O'Hagan, honours; James O'Hagan, passed; John Doyle, passed; John McKinnon, honours; Maurice O'Hagan, passed.

Class III.—Andrew Doyle, honours; Venetia O'Hagan, honours; Laura Kroeplin, honours, Marguerite O'Hagan, honours; Harold O'Hagan, passed; John Quinlan, passed; Viola Cassidy, passed.

Class II.—Mary Doyle, honours; Harry Kroeplin, honours; Joseph O'Hagan, passed.

Class I.—Agnes O'Hagan, honours; Beatrice Kroeplin, honours, Jessie McKinnon, honours; Marjorie O'Hagan, honours; Loretta Cassidy, passed.

L. Fitzpatrick, (teacher.)

BRANT

The Ladies Club in connection with Div. No. 9 Branch of the Bruce Preparedness League are doing a good work for the soldiers in the trenches, which deserves every encouragement. The Club was organized only a few months ago but already a large number of parcels have reached France from the ladies. Parcels received to be distributed have been acknowledged by Lt.-Col. (Dr.) Fraser, Pte. Jack McGarity, Corp. W. Yaeck, Pte. Roy Oberle, Lt. Fredhorn and Pte. Mitchell. A letter of thanks for socks was received from Jack McGarity.

OTTER CREEK

A number of very severe electrical storms passed over this district this week.

A number from here were attending the Teacher's Training Graduation of the Evangelical Association at Alsfeld, Ont. on Sunday. All reported a very enjoyable meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Smith motored to Wallace to attend the wedding of Mr. Fred Quantz to Miss F. Walters, of Wallace.

Miss Almeda and Earl Quantz were in Wallace on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Smith of Ayton, were visiting relatives here.

Miss Melvina Grass left on an extended visit to Middleport.

Miss Beatrice Eickmier was visiting relatives here on Saturday.

Mr. John Wilton and Mr. Joe McPhail motored to Pike Lake on a fishing trip.

Mr. David Grass and son, were visiting the Forty Hills of Carrick on Saturday.

Road work is almost completed around here.

One of our neighboring farmers shot 24 ground hogs in one half day. No wonder the price of hogs has dropped.

Miss Dickison of Clifford was married to Mr. Russel Hutton, on Thursday. We extend Congratulations.

Mr. Schumacher of Walkerton made a business trip out here.

Mr. John Hogg got new lightning rods on his barn last week.

SOUTH LINE

Mr. Charles Jurgens raised a driving shed last week.

South Line school picnic which is held annually is to be held on June 30th.

Mr. Andrew Kirstine has purchased a new Chevrolet car.

Mr. and Mrs. Traynor and daughter Viola attended the Hutton-Dickison wedding last week.

Mr. Luttrel and Mrs. Earl Tovell were visiting at Mr. Traynor's and other friends on the line last week.

FORMOSA

The work on the church tower was finished by the contractors last week.

Two popular young people, Miss Minnie Voisin, daughter of Mr. Joseph Voisin and Mr. William Keip, were united in marriage by Rev. Father Brohman on June 12th. They will make their home on Mr. Keip's farm in Culross.

Mr. George Reinhardt passed away on Sunday in his 44th year after a lengthy sickness with Brights disease. The deceased had been a farmer in Culross, retiring to the village last Spring owing to poor health. His wife and two small children have the deep sympathy of the community in their sad bereavement. The funeral was held on Tuesday morning at Formosa.

CHEPSTOW

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the R. C. Church at 9 a. m. Monday, when Emma, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. Fischer was united in marriage to Mr. Edward Kelly of Windsor, Rev. Fr. Fischer of Kitchener, uncle of the bride officiating. The bride was becomingly attired in a gown of white silk and wore a bridal wreath and veil. She was attended by Miss Margaret Friedman while the groom was ably supported by his brother Richard, of Windsor. After the ceremony the nuptial party went to the home of the bride's parents, where a large circle of invited friends and relatives made merry throughout the day and evening. The happy couple will reside in Windsor.

Five candidates from the local school are writing on the Entrance examinations at Cargill this week.

Culross Tp. Council

Town Hall Teeswater June 11th.

Council met on above date. Members of the Board all present. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

Mr. Arch McDonald appeared before the Board asking to have the ditch on the road to prevent the water from daming back on his property. The Reeve and Thos. McPherson were appointed to examine the case.

Mr. Phil Neffer was appointed to have the railing repaired on the road at the hill at lot 25 con. 4 and 5 and also the railing on the gravel road con. 3.

The Court of Revision and appeal was then opened from last meeting, and as no other business had turned up with regard to the Court it was moved that the Court be closed and the Clerk instructed to make the change in the Assessment Roll in accordance with the decision of the Court, and the Reeve to sign the same as the revised and corrected assessment roll of the Township of Culross for the year 1917.

Mr. Chas. Sewers appeared before the Council and made complaint that a party in Greenock Township had hauled stones across the road allowance and piled them against his fence or on his property and wanted to have removed. The Clerk was instructed to notify the party to have the stones removed.

James Thompson was appointed to let a contract of graveling the road at lots 31 & 32, Con. 14 &15 and have the same done as he thinks best to the amount of fifty dollars.

Mr. Alex McKague was appointed as our representative of this municipality to attend at the Preparedness League to be held at Chesley on June 19th at 1.30 p. m. at the same time the County Council will be in Session. The Clerk to notify A. E. McNab Secty.

Keffer—Thompson—That the pay for teams working on Grader be at the rate of $4.00 per day and not to use more than two teams unless necessary.

The finance report was read and adopted and orders issued on the Treasurer for payment of the accounts.

The Council then adjourned to meet again on Monday July 9th or at the call of the Reeve.

Finance Report.

Linklater&Son burial of Indigent	$35 00
G.H.Hasenflug supplies for "	6 82
R. Donaldson supplies for "	4 85
John McIne sheep killed by dogs	30 00
Mich Goetz meat for Indigent..	1 38
Mich Keiffer day work on road..	1 00
Dave McDonald dishing gvl. road	2 00
Jas. Youil man & team on grader 4 days	16 00
Aug. Miller repairing bridges..	3 00
Robt. Melvin man & team working grader	11 00
Wm. Kelly man & team on grader 2 days	8 00
Guth Reid man & team on grader 2 days	8 00
Jos. Murray grading & repairing road	57 62
Nix Melvin man & team on grader 4 days	24 00
Jos. Murray breaking gravel road	3 00

C. Betten,
Clerk.

* * *

Don't miss the opening chapters of the Telescope's new war serial "Inside the Lines" in this week's paper.

JUNE BRIDES

Will find the kind of Wedding Invitations and Announcements they are looking for in the Telescope Sample Book.

New and up-to-date styles printed from new types.

.. THE .. TELESCOPE

WAS WEAK and RUN DOWN

SUFFERED WITH "NERVES."

Many women become run down and worn out by their household cares and duties never ending, and sooner or later find themselves with shattered nerves and weak hearts.

When the heart becomes weak and the nerves unstrung it is impossible for a woman to look after her household or social duties.

On the first sign of any weakness of either the heart or nerves, take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and you will find that in a very short time you will become strong and well again.

Mrs. J. A. Williams, Tillsonburg, Ont., writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I suffered greatly with my nerves. I was so weak and run down, I could not stand the least excitement of any kind, so I believe your Heart and Nerve Pills to be a valuable remedy for all sufferers from nervous trouble."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

PATENTS PROMPTLY SECURED

We solicit the business of Manufacturers, Engineers and others who realize the advisability of having their Patent business transacted by Experts. Preliminary advice free. Charges moderate. Our Inventor's Adviser sent upon request. Marion & Marion, New York Life Bldg. Montreal ; and Washington, D.C. U.S.A.

CENTRAL Business College. STRATFORD, ONT.

Ontario's Best Business College

Students may enter our classes at any time. Commence your course now and be qualified for a position by midsummer. During July and August of last year we received calls for over 200 office assistants we could not supply. Our graduates are in demand. Write at once for our free catalogue.

D. A. McLACHLAN
PRINCIPAL

Read the Ads.

WAS TROUBLED WITH HER LIVER FOR FIVE YEARS.

When the bowels become constipated the stomach gets out of order, the liver does not work properly, and then follows the violent sick headaches, the sourness of the stomach, belching of wind, heartburn, water brash, biliousness, etc., etc.

Keep your bowels regular by using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. They will clear away all the effete matter which collects in the system and thus do away with constipation and all its allied troubles.

Mrs. John Fitzgerald, [illegible] Bay, Ont., writes: "I have been troubled with my stomach and liver for the past five years, and have had constipation causing headache, backache and dizzy spells, and sometimes I would almost fall down. I tried all kinds of remedies without obtaining any relief.

I commenced using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, and they have cured me. I have recommended them to many of my friends, and they are all very much pleased with the results they have obtained from their use."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, 25c. a vial, 5 vials for $1.00, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

WOMEN WAR WORKERS

Young women can render the country real service by preparing to take positions in Business Offices and Banks and relieve young men for war service.

Fifty thousand men will be called up very soon under the Militia Act for home defence. Who will take their places in the Business Offices and Banks? Young women should prepare now at the

NORTHERN Business College
OWEN SOUND, ONTARIO

Spring Term Opens April 10th. Circular free.

C. A. FLEMING, F. C. A., Principal

INSURANCE & REAL ESTATE

Fire, Life, Accident & Health, Plate Glass, and Guarantee Insurance in the best of Companies.

Real Estate—Several desirable residential properties for sale.

Money to Loan, Conveyancing and General Agency. Splendid Mortgage Loan Company Debentures for investment yielding good interest.

GEO. D. McKAY
Office Over Bell Telephone Agency
PHONE NO. - 179

INSURANCE

FIRE, LIFE, ACCIDENT, AUTOMOBILE, GUARANTEE. MONEY to LOAN REAL ESTATE

Town and Farm Property for sale. See my list before making a purchase

OCEAN and RAIL
TICKETS TO ANY PART OF THE WORLD.

I represent the Canadian Northern Railway and all ocean steamship companies — English, American and Italian.

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES

T. E. ATTWOOD
GENERAL AGENT
Walkerton - Ontario

DENTAL

W. B. HALLADAY, L. D. S. D. D. S.

Dentist, Successor to Dr. Coram. Modern methods employed in all dental operations. Special attention to crown, bridge and inlay work. Three doors east of post office. Visits Cargill 1st and 3rd Thursday afternoon of each month.

C.L. GRANT, D.D.S.,L.D.S
Graduate of Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario.
Dr. Grant's old stand.
Wisser Block - Walkerton

MEDICAL

DR. BROWN

Diseases of the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat, Neustadt, Ont. Will be at the Queen's Hotel, Walkerton, 1st Friday in each month from 2 to 4 p.m.

W. A. HALL, B.A., M.D., C.M.

Honor Graduate in Arts and Medicine at Queen's University. Member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons. Office and residence on corner of Colborne and Carley Streets.

'TWAS DECORATION DAY

Walkerton Oddfellows Honored the Memory of Departed Brethren on Sunday—Large Crowd Witnesses Beautiful Ceremony.

The graves of Oddfellows who have gone before were decorated with flowers by the members of Walkerton Lodge No 84, I. O. O. F. on Sunday, following their annual custom of honoring the memory of deceased brethren. The weather was ideal, and nature rich with luxurious green and bursting bloom, provided a beautiful setting for the event. The cemetery grounds are at their best at this time of year, and the way they are kept reflects credit on the good work of the superintendent, R. K. Sutton.

The brethren met at the Lodge Rooms at 2.45, and marched to the cemetery under the marshallship of Bro. James Crawford, bearing baskets of flowers. Arriving at the cemetery they formed a circle on the centre lawn, surrounded by the large crowd of citizens who had gathered to witness the beautiful ceremony.

Bro. F. J. Fraser P. G. acted as master of ceremonies as he has done with great acceptance for a number of years. Rev. C. W. Cosens led in prayer followed by a brief but thoughtful and appropriate address by Rev. Thos. Wilson. This was the fourteenth year, he had taken part in the Decoration Day ceremony here and on every single occasion, kind Providence had provided a delightful summer day. In that time 17 of the 29 names on the list had been added. Rev. Mr. Wilson spoke of two chains of three links each. The first, the emblem of the Oddfellows order, Friendship, Love and Truth, bound the brethren to one another. The other chain of three links which is also recognized by Oddfellows binds us to all humanity:(1) Sonship to God, (2) Brotherhood of Man, (3) Immortality of the Soul—the link that explains the presence of the Brethren on this occasion to honor those who have gone before but still live.

Twenty-nine graves were decorated, a basket of beautiful flowers being placed on each grave. The name and date of death of each brother was read by the Noble Grand, Bro. N. Hiscox, or by Past Grand N. M. Norrish, Bros. F. Speiran and T. Bass assisting in the ceremony at each grave, reciting an appropriate verse.

The brethren then reassembled on the lawn and heard an eloquent and thoughtful address by Rev. C. W. Cosens. He pointed out that the custom of decorating the graves of deceased brethren originated in Heathendom but to-day, it is done because of our Christian hope of a hereafter, where we are to be rewarded for work done here—"Come ye blessed of the Lord, inherit the Country prepared for ye."

The names of deceased brethren whose graves were decorated are given in another column.

Decoration Day

Departed Brethren Whose Graves were Decorated by the Members of Walkerton Lodge No. 84, on Sunday June 17th.

1	Bro. Wm. Collins, P. G.,	Died 18th April, 1901
2	Bro. W. R. Telford, P. G.,	Died 6th Sept, 1900
3	Bro. Hugh Beattie, P. G.,	Died 8th Mar., 1906
4	Bro. Wm. McIlveen,	Died 3rd March, 1889
5	Bro. C. Morrison,	Died 23rd March, 1911
6	Bro. J. T. Nichols	Died 29th January, 1906
7	Bro H. B. McKay	Died 17th August, 1904
8	Bro. Chas. Stovel,	Died 19th December, 1898
9	Bro. Joe Harkley,	Died 16th January, 1889
10	Bro. J. S. Reed,	Died Feb. 1st 1916
11	Bro. Ray Vogan,	Died Feb. 16, 1916
12	Bro. Gordon Traill,	Died 16th April, 1897
13	Bro. Jas. Gibson	Died 16th September, 1910
14	Bro. Jas. Rothwell, P. G.,	Died 15th May 1896
15	Bro. Jas. A. Crouden,	Died 15th Dec'ber, 1906
16	Bro. A. Shuttleworth,	Died 24th August, 1903
17	Bro. Robt. Best,	Died 21st November, 1898
18	Bro. Capt. Wm. Moffatt,	Died 25th Mar, 1884
19	Bro. Wm Tindall,	Died 31st January, 1906
20	Bro. J. J. Teasdale, P. G.,	Died 8th May, 1890
21	Bro. Robert Hill,	Died 3rd June, 1903
22	Bro. Wm. Rolph	Died 15th April, 1888
23	Bro. C. Rattlebron, P. G.	Died 16 June, 1903
24	Bro. Jas. Lewis,	Died 2nd April, 1903
25	Bro. Neill McPhaill,	Died 11th May, 1906
26	Bro. T. Whitehead, P. G.,	Died 9th Feb, 1900
27	Bro. Thos. Chittick	Died 2nd August, 1911
28	Bro. Thos. Barnett,	Died 12th December, 1911
29	Bro. Wm. Norrish,	Died 7th July, 1912

CARGILL BOWLERS HERE

Friendly Match Played on the Walkerton Green on Saturday P. M.

Two rinks of Cargill bowlers came down on Saturday for a friendly match. The green is in good shape this season and everybody had a good afternoon's sport. The score:—

CARGILL	WALKERTON
L. Carr	A. Hoover
F. H. Smith	T. Brown
M. L. Ziegler	J. Henderson
R. Loughleen	A. McNab
skip 9	skip 20
H. Loughleen	C. Petteplace
J. Garland	Dr. Clapp
C. Kyle	F. G. Eidt
R. A. Fowlie	H. M. Lay
skip 16	skip 14

One rink remained for an evening game and won out by two shots.

L. Carr	T. Jenkins
J. Garland	T. Brown
J. Clancy	A. McNab
R. Loughleen	F. G. Eidt
skip 14	skip 12

CONTROL ALL READING MATTER

(Mildmay Gazette)

The Walkerton Telescope came out last week as a six column, eight page, all home print paper. The change is a good one and gives the editor complete control over every line of matter appearing in his columns. We trust Brer. Eedy will find his venture profitable.

News About Town

Local news on all the inside pages

Mr. Otto Klein was at Kitchener the first of the week.

Mr. Roy Heipel of Harriston spent Sunday at his home here.

The Bruce County W. C. T. U. is meeting at Port Elgin to-day.

Messrs. Harvey Millig and Oscar Schafter spent Sunday with friends at Mildmay.

Mr. J. R. Hills of Stratford was in town last week on business for the Metropolitan Insurance Co.

Mr. and Mrs. George Frank and little daughter, Abbie, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. George Lamberton.

Mr. John McAuley of Wiarton, who was nominated by North Bruce Liberals last week to run against Hugh Clark M. P. is manager of the Dominion Fish Co. and one of the most popular men in the peninsula.

✣ ✣ ✣

A GREAT IMPROVEMENT

(Durham Chronicle)

The Walkerton Telescope appeared last week as an all-home print for the first time in its history. It formerly contained eight 8-column pages, four printed away and four printed at home It is now an eight page 6 column paper, and, a great improvement. The "patent inside" is a much cheaper paper to produce, but the publisher is handicapped by the supply house, which controls half his business.

SUNDAY SCHOOL

Lesson XIII.—Second Quarter, For June 24, 1917.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, John xxi, 15-25. Quarterly Review—Golden Text, John xx, 31—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

Lesson I.—Jesus gives sight to the blind, John ix, 1-38. Golden Text, John ix, 5, "I am the light of the world." We should all appropriate (all true believers) the words of Christ in verse 4, "I must work the works of Him that sent Me," for we are sent by Him as He was sent by the Father, and all our works are prepared for us (John xvii, 18; xx, 21; Eph. ii, 10).

Lesson II.—Jesus raises Lazarus from the dead, John xi, 17-44. Golden Text, John xi, 25, "Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection and the life." This sickness and death, like the blindness of last lesson, were for the glory of God, that the Son of God might be glorified thereby (verse 4). His delay in coming to the heartbroken sisters, His seeming neglect of them, the death and burial of Lazarus, were sore and severe testings, but resurrection made all right.

Lesson III.—Jesus the Good Shepherd, John x, 1-18. Golden Text, John x, 11, "I am the good shepherd; the good shepherd layeth down his life for the sheep." He was no hireling, never thought of pleasing Himself or of seeking anything for Himself, either in the way of His own will or His own glory.

Lesson IV.—Jesus anointed at Bethany, John xii, 1-11. Golden Text, Mark xiv, 8, "She hath done what she could." All is well in this home now, for Lazarus has come back, so it will be in the resurrection reunions, and we shall forget our miseries and remember them as waters that pass away (Job xi, 16). In Mary we see true, loving, believing, costly worship; in Martha restful service, in Lazarus resurrection life, and we look onward to His table in His kingdom.

Lesson V.—Jesus welcomed as king, John xii, 12-36. Golden Text, John xii, 13, "Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord, even the king of Israel." That most sad day when He wept over the city because of the sufferings that would come upon it on account of their rejection of Him and His kingdom will yet give place to a glad day, when they shall say: "Lo, this is our God! We have waited for Him, and He will save us."

Lesson VI.—Jesus the servant of all, John xiii, 1-17. Golden Text, Mark x, 44, "Whosoever would be first among you shall be servant of all." The events of that passover night which He so desired carry us back to the great night in Egypt when the nation was born and on to the future fulfillment when they shall be born again.

Lesson VII.—Jesus the True Vine, John xv, 1-16. Golden Text, John xv, 5, "I am the Vine; ye are the branches." Not only is He the True Vine, the True and Righteous Israel, but He is the Righteous Branch always bearing fruit. The wonder is that He can bear fruit through such as we are, but He who ordains peace for us works all our works in us (Isa. xxvi, 12; Phil. ii, 13; Eph. ii, 10). In redemption He does all for us fully and freely, and unless He does all in our daily life nothing counts.

Lesson VIII.—The importance of self control, Isa. xxviii, 1-13. Golden Text, I Cor. ix, 25, "Every man that striveth in the games exerciseth self control in all things." As in verse 16 of this chapter we have the only sure foundation for all deliverances from sin and self, so it is also in I Cor. iii, 11-15, where we learn that lack of self control or denial may lead to great loss on the part of saved people.

Lesson IX.—The Holy Spirit and His work, John xv, 26; xvi, 14. Golden Text, John xiv, 26, "He shall teach you all things." From first to last the Holy Spirit is the great and only worker and has been called the executive of the Godhead. He loves to magnify the Father through the Son, guide us into all truth, take of the things of Christ and show them unto us and show us things to come.

Lesson X.—Jesus betrayed and denied, John xviii, 1-18. Golden Text, Isa. liii, 3, "He was despised and rejected of men. When we consider that one numbered with the twelve, though he never was really one of them, sold Him to His enemies, and another who was truly a disciple denied Him with oaths and curses, and all forsook Him and fled, we can only wonder at His faith in God under such adverse circumstances.

Lesson XI.—Jesus crucified, John xix, 16-30. Golden Text, I Cor. xv, 3, "Christ died for our sins." As we consider this most awful event in all the past history of the world, we should continually ponder and prayerfully meditate upon such words as our Golden Text, along with Gal. iii, 13; I Pet. ii, 24; Heb. i, 3; ix, 12; x, 10, 12; Isa. liii, 5, 6, and then see Him before His enemies as an example for us, His followers.

Lesson XII.—The Risen Lord, John xx, 1-18. Golden Text, I Cor. xv, 20, "Now hath Christ been raised from the dead, the first fruits of them that are asleep." We should see ourselves as believers, crucified with Him, buried with Him, risen with Him, seated with Him and coming with Him in glory to set up His kingdom and reign with Him over the earth and reign with Him over the earth.

POULTRY AND EGGS

GOOSE RAISING PAYS

Points on Breeding, Incubation and Feed and Care of Goslings.

Geese can be raised in small numbers successfully and at a profit on farms where there is low, rough pasture land with a natural supply of water. Geese are generally quite free from disease and all insect pests, but occasionally are affected by the diseases common to poultry. Grass makes up the bulk of the feed for geese, and it is doubtful whether it pays to raise them unless good grass range is available. A body of water where they can swim is considered essential during the breeding season and is a good feature during the rest of the year. The market for geese is not so general as for chickens. This should be considered in undertaking the raising of geese. The demand and the price paid for geese are usually good in sections where goose fattening is conducted on a large scale. Many geese are kept in the south for the production of feathers rather than for their flesh, but the demand for their feathers is not so good as it has been, making the business less profitable. Wherever possible, the geese on a farm should have free range. Many farmers in the south keep them to kill the weeds in the cotton fields.

Six breeds of geese have been admitted to the American standard of perfection—namely, Toulouse, Embden, Chinese, African, Wild or Canadian and Egyptian. In addition to the standard breeds, there is the so called Mongrel goose, which is a hybrid made by crossing one of these varieties, or the common goose, with wild geese. The illustration shows an African gander.

Houses.

Except in winter or during stormy weather, when some protection should be provided, mature geese do not usually need a house. Some kind of shelter, such as a shed open on the south side, a poultry house or a barn, is usually provided by breeders in the north and is used by many in the south. Coops, barrels or some other dry shelter should be provided for young goslings. The goose houses should be kept clean and plenty of clean straw provided for the floor.

Selecting and Mating.

Geese, like other kinds of poultry, should be selected for size, prolificacy and vitality. They should be mated several months prior to the breeding season to obtain the best results. Therefore breeding stock should be bought in the fall. Goose matings are not changed from year to year unless the results are unsatisfactory. A gander may be mated with from one to four geese, but pair or trio matings usually give the best results. The wild gander usually mates with only one goose. When mated, geese are allowed to run in flocks. From four to twenty-five geese may be kept on an acre of land, and under most conditions ten is a fair average.

Incubation.

Geese are fed a ration to produce eggs during the latter part of the winter or so that the goslings will be hatched by the time there is good grass pasture. They are allowed to make nests on the floor of the house, or large boxes, barrels or shelters are provided for that purpose. The eggs should be collected daily and kept in a cool place where the contents will not evaporate too freely. If kept for some time they may be stored in loose bran. The first eggs are usually set under hens, while the last ones which the goose lays may be hatched either under hens or under the goose if she is broody. If the eggs are not removed from the nest in which the goose is laying she will usually stop laying sooner than if they are taken away. Some breeders prefer to raise all the goslings under hens, as geese sometimes become difficult to manage when allowed to hatch and rear their young. Hens used for hatching goose eggs must be dusted with insect powder and have good attention, as in the case of geese the period of incubation is longer than in that of fowls. Goose eggs may be hatched in incubators and the goslings successfully raised in brooders, although this is not a common practice.

The period of incubation of geese

HEALTHIEST ONE IN THE FAMIL

No Sign Of Dropsy And Kidney Tr
Since Taking "FRUIT-A-TIVI

HATTIE WARRE

Port Robinson, Ont., July

"We have used "Fruit- our house for over three ye always found them a good. Our little girl, Hattie, was trou Kidney Disease. The Doctor sa was threatened with Dropsy. H and body were all swollen and we to think she could not live. Fin decided to try "Fruit-a-tives" began to show improvement after given her a few tablets. In a shor the swelling had all gone down a flesh began to look more na she is the healthiest one i and has no signs of the We can not say too much f tives" and would never b them".

WILLIAM WA

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial si At all dealers or sent postp receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives L Ottawa.

GRAND TRUNK RAIL SYST

ATTRACTIVE TRIPS
To
Muskoka Lakes
Algonquin Park
Maganetawan River
Lake of Bays
Karwartha Lakes
Georgian Bay

Round trip tourist tickets now on sale from stations in Ontario at very low fares with liberal stop overs.

Berth reservation and full particulars at all Grand Trunk Ticket Offices or write C. E. HORNING, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, Ontario.

Spring Styles

AS SHOWN IN OUR Superior Tailored Clothing are covered by one brief sentence "The, and cheapest to be had in town."

We'd like to measure you for your spring suit or overcoat.

Hats, Caps, Ties, Shirts, Sweater Coats, all furnishings at Slaughter prices.

WOODMAN & CO.
☞ Next to Vogan's Hardware

The Time
The, Place
The Price

NOW is the time, Men, while our range of Spring Cloths is complete.

THIS is the place for ordered clothes. Style and fit guaranteed.

THE PRICE is right and to suit every purse.

T. PYE
Clothier & Furnisher.

Comfort in the Home

The Sunshine Furnace chases chills from coldest corners and insures utmost comfort in the home throughout the winter. Don't buy any furnace or heating plant until you have investigated the merits of the "Sunshine."

McClary's
UNSHINE FURNACE
DON TORONTO MONTREAL WINNIPEG VANCOUVER
ST. JOHN, N.B. HAMILTON CALGARY
SASKATOON EDMONTON

For Sale by Patterson Bros.

FIELD SEEDS

"Our supply of Field Corn has just arrived. We have different varieties and the seed is excellent.

We also have a good supply of Turnip and Mangle Seed.

Don't forget we are selling Paint at 65c per quart.

S. W. Vogan

CANADIAN PACIFIC

Great Lakes Steamship Service
via Owen Sound
STEAMSHIP "MANITOBA"
leaves Owen Sound at midnight each THURSDAY (connecting train leaves Toronto 5.25 p. m.) for Sault Ste Marie, Port Arthur and Fort William.
SERVICE via PORT McNICOLL COMMENCES JUNE 2.

Plan Your Vacation Trip Now
POINT AU BARIL
MUSKOKA LAKES
KAWARTHA LAKES
LAKE MAZINAW
FRENCH and
PICKEREL RIVERS
RIDEAU LAKES
SEVERN RIVER
are delightful resorts and easily reached via C. P. R.

For WINNIPEG and VANCOUVER
Leave Toronto 6.40 P. M. Daily via 'The Pioneer Route'

Particulars from Canadian Pacific Ticket Agents or
W. B. HOWARD, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, Ontario.

HAMMOCKS!

Hot weather is fast approaching. Why not spend a few pleasant evenings in a new, up-to-date hammock? We have a fine assortment ranging in price from $2.00 to $6.75.

Also keep the big black flies out of the kitchen by using Hobb's up-to-date SCREEN DOORS AND WINDOWS. Sold by

PATTERSON BROS.
Hardware Stoves Graniteware

THE CANADIAN BANK OF COMMERCE

SIR EDMUND WALKER, C.V.O., LL.D., D.C.L., President
JOHN AIRD, General Manager. H. V. F. JONES, Ass't General Manager

CAPITAL, $15,000,000 RESERVE FUND, $13,500,000

FARMERS' BUSINESS

The Canadian Bank of Commerce extends to Farmers every facility for the transaction of their banking business, including the discount and collection of sales notes. Blank sales notes are supplied free of charge on application.

H. M. LAY, Manager Walkerton Branch.

TELESCOPE LETTER BOX

IS IT THE HAND OF GOD?

Editor Telescope,
Walkerton, Ont.

Dear Sir:—

A few weeks ago there could be read in the public press of Canada printed in large letters the following words: "Famine and World Hunger are on our threshold." A startling statement indeed. If true it should lead the intelligent mind to very serious meditation. Famine and Hunger in the past years have visited different parts of the world for instance, the great famine in India, in China and Russia. But the crops in other parts of the world were good, that to some extent at least the famishing country might be relieved. World Hunger, those words sound ominous. Now to get nearer to our subject, we ask where lies the cause? Have the farmers not been doing their duty in the farming line of business. We think they certainly have. We are told the acreage of growing crops has been reduced. But are the farmers to blame for that? We think not. They have been almost forcibly deprived of the hired labour that they should have had. This fact cannot be denied. If the less acreage sown has resulted to some extent, in their being less grain in the country the farmers are not to be blamed. But we do not think the less acreage sown has brought on the reported World's Famine. In our humble opinion the cause lies far deeper and right here we come to the central thought of our subject. The writer has been brought up to the teaching of the Bible, God's Holy Word. If we really believe in the Bible we believe in the existence of an Eternal God, the Creator of all things seen and unseen, the Creator of mankind. The Scripture says, in Him we live, move and have our being. This Great Eternal being is a God of Love and compassion. As a father loveth mankind and always seeketh their best interest in their Eternal Welfare, if this be true we fail to see how an all-loving God can look with anything else but utter contempt and abhorence and righteous Indignation at the horrible butchery and frightful sacrifice of human lives in a war maddened Europe. Appeals to reason so far have been in vain. The Almighty God is putting his hand in, and will starve the warring nations unto submission for Providence has all things in His hands. He maketh the rain and sunshine that the tillers of the soil can prepare the ground and sow the seed. But God must send us the rain and sunshine or in other words increase the crops. All things are in His power. What do our ministerial Brethren, the ministers of the Christian pulpit, say about this? Are they not the recognized prophets and supposed Oracles of God in our latter day and generation? One could sincerely wish and pray that the Great Almighty would reveal His will in this very serious time of great trouble and distress. If it is God's will to starve the world, in order to stop this terrible war, it would be a Godsend. We pray Thy will be done.

Yours truly,
A. Layman.

✠

We don't propose to enter into this discussion, but we would like to have seen the writer make some distinction between the countries which are upholding Prussianism and those peace-loving nations which are shedding their blood to win for all men the right to live out their lives peacibly in the world. Is the Almighty going to punish the Allies for defending themselves and the smaller nations against Kaiserism and all that it signifies?—Editor Telescope.

Draw The Brain Of A Frog

Part II of the Fourth Form examinations is now on. In Zoology which is obligatory for all candidates, one question this year is "Draw the brain of a frog". This is Dr. John Seath's idea of what constitutes an ideal question to shew at once the artistic touch and depth of human knowledge in secondary education. The students in Form Four have spent a lot of valuable time this year cutting up fishworms and frogs and drawing the nervous system of clams. And after they can draw the nervous system of clams and brains of frogs what use can the knowledge thus obtained be put to in practical life. Art is said to be useful because men and women can take it with them to the next world and better appreciate the beauty of heaven, but there will be no brains of frogs there. Invertebrates like the grasshopper and fishworm are not possessed of brains and Dr. Seath, Supt. of Education, can't have any brains either or he would never allow such a question as "Draw the brain of a frog" to be one of the test questions for a student aiming to get into the Faculty of Education. Dr. Pyne and Dr. Seath are strong on frog brains and weak on human brains.—Chesley Enterprise.

WALKERTON TALENT

Trained by Mr. E. H. Leeson Give a Concert of High Order—New Philharmonic Society's First Effort was Fine Success

The initial performance of the recently organized Walkerton Philharmonic Society was given at the Opera House on Tuesday evening, June 12th. The affair was a splendid success and highly encouraging to the Conductor, Mr. Leeson, as showing the possibilities of the idea which he has had a mind for several years. The choral work was really delightful although handicapped by the absence of so many of Walkertons best male singers who are now fighting in France.

Pieces of such technical difficulty as "Hail to the Dawn" (Suppe) were handled in a way that showed careful training and intelligent rendering.

The most imposing number was Costa's descriptive chorus, Damascus, being the welcome given to Benhadad's great general, Naaman, on his triumphal entry into Damascus. The piece opens with the triumphal march of Naaman after his Victory, a chorus of soldiers, followed by the welcoming chorus of maidens (altos). Then a women's chorus, and a trio of women's voices, which was especially well done, the whole number ending with a great chorus which effectively brought out the volume of the chorus as well as the stately harmonies of the piece.

The unaccompanied numbers were especially enjoyed. These included "O Hush Thee My Babe", "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Charms" and the "Slumber Song", all of which showed especial care and training, particularly in the piano passages, and little swells.

Two dainty little numbers were: Alger's "Lullaby" and selections from "The Chimes of Normandy."

The closing chorus, "Land of Hope and Glory," a stately patriotic number, was sung with feeling and color of tone which well brought out the emotional in the piece.

Mrs. Stephan sang: Waiting (Millard) "Ave Maria" (Bach-Gounod) and "Sing On" (Denza.) The town should be proud to possess a singer of Mrs. Stephan's ability and should certainly appreciate its good fortune. The quality of her technique was very fine, and her upper notes were especially pleasing.

Mr. C. B. Robinson's cornet numbers were as usual highly appreciated. His beautiful expression and quality of tone are equalled by few professionals.

The piano numbers of Miss Edna Kennedy, a talented young lady from Owen Sound, were very fine. Miss Florence Cosens did splendid service as accompanist.

The program was varied by recitations by Walkerton's two talented readers, Miss Florence Cunningham and Miss Jean Norrish.

From start to finish the affair was a treat which everybody enjoyed, and Walkerton music lovers will look forward with anticipation to further concerts by the Philharmonic Society.

Those who took part in the affair were:—Mr. E. H. Leeson, Conductor; Mrs. Charles Stephan, Soprano Soloist; Miss Edna Kennedy, pianoist; Miss Florence Cousens, accompanist; Mr. John Kurman, violinist; Mr. C. B. Robinson, cornet soloist. Sopranos: Mesdames Bremner, Eidt, Hehn, Nesbitt, Stephan, Wolf; Misses F. Cunningham, V. Cunningham, Dippel, Eckel, Farewell, Fraser, Freeman, Jenkins, James, Neil, O'Malley, Plowtight, Rife, Robertson, Rowland, Schwindt, Seiler, Skelton, Taggart, Warren, P. Wettlaufer, C. Wettlaufer, White, Wilson. Altos: Mesdames C. Clark and Skelton; Misses Beatty, Cook, Ermel, McGregor, Pryne, L. Wettlaufer, Vogt, Master Plowright. Tenors; Messrs. Eamer, J. Heffernan, H. A. Stephan, Schuett Springstead. Bass: Messrs Erdman, Hehn, Nesbitt, Plowright, Schwindt.

The Managing Committee, representing the young ladies of the Soldiers Aid, under whose auspices the affair was given, consisted of Miss Florence Rowland, President; Miss Daisy Benton, Sec-treasurer; Miss Marion Robertson and Miss Florence Cosens. The proceeds amounting to about $140 will be devoted to sending parcels to Walkerton boys at the Front.

The Canadian Rockies

The best and newest sections, and highest peaks are seen from the transcontinental trains of the Canadian Northern Railway leaving Toronto every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. For attractive booklets, through tickets, and full information.—Apply to F. E. Attwood, Town Agent.

What Temp. Act Has Done

The Committee of One Hundred has recently obtained information from the jails and other penal institutions of our Province showing that on May 1st a reduction of 40 p. c. had occurred as compared with the same date one year ago. The total number of committments from Oct. 1916 to May 1917 records a falling off of 47 p. c. while those committed for drunkenness in these periods shows a decrease of 70½ p. c.

This Week's Telescope

Contains the Opening Chapters of Our New Serial

INSIDE THE LINES

By Earl Derr Biggers
and
Robert Wells Ritchie

"Inside the Lines" first appeared as a stirring war drama of today, the best of its kind since "Secret Service." Its author, Earl Derr Biggers, is known to fame as the author of "Seven Keys to Baldpate." His later play has been novelized by Robert Wells Ritchie, and opens at the outset of the present great war drama in Europe. Caught by the swirl of events, a lovely American girl is detained in Europe and becomes innocently enmeshed in the machinations of spies and of the secret service of two contending nations. Every chapter is replete with mystery and incident, skillfully woven threads that blend to a surprising climax.

WRIGLEY'S
A New and Tempting Taste:

As toothsome as the name implies.

Delicious, long-lasting. The third of the Wrigley trio of refreshing confections.

Good for teeth, breath, appetite, digestion.

Sealed Tight—Kept Right!

Three of a kind
Keep them in mind

Chew it after every meal

MADE IN CANADA
ON SALE WHEREVER CONFECTIONS ARE SOLD

The Flavour Lasts!

Elaborate Stocks Of Spring and Summer Merchandise

Gathered specially for Summer Selling. Variety of choice as big as ever in almost every line, qualities just as reliable and our prices in many instances are below the actual cost of today.

Floor Rugs Direct from Glasgow, Scotland

Should have landed many month ago but the values are so good that they are extremely welcome.

Among them are Tapestry, Brussels and velvet and some of them in sizes 2x2½ yards and 2x2½ yards, so much in demand where two or three small rugs are wanted for a large room. The colors are beautifully blended and the quality is very superior.

Prices from $10.00 to $22.50

These Fashionable New Wash Goods for Summer Wear

ENGLISH VOILES

The most elaborate collection of high grade Voiles we have ever shown. In plain shades with self stripes and plain grounds with the fashionable large spot or figure. These are the much wanted summer fabrics and come in all the new and wanted shades. Double width.

Price per yd, 50c, 60c, 75c and 85c

American Printed Muslins and Voiles.

White and all other good shades in plain grounds and with beautiful floral designs.

Per yard, 20c, 25c and 35c

Cotton Crepes

You can't doubt the wearing and washing quality of these. They are much used for inexpensive dresses, children's wear, underwear and kimonos. Plain shades and with figured and floral designs.

Price per yard 15c and 20c

Elaborate and Servicable

Kimonos

At Very Reasonable Prices

Made of beautiful flowered Crepe Cloths and Cotton Velours. They are well made and fit with that ease and comfort that you get only when garments are cut right. Beautifully trimmed to match the shades of these Kimonos which are rose, sky, mauve, grey, Alice blue, black with purple, fawn.

Prices $1, $1.25, $1.50 $2.00 to $3.50

STEPHAN BROTHERS

Anniversary Sale In Full Swing

Every Day a Busy Day Until June 30th. New Bargains Replacing Sold Outs Daily. Below is a Partial List of the Good Things.

Fast color Prints and Percales selling at 15c, 16c, 18c and 20c.

8c, 10c and 12½c Embroideries and Laces, numerous patterns to choose from, Anniversary price, 5c per yard.

15c, 20c and 25c Embroideries and Laces, Sale Price 10c.

Corset Cover Embroideries worth 35c, 40c, and 50c, Sale price 25c.

Our Silk Specials are Causing a Sensation

$2.00 Heavy Black Duchess Silk, Sale Price	$1.65 a yard.
$1.75 " " " "	$1.49 a yard.
$1.50 Black Pallette Silk, 36 in. " "	$1.20 a yard.
$1.50 Black Taffetta Silk, 36 in. " "	$1.25 a yard.
$1.50 Black and Colored Silk Crepe, 36 in.	$1.25 a yard.

Buy your Yarns now at last season's prices.

4 dozen Ladies' Waists, some slightly soiled, regular 50c to $2.00. Sale price, 25 and 50c each.

Ladies' $6.00 Poplin Rainproof Coats, all sizes, black, tan, grey, navy and brown, Anniversary price $3.75 each.

Fancy Parasols, all reduced prices during the Sale.

$1.00 Ladies' Black Parasols, Anniversary price 75c.

Straw Hats at special prices; see window.

Come any day now, the sooner the better. You will save money by buying all your summer needs at our Anniversary Sale.

McBURNEY & CO.

POETS' CORNER

THE PUSH

(By N. H. Gubbins, in London Daily Mail)

We've pushed 'em orf the "Anker."
  We're pushed 'em orf the Somme.
We'll push 'em out o' Belgium
  Wiv bay'nit an' wiv bomb.
We've pushed 'em out o' Bagdad
  An' into Palestine,
An' glory to the Gen'ral
  Who can push 'em past the Rhine.

Now fix yer bay'nits ready,
  Now fill yer 'aversack,
Now take yer chargin' steady,
  Now shoulder up yer pack;
Now listen for the whistle,
  An' see that you're in line,
An' glory to the Gen'ral
  Who can push 'em past the Rhine!

Now keep a good alignment,
  Just as the rule-book tells,
An' never mind the bullets
  An' never mind the shells.
Now, can't yer see 'em runnin,'
  The dirty 'eathen swine?
O! glory to the Gen'ral
  Who can push 'em past the Rhine!

An' now we're in the village,
  A-chargin' down the street,
A-giving okey-pokey
  To every 'Un we meet.
O Lord, ain't this a birfday?
  O. Lordy! ain't it fine?
O! glory to the Gen'ral
  Who can push 'em past the Rhine!

We've pushed 'em orf the "Anker,"
  We've pushed 'em orf the Somme,
We'll push 'em out o' Belgium
  Wiv bay'nit an' wiv bomb.
We've pushed 'em out o' Bagdad
  An' into Palestine,
An' glory to the Gen'ral
  Who can push 'em past the Rhine.

+ + +

Town and District

Local news on every page.

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Cheshire and family are holidaying at Wiarton.

Mrs. Ross of Chesley and her daughter Annie, of Regina, are visiting Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Hall.

Promoted to Corporal

Ed. Eidt D. C. M. writes home from France that he is well. Ed. now signs himself Corporal.

Commands "C" Co.

A letter received here yesterday states that Capt. Bob Rowland has been given Command of "C" Co., 160th Batt'n.

Two Flats.

To Rent. Both five room flats, Modern conveniences, fire places etc. Also six-roomed frame house.—T. E. Attwood.

New Overlands.

New car owners include:—William Becker, and August Sternoster, of Brant; Albert Waechter of Greenock; Guy Kerney of Durham.

Mrs. Robertson of London has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Cheshire the past two weeks. Her husband, who is a brother of Mrs. Cheshire, spent Sunday here. Mr. Robertson was at one time a resident of this district, being a former secretary of the Durham Cement Co.

"All is not Gold that Glitters"

Also all "Fancy Biscuits" are not fit to eat that are fixed up to catch the eye. Our fancy biscuits are made from pure wholesome home-made recipes. They are made to eat.—Goode & McKay.

Saw Nelson's Flag Ship

Signaller Harry Bolden and Pte. Whitney Van Horne had the privelege of seeing Nelsons famous flagship, Victory, while on leave at Portsmouth, England. The boys went through the ship and were shown the spot where the famous Admiral fell.

Fell From Mow

Mr. Bob. Irwin, the well-known horse buyer, fell through the floor of the mow at the Queen's Hotel barn and narrowly escaped serious injury on Monday morning. A loose board caused the accident. His shoulder was bruised and his wrist rather badly sprained. Mr. Irwin has had rather more than his share of ill luck lately. Only a few weeks ago he had several ribs broken in a motor accident.

McNeill Women Working

On Tuesday of last week, the ladies of the South Line West, held a successful patriotic quilting bee for the benefit of the soldiers, at the home of Mrs. James L. Tolton. A noticeable feature of the gathering was the number of Mesdames McNeill present, no less than six, besides one Miss McNeill, who is a nurse in training at Fergus. The McNeills in history were great fighters and it would seem that the ladies of the clan in this neighborhood are doing their part to uphold the traditions of their men by doing their bit in win-the-war work.

Telephone Moguls Here

Mr. L. B. McFarlane of Montreal President of the Bell Telephone Co., and Mr. K. J. Dunstan, manager of Ontario Division, were here on a visit of inspection to the Walkerton District on Tuesday. We are not surprised to learn that they found everything satisfactory in District Manager Robinson's area. We know of no other office where the public get better service or more courteous treatment, and we have heard people who have occasion to use the Bell service at different points throughout the Province bear the same testimony.

Off To The Front

Harold Patterson left on Saturday for Overseas with a special draft of the Toronto Forestry Company. Harold has been in Khaki nearly a year and a half. He was one of the most popular and efficient officers of the 160th Batt'n and had a large share in recruiting that unit. It was only when the 160th was leaving for Overseas that Harold was turned down by the doctors. He was keenly disappointed at this turn of affairs but finally succeeded in becoming accepted by the Forestry Draft. An attack of scarlet fever again delayed him but at last his persistence has overcome all obstacles and he is headed for France.

Still Hopes To Go

Mr. John Bickle went to Cobourg last week to enlist in the Cobourg battery for Overseas but was not accepted by the medical examiner. John stil hopes to get to the Front in connection with the Transport system, where the standard for eyesight is not so high. With this in view he is taking medical treatment which he hopes will enable him to pass the examination.

An Old Bruce Boy

The Telescope enjoyed a call yesterday Mr. R. W. McMorran, Postmaster of Somerset, Man. Mr. McMorran was raised near Paisley and taught school at Eden Grove for several years and his son, Gordon A. McMorran is now editor and publisher of a thriving local paper, The Souris Plaindealer. Mrs. McMorran is a native of Brant, being a sister of Coun. Walter Findlay. Mr. and Mrs McMorran were accompanied from Toronto by Miss Jessie Findley, trained nurse, who will visit the old home.

Visitor From Corea

Miss Hilda Helstrom, who is home on furlough from the Corean Mission field, arrived here last night on a month's visit to her friend, Mrs. L. H. Mc Namara. Miss Helstrom is a Swedish lady, who formerly made her home at Cleveland, Ohio, where her uncle is the Swedish Consul. Seven years ago she went to Corea on behalf of the Presbyterian Foreign Mission Board. She had intended spending a portion of her furlough in Sweden where some members of her family are still living but will be unable to do so owing to war conditions.

+ + +

BORN

SCHWALM—In Mildmay, on June 6th, to Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Schwalm, a son.

Why not give your boy and girl an opportunity to make their home study easy and effective? Give them the same chance to win promotion and success in life by having the advantage of

WEBSTER'S NEW INTERNATIONAL

Dictionary in his home. This new creation answers with final authority all kinds of puzzling questions in history, geography, biography, spelling, pronunciation, sports, arts, and sciences.

400,000 Vocabulary Terms. 2700 Pages. Over 6000 Illustrations. Colored Plates. The only dictionary with the Divided Page. The type matter is equivalent to that of a 15-volume encyclopedia. More Scholarly, Accurate, Convenient, and Authoritative than any other English Dictionary.

REGULAR AND INDIA-PAPER EDITIONS.

WRITE for specimen pages, illustrations, etc. FREE, a set of Pocket Maps if you name this paper.

G. & C. MERRIAM CO., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

IF YOU WANT a good, Reliable Boot. —Try a pair of our Cushion Soles made of solid leather.

FIRST CLASS REPAIRING

C. PETTEPLACE

JEWELLRY OF ALL KINDS

Watches,
Clocks,
Cut Glass
Silverware
and Jewellry
of all kinds.

C. A. FOX, & SON

"JUNE"

SILVERWARE For the Bride

The enduring gift, the useful gift, the one that pleases most.

What will it be—A cake basket, a fruit spoon, a bread tray, a salad set, a tea service, or a complete service of table silverware.

We have silverware which make exquisite wedding gifts in variety of forms.

The price ranging from a dollar up. You can secure any pieces you want from our open sets of celebrated ware. Also beautiful pieces of Pearl handled goods.

R. A. GIBSON
JEWELER WALKERTON
Agent for The New Edison Phonograph.

The Central Grocery

Clover Leaf China

A fresh assignment just arrived. Staple lines.

Toilet Setts

Plain and printed

FARM PRODUCE WANTED

W. G. Searle
Phone 161 Walkerton

THE PEOPLE'S STORE

BUTTERICK PATTERNS

Make It Yourse Be Fashionable!

FOLLOW the example of fashionable women of Europe by making your own clothes during the war.

Butterick Patterns give you the smartest, most advance styles—that chic simplicity so popular now in Paris. Perfectly easy for any one to make.

Make your selection now at our

Butterick Pattern Department

Phone 53 J. H. APPEL Walkerton

OPENING AND CLOSING STORE

On and after Wednesday June 6th this Store will be open

Wednesday Evenings Until 9 O'clock

and will close

Thursday Afternoons at 1 O'clock

during the summer months. I will have special attractions for Wednesday evenings to give the public an opportunity to do their buying in the evening. All orders taken will be delivered Thursday morning.

C. PATRICK
PHONE 165 WALKERTON

Read Every Page!

WORTHY GROCERIES
LOW PRICES

These features explain the phenomenal success of our great food market. We are well stocked with the choicest and as usual the price is low.

GOODE & McKAY
The People's Grocery
PHONE 67 WALKERTON

WALKERTON TELESCOPE

VOL. XLIX. NO. 26 WALKERTON TELESCOPE, WALKERTON, JUNE 28th, 1917 $1.50 A YEAR IN ADVANCE

All Home Print - Local News on Every Page From 1 to 8

HANDSOME UNION JACK

Formally Raised on Separate School Grounds on Wednesday Afternoon — Program of Songs and Speeches

A big, handsome Union Jack was rmally raised on the Separate School ounds on Wednesday afternoon to the companment of cheers by the boys nd girls of the school. The flag was the gift of the Sepatate School Board, nd will be floated in the breeze on all tional holidays and patriotic occasions. Patriotic speeches were delivered by v. Father Haller, Mayor Johnston, [illegible] Mr. John Rowland, chairman of the paredness League. Cheers were en for the flag, the King, the Moth- Superior and Father Haller, who is ving shortly and is a great favorite with the boys and girls. The children, who have been well trained in singing by the Sisters, sang "O Canada," "The Maple Leaf" and other patriotic numb- rs. Mayor Johnston made a hit with e children by suggesting that they be ven a half holiday.

interhalt—Drumm

Miss Martina Drumm, daughter of r. Martin Drumm, was married at St. ise's Church, Montreal Hochelage, Tuesday morning, June 26th, to Mr. phen Winterhalt of Montreal, form- ly of Kitchener.

Aliens In Brant

For the first time municipal clerks ve instructions not to copy the names those who are not British subjects on voters' lists which are now being pared. According to the assessor,s l there is only one alien in Elderslie, L. Slomakle of lot 35 con 13, who n American subject, but there are Brant roll. These men will be chised at the next municipal and [illegible] elections. They cannot be [illegible] till the war is over.

RUSSELL WHITE HOME

Dropped In Unexpectedly on Monday and Gave Parents Surprise —Is on Medical Transport Service.

License Inspector Joseph M. White and his wife received a pleasant surprise on Monday when their son, Sergt. Russell White, who has been away on military service the past year dropped in on them quite unexpectedly. Sergt. White, who is a full-fledged druggist, is connected with the medical transport service and has made several trips across the Atlantic returning on transports with wounded soldiers. He has 10 days' leave. While ocean travelling is still healthful, it is not as pleasant as it was three or four years ago, floating mines being the obstacle mostly feared. Russell has been several times in old London, visited many places of historic interest, and has taken interesting snapshots of his collection along the way. On the last trip over, he paid a visit to Wittley Camp to see the Walkerton boys of the 160th. They were away on a route march at the time but he saw Lieut. Vic McKetchnie, Sergt.-Major Harry Watts and a few others of the boys, all of whom were looking fine and fit, and bronzed by their months of outdoor training.

Proclamation to Churches

Special Dominion Day services will be held in the Walkerton Churches on Sunday in response to a proclamation issued by the Provincial Government. The proclamation calls for the solemn and religious recognition by our people of the benefits and blessings that have been vouchsafed to us by Providence as a Dominion, and urges that all churches Sunday Schools and associations of a like character fittingly commemorate the occasion. Monday, July 2nd, is proclaimed as a day for public and patriotic demonstrations of the devotion of our people to our national institutions and ideals.

Penslar

YNAMIC TONIC

e nerve food, supplying phosphorus and the me and magnesia salts. Restores vitality and the nervous system, renews bodily strength, ack your old-time energy and vim.

namic Tonic also contains iron in a form which s the system to take it up readily and enrich the

If you are not strong, you owe it to yourself to get Dynamic Tonic and see how it will build you up.

Hunter's Drug Store

Drugs and Kodaks Phone 35 C. P. R. Ticket Agency

The Rexall Store

WATERGLASS

For Preserving Eggs. 1 lb tins 15c. 2 lb tins 25c

PARIS GREEN

In bulk or in packages.

ARSENATE OF LEAD

In 1 lb and 5 lb bottles.

BUY THESE AT SIEVERIGHT'S

A. P. Sieveright

rugs - Kodaks

WALL PAPERS OF QUALITY

he newest effects and wonderful assortment the Parlor, Living om, Dining Room, ll, Bed Room. Kit- hen, at very reason- ble prices.

McCrum's

WOMEN'S White Shoes

IN HIGH CUTS and PUMP are having a big run.

Women's White Canvas Shoes 8 in. tops, $2.50

Women's White Reginskin High Shoes, 8 in tops, $3.50

Women's White Reginskin High Shoes, 8 in tops, $5.00

All the Leading Styles.

Ramsey The Shoeman

NEWS ABOUT TOWN

Local news on every page.

Next Monday will be Dominion Day.

Mr. James Whitehead was in Toronto last week.

For the best farm shoe go to Ramsey's Shoe Store.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Lamont are holidaying at Brussels.

Men's genuine elk blucher cut shoes $3.75 at Ramsey's Shoe Store.

Misses Belle Liddle, Franie Zettel and Annie Smith visited Guelph on Sunday.

Mrs. Doyle of Calgary is visiting at the home of her brother, Mr. Jas. Bell in Brant.

The easiest shoe on earth is Dr. Reed's Cushion Sole Shoe. Sold at Ramsey's Shoe Store.

Miss W. Bruder of Hamburg visited her friend, Miss Josephine Yaeck, the past two weeks.

Mr. P. J. Duffey of the townline Carrick and Howick, visited at Mr. E. Myle's this week.

The annual picnic of S. S. No 1 Brant is being held at Mr. Riley's grove on Friday afternoon.

Regal Shoes are built up to a standard not down to a price. Sold at Ramsey's Shoe Store.

Pte. William Anderson of the 7th Fusiliers, London, spent the week-end at his home here.

Men's, women's, misse's and children's outing shoes, all sizes and styles Ramsey's Shoe Store.

Mrs. M. J. Ramsey and son Milton, left Tuesday on a visit to friends at Thorold and Hamilton.

The Walkerton boys of the 64th Battery left Guelph at 3.30 p. m. Sunday for Petawawa Camp.

Mr. M J Fraser and the Misses Fraser, motored to Staynor and spent Sunday with Mrs. Vernon Johnston.

Mr. George Whitehead and family of Guelph spent the week-end with his brother, Mr. James Whitehead.

Messrs Dave George, Albert Miller and James Clancy took in the Lang—Anstett wedding on Tuesday evening.

The Middle and Upper School Examinations are on at the High School this week. Inspector John McCool is presiding.

Mayor Johnston's little son, Chris, cut a bad gash in his forehead on the river bottom while in swimming on Tuesday.

Miss Adeline Firstbrook of Bishop Bethune College, Oshawa is spending her vacation at the home of her uncle, Mr. T. E. Attwood.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Johnston of Harriston, and Mr. Jos. Watson, Mrs. Watson and Miss Watson of Clifford spent Sunday at Mr. Frank Rennie.

Mr. Beaton Wells of Greenoch had the index finger of his right hand pierced by a large sliver while working on the new G. T. R. water tank on Monday. A doctor's services were required.

For Play Time

As well as for business you will find the same comfort, the same easy swing, and that snappiness of style in

Our Tailored Clothes

They retain their shape no matter how hard the service you give them. Come in and get a suit before your summer vacation.

Men's Furnishings

If you are particular about your collars, shirts, neckwear, underwear, sox, hats, caps, etc., come in and make selections here.

G. T. ROURKE

Quality Tailor and Men's Wear.

hone 186, Walkerton, Ont.

Carrick Camp meeting is being held this week.

Miss Maud Howard of London is here visiting her sister, Mrs. Alex. McCannel.

Miss Lillian Sheldon is leaving Saturday for Fergus, where she will train for a nurse.

Rev. M. Harm of Eganville occupied the pulpit at the Lutheran Church on Sunday.

It will pay to read the Walkerton merchants Advertisements in this week's Telescope.

Mr. S. Ranton, editor of the Stratford Beacon, called on the Telescope Wednesday afternoon, while on his way to visit relatives near Port Elgin.

Mr. and Mrs. Robt. McNally of Chesley were visitors the past week with Miss Rowand in town and Mr. W. J. McNally and other friends in Brant

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Oglesby and little daughter Marjorie, of Buffalo N. Y. are here on an extended visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Wilhelm.

Messrs. Frank Harris and W. Northgrave attended Lodge of Perfection at Guelph last Thursday night, the latter being initiated to the fourteenth degree of Masonary.

Mr. and Mrs. D. McKerracher, Mrs. J. Chisholm, and Mrs. A. Oberle spent the week-end in Detroit, the former visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Chisholm and Mrs. Oberle visiting her son, Harvey.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Oglesby and daughter, Marjorie and Misses Emma Wilhelm and Jeane Miller, motored to Chepstow and attended the Lang—Anstett wedding which took place Tuesday morning.

Mr. Frank Harris of Toronto and his nephew, Mr. Nelson E. South of Winnipeg, both managers for the T. Eaton Co. motored up from Toronto on Saturday and visited at J. W. South's and Coun. S. W. Vogan's.

In compliance with the request of the Government, special services will be held in Knox church next Sunday morning and evening, marking the Jubilee of Confederation. Special sermons and music by the choir.

Mr. Andrew Dittner, drover, of Chepstow, had the misfortune to run over the bridge near South's mill on Saturday in his Ford car The top kept the car from turning turtle and with the aid of a passing team, he soon got the machine back on the road.

Public Meeting

Mayor Johnston has called a public meeting to be held at the Town Hall to-night to consider the important question of Conscription.

Will B• Open All Summer

The Northern Business College, Owen Sound, will remain open all summer in order to give young women an opportunity of training for war time office positions. Special arrangements have been made for short holiday Courses for teachers and others who desire to qualify for office work. All departments of the school will be in operation.

Bingleman—Smith

A popular young Walkerton lady, Miss Cora Florence Smith, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Smith, was quietly married at the Manse, at 8 a. m. Wednesday, June 27th, to Mr. George William Bingleman of Simcoe. The bride who was handsomely gowned in brass colored silk poplin was assisted by her sister, Miss Annie Smith Mr. Walter Smith acted as best man. Mr. and Mrs. Bingleman left on the G. T. R. morning train on a short wedding trip, after which they will make their home at Simcoe, Ont.

+ + +

BORN

HAMPSON—To Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Hampson June, 26th, a daughter.

LITTLE—In Brant, on Saturday, June 23rd, to Mr. and Mrs. Stephen J. Little, a son (still-born.)

SCHNITZLER—At 1527 10th Ave. Calgary, Alta, on June 3rd, to Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Schnitzler (nee Marge Kroetch) a daughter.

McNAB — At Chepstow, on Friday, June 22nd, to Mr. and Mrs. Albert McNab, a son.

HUHNSTEIN—In Carrick, on June 19th to Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Hohnstein, a son.

FATHER HALLER MOVED

Curate at Walkerton to be Pastor at Deemerton—Young Priest Who Has Respect and Good Wishes of All Classes

Important changes affecting Walkerton and vicinity were announced in a circular issued by Bishop Dowling which was read in the R. C. Church on Sunday.

Rev. Father Haller, who has been curate here the past four and a half years, is promoted to the pastorate at Deemerton. Father Haller has been a devoted worker as well as a most popular priest. His genial and kind-hearted ways have made him a favorite everywhere and his friends are by no means limited to his parishioners.

Rev. Dean Kelly, the much-esteemed former pastor at Walkerton, is promoted from Arthur to the pastorate of St. Patrick's, Hamilton.

Rev. Thos. Ferguson of Ayton, who was born and raised in this neighborhood, goes from Ayton to be pastor at Arthur. Very Rev. Dean Holm of Mildmay is transferred from Mildmay to Ayton, to be Dean of Wellington and Waterloo. Very Rev Father Lehmann who has been out of active work owing to poor health, is named as Honorary Dean of Bruce and Grey. Rev. A. C. Montag is changed from Deemerton to Mildmay.

Rev. Father Hoffarth, the new curate at Walkerton, is a native of this town. His father, Mr. Nicholas Hoffarth, removed to Kitchener about twenty years ago where he is now a prosperous Contractor. Father Hoffarth is just graduating from College and this will be his first charge.

All the above appointments take effect on Sunday, July 15th.

Miss Thirsk At Orpington

Miss Thirsk writes Miss Maud Stead that after enjoying six days' leave she is now stationed at Orpington Hospital, England, and that she has already met a host of people she knew. Her address is Nursing Sister M. Thirsk, Ontario Military Hospital, Orpington, Kent, England.

Walkerton Boy Wounded

A Walkerton boy, Pte. Will Craig, was reported wounded in the hand by gunshot, June 20th. He is now in No. 7, Gen. Hospital at Lipreport, France. Will enlisted last year at Toronto with the Light Infantry and went Overseas in October. He was only 17 years old at time of enlistment and was employed by the Strathmore Press, Toronto.

Carrick Gives $1,000

A large deputation waited upon the Carrick Tp. Council at their regular meeting on Monday and asked for a grant to the Y. M. C. A. Overseas War Work. They were rewarded for their efforts by a grant of $1,000. Mr. Joseph Thompson, acted as chairman and others of the deputation were J. A. Hogg, J. W. South, D. Robertson K. C., H. M. Lay, A. E. McNab. The principal speaker was Capt. McNab, an officer of the Y. M C. A.

$100,000 County Bonds Sold

The County of Bruce 1916 Patriotic Bonds for $100,000 bearing int. at 6½ per cent have been bought by W. A. McKenzie & Co. Bond dealers, of Toronto, for $96,770. This is considered a first rate price considering the present condition of the money market. The bonds were sold by a committee, composed of Warden Izzard, Chairman Doering of the Finance Com., County Clerk Malcolmson, and County Treasurer Robertson.

CONTENTS

Of This Week's Telescope

1—News About Town.
2—County Council's Visit to Eugenia.
3—Serial Story.
News About Town.
4—Bruce Adopts Good Roads.
News About Town.
5—County News.
6—Electrical Demonstration.
Dr. Johnston Coming.
Sunday School Lesson.
7—Western Letter.
County Council.
8.—News About Town.

LIKE OUR HOME PRINT

Telescope Old Boys and Brother Publishers of the Province Congratulate the Telescope on the Big Improvement.

Of the many spontaneous expressions of congratulation and good-will received by the Telescope since launching out into an all home print paper three weeks ago, none are more heartily appreciated than those from former members of the Telescope Staff, who have gone out into the world and have made good in other towns and cities. Newspaper publishers on our exchange list too, who were naturally the first to recognize the meaning of the change in our make-up, have been all too flattering in their kind comments.

George E. Hudson, publisher of the Cayuga Advocate, the County paper of Haldimand, a former editor of the Telescope writes:—Accept my congratulations on making the Telescope an all home print paper. The Telescope is newsier than it has ever been before in its history.

Art Schnurr, an old Telescope graduate, now of the Cleveland O., Plaindealer writes:—Have always desired to see the good old "Scope" purely home print and you deserve all credit for initiative. Here's one who wishes you unlimited success in your latest endeavour and by first appearances you have made a fine start.

Mr. Ed. McConnell, of McConnell & Fergusonn, London, formerly of the Telescope, writes:—Think you are to be complimented on your decision to have an all home print paper.

J. G. Elliot of the Kingston Whig, President of the Canadian Press Association, writes us:—"I am very glad you have made the Telescope all home print. You have the right idea."

+ + +

BRIGHT, NEWSY JOURNAL

(Chesley Enterprise.)

The Walkerton Telescope has come out as an all-home print and the appearance is a great improvement on the old blanket sheet. The Telescope is a bright newsy journal and is among the best exchanges on our desk. We wish Brer Eedy and the all-home print the highest measure of success.

+ + +

GOOD LOCAL PAPER

(Mount Forest Confederate.)

The Walkerton Telescope has come out as an all home print paper, reduced in size from seven columns to six. Ed-

(Continued on Page 4)

Father Madigan Dead

Rev. Father Patrick J. Madigan, who was parish priest at Walkerton a number of years ago, passed away at Guelph on Sunday in his 68th year.

Fifty Years A Lawyer

It is just fifty years since Mr. Thos. Dixon was called to the Bar of Ontario, and nearly forty-five years since he received the appointment of County Crown Attorney. Time has dealt leniently with our friend and he would consider it an insult to be rated an old man. Though Mr. Dixon may not feel as young as he did the year Bruce was made a county and he received his appointment, he is just about as active now as then, and quite as fond of his favorite cross-country walk of a few miles. We trust he may be spared for a good many more years of activity.

Partridge—Howie

A quiet wedding was celebrated at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. D. B. Howie, Walkerton, at High Noon on Saturday, June 23rd, when Miss Ruth Fairburne Howie, was united in marriage to Mr. Albert Wharton Partridge, of Fairview Farm, Barrie, formerly assistant representative of the Ont. Agriculture Dept. here. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. W. Cosens, pastor of the Methodist Church, in the presence of about thirty immediate friends. The wedding march was played by the bride's sister, Miss Mabel Howie, while Miss Donalda McKechnie sang beautifully "O Perfect Love." The bride was becomingly gowned in white net over georgette crepe and veil. Many beautiful presents were received, also a number of telegrams, including a cable from the bride's aunt, Nursing Sister A. M. Fortune, now in France. Mr. and Mrs. Partridge left on the afternoon train for Ottawa and the St. Lawrence accompanied by the best wishes for future happiness of a host of Walkerton friends.

Bruce County Council's Visit to Eugenia Falls

Where Big Hydro Electric Plant Developes Power for the Town of Chesley and Eighteen Other Municipalities

There is no branch of manufacture that has experienced development during the past twenty-five years comparable with the construction of water turbines. Until recently engineers were unable to develop the magnificent water-powers that nature has lavished upon us, owing to the inability of the mechanic to build a water-turbine that would withstand the enormous pressure and tear of water. This is beautifully illustrated at Niagara, the visitor looking across stream from Queen Victoria Park seeing the various stages of water-power development set out by reason of the streams that flow from the rock on the opposite shore, at varying levels. The earlier attempts to harness Niagara were limited to a water turbine that would withstand a head of some twenty feet. Then followed an improvement and a deeper shaft was sunk. Improvements in steel metallurgy allowed the turbines to be placed at still greater depths until the days immediately preceding the advent of the great hydraulic electro plants the turbines had reached a perfection that allowed them to be sunk to eighty or ninety feet.

All this was less than three decades ago. Witness, then, the development of the science when Sir Adam Beck and his engineers have succeeded in harnessing the falls of Eugenia and utilizing the full drop of five hundred and forty-five feet.

Eugenia is a fall not generally known to the Canadian travelling public. It may be that its remoteness from Switzerland or South America is a factor in the strangeness. It is not difficult to locate on the map, however. Take a pencil and draw a line south from Collingwood, and intersect this with a line drawn eastward from Flesherton, on the Canadian Pacific Railway. The junction of the pencil lines will give you the location of Eugenia, the scene of a daring hydro-electrical engineering development.

Eugenia does not make the drop in one unbroken plunge. Its first leap is ninety feet, the water falling in a limestone basin one hundred feet across. The overflow from the basin forms a second fall, and this gives the water to a series of foaming rapids and intermittent fall until the valley is reached. Previously to the development, the volume was significant and the cataract would stand comparison with the Montmorency in Quebec. But even in its [illegible] state it is a pleasant sight to stand beside the brink and watch the water roar away into a depth and distance dwarfing stately pines into pygmies.

Eugenia had defied previous attempts of engineers to develop power from its racing waters; ruined brick and timber-work bear silent witness to the defeat. The present scheme was carried out on a basis new to Eugenia, the basic fact being to regulate the flow of water.

All streams that course regions suddenly denuded of lumber are subject to extremes of flow. With the thinned woods the thaws of spring are not controlled as formerly, and the streams reach a volume not previously experienced; and in the lean months of late summer and autumn the stream bitterly shows the result of the spring rush. To regulate this flow and ensure ample water, a series of dams have been thrown across the river, starting from a point a few hundred feet above the falls. The dams create vast storage reservoirs, indeed, it would be more fitting to term them lakes, for they have an area of more than two thousand acres and when filled contain more than a thousand million gallons of water.

As the turbines only require to be fed some three hundred gallons a second, dry season dangers have been reduced to a minimum. The upper dams have been constructed of earth-work, and the lower, where the pressure is great, of reinforced concrete. To look at this lower dam from the down-stream side is to imagine a greatly magnified edge of a dish-pan braced up with massive walls of concrete.

To sympathize with the problems of the engineers we must not overlook the fact that this reservoir system is sitting on the top of an ambitious hill and that the power-house is in the valley five hundred and fifty feet or more below and two miles away. The reservoir must be connected with the power-house turbines in a manner completely under control of the engineers and operators.

The miller of bygone days would be satisfied to see the water trickling through a mill-race and revolving a paddle before it rushed to freedom down the hill. We, however, must not overlook the fact that the problem was to utilize Eugenia's power to the fullest extent and to bear in mind that any pipe-line thrown down the hill would bear a pressure of three hundred pounds to the square inch at the bottom, in addition to the water travelling at a rate that would shame an express train.

With these facts before them, the engineers built a wooden pipe-line from the concrete dam to the brink of the hill. The words "wooden pipe-line" must not be construed to mean a similar article to that used by miners in sluicing and washing operations. Eugenia's pipe-line is constructed like a wash-tub. It is three feet across and bound, every six inches, with an iron ring.

At the point selected for descent the wood line enters a gigantic steel tank, one hundred and five feet high. This is the surge tank, or the safety-valve of the system. In the event of a sudden stoppage of the turbine machinery this tank will settle the water and absorb the shock of the recoil, which, if not passed into the surge-tank, might blow the pipe-line to pieces. On the down side of the surge tank the construction of the pipe-line changes from wood to steel.

The power-house is a small brick structure, and the visitor realizes for the first time the latent powers of Eugenia when he enters the building and notices the diminutive size of the units that are going to convert the water energy into electrical energy. As he looks at the units, not much higher than his head, he is at first inclined to doubt that ten thousand horse-power will come from them. But the brass plates say so, and his examination of the powerful turbines will soon convince him that it is so and that Eugenia has only been conquered by realizing it as a powerful water-course.

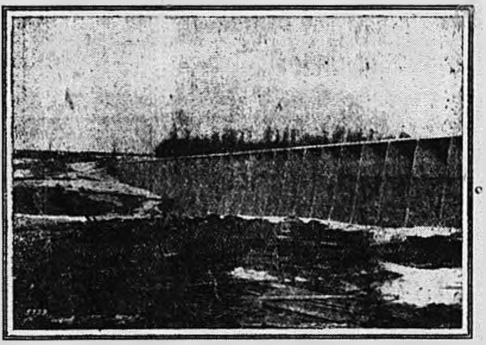
The Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission have prepared power lines to serve eighteen municipalities from Eugenia, with Owen Sound at one end of the line and Orangeville at the other.

Eugenia is not an experiment. It is another step in the development of great things for Central and Northern Ontario. If the market for Eugenia's power materializes to expectations this plant will be coupled with a development planned for the Saugeen Falls, not many miles distant from Eugenia, and these in turn may be coupled with five or six developments on the Severn River, making a total of more than thirty thousand electrical horse-power available in the north country for manufacturing and development work.

In a few years the people will own the system, as will be the case of the Niagara and other branches of the Hydro system, and when that time arrives it will be the largest [illegible] of public ownership in the world at the present time.

THE FIRST FALL AT EUGENIA

Ninety Feet Over a Wall of Limestone.



ONE OF THE GREAT DAMS AT EUGENIA FALLS

It Makes Possible a Reservoir Capable of Containing 1,000,000,000 Gallons of Water

Town and District

Local news on every page.

Miss Ruth Kenny is visiting at Mr. Justin Steinmillers', Gorrie.

Mrs. Sweeting and children of Toronto, are visiting at the Rectory.

Mr. John Rowland was a speaker at a big patriotic picnic at Dunblane.

Mrs. Cunningham of Guelph has been visiting her sister, Mrs. John A. Rowland.

George Borden, a young Huron Township farmer was killed by a kick from a horse.

REEVE BROWN

Chairman of Committee which entertained Bruce Council at Chesley last week.

Mrs. J. J. Schnurr spent a couple of weeks visiting friends in Toronto and Orangeville.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Hehn motored to Lovat yesterday to attend the wedding of Mr. Nelson Logan.

Mrs. E. W. Garner and Mrs. Grenzenbach spent two days in Port Elgin to a W. C. T. U. convention.

Mrs. J. H. A. Clark, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Sinclair, left for home at Winnipeg on Tuesday.

MAYOR HALLIDAY

Chief Magistrate of Chesley who is strong for Public Ownership.

Mr. Frank Carpenter of Toronto spent a few days of last week at his home here.

Seventy-five cents will pay for a trial subscription to the Telescope from now until New Years. Order to-day.

Mrs. McKittrick of Crystal City, Man., visited her aunt, Mrs. S. Hawthorne at Greenock last week. She came East with her husband who attended the Annual meeting of Canadian Press Association at Toronto.

WM. McDONALD, M. P. P.

Member of the Legislature for North Bruce and Publisher of Chesley Enterprise.

Goes to Press

JULY 20th

Please report changes required to our Local Office, to-day.

The Bell Telephone Co. of Canada

The Jubilee
Of Confederation
1867-1917

YOU will surely want to know much about the beginnings and history of Confederation at this time of national celebration.

As a good Canadian, as a citizen, as one desiring to be well informed about matters of deep concern and interest, you have your desire and need for knowledge supplied in

MACLEAN'S
MAGAZINE for JULY

This magazine gives you the finest and most interesting survey of Confederation you will find in any periodical. You will find there

Portraits of the Fathers of Confederation—the statesmen who launched Canada on her career of brilliant destiny.

The Story of Confederation why it was necessary, and how it came about.

The Taking Over of the North-west Territories from the Hudson's Bay Co.—a stirring story told by Agnes C. Laut.

The Story of the C. P. R.—told by C. N. McIntosh, a man who knew intimately the men who initiated, built and developed the Canadian Pacific Railway—the cord of Confederation.

The Industrial and Business Development of the Past 50 Years—by W. A. Craik. A wonderful story of progress.

Conditions Before Confederation Contrasted With Those of To-day—by Frank Yeigh. An enjoyable study of contrasts.

Statements from the Pre ters of Canada's Provin
interpreting the mea of Confederation and fining the outlook, i gard to their respe provinces.

A story—"The Draft,
A. C. Allenson, d with the part that c courageous and ve
some Canadians to the American Civil just before Confedera

A Frontispiece—A Dram
ic Moment—by C.W.J
reys, brilliant Canad artist. The scene is de picted when Sir John A.
Macdonald and the Hon. Geo. Brown stood in the House—one on one side, the other on the other side, of a centre line, so tense was the feeling between the two men and the parties they represented.

A Fine Cover Design—symbolic of Confederation, in three colors, specially drawn for the July MACLEAN'S by J. E. H. Macdonald.

Beyond these special Confederation features of the July MACLEAN'S will be the customary provision of fine, short stories, and the departments which makes MACLEAN'S MAGAZINE so enjoyable and valuable to good Canadians everywhere. Get the July MACLEAN'S, double size,

AT YOUR BOOKSELLERS—15 CENTS

Had Weak and Dizzy Spells.

WAS CURED BY
MILBURN'S
HEART AND NERVE PILLS.

Mrs. J. S. Nicholls, Listowel, Ont., writes: "I was weak and run down, my heart would palpitate, and I would take weak and dizzy spells. A friend advised me to take your Heart and Nerve Pills. I started at once, and found that I felt much stronger, and my heart was ever so much better in a short time. I cannot praise your medicine too highly for it has done me a world of good. My husband has also been bothered with heart trouble ever since childhood, and got quick relief by using your valuable pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have been on the market for the past twenty-five years, and are universally known as the very best remedy for all troubles arising from the heart or nerves.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Here's Where You Will Find the Proper

Summer Clothing

Don't be satisfied wit
just an ordinary suit clothes this time, b treat yourself to a goo
one. It might not be high priced one, but on that is good value fo your money, whatev
you pay.

T. PYE
Clothier & Furnisher.

Had Severe Cold
ON HER LUNGS.

RAISED PHLEGM AND BLOOD.

Never neglect what at first seems to be but a slight cold. You think perhaps you are strong enough to fight it off, but colds are not so easily fought off in this northern climate, and if they are not attended to at once will sooner or later develop into some serious lung trouble such as bronchitis, pneumonia, and perhaps that dreadful disease, consumption.

Miss Kasye McDonald, Sydney Mines, N.S., writes: "Last winter I contracted a severe cold, and it settled on my lungs. I would cough and raise phlegm and blood. I had the cough for a month, and had medicine from the doctor, but it did not seem to do me any good. I really thought I had consumption.

"My friends advised me to use Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which I did, and it gave me great relief. I am very glad I used 'Dr. Wood's,' and would recommend it to every one."

You can procure Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup from any druggist or dealer, but be sure and get "Dr. Wood's," when you ask for it as there are a number of imitations on the market, which some dealers may try to palm off on you as the genuine.

See that it is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees is the trade mark; price 25c. and 50c.

Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Homeseekers' Excursions
Every Monday till October 29th.
LOW FARES FROM TORONTO TO

Albreda	$64.00
Athabasca	46.00
Edmonton	47.00
Stettler	47.00
Canora	38.75
North Battleford	43.75
Regina	40.90
Forward	40.25
Saskatoon	42.25
Dauphin	37.75
Lucerne	51.00
Calgary	47.00
Camrose	46.75
Hanna	46.00
Rosetown	43.50
Yorkton	38.25
Moose Jaw	41.00
Prince Albert	43.90
Brandon	37.00
Winnipeg	35.00

For Tickets, Reservations, Literature and Information, apply to W. F. Attwood, Insurance, Walkerton, or write R. L. Fairbairn, G.P.A., 68 King St. E., Toronto.

ANADIAN NORTHERN

HOMESEEKERS' EXCURSIONS

MAY 8th TO OCTOBER 30th
Every
TUESDAY
"ALL RAIL" - also by
THURSDAY'S STEAMER
"Great Lakes Route"
(Season Navigation)

'our Future Is in the West

The fertile prairies have put Western Canada on the map. There are still thousands of acres waiting for the man who wants a home and prosperity. Take advantage of Low Rates and travel via

'anadian Pacific

V. B. Howard, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, Ont.

ELLIOTT
Business College
nge and Charles Sts. Toronto. ill pay you well. We were asked 1 123 positions in two months and uring two other months. Write atalogue. Enter now.
W. J. Elliott, Principal.

PHOTOGRAPH MEN
S MEN ARE
's a business matter and there is fuss or bother. Your family, ends and business associates
it your portrait.
RASER STUDIO

Office Stationery

For nice Stationery printed from new type at moderate prices. Try the

TELESCOPE

Inside the Lines

By EARL DERR BIGGERS AND ROBERT WELLS RITCHIE

Copyright, 1915, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

"So a friend—a friend in Berlin told you to consult me, eh? Berlin is a long way from Ramleh, especially in these times. Greater physicians than I live in Berlin. Why"—

"My friend in Berlin told me you were the only physician who could help me in my peculiar trouble." Imperceptibly the accenting of the aspirates in Woodhouse's speech grew more marked; his voice took on a throaty character. "By some specialists my life even has been set to end in a certain year, so sure is fate for those afflicted like myself."

"So! What year is it, then, you die?" Dr. Koch's strangely detached eyes—those eyes of glass glowing dimly in the shadow—seemed to flicker palely with a light all their own. Captain Woodhouse, sitting under the white spray of the shaded incandescent, looked up carelessly to meet the stare.

"Why, they give me plenty of time to enjoy myself," he answered, with a light laugh. "They say in 1932"—

"Nineteen thirty-two!" Dr. Koch stepped lightly to the closed folding doors, trundled them back an inch to assure himself nobody was in the waiting room, then closed and locked them. He did similarly by a hidden door on the opposite side of the room which Woodhouse had not seen. After that he pulled a chair close to his visitor and sat down, his knees almost touching the other's. He spoke very low in German.

"If your trouble is so serious that you will die in 1932 I must, of course, examine you for—symptoms."

For half a minute the two men looked fixedly at each other. Woodhouse's right hand went slowly to the big green scarab stuck in his cravat. He pulled the pin out, turned it over in his fingers and by pressure caused the scarab to pop out of the gold backed setting holding it. The bit of green stone lay in the palm of his left hand, its back exposed. In the hollowed back of the beetle was a small square of paper folded minutely. This Woodhouse removed, unfolded and passed to the physician. The latter seized it avidly, holding it close to his spectacled eyes and then spreading it against the light as if to read a secret watermark. A smile struggled through the jungle of his beard. He found Woodhouse's hand and grasped it warmly.

"Your symptom tallies with my diagnosis—1932," he began rapidly. "Five days ago we heard from the Wilhelmstrasse you would come. We have expected you each day now. Already we have got word through to our friends at Gibraltar of the plan. They are waiting for you."

"Good!" Woodhouse commented. He was busy refolding the thin slip of paper that had been his talisman and fitting it into the back of the scarab. "Woodhouse—he is already at the Hotel Khedive; saw his name on the register when I landed from the Castle this morning." Now the captain was talking in familiar German.

"Quite so," Dr. Koch put in. "Woodhouse came down from Wady Halfa yesterday. Our man up there had advised of the time of his arrival in Alexandria to the minute. The captain has his ticket for the Princess Mary, which sails for Gibraltar day after tomorrow at dawn."

No. 1932 listened to Dr. Koch's outlining of the plot with set features. Only his eyes showed that he was acutely alive to every detail. Said he:

"But Woodhouse—this British captain who's being transferred from the Nile country to the Rock—has he ever served there before? If he has, why, when I get there—when I am Captain Woodhouse of the signal service—I will be embarrassed if I do not know the ropes."

"Seven years ago Woodhouse was there for a very short time," Dr. Koch explained. "New governor since then—changes all around in the personnel of the staff, I don't doubt. You'll have no trouble."

Silence between them for a minute, broken by the captain.

"Our friends at Gib—who are they, and how will I know them?"

The doctor bent a sudden glance of suspicion upon the lean face before him. His thick lips clapped together stubbornly.

"Aha, my dear friend, you are asking questions! In my time at Berlin the Wilhelmstrasse taught that all orders and information came from above—and from there only. Why"—

"I suppose in default of other information I may ask the governor to point out the Wilhelmstrasse men." Woodhouse answered, with a shrug. "I was told, at Berlin I would learn all that was necessary to me as I went along; therefore I supposed"—

"Come, come!" Dr. Koch patted the other's shoulder with a heavy jovality. "So you will. When you arrive at Gib put up at the Hotel Splendide and you will not be long learning who your friends are. I, for instance, did not hesitate overmuch to recognize you, and I am under the eyes of the English here at every turn even though I am a naturalized English citizen—and of undoubted loyalty." He finished with a booming laugh.

"But Woodhouse—you have arranged a way to have him drop out of sight before the Princess Mary sails? There will be no confusion, no slip-up?"

"Do not fear," the physician reassured. "Everything will be arranged. His baggage will leave the Hotel Khedive for the dock tomorrow night, but it will not reach the dock. Yours"—

"Will be awaiting the transfer of tags at the Cap de Liberte—Monquero's little place," the captain finished. "But the man himself—you're not thinking of mur"—

"My dear 1932," Dr. Koch interrupted, lifting protesting hands, "we do not use any such crude methods. They are extremely dangerous. The real Captain Woodhouse will not leave Alexandria—by sea, let us say—for many months, although I have no doubt he will not be found in Alexandria the hour the Princess Mary sails. The papers he carries—the papers of identity and of transfer from Wady Halfa to Gibraltar—will be in your hands in plenty of time. You"—

The doctor stopped abruptly. A hidden electric buzzer somewhere in the shadowed room was clucking an alarm. Koch pressed a button at the side of the operating chair. There was a sound beyond closed doors of some one passing through a hallway; the front door opened and closed.

CHAPTER V.

An Unwelcome Caller.

"SOME one at the gate," Dr. Koch explained. "Caesar, my playful little Numidian—and an artist with the Bedouin dagger is Caesar—he goes to answer."

Their talk was desultory during the next minutes. The doctor seemed listless under the suspense of a pending announcement as to the late visitor. Finally came a soft tapping on the hidden door behind Woodhouse. The latter heard the doctor exchange whispers with the Numidian in the hallway. Finally, "Show him into the waiting room," Koch ordered. He came back to where the captain was sitting, a puzzled frown between his eyes.

"An Englishman, Caesar says—an Englishman, who insists on seeing me—very important." Koch bit the end of one stubby thumb in hurried thought. He suddenly whipped open the door of one of the instrument cases, pulled out a stethoscope and hooked the two little black receivers into his ears. Then he turned to Woodhouse.

"Quick! Off with your coat and open your shirt. You are a patient; I am just examining you when interrupted. This may be one of these clumsy English secret service men, and I might need your alibi." The sound of an opening door beyond the folding doors and of footsteps in the adjoining room.

"You say you are sleepless at night?" Dr. Koch was talking English. "And you have a temperature on arising? Hm'm! This under your tongue, if you please"—he thrust a clinical thermometer between Woodhouse's lips; the latter already had his coat off and was unbuttoning his shirt. Koch gave him a meaning glance and disappeared between the folding doors, closing them behind him.

Minutes slipped by. The captain still nursed the clinical thermometer. The mumble and muttering continued to sound through the closed doors. Suddenly the high whine of the unseen visitor was raised in excitement. Came clearly through to Woodhouse's ears his passionate declaration:

"But I tell you you've got to recognize me. My number's 1932. My ticket was stolen out of the head of my cane somewhere between Paris and Alexandria. But I got it all right—got it from the Wilhelmstrasse direct, with orders to report to Dr. Emil Koch in Alexandria!"

Capper! Capper, who was to be betrayed to the firing squad in Malta after his Wilhelmstrasse ticket had passed from his possession! Capper on the job!

Woodhouse hurled every foot pound of his will to bear into his ears. He caught Koch's gruff answer:

"Young man, you're talking madness. You're talking to a loyal British subject. I know nothing about your Wilhelmstrasse or your number. If I did not think you were drunk I'd have you held here, to be turned over to the military as a spy. Now, go before I change my mind."

Again the querulous protestation of Capper, met by the doctor's peremptory order. The captain heard the front door close. A long wait and Dr. Koch's black beard, with the surmounting eyes of thick glass, appeared at a parting of the folding doors. Woodhouse, the tiny thermometer still sticking absurdly from his mouth, met the basilisk stare of those two ovals of glass with a coldly casual glance. He removed the thermometer from between his lips and read it, with a smile, as if that were part of playing a game. Still the ghastly stare from the glass eyes over the bristling beard, searching—searching.

"Well," Woodhouse said lightly, "no need of an alibi evidently."

Dr. Koch stepped into the room with the lightness of a cat, walked to a desk drawer at one side and fumbled there a second, his back to his guest. When he turned he held a short barreled automatic at his hip. The muzzle covered the shirt sleeved man in the chair.

"Much need—for an alibi—from you!" Dr. Koch croaked, his voice dry and flat with rage. "Much need, Mr. 1932. Commence your explanation immediately, for this minute my temptation is strong—very strong—to shoot you for the dog you are."

"Is this—ah, customary?" Woodhouse twiddled the tiny mercury tube between his fingers and looked unflinchingly at the small, round mouth of the automatic. "Do you make a practice of consulting a—friend with a revolver at your hip?"

"You heard—what was said in there!" Koch's forehead was curiously ridged and flushed with much blood.

"Did you ask me to listen? Surely, my dear doctor, you have provided doors that are sound proof. If I may suggest, isn't it about time that you explain this—this melodrama?" The captain's voice was cold. His lips were drawn to a thin line. Koch's big head moved from side to side with a gesture curiously like that of a bull about to charge, but knowing not where his enemy stands. He blurted out:

"For your information, if you did not overhear: An Englishman comes just now to address me familiarly as of the Wilhelmstrasse. He comes to say he was sent to report to me; that his number in the Wilhelmstrasse is 1932—1932, remember—and I am to give him orders. Please explain that before I pull this trigger."

"He showed you his number—his ticket, then?" Woodhouse added this parenthetically.

"The man said his ticket had been stolen from him some time after he left Paris—stolen from the head of his cane, where he had it concealed. But the number was 1932." The doctor voiced this last doggedly.

"You have, of course, had this man followed?" the other put in. "You have not let him leave this house alone?"

"Caesar was after him before he left the garden gate—naturally. But"—

Woodhouse held up an interrupting hand.

"Pardon me, Dr. Koch; did you get this fellow's name?"

"He refused to give it—said I would not know him, anyway."

"Was he an undersized man, very thin, sparse hair and a face showing dissipation?" Woodhouse went on.

"Your pardon, No. 1932."

"Nervous, jerky way of talking—fingers to his mouth as if to feel his words as they come out—brandy or wine breath? Can't you guess who he was?"

"I guess nothing."

"The target!"

At the word Louisa had used in describing Capper to Woodhouse Koch's face underwent a change. He lowered his pistol.

"Ach!" he said. "The man they are to arrest. And you have the number."

"That was Capper—Capper, formerly of the Belgian office—kicked out for drunkenness. One time he sold out Downing street in the matter of the Lord Fisher letters. You remember the scandal when they came to light—his majesty, the kaiser's, Kiel speech referring to them. He is a good stalking horse."

Koch's suspicion had left him. Still gripping the automatic, he sat down on the edge of the operating chair regarding the other man respectfully.

"Come, come, Dr. Koch; you and I cannot continue longer at cross purposes." The captain spoke with terse displeasure. "This man Capper showed you nothing to prove his claims, yet you come back to this room and threaten my life on the strength of a drunkard's bare word. What his mission is you know; how he got that number, which is the number I have shown you on my ticket from the Wilhelmstrasse—you understand how such things are managed. I happen to know, however, because it was my business to know, that Capper left Marseilles for Malta aboard La Vendee four days ago. He was not expected to go beyond Malta."

Koch caught him up: "But the fellow told me his boat didn't stop at Malta; was warned by wireless to proceed at all speed to Alexandria for fear of the Breslau, known to be in the Adriatic." Woodhouse spread out his hands with a gesture of finality.

"There you are! Capper finds himself stranded in Alexandria; knows somehow of your position as a man of the Wilhelmstrasse. Such things cannot be hid from the underground workers; comes here to explain himself to you and excuse himself for the loss of his number. Is there anything more to be said except that we must keep a close watch on him?"

The physician rose and paced the room, his hands clasped behind his back. The automatic bobbed against the tails of his long coat as he walked. After a minute's restless striding he broke his step before the desk, jerked open the drawer and dropped the weapon in it. Back to where Woodhouse was sitting he stalked and held out his right hand stiffly.

"Your pardon, No. 1932. For my suspicion I apologize. But you see my position—a very delicate one." Woodhouse rose, grasped the doctor's hand and wrung it heartily.

"And now," he said, "to keep this fellow Capper in sight until the Princess Mary sails and I aboard her as Captain Woodhouse of Wady Halfa. The man might trip us all up."

"He will not; be sure of that," Koch growled, helping Woodhouse into his coat and leading the way to the folding doors. "I will have Caesar attend to him the minute he comes back to report where Capper is stopping."

"Until when?" the captain asked, pausing at the gate, to which Koch had escorted him.

"Here tomorrow night at 9," the doctor answered, and the gate shut behind him. Captain Woodhouse, alone under the shadowing trees of Queen's terrace, drew in a long breath, shook his shoulders and started for the station and the midnight train to Alexandria.

Consider the mental state of Mr. Billy Capper as he sank into a seat on the midnight suburban from Ramleh to Alexandria. Even to the guard, unused to particular observation of his passengers save as to their possible propensity for trying to beat their fares, the bundle of clothes surmounted by a rusty brown bowler which huddled under the sickly light of the second class carriage bespoke either a candidate for a plunge off the quay or a "bloomer" returning from his wassailing. But the eyes of the man denied this latter hypothesis; sanity was in them, albeit the merciless sanity that refuses an alternative when fate has its victim pushed into a corner. So submerged was Capper under the flood of his own bitter cogitations that he had not noticed the other two passengers boarding the train at the little tiled station—a tall, quietly dressed white man and a Numidian with a cloak thrown over his white livery. The latter had faded like a shadow into the third class carriage behind the one in which Capper rode.

Here was Capper—poor old Hardluck Billy Capper—floored again and just when the tide of bad fortune was on the turn; so ran the minor strain of self pity under the brown bowler. A failure once more and through no fault of his own. No, no! Hadn't he been ready to deliver the goods? Hadn't he come all the way down here from Berlin, faithful to his pledge to Louisa, the girl in the Wilhelmstrasse, ready and willing to embark on that important mission of which he was to be told by Dr. Emil Koch? And what happens! Koch turns him into the street like a dog; threatens to have him before the military as a spy if he doesn't make himself scarce. Koch refuses even to admit he'd ever heard of the Wilhelmstrasse. Clever beggar! A jolly keen eye he's got for his own skin; won't take a chance on being betrayed into the hands of the English, even when he ought to see that a chap's honest when he comes and tells a straight story about losing that silly little bit of paper with his working number on it. What difference if he can't produce the ticket when he has the number pat on the tip of his tongue and is willing to risk his own life to give that number to a stranger?

Back upon the old perplexity that had kept Capper's brain on strain ever since the first day aboard La Vendee—who had lifted his ticket, and when was it done? The man recalled, for the hundredth time, his awakening aboard the French liner. What a horror that first morning was, with the ratty little surgeon feeding a fellow aromatic spirits of ammonia like porridge! Capper, in this mood of detached review, saw himself painfully stretching out his arm from his bunk to grasp his stick the very first minute he was alone in the stateroom; the crooked handle comes off under his turning, and the white wisp of paper is stuck in the hollow of the stick. Blank paper!

Safe as safe could be had been that little square of paper Louisa had given him with his expense money, from the day he left Berlin until—when? To be sure, he had treated himself to a little of the grape in Paris and, maybe, in Marseilles, but his brain had been clear every minute. Oh, Capper would have sworn to that! The whole business of the disappearance of his Wilhelmstrasse ticket and the substitution of the blank was simply another low trick the Capper luck had played on him.

CHAPTER VI.

A Ferret.

OUT of the rack of Capper's sad reflections the old persistent call began to make itself heard before ever the train from Ramleh pulled into the Alexandria station. That elusive country of fountains, incense and rose dreams which can only be approached) through the neck of a bottle spread itself before him alluringly, inviting him to forgetfulness. And Capper answered the call.

From the railroad station he set his course through narrow villainous streets down to the district on Pharos, where the deep water men of all the world gather to make vivid the nights of Egypt. Behind him was the faithful shadow, Caesar, Dr. Koch's man. The Numidian trailed like a panther, slinking from cover to cover, bending his body as the big cat does to the accommodations of the trail's blinds.

Once Capper found himself in a blind alley, turned and strode out of it just in time to bump heavily into the unsuspected pursuer. Instantly a hem of the Numidian's cloak was lifted to screen his face, but not before the sharp eyes of the Englishman had seen and recognized it. A tart smile curled the corners of Capper's mouth as he passed on down the bazaar lined street to the Tavern of Thermopylae, at the next corner. So old Koch was taking precautions, eh? Well, Capper, for one could hardly blame him. Who wouldn't under the circumstances?

The Tavern of Thermopylae was built for the Billy Cappers of the world—a place of genial deviltry where every man's gold was better than his name and no man asked more than to see the color of the stranger's money.

Capper called for an absinth dripper and established himself in a deserted corner of the smoke filled room. Sip—sip. A soothing numbness came

(To be Continued)

News About Town

Local news on every page.

Wool has been selling at 62 cents per lb.

Mr. and Mrs. Justin Steinmiller of Gorrie were visitors in town on Thursday.

Miss Isabel Gowanlock of Bracebridge is holidaying at her home in Brant.

A barn belonging to Mr. Bell, 4th con. Elderslie, was struck by lightning one night last week.

J. J. Hunter of Kincardine is the new Chairman of the Weekly Section of the Canadian Press Association.

The meanest man we know is the chap that borrows his neighbor's lawn mower and then kicks about it being dull.

Seventy-five cents will pay for a trial subscription to the Telescope from now until New Years. Order to-day.

Miss Stalker and Miss Gallagher of Walkerton were week end visitors at Dr. and Mrs. Stalker's here.—Hanover Post.

Capt. Danard of the 160th Batt'n, was among the Canadian officers who landed at Halifax from England on Friday.

Albert Bell's farm house in Brant was struck by lightning on Tuesday night of last week and a chimney was smashed.

Conn. John McKinnon says he saw oats 27 in. high in Greenock on Sunday. The growth is very heavy these days.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Patterson returned last week from their honeymoon and are living in the residence formerly occupied by Mr. Hank Irwin.

Newspapers are used as an emergency dressing for wounds in France. Subscribers who are regularly asked to loan their papers have noticed before this that there is something sponge-like about it.

Mr. Jos. Filsinger of the 4th concession raised the frame work of his new barn on Tuesday afternoon. While the men were waiting for the rain to pass over, lightning struck a fence post a few rods away and splintered it badly.—Mildmay Gazette.

Lieut. Armond Halliday M. D. and his bride, a Boston young lady who was nursing at the front, were given a warm welcome home by the people of Chesley. Armond, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Halliday went to France with the Harvard University Unit in 1915.

New C. P. R. Time Card.

A new time card came into effect on the C. P. R. Sunday. The morning train now leaves at 6.20, arriving at Toronto Union Station at 11.35 a. m. The afternoon train leaves Walkerton at 3.00, arriving north Toronto at 8.10 p. m. Returning leave North Toronto 8.10 a. m., arrive at Walkerton 1.25 p. m. Leave Toronto (Union Station) at 5.25 p. m., arrive at Walkerton 10.42 p. m. The afternoon train from Walkerton connects at Bolton with train for Winnipeg and the West.

Epworth League Officers

The Epworth League of the Methodist Church has reorganized for the coming year with the following officers; —Pres.—W. G. Cheshire; 1st Vice President—Miss S. Watts; 2nd Vice Pres.—Miss Ruth Garner; 3rd Vice Pres.—Miss Cora Rife; 4th Vice Pres.—Will Ramsey; Secretary — Vernon Tovell; Ass't. Sec.—Miss Vera Dippel; Corr. Sec.—Miss Minnie Garner; Treas.—Miss Flossie Cosens; Pianist—Miss Vera Dippel; Ass't. Pianist—Clayton Tovell.

Hutton—Dickison

The marriage of Miss Florence Dickison second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dickison of Carrick Township to Mr. Russell Hutton of Bruce Tp. took place at the home of her parents on Thurs. eve. June 14, at 6 o'clock, Rev. J. R. Wilson of Rothsay officiating. The bride looked charming in a gown of maize silk crepe-de-chine and carried a bouquet of bridal roses. She entered the parlour on the arm of her father to the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Janet Hutton, sister of the groom. The two little flower girls Miss Brownie McKenzie and Miss Pauline Dickison looked very pretty in pink silk. After the ceremony a sumptuous supper was served in the dining-room. The guests which numbered about 100, some from Hamilton, Chesley, Washington, D. C., Orchard, Stratford, Guelph, Tiverton, and Gorrie spent an enjoyable evening with music and dancing. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful presents showing the high esteem in which she was held.

◆ ◆ ◆

Attend Port Elgin's Dominion Day Celebration

Again this year, Port Elgin people are planning the big celebration. The fact that this is Canada's Jubilee year has been taken into consideration, and all profits over and above expenses will go to the Red Cross. We are planning for the biggest day's races ever held, also many other features, with the usual superb program of fireworks.

Good Roads For Bruce Council Passes By-Law

Three Quarters of a Million Dollars For Permanent Roads System, of Which the Province Will Pay 40 to 60 Per Cent

Bruce County Council did the biggest day's business in the history of that body when it adopted the Good Roads by-law last Thursday. The By-law practically commits the County to a system of trunk line roads throughout Bruce, which will require 10 to 15 years to construct. About $75,000 per year will be expended during this period and from 40 to 60 per cent of the amount will be contributed by the Ontario Government. The County's share will be covered by an annual tax of 1½ mills.

At present the government pays 60 per cent of first cost on all roads recognized as trunk lines, and 60 percent of cost of upkeep. On other roads, designated as county roads, 40 per cent of first cost and 20 per cent of the annual upkeep.

The towns and villages of Bruce are not included in the proposed roads as mapped out by the council, and their share of the taxes, will be rebated. The towns will have the opportunity however of building roads within their borders to join up with the County roads, the government paying its proportion of the cost. The chief reason for the exclusion of the towns from the scheme, we understand, is the fact that the 24ft. roadway which is the standard width is not sufficiently wide for the towns.

Four roads under the new scheme will pass through this immediate neighborhood. (1) The Durham road from Kincardine to the westerly limits of Walkerton and from the easterly limits of Walkerton to the County boundary. This will give the town an opportunity to build a permanent road from the Grand Trunk Station to Durham street, the government paying a proportion of the cost which in this case will no doubt amount to 60 per cent. as the Durham Road will no doubt be designated as a trunk line. (2) The Elora Road from Southampton to the Southern Boundry of the County will be a County road. (3) The thirteenth sideroad of Elderslie, continuing south along the 15th. Sideroad of Brant will be made a permanent road, joining the Durham Road near Todd's Schoolhouse, east of the town. (4) The Mildmay road from Mildmay to Walkerton, will be built to the Southerly limits of Walkerton.

A full list of the designated roads will be published in next week's Telescope.

Warden Dennis Izzard

HOSPITAL HAS DEFICIT

Costs Nearly $3,000 a Year to Maintain Free Patients at the County Institution.

The Annual financial report of the Bruce County Hospital just issued shows receipts for the year of $9 919.29, and expenditures of 11,800.91, leaving a deficit of $1950.62. There is also a mortgage due, on April 10th, 1918, of $2,000, leaving total liabilities of $3950.62. Since the report was published the County Council at its June Session has made a grant of $25.00 to the institution.

Individuals who made donations to the Hospital the past year were:—Bell Telephone Co., $0.00; Brill, S. R., 5.00; Dack, Mrs. W. M., 10.00; Goode & McKay, 10.00; Hunter, J. B., 5.00; Hermeston, W. J., 5.00; Lay, H. M., 5.00; McKay, Geo. D., 5.00; McCool, John, 10.00; McKerracher, D., 100.00; Myles, E., 5.00; Robertson, Norman, 5.00; Stevens Hepner Co. Ltd., 13.21; Schumacher, J. J., 5.00; Truax, R. E. M. P., 10.00; Vogan, S. W., 10.00; Walkerton Electric Light Co., 20.00; Walkerton Flour Mills, 5.00.

The free patients treated during the past year are; -Amabel Tp. 1 patient, 365 days stay; Brant, 1 patient, 10 days; Cargill, 1 patient 365 days; Chesley, 1 patient 27 days; House of Refuge, 1 patient, 24 days; Paisley, 2 patients, 106 days; Teeswater, 2 patients, 387 Walkerton, 4 patients, 108 days; Wiarton, 2 patients, 265 days. A total of 15 patients, 1658 days.

The average cost per patient was $1.74 per day, making the cost to the Hospital for free patients, $2884.92.

+ + +

Mrs. (Sergt.) William Winters, who has been dangerously ill with an abscess in the head is reported to be somewhat easier.

Four Cattle Killed.

Mr. W. A. Tolton of Brant had four valuable cattle killed by lightning during the heavy storm on the night of the 19th. The animals were standing under a tree when the bolt struck them.

WHAT THE COUNTY COUNCIL SAW AT EUGENIA

The Power House and Pipeline where power is harnessed from a drop of 600 feet

LIKE OUR HOME PRINT

(Continued from page 1)

itor Eedy has come to the conclusion that "a town paper best serves its community by being as thoroughly local as possible," and certainly he gets out a good local paper.

+ + +

CONTROLS OWN PAPER

(Hanover Post.)

The Walkerton Telescope has become an all home print newspaper, discarding patent inside. Mr. Lorne Eedy, the publisher, received his newspaper experience on the St. Marys Journal, one of the best local weeklies in Ontario, and the "boiler plate" inside does not appeal to him. The all-home paper means more work locally, and more expenditure but every publisher likes to control all his own paper.

+ + +

CONTROL ALL READING MATTER

(Mildmay Gazette.)

The Walkerton Telescope came out last week as a six column, eight page, all home print paper. The change is a good one and gives the editor complete control over every line of matter appearing in his columns. We trust Bro. Eedy will find his venture profitable.

+ + +

DISCARDED PATENT "INARDS"

(Collingwood Bulletin.)

The Walkerton Telescope has discarded the "patent inards" and is now all home print. Editor Eedy says the change means more work for the editor and greater expense, but it is an improvement which he hopes will be appreciated. And so it should be. The Telescope is a good weekly and a credit to the county town of Bruce.

MORE SPACE FOR LOCAL NEWS

(Orillia Packet.)

The Eedys, father and son, have little to learn about getting up a newspaper. The St. Marys Journal has for years ranked with the best weeklies in the Province, and Mr. Lorne Eedy has lately made a marked improvement in the Walkerton Telescope by discarding the "patent inside" and devoting much more space to home news.

SOUTH BRUCE FARMERS

Want Oleomargarine Kept Out of Canada—Big Demonstration Meeting Planned for Near Future.

The South Bruce Board of Agriculture's Annual Meeting and picnic at Teeswater last week proved quite a successful and interesting affair. About a hundred and fifty people were present. As the weather was a bit cool, the meeting was held in the Hall instead of in the Park. Mr. Bell, of the Agricultural Dept., was present and outlined a scheme for making the public meetings of the Board more interesting and practical. It was planned to hold a two days' meeting in the form of a demonstration some time soon, probably at Teeswater.

Officers were elected for the coming year as follows;—President, S. D. A. Stobo, Teeswater; Vice-pres., Edwin Tolton; Sec., W. A. Rowand.

A resolution was passed urging the Ontario Government to remit motor licenses to the municipalities to permit them to spend the money for road improvement.

The Dominion Government was memorialized not to permit the restrictions against the importation of oleomargarine to be removed.

The Jewelers have decided to close at seven o'clock every night, excepting Saturdays.

Judge Widdifield of Owen Sound presided at County Court sittings here on Tuesday

The crops in this section have shown tremendous growth the past two weeks although the low-lying land has received a bad overdose of moisture from the incessant rains of the past week. Plenty of sunshine is what is now needed to bring things along.

Walkerton Boys Rejected.

Mel. Kain and Hermie Runstadtler, who joined the Guelph Battery recently, have been rejected for artillery work but may be transferred to another branch of the service.

50 Year Old Fighter

Mrs. George Gould had a letter last week from her son, W. S. Gould, stating that he had been six weeks in the trenches in France and was feeling fine. Considering that the ex-County Clerk is now 50 years old, he is certainly showing a staying power that would be hard to equal.

Fell Through Barn Floor.

Mrs. Wilford Ritchie had a bad fall at her brother-in-law's, Mr. Gordon Ritchie, at Greenock last week, dropping through an opening in the floor to the cement floor underneath. A couple of ribs were fractured.

Will Case In Court.

Judge Widdifield of Owen Sound, tried the case of Coupland vs. Barbour a Teeswater case, in County Court here Tuesday. It is an action brought by the sole heir of an estate, suing the executors for the amount of his legacy. Under the terms of the will, he was not to inherit until the executors deemed him capable of managing the estate. Judgment was reserved. Robertson K. C. appeared for the plaintiff, Vanstone of Wingham for the defendants.

Many Women Suffer From Pains in the Back.

When the back begins to ache it is a sure sign that there is something radically wrong with the kidneys.

What you want is a kidney medicine Doan's Kidney Pills are not a cure-all, but a medicine for the kidneys only.

Mrs. L. Melanson, Plympton, N.S. writes: "I am sending you this testimonial, telling you what a wonderful cure Doan's Kidney Pills made for me For years I had suffered so with my kidneys I could hardly do my housework I used several kinds of pills, but none of them seemed to be doing me any good At last I was advised to try a box of Doan's Kidney Pills. When I had taken the first box I found relief. I have used five boxes and to-day I feel like a new woman. I cannot recommend them too highly."

Doan's Kidney Pills bear the trade mark of a Maple Leaf and are put up in an oblong grey box. See that you get "Doan's" when you ask for them.

Price 50c. a box, 3 for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

We Own and Offer
$100,000
COUNTY OF BRUCE
DEBENTURES
Bearing 5½%, maturing 1917 - 1936, at par.
Applications should be made at once.
W. A. Mackenzie & Co.,
TORONTO, ONT.

WESTERN UNIVERSITY
LONDON - ONTARIO
Three More New Professors
Equal to Any in Canada.
Students can now obtain as good an Education in Arts and Medicine at the Western as anywhere.
President –
E.E.Braithwaite.M.A..PhD.

Fall Term
From, Sept. 4th
CENTRAL
Business College.
STRATFORD, ONT.
COMMERCIAL, SHORTHAND & TELEGRAPHY DEPARTMENTS
We have thorough courses, experienced instructors and we place our Graduates in positions. Demand upon us for trained help is many times the number graduating. Get our free catalogue.
D. A. McLACHLAN
PRINCIPAL

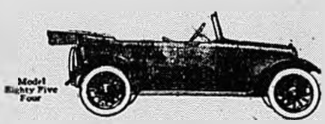
Why not give your boy and girl an opportunity to make their home study easy and effective? Give them the same chance to win promotion and success as the lad having the advantage of
WEBSTER'S NEW INTERNATIONAL
Dictionary in his home. This new creation answers with final authority all kinds of puzzling questions in history, geography, biography, spelling, pronunciation, sports, arts, and sciences.
400,000 Vocabulary Terms. 2700 Pages. Over 6000 Illustrations. Colored Plates.
The only dictionary with the Divided Page.
The type matter is equivalent to that of a 15-volume encyclopedia.
More Scholarly, Accurate, Convenient, and Authoritative than any other English Dictionary.

REGULAR AND INDIA-PAPER EDITIONS.
WRITE for specimen pages, illustrations, etc. FREE, a set of Pocket Maps if you name this paper.
G. & C. MERRIAM CO.,
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

PATENTS
PROMPTLY SECURED
We solicit the business of Manufacturers, Engineers and others who realize the advisability of having their Patent business transacted by Experts. Preliminary advice free. Charges moderate. Our Inventor's Adviser sent upon request. Marion & Marion, New York Life Bldg, Montreal: and Washington, D.C., U.S.A.

WE PHOTOGRAPH MEN AS MEN ARE
It's a business matter and there is no fuss or bother. Your family, friends and business associates want your portrait.
FRASER STUDIO

Overland
Fours



Simplified Driving

THIS MODEL is a great family car because it is so easy to handle. All electric controls are on the steering column—within natural reach. The wheel is large and easy to steer with. The shifting lever and emergency brake can be reached without changing your driving position.

So it is just as easy for your wife or daughter to drive this Overland Eighty-Five Four as it is for you. And as you know, that cannot be said of all cars.

Step in today for a demonstration.

$1250

Overland Model Eighty-Five Four
35 horsepower | 4-inch tires
111-inch wheelbase | Brewster green body
Cantilever rear springs | Auto-Lite starting
Vacuum gasoline system | and lighting system

Other Overland Fours
Model 85-Four Roadster, $1230 | Light Four Touring, $975
Country Club Sport Model, $1110 | Light Four Roadster, $950

All prices f. o. b. point of shipment
Subject to change without notice

J. E. McGregor, Phone 142
Durham Street, Walkerton

Advertising!

in its highest sense is the creation of a new want and providing the means with which to supply that want. The aim of Advertising is not to spread the name of a firm so much as to get business for that firm. The ad. that counts is the one that makes the luxuries of today the necessities of tomorrow. A great many people advertise as they give to charity—merely to get rid of a solicitor. Then the advertiser says it doesn't pay and when done in that spirit it does not. Advertisers must put brain and selling force into their their copy, and when this is done they find that advertising is not an expense, but the finest kind of an investment. —S. C. Dobbs, past president Associated Advertising Clubs of America.

THE TELESCOPE offers you an opportunity to get in touch with Best Homes in Walkerton and the Surrounding District and Get Their Business.

LOCAL NEWS ON EVERY PAGE

NEIGHBORING VILLAGES & COUNTRYSIDE

News of the Week Collected by a Staff of Live Correspondents

PINKERTON

nd Mrs. John Gale and sons nd James Gale and Mr. Wheel ns spent Sunday at the Manse.

nd Mrs. D. Wilson returned to on Saturday.

cal Red Cross sent another t to Headquarters this week g of (1) Red Cross Supplies: 5 pillows, 32 suits pajamas, 2 old blecloths: (2) Soldiers Comforts: socks, 6 topshirts with collars, 2 irts without collars.

eautiful cushion was kindly donat- Mrs. J. W. Moffat. Tickets sold and about $8.00 was realized. . Motrie held the lucky ticket.

C. O. F. lodge here attended Div- rvice in the Presbyterian Church day evening, and listened to an nt discourse by Rev. Mr. Gale.

umber from here attended the en Party at Ellengowan on Fri- vening.

inkerton and the community were ked when word was received week that Pte. Edgar Garland had n in battle. Edgar was a fine type young man and his young death is regretted. He enlisted in a battalion and paid a short visit e here before going overseas. thy of the whole community to the bereaved mother and brothers and sisters.

EAST BRUCE

bells are ringing loudly

n. Ross is remodeling his home.

d Mc Phail returned to Kincar- visiting Dunc. Currie.

dith Ross of Guelph Sundayed me here.

r. McNab has returned home ending the General Assembly treal.

ean Young has his new Ford which he purchased from Mr. n of Tiverton.

McKenzie of Harriston made a trip through here last week.

e McArthur is home after being ick Children's Hospital at Tor- onto 15 months and is much improv- ed from the treatment he received.

Mr. Harry Lamont has the hay press pressing his surplus amount of hay.

Those nice showers are making the ple smile and the crops grow.

no Geo. Brown has returned home n Harriston.

. A. C. Ross who has been elected er of Parliament in Alberta for Calgary, is an old Bruce boy. He West about ten years ago.

FORMOSA

et wedding took place here on morning, when Miss Rosie daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nich- Kreitz of Mildmay, was united in age to Mr. J. Smythe of Toronto. remony was performed by Rev. Brohman.

GLAMIS

n't forget. What? The Union S. Picnic. When? On Tuesday July . Where? At Inverhuron Beach. eybody come, make this one, the yet.

Jean McDermid of London, the past week with her mother.

lliam Cunningham of Alliston, ting at the home of his brother, ingham.

. John E. McNally is visiting ughter, Mrs. Charles Graham.

Baptist Church here will hold Anniversary Services on Sun- uly 8th.

George Loney of Oxenden, is g her sister, Mrs. W. J. Grab- who is very very low at time of ing.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wrightson and family spent Saturday in Owen Sound.

John Kidd, 4th Con. Bruce, has been busy in this neighborhood with his wood-sawing outfit.

Mrs. George Arnott of Paisley, has been renewing acquaintances here.

We regret to report that Mr. Hendry has been removed to the home of his son Will, Bdy. East, Tiverton, and is seriously ill.

Miss Annie Fraser is engaged at Wes Pinkerton's, 12th Con. Greenock.

Mrs. W. J. McKeeman gave an afternoon tea on Friday in honor of Mrs. R. F. Harrison.

Lorne Carr has been removed from Cargill Bank to the Branch in Ripley. Success Lorne.

On Thursday afternoon at the regular Meeting of the Red Cross Workers the following goods were shipped, 48 pairs of socks, 42 Personal Property Bags, 65 Towels, 6 Hot Water Bottle Covers.

Mrs. Simpson of Tiverton, spent the past week at Joseph Wrightson's.

Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Harrison left on Monday for Torpnto. They will be accompanied home to Calgary with their daughter. Misses Vera and Verna of Toronto.

CARGILL

Mr. and Mrs. Ruttle of Kincardine spent the week-end at the home of their son, Mr. C. A. Ruttle here.

Miss Alice Hamilton of Chesley is visiting her friend, Miss Lila Hettrick.

Mr. John Cameron who has been living with his uncle Mr. W. M. Cameron for the past year, returned to his home in Providence Bay on Tuesday.

A carload of young people from Arton visited Miss Loretta Kenna on Sunday.

Mrs. G. F. Saunders who has been visiting friends in Toronto returned home on Monday night.

Rev. W. C. Almack who has been Minister of the Methodist Church here for the past year leaves this week for Hepworth where he will be stationed. Rev. Mr. Storey is to be the new Minister here.

A Bowling Tournament under the auspices of the Red Cross Society will be held here on Monday July 2nd. It is open for anyone to play whether they ever bowled before or not. Refreshments will be served free to all players, everybody come and enjoy a days' fun, and help the Red Cross Society.

Captain G. S. Hanmore of the C. A. V. C. spent the week end here.

SOLWAY

Mr. and Mrs. John Stroeder spent Sunday with friends in Carlsruhe.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lambertus of Walkerton spent Sunday at the home of Mr. Wm. Lambertus.

Mrs. Alex. Kieswetter left last week on a visit to friends in Kitchener.

Mr. and Mrs. McMorran and Miss Jessie Findlay are visiting at the home of the latter's brother, Mr. Walter Findlay.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Stemler from Dorking spent a few days this week renewing acquaintances in this vicinity.

The Catholic Ladies of this vicinity held a Lawn Box Social at the home of Mr. E. O'Conner, on Wednesday evening last, and despite the inclement weather a good crowd was in attendance and enjoyed the excellent program provided. Over $100 was realized.

MILDMAY

At the Carrick Council meeting on Monday afternoon a grant of $1000 was made to the Y. M. C. A. to aid the fine work of that institution among the soldier boys in France and Flanders.

Mr. Ed. Knechtel and family of Hanover motored to town on Sunday and spent the day here with friends.

According to schedule, Mildmay and Neustadt are to play here on Tuesday evening. Neustadt and Moltke played a game on the IV. Con. Friday evening and Moltke gave Neustadt a fine whitewashing as the tally was Moltke 16, Neustadt 2.

The Mildmay bowling green, west of the rink, is getting green at last. It was seeded only a short time ago but the grass has grown wonderfully fast. It will soon be one of the prettiest spots in town. Great credit must be given Mr. John Schneider who had charge of the work.

Mr. George Mackie has disposed of his Ford car to Mr. Dan Kuester of the VI. Concession.

School picnics are the order of the day.

Mr. Solomon Lindenschmidt purchased a 1917 touring car from the local Ford agent's on Thursday of last week.

WESTFORD

Mr. and Mrs. Jamison of Windsor spent the week-end at Mr. Dan Murray's.

Mrs. Wm. Ryan of Kinlough visited at Mr. F. H. Halladay's on Sunday.

Mr. Edward Wall attended the funeral of his sister Mrs. Culbert at Ripley on Monday.

Miss Illerbrunn of con. 8 and her brothers Sundayed at Mr. Linus Ruth's.

Mr. Wm. Montgomery and a party of friends from Kincardine motored to Mr. Wm. Wall's 14th on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. John McFarlane spent Sunday eve at Mr. Ed. Stanley's.

Mr. John Brown visited friends in Glamis last week.

BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. Dan Murray on June 11th, a son.

HANOVER

Mr. Herman Gruetzner made a trip to the Southern States this past week in the interests of the Hanover Portland Cement Co. to enquire into the coal situation.

Word reached town last week that Sapper D. Edgar Craigie of the Engineers had been wounded. Edgar is well-known here, his father, Rev. J. R. Craigie having been pastor of the Presbyterian Church here and in Hampden from 1893 to 1902.

Mr. Harvey Seip who formerly conducted the west end restaurant here was in town last week. Mr. Seip is nursing a dislocated shoulder now, the result of a fall at his home in Chesley.

Messrs. Albert Knechtel, John Kalle, Geo. Francis, E. H. Lorenz of Hanover, and Peter Doersam of Ayton had a rather exciting auto accident about three miles east of Ayton on the Mount Forest road. Mr. Knechtel was taking his car to Toronto and while driving through Ruppenthal's swamp—the road being very narrow and in bad shape—the car swerved off the road and was nearly buried under water at the side of the road. They had to get two teams and block and tackle to put the auto back on the road.

CHEPSTOW

Sergt. J. Murray of London spent over Sunday at his home.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Anstett and children of Kitchener, and Mrs. A. Graf and babe of Buffalo, N. Y., were here for the Anstett—Lang nuptials on Tuesday.

Miss Fitzpatrick of the Red School attended the funeral of a late friend at Trenton, the latter part of last week

The R. C. church was the scene of a pretty wedding on Tuesday morning, when Miss Johanna Lang, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Lang was united in marriage to Mr. Geo. Anstett son of Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Anstett, Rev. Fr. Zettler officiating. The bride was charmingly attired in a trousseau of white silk, with bridal wreath and veil and carried a bouquet of carnations. She was attended by the Misses L. Anstett and E. Lang while Messrs Leo Lang and A. Anstett supported the groom. After the wedding ceremony the nuptial party proceeded to the home of the bride's parents where a large host of friends were entertained through the day, concluding with a dance in the evening. The young couple will reside on the farm north of here, recently purchased by the groom from his brother.

(Intended for last week)

Jos. Commans, who shortly after his return from Toronto was stricken with pneumonia is slowly improving.

Reeve Phelan is attending the County Council Sessions in Causley this week.

Miss Anna Whitman of New York City is on a visit to her home, having been called to the bedside of her brother, who is seriously ill.

The Misses Wingefelder of Walkerton visited at the King Edward on Sunday.

M. McNab and Jos. Commans are the latest purchasers of cars in town, the former having bought a Ford, the latter a Chevrolet. Report has it that a few more are to fall in line shortly.

Mr. and Mrs. Alois Reinhart attended the funeral at Formosa on Wednesday, of the former's nephew, the late Geo. Reinhart of Ambleside.

Notice

The C. A. Society will not be responsible of payment of any purchase by any of our wards without a written order from our Executive.

Accountant at Commerce

Mr. Adam Wilson has joined the local Bank of Commerce staff as accountant. Mr. Wilson enlisted for Overseas Service three years ago but was lately discharged from the C. E. F. owing to ill-health.

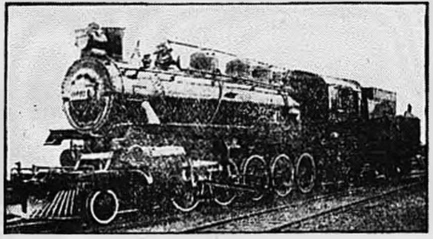
A GREAT IMPROVEMENT

(Durham Chronicle.)

The Walkerton Telescope appeared last week as an all-home print for the first time in its history. It formerly contained eight 8-column pages, four printed away and four printed at home. It is now an eight page 6 column paper, and a great improvement. The "patent inside" is a much cheaper paper to produce, but the publisher is handicapped by the supply house, which controls half his business.

NEW OIL-BURNING ENGINE

Lord Shaughnessy Inspects Latest Construction From C.P.R. Shops



A NEW Decapod locomotive, just turned out by the Angus Shops for the Canadian Pacific Railway, has been inspected at Montreal by Lord Shaughnessy and a number of interested railway officials.

What strikes one most about this wonderful engine is the comfort and safety under which the engineer drives his train, and the ease with which so many tons of machinery can be operated from the luxurious shelter of a protected and cushioned cab. The locomotive engineer is not a machine but a human being, his cab is to some extent his home, and up-to-date railway managements are recognising this by providing him with pleasant quarters. There is no doubt sound policy in this, for the less disturbed he is by weather, or other physical conditions, the more care he can devote to the locomotive and the train itself. Under the severe climatic conditions which sometimes prevail in the mountain divisions, this naturally conduces to safety, and so far as the locomotive engineer is concerned Safety First and Comfort First go hand in hand.

The interior of the cab, which is roomy and well ventilated, has spring cushioned seats which can be moved on a slide, while the sliding arm-rest on the window is also comfortably cushioned. A coat cupboard with swinging pegs takes care of the surplus clothing. The windows are double sashed with storm windows for winter and are constructed with small panes—a great advantage, as they are more easily and quickly replaced and occasion less discomfort if broken. A wind deflector enables the engineer to see the track without hurting his eyes, while a wind deflector on the roof of the cab stops the back draught and keeps the cab free from dust. The cab itself has double ventilators and is pleasantly warmed in winter through having the insulation on the boiler head made in panels which can be easily lifted out. The roof is painted a cool green, and cool green shades cover the lights, while the eyes are further protected by a deflector on the fire door which eliminates the glare. The water gauge is protected with a screen in case of the glass breaking, and, indeed, every possible device that human ingenuity has so far invented has been provided for the safety and comfort of "the man behind the gun."

A great improvement is the power reverse gear worked by air, as easy to work as the handle of a sewing machine, which eliminates the old heavy hand lever and reduces the physical strain upon the engineer.

So far as the exterior of the locomotive is concerned, this has been designed so that repairs can be made without the men having frequently to go inside or under the engine. One of the old worries of the engine crew is removed by a new type of air strainer, drawing cool air into the pump which requires little or no attention. A noticeable feature of the exterior is the Laird crosshead, an old type revived because it ensures such excellent lubrication and is easy to maintain. A safety strap is applied to the guide bar to prevent it from dropping. The guide is self-centering and maintains alignment better than the ordinary guide, while the leading driving wheel is flexible with one inch extra sideplay and is provided with wedge play to ensure proper guiding. The engine truck is provided with side resistance procured by a sliding inclined plane, and here again the safety of the engineer is considered in the safety clamp which prevents the tank from sliding forward on to the cab in case of collision.

Twenty-five such Decapods are under order for the Canadian Pacific Railway, and will be in service on the mountain division. Maximum power for minimum weight is the keynote of their construction. The locomotive itself weighs 125 tons, the tender 82.5 tons, loaded, while the tank capacity is 3,200 gallons of oil and 7,000 gallons of water.

Notwithstanding high prices of materials, the Canadian Pacific has continually added to its cars and engines, having built 1,500 cars last year and another 2,000 under construction at the present time.

JUNE
BRIDES
Will find the kind of Wedding Invitations and Announcements they are looking for in the Telescope Sample Book.
New and up-to-date styles printed from new types.
.. THE ..
TELESCOPE

GOLD DUST
digs deep after germs

Gold Dust not only cleans but sterilizes.

Soap merely washes over the surface, leaving a greasy film behind it.

Gold Dust "goes to the bottom," and insures absolute purity, and sanitary safety. Why not sanatize your home, as well as clean it?

Soap needs muscle help; Gold Dust does all the hard part of the task without your assistance.

Gold Dust is a good, honest, vegetable-oil soap, to which are added other purifying materials in just the right proportions to cleanse easily, vigorously, and without harm to fabric, utensils or hand.

Gold Dust is sold in 5c size and large packages. The large package means greater economy.

"Let the GOLD DUST TWINS do your work"

Made by THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY, LIMITED, Montreal
Makers of Fairy Soap (the oval cake)

HOMESEEKER'S
EXCURSIONS
LOW RETURN FARES
TO WESTERN CANADA
ONCE·A WEEK
Convenient Service. Modern Electric Lighted Equipment
Standard and Tourist Sleeping Cars and Colonist Coaches
For Tickets, Reservations, Literature and Information, apply to
W. E. ATTWOOD, INSURANCE, WALKERTON.
Or write R. L. Fairbairn, G.P.A., 68 King St. E., Toronto.
CANADIAN NORTHERN RAILWAY

Sick Headache and Biliousness CURED BY MILBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS.

Mrs. Willard Tower, Hillsboro, N.B., writes: "I have suffered something awful with sick headache. At times I would become bilious, and would have severe pains in my stomach after eating, and have a bad taste in my mouth every morning. I told some of my friends about it and I was advised to use Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. This I did and and they cured me."

When the liver becomes sluggish and inactive, the bowels become constipated, the tongue becomes coated, the stomach foul and sick and bilious headaches occur. Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills clean the foul coated tongue and stomach and banish the disagreeable headaches.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c. per vial, 5 vials for $1.00, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

GIRLS NEEDED IN OFFICES

Voluntary enlistment has taken thousands of men from office work. Conscription will take more. Office help is scarce now—will be scarcer very soon. Young women must fill the vacant places and they need training.

NORTHERN Business College

remains open all summer to help to meet the demand for trained office help. Students may enter any time. No increase in fees. Circulars free on application.

C. A. FLEMING, F. C. A., Principal, Department A., Owen Sound, Ontario

INSURANCE &
REAL ESTATE

Fire, Life, Accident & Health, Plate Glass, and Guarantee Insurance in the best of Companies.

Real Estate—Several desirable residential properties for sale.

Money to Loan, Conveyancing and General Agency. Splendid Mortgage Loan Company Debentures for investment yielding good interest.

GEO. D. McKAY
Office Over Bell Telephone Agency
PHONE NO. - 179

INSURANCE

FIRE, LIFE,
ACCIDENT,
AUTOMOBILE,
GUARANTEE.
MONEY to LOAN
REAL ESTATE

Town and Farm Property for sale. See my list before making a purchase

OCEAN and RAIL
TICKETS TO ANY PART OF THE WORLD.

I represent the Canadian Northern Railway and all ocean steamship companies — English, American and Italian.

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES

T. E. ATTWOOD
GENERAL AGENT
Walkerton - Ontario

DENTAL

W. B. HALLADAY, L. D. S. D. D. S.
Dentist. Successor to Dr. Coram. Modern methods employed in all dental operations. Special attention to crown, bridge and inlay work. Three doors east of post office. Visits Cargill 1st and 3rd Thursday afternoon of each month.

C.L. GRANT, D.D.S., L.D.S
Graduate of Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario.
Dr. Lount's old stand.
Wisser Block - Walkerton

MEDICAL

DR. BROWN
Diseases of the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat, Neustadt, Ont. Will be at the Queen's Hotel, Walkerton, 1st Friday in each month from 1 to 4 p.m.

W. A. HALL, B.A., M.D., C.M.
Honor Graduate in Arts and Medicine at Queen's University. Member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons. Office and residence on corner of Colborne and Cayley Streets.

FRIEND OF HOUSEWIFE

Electricity Makes Hardest Part of Housework Easy—Interesting Demonstration at Local Power Co's. Office.

The many ways in which electricity is made to lighten the cares of the housewife and to remove the laboriousness of housework were practically illustrated by a two days' demonstration at the office of the Walkerton Electric Light & Power Co. the past week. Crowds of citizens who called, saw the latest electrical apparatus in operation, while attendants explained how it was done and treated the visitors to delicious hot coffee and cake, piping hot from the electric ranges.

An iron machine which will handle a big family washing in the fraction of an hour, is so simple to operate that anybody can handle it. These machines are already largely used in private families in the cities.

Probably no feature interested the ladies more than the electric range. A range that is handled by the mere turning of switches offers so many advantages over the old-fashioned kind that every housewife would be glad to have one. It is simply the matter of expense. The electric range has been greatly perfected the last few years while the price has got lower and lower, until in many towns they are now in popular use. The range will of course easily handle the cooking for a large family. Smaller stoves at prices as low as $5.50 and 7.50 will cook practically anything, being limited only in capacity.

One of the nice things that the lady of the house who has one, prizes highly, is the coffee percolator. These are very reasonable, and make a nice Christmas or birthday present for Madame.

What the visitors saw was a revelation to most of them. A washing machine in which the washing, rinsing and bluing can be done at one and the same time, with as little effort as playing a piano, and at a comparatively low cost, gives the housewife, who is perplexed with the help problem, something to think about. The machine is warranted to pay for itself in a short time, first in the saving of money paid out for an inferior quality of work done by hand, and, second, in the saving of wear and tear to the clothes from the constant use and abuse of the rub-board. The cost of operation for "juice" is only 1½c. per hour.

Hand operated machinery of all kinds have been done away with, in the factory, and office, and a fact everywhere. Men now use machinery operated by power. Why should not women do likewise?

News About Town

Local news on every page.

Mr. Millard Stauffer returned to Toronto on Tuesday.

Miss Cochrane, has been visiting her friend, Mrs. C. F. Nutting.

Mrs. Crompton spent the week-end with friends at Paisley.

Mr. Herb Leslie spent the past week at Hamilton on holidays.

Mrs. Latham (formerly Miss Eckford) is visiting friends in town.

Mrs. Farquhar Shaw of Fergus, spent the week-end in town.

Mr. W. H. McFarlane and Miss McFarlane went to Hamilton, on Tuesday.

Miss Ruth Garner has taken a position in the local office of the Merchants Bank.

Mr. Thomas Cunningham has been laid up with inflamation of the knee the past week.

Mrs. Hepburn returned to Montreal on Friday after a pleasant visit with friends in town.

The Postoffice Department will issue a special series of postage stamps for the Confederation semi-centennial.

And to add to our woes, Canada is again threatened with a small apple crop. No apple sauce is always a hardship.

Seventy-five cents will pay for a trial subscription to the Telescope from now until New Years. Order to-day.

Dr. Foster of Wiarton was nominated by North Bruce Conservatives to oppose Wm. McDonald M. P. P. for the Legislature.

Our deep sympathy goes out to Mr. E. Roy Sales of Port Elgin in the death of his mother which occurred at Brantford on Friday.

Rev. C. W. Cosens revisited his former charge at Paisley on Sunday, his work being taken by Rev. A. J. Crighton of Paisley.

Mr. Robert Bryce has received an interesting book of views of Bramshott district, England, from his son, Charlie, of the 19th Reserve Batt'n.

Mrs. Geo. Inglis returned this week from visiting her sister, Mrs. Coons of Peterborough who has been very ill, but is now somewhat improved.

While chopping wood at Mr. Walter Rowand's, Clayton Tovell had the misfortune to be struck by a flying block which inflected a deep gash in his nose.

REV. DR. ROBT. JOHNSTON

Prominent Montreal Divine Will Address Mass Meeting Here Sunday Afternoon on Occasion of Canada's and Bruce's Fiftieth Anniversary.

Sunday, July 1st, has been proclaimed a day for solemn and religious recognition and the citizens of Ontario have been earnestly requested by Order in Council to pay a tribute of gratitude to the Almighty on the occasion of Canada's fiftieth anniversary, for the blessings this country has enjoyed. In Bruce County, the Anniversary is a double one, being the fiftieth anniversary also of the organization of Bruce as a separate county.

The occasion is to be marked in Bruce by religious services conducted by Rev. Dr Johnston of Montreal, Chaplain of the 160th Battalion, and one of Bruce's most distinguished sons, at three points: Kincardine in the morning; Walkerton in the afternoon; and Chesley at night.

The Walkerton meeting will take the form of a mass meeting to be held on the Armouries' lawn at 3 o'clock. The congregational singing will be led by the Walkerton Philharmonic Society.

Special service, appropriate to the day, will be held in most of the town Churches.

A G. T. R. construction gang of a dozen men started work on a new cement water tank at the station on Thursday.

Mrs. L. Yack and son George, have returned to their home at Greenock after spending a week at the home of the former's brother, Mr. V. Kaufmann.

Mr. John Vogt who paid a visit to Guelph, Monday, says that vegetation is a good deal further advanced in that district. Peas, beans and potatoes, were out at full blossom.

Sergt. Rupert Etherton who went overseas with the 71st has been rejected, being medically unfit, and is expected home this coming week. His father is also serving in France.

Millard Grant Stauffer, who is visiting in town this week, will, we understand, appear in the Opera House, here on Thanksgiving night, with his own concert orchestra and company.

Sergt. Vickers, who has been taking a course at the Technical School, Toronto, has gone into business in Toronto. His firm is Fox & Vickers, Sales promotion and Advertising, 75 Bay St.

Mrs. McCrum and Miss Freda left on Friday for New York, where the latter, who recently graduated as a nurse from the New York Hospital, will write on the New York State Exams.

Rev. Mr. Rock preached at Tiverton on Sunday, the occasion being the Church Anniversary. The services proved very interesting and enjoyable, the other churches of the village closing to allow their members to attend in the evening.

There are lots of amateur gardeners this year who are learning things about seeds and plants they never knew before. We heard of one man who had planted beans and when he saw the seed above the ground on top of the shoot, he started to push it down again, thinking the seed had no business being up in the air.

Left Property to Brother

The will of Sergt. Harry Wade, of Walkerton, who was killed in action in Flanders, was probated at Toronto last week. The will disposed of an estate amounting to $6,029. His brother, Judge Frank Wade of Cleveland, Ohio., inherits the entire estate.

Read Every Page

Under our new home print arrangement the Telescope is now local from first to last. Don't look for all the local news on the outside page. A peep into the inside will reveal the fact that all pages are local and some of the best items are on the inside.

On Duty in England

Wilbur Cryderman is now Surgeon-probationer of His Majesty's Fleet in training at Portsmouth, England, where he expects to remain a month before receiving a post. His sister, Ethel, has joined the nursing staff at the Military Hospital at Taplow. They had an enjoyable visit together in Old London before being called to duty.

Three New Professors

Three more new professors of a rank equal to those of of any Canadian university have just been appointed by the Western University, London. This, with the other notable advancements made at the Western in recent years, will guarantee that students can now secure as good courses in Arts and Medicine at the Western as are given anywhere in the Dominion.

Landed in England

Nursing Sister Annie Ferguson writes her father, Chief Ferguson, that she landed safely in England after a pleasant voyage across the Atlantic. She is stationed at the Granville Canadian Hospital at Ramsgate, Kent. It is a fine big building with 500 beds, overlooking the seashore. On arriving at the hospital, she was surprised to see sitting across the table at supper, a Walkerton girl, Miss Grainger.

SUNDAY SCHOOL

Lesson I.—Third Quarter, For July 1, 1917.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Isa. vi, 1-13—Memory Verses, 6-8—Golden Text, Isa. vi, 8—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

I am always specially glad to come to a study in Isaiah, this wonderful epitome of the whole Bible, divided into two portions like the Bible, the former having thirty-nine chapters and the latter twenty-seven, like the thirty-nine and twenty-seven books of the Old and New Testaments. The meaning of the name Isaiah is the salvation of Jehovah, and that is also the topic of the whole Bible. A prophet was a spokesman for God, and his mission is fully set forth in Hag. i, 13, as "the Lord's messenger with the Lord's message." The king mentioned in the first verse had reigned fifty-two years in Jerusalem, and it is recorded of him that he did right in the sight of the Lord. He was marvelously helped till he was strong. But when he was strong his heart was lifted up to his destruction, for he transgressed against the Lord his God and died a leper (II Chron. xxvi, 3, 4, 15, 16, 21). He was also called Azariah. Thus kings as well as all others come and go, for there is none abiding, nor here have we any continuing city (I Chron. xxix, 15; Heb. xiii, 14).

Isaiah did what we should all do, and always do, look up and see a king who never dies, and a throne that cannot be moved, of which it is written, "Thy throne, O God, is forever and ever; a scepter of righteousness is the scepter of Thy kingdom" (Ps. xlv, 6; Heb. i, 8). I like to read in Ezek. i, 26-28, of the throne and the glory of it and the man upon it, for He is the same one whom Isaiah saw, the one of whom we have been learning for the past six months (John xii, 41). There is no other way for us in this world of change and trouble than to do as Stephen did—look up steadfastly into heaven and see the glory of God and Jesus. As Ezekiel saw the cherubim in connection with the throne, so Isaiah saw the seraphim, and it may be that they are the same living ones representing some portion of the redeemed as burning ones and as held in His hand. The cry of each is virtually the same, "Holy, holy, holy is the Lord of hosts" (verse 3 and Rev. iv, 8), and nowhere else do we find the thrice holy in a sentence. But see Ps. xcix, 3, 5, 9. They speak of the whole earth being full of His glory (verse 3 and Rev. v, 13), so it is a vision of the future, as were the cherubim in the garden of Eden. Isaiah saw the temple filled with glory, and so it was at the dedication of both tabernacle and temple.

When Isaiah thus saw the glory of the Lord, the King, the Lord of Hosts, it caused him to see Himself as wholly unclean and undone (verse 5). Job and Daniel were affected in the same way (Job xlii, 5, 6; Dan. x, 7, 8), and we may be sure that if we have any good opinion of ourselves left we have not yet seen the King as we might see Him. See also Rom. vii, 18, the soul cry of one who has seen the beauty of the Lord. We are not as right with Him as we might be unless we think so much of Him that we think nothing of ourselves. There is a very helpful suggestion in the face and feet covered wings of verse 2. The face indicates what we are, the feet suggest our walk or what we do, but we must not think of what we are or what we do, only of what He is and He does (Gal. ii, 20; I Cor. xv, 10). The power to fly is in the two wings of commit and trust of Ps. xxxvii, 5. The altar and taking away of iniquity and sin of verses 6, 7, suggest the one only way by which sin can be taken away, the sacrifice of Calvary, of which the brazen altar and its sacrifices were typical.

It takes but a moment for Him to take away our sins by virtue of His great sacrifice of Himself once for all. So shall it be with Israel as a nation when they shall see Him coming in His glory (Zech. iii, 9, l. c.), and then shall they be His messengers to all nations, and many nations shall be joined to the Lord in that day (Zech. ii, 10-12), whether it be a nation or a man, only there can be no service for God until sins are forgiven, but when we know this blessedness, according to Ps. xxxii, 1, 2, we should be gladly willing to tell others. After the prophet knew that he was cleansed then he heard the voice of the Lord saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go for us?

Note the "I" and "us," the one Living and True God and the three persons in the Godhead, and learn from Rom. viii, 26, 31, 34, that the Father, Son and Holy Spirit are each and all for every one whom they send, and they will not fail to work and to watch over their own word, which will surely accomplish their pleasure, and the faithful messenger shall be unto God a sweet savior of Christ in them that are saved and in them that perish (II Cor. ii, 15, 16), whether hearts and ears and eyes are closed against the message or opened to hear and see and receive it. If the love of Christ constrains us we cannot but say, "Here am I; send me!" And then, whatever may be the immediate result, we shall rest in this—that He cannot fail nor be discouraged and in His time the kingdom will surely come. It is ours to be faithful.

"O Canada" Our National Song

THE British National Anthem is the Imperial Anthem of Canada. It is played or sung at official functions, at the large social gatherings, at the close of entertainments, and so on; and at the sound of the first bar all present arise, or uncover, or exhibit some other mark of respect. But, in addition, Canada has a national anthem of her own, and to the playing or singing of this also public respect is shown. Instinctively Canadians realise when the Imperial Anthem is called for and when the national songs are appropriate. From the beginning of the present war the Imperial Anthem has been heard in Canada more than ever before. "God Save the King" is accepted, in Canada, as it is played and sung in the United Kingdom and throughout the British Empire. "O Canada!" is the finest of our national songs and may be called our National Anthem, but it varies greatly as to words. There are many versions of the original, and each version has its supporters, but since the aim of every revisionist, new and old, seems to be the attainment of a single ideal, namely, the giving of the fullest possible expression to patriotic devotion, there should be no complaint among the sons and daughters of Canada on this score.

There is, nevertheless, no end of room for controversy, just as, south of the line, apparently irreconcilable differences of opinion obtain with regard to the merits of the rivals in the National Anthem field. The same difficulty presents itself in both countries, that of finding anything in verse with a sufficient appeal at once to national idealism and popular sentiment. A national song may be ever so fine from a technical point of view, and yet fail to meet the popular taste; or, it may win popular approval and yet fail utterly as a dignified or adequate expression of national sentiment. Again, it may be adequate and dignified with regard to one section or one element of the country, and fail to reflect the emotions or ideals of another section or element.

Canadians are apparently very nearly a unit in accepting the air of their national anthem, although there are some who differ, as for instance, Arthur Stringer, who not long ago, in MacLean's Magazine, ventured to point out what he claimed were serious shortcomings in the tune. Since then a letter has been received from "Sapper R. Smith, Canadian Engineers, somewhere in France," in which "O Canada!" is defended with all the ardor of one who has gone into action under its inspiration. Mr. Stringer had criticized the anthem on the ground that its air was dirgelike. Says Sapper R. Smith: "If Arthur Stringer could stand beside the 'Road to Glory' on which troops march to the Somme and hear company after company stumbling by in the dark to the lilt of 'O Canada!' while the whole country is a mass of flashes and the thunder of the guns keeps the ground all a-tremble, and every one of those half-seen figures, grotesquely burdened with his overland kit, is just a boy thinking of the morning and the home he'll probably never again see, then I think Arthur Stringer would forget that dirge stuff."

A recent participant in the "O Canada!" controversy, Herbert Sanders of Ottawa, after claiming for the anthem a full measure of musical merit, and joining in the common verdict that it is an air peculiarly suited to the crowd, had this to say: "It is a pity that there are so many versions of words set to our new national tune, but it is unlikely that any official act can rectify this undesirable condition." Time can, however, do what no act of Parliament can accomplish. The process of elimination is already going on, and there are certain stanzas to which the Canadian public is showing an unmistakable preference. One of these, from a version composed by Richardson and sung with excellent effect by the Sheffield choir, gives utterance to the universal appeal which the people of the Dominion are seeking to express:

Altar and throne command our sacred love,
And mankind to us shall ever brothers prove.
O King of Kings, with Thy mighty breath
All our sons do Thou inspire,
May no craven terror of life or death
E'er damp the patriots' fire.
Our mighty call—loudly shall ring
As in the days of old "For Christ and the King."
As in the days of old "For Christ and the King."

Tump in the Trenches.

It is a far call from the trenches to the moose trails of Canada, and yet, as some unintelligent person is bound to remark, "it's a small world after all!"

From the British front in France comes this tale of Canadian woodsmen masquerading for the time being as "Tommies."

An attack was planned to gain an important position, but so impassable were the roads with winter mud that the ordinary means of transportation were out of the question. The attack could not succeed without ammunition, and the ammunition had to be carried to the front.

Up rose the Canadians to meet the situation. Trappers, guides, and sportsmen—they all knew the trick of the tump. Three tump companies were formed and in single file an endless chain of Tommies carried the needed gun fodder on their backs over the roads which the army mules were useless on. The attack went through on schedule to a successful termination.

All of which goes to show just how much an outdoor training may be of service at times.—Outing.

THE TONIC THAT BRINGS HEAL

"Fruit-a-tives" Builds U
Whole System

Those who take "Fruit-a-tiv the first time, are often aston the way it builds them up an them feel better all over. They taking "Fruit-a-tives" for some disease, as Constipation, Indi
Chronic Headaches or Neu
Kidney or Bladder Trouble, matism or Pain in the Back. A find when "Fruit-a-tives" has cu disease, that they feel better stronger in every way. This is the wonderful tonic properties of famous tablets, made from fruit j
50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial siz
At all dealers or sent postpaid by F a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

GRAND TRUNK SYST

ATTRACTIVE
TRIPS
To
Muskoka Lakes
Algonquin Park
Maganetawan Riv
Lake of Bays
Karwartha Lakes
Georgian Bay

Round trip tourist ticke on sale from stations in at very low fares with stop overs.

Berth reservation and full particulars at all
Trunk Ticket Offices or wr
E. HORNING, District Pa
er Agent, Toronto, Ontario.

A Trial
Subscription to th
Telesco
From no until New Years for 75
ORDER IT
TODAY !

Summer
Styles

AS SHOWN IN OUR
erior Tailored Clothing are covered by one brief sentence "The best and cheap to be had in town."

We'd like to measure you for your summer suit.

Hats, Caps, Ties, Shirt
Sweater Coats, all Furnis
ings at close prices.

WOODMAN & CO.
Next to Vogan's Hardw

The Right Furnace

McClary's Sunshine Furnace is absolutely right—right in idea, in design, in construction; in price and in performance. It's a furnace made for your needs and is complete in every single detail. Write for free, descriptive booklet.

McClary's
SUNSHINE FURNACE
LONDON TORONTO MONTREAL WINNIPEG VANCOUVER
ST. JOHN, N.B. HAMILTON CALGARY
SASKATOON EDMONTON

For Sale by Patterson Bros.

FIELD SEEDS

Our supply of Field Corn has just arrived. We have different varieties and the seed is excellent.

We also have a good supply of Turnip and Mangle Seed.

Don't forget we are selling Paint at 65c per quart.

S. W. Vogan

CANADIAN PACIFIC

Great Lakes Steamship Service
via Owen Sound
STEAMSHIP "MANITOBA"
leaves Owen Sound at midnight each THURSDAY (connecting train leaves Toronto 5.25 p. m.) or Sault Ste Marie, Port Arthur and Fort William.
ERVICE via PORT McNICOLL COMMENCES JUNE 2.

Plan Your Vacation Trip Now
POINT AU BARIL
MUSKOKA LAKES
KAWARTHA LAKES
LAKE MAZINAW
FRENCH and PICKEREL RIVERS
RIDEAU LAKES
SEVERN RIVER
are delightful resorts and easily reached via C. P. R.

or WINNIPEG and VANCOUVER ave Toronto 6.40 P. M. Daily via 'The Pioneer Route'

Particulars from Canadian Pacific Ticket Agents or
W. B. HOWARD, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, Ontario.

HAMMOCKS!

Hot weather is fast approaching. Why not spend a few pleasant evenings in a new, up-to-date hammock? We have a fine assortment ranging in price from $2.00 to $6.75.

Also keep the big black flies out of the kitchen by using Hobb's up-to-date SCREEN DOORS AND WINDOWS. Sold by

PATTERSON BROS.
Hardware Stoves Graniteware

THE CANADIAN BANK OF COMMERCE

SIR EDMUND WALKER, C.V.O., LL.D., D.C.L., President
JOHN AIRD, General Manager
H. V. F. JONES, Ass't General Manager

CAPITAL, $15,000,000 RESERVE FUND, $13,500,000

FARMERS' BUSINESS

The Canadian Bank of Commerce extends to Farmers every facility for the transaction of their banking business, including the discount and collection of sales notes. Blank sales notes are supplied free of charge on application.

N. M. LAY, Manager Walkerton Branch.

ONTARIO AFFAIRS

FIFTY YEARS OF CANADIAN HISTORY

What Ontario is Planning as Her Share in Confederation Celebration—Quiet and Dignified

From one aspect the semi-centennial of Canadian confederation on the 1st day of July is being overshadowed by the pressing necessities of the war and by the series of political crises through which Canada is passing this summer.

From another aspect, however, the extraordinary and critical circumstances of the present time make this semi-centennial even more significant. If it had occurred during a period of peace and prosperity there would doubtless have been many more fireworks displayed and much more noise and jubilation. It is doubtful, however, if the people of the country would have given as much attention or thought to the Canadian Confederation both in its origin in 1867 and in its present state in 1917 as they will do under the quiet but more serious and thought-provoking times of this year.

Ontario's part in the celebration by its quietness and its dignity will, it is hoped, interpret the spirit of the people of the province. On the suggestion of Mr. Rowell in the legislature at the last session a strong committee was appointed to arrange the details. Municipalities throughout the province have been asked to co-operate in public meetings and demonstrations to be held on Monday, July the 2nd, and a favorable response is being received from a large number of them.

In Toronto the municipal authorities, the school children, the military, patriotic and public societies of all kinds are co-operating. There will be a patriotic parade and a demonstration at Exhibition Park. Sir William Hearst, Hon. Dr. Pyne and Hon. W. D. McPherson are acting for the Government, Mr. Rowell and Mr. Dewart for the Opposition.

HELP ON FARMS

Ontario Organization Committee is Making Good Headway

Indications point to the success of the Ontario Organization of Resources Committee and allied organizations in their efforts to recruit labor for the farms of the province from new sources to meet the present emergency. The secretary of the committee at its recent meeting presented an optimistic report, showing that city workers, university and High School students, both men and women, have responded well to the call for help and either have gone already to the country or have made definite arrangements to go at a suitable time. It is estimated that the number already gone or arranged for reaches between ten and fifteen thousand. The Trades and Labor Branch have sent out 500 men and 600 boys; 689 women students are working on fruit farms and 65 in canning factories. District representatives of the Department of Agriculture have secured help to fill 120 applications from farmers; 5,000 school boys and 2,000 girls from the public schools have gone to farms and the War Production Club of Toronto, acting in conjunction with the Organization of Resources Committee, has sent over 1,000 men for farm work.

NOTES OF THE WEEK

The action of the Dominion Government by order-in-council in suspending betting on race tracks for the duration of the war, is a step which has been well received by public opinion. For a long time there has been agitation for this measure by religious and public bodies throughout the country, focussing in the attitude of the Liberal Party in the Ontario legislature which made it one of their main policies this last session. The Mail and Empire in commenting on the Federal Government's decision says, "the cessation of betting on race tracks is an effective war economy and in the public interest. Racing itself is not interferred with."

Following a visit of Mrs. Margaret Hyslop, Travelling Secretary of the Ontario Women's Liberal Association, organization of the Liberal women of Stratford and vicinity has been decided upon. The work to be undertaken will be patriotic, public and educational as well as political.

Hon. F. G. Macdiarmid, Minister of Public Works and Highways, accompanied by W. A. McLean, Deputy Minister of Highways, has been on a motor tour over a wide area inspecting the roads and making plans for future development. Among the counties visited were York, Simcoe, Peel, Wellington, Waterloo, Oxford, Brant, Wentworth and Halton

Wm. C. McCormick has been nominated by South Essex Conservatives for the local House in opposition to Lambert Wigle, Liberal, who is the sitting member.

"Bill" Macdonald, M.P.P., for North Bruce, has been speaking in Owen Sound under the auspices of the Women's Liberal Association of that place. He reviewed the 1917 legislation.

Northwest Toronto women, under the leadership of Mrs. J. W. Bundy, are active in educational and organization work. They held an effective meeting in Sherbourne House.

Good results are expected from the organization of the women of London into a Women's Liberal Club. Mrs. Geo S. Gibbons, wife of the Federal candidate for the city of London, is Honorary President and Mrs. J. M. McVey is President. This Club aims not only to look after the interests of London Liberal women, but to assist similar women's organizations in Western Ontario.

OUR ESTERN LETTER

Written for the Tescope By an Old Bruce Boy.

Since my last letter we have had beautiful warm weather with an odd shower and the grain is going up by leaps. I finished seeding a week ago and the field is green already.

+ + +

I was in Lacombe this week and was surprised going across the Blind Man Valley and east of those to see the large amount of land still in stubble, too wet to do anything with. From east of us comes the cry for rain, they are all parched up.

+ + +

I heard an interesting story of Canadian wild geese the other day. A farmer near Red Deer procured (many years ago) some eggs of the wild goose which he set and reared 8 goslins. These stayed round till fall then migrated. Next spring the eight returned and stayed round all summer. The following spring only five returned and they gradually became reduced to one, but that one still arrives each spring and is right at home till fall.

+ + +

Some years ago a railway commenced from Lacombe to Rimbey most of the grading was done and it stopped at that. Just before election the Government made a great shout of how they were going to finish the road and a start was made at Lacombe laying track with a few men and a hand car. Now that the election is over work has stopped and the men fired. It will probably stay as it is for another five years till next election.

COUNTY COUNCIL

The June Session of the County Council of Bruce was held at Chesley, opening on the 18th inst. The Warden was in the chair and all the members present. Mayor Halliday, of Chesley, extended a hearty welcome to Council.

Mr. W. E. Moore, first Reeve of the new village of Lion's Head, presented his credentials and was admitted into the fold.

Council got to work early. A deputation from the County of Huron was present with reference to establishing a joint Children's Shelter for the two Counties, believing it would be just as efficient and much more economical than a separate shelter for each County. The Council will look into the matter.

Grants were few and far between. A grant of $2500 was made to the Walkton Hospital and $1500 to the Kincardine Hospital, and a grant of $400 made to Amabel for work on the north gravel road, the Indian Dept. agreeing to contribute also. Mr. Johnston, Arran, asked a grant for a new bridge, but it was declined. Grants of $50 each were made to Tiverton and Hepworth.

The Committee in charge of the sale of debentures issued to raise the grants to patriotic purposes reported they had told the debentures at slightly under par. Considering the state of the money market this was considered a good sale.

Mr. Cass moved to have the bridge for the 2nd Con. of Elderslie known as Mc Gregor bridge assumed as a County bridge. A Committee was appointed to investigate and report.

The usual grant was made to Continuation Schools, being based the same as last year.

The Good Roads by-law was the main item of business before the Council and a great deal of time was spent on it, in an endeavour to make the road assumed serve the greatest number in the County. (The full list of roads will appear in next week's Telescope.)

Requests for road grants were few and far between and few of those asked for were given.

The High School statements showed considerable increased cost of maintenance but not much increase in attendance.

The usual amount of routine work was passed. The Council and citizens of Chesley treated the Council to a trip to Eugenia Falls, where they were shown all the wonders of the Hydro plant. A trip all thoroughly enjoyed and appreciated. Thursday evening the Council was entertained at a sumptuous banquet, which was quite in keeping with the hospitality and kindness shown the members by Chesley all week.

Council adjourned to meet at Walkerton on 4th December next.

P. A. MALCOMSON,
County Clerk.

When a man gets two dozen tomato plants lined out in the backyard, he at once gets horribly interested in the price the canners are liable to pay this year by the bushel.

General Change Of Time

General change of time will take effect on the Canadian Pacific Railway, Sunday, June 24th. Particulars from the Canadian Pacific Ticket Agents or W. B. Howard, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, Ont.

This Week's Telescope

Contains the Opening Chapters of Our New Serial

INSIDE THE LINES

By Earl Derr Biggers and Robert Wells Ritchie

"Inside the Lines" first appeared as a stirring war drama of today, the best of its kind since "Secret Service." Its author, Earl Derr Biggers, is known to fame as the author of "Seven Keys to Baldpate." His later play has been novelized by Robert Wells Ritchie, and opens at the outset of the present great war drama in Europe. Caught by the swirl of events, a lovely American girl is detained in Europe and becomes innocently enmeshed in the machinations of spies and of the secret service of two contending nations. Every chapter is replete with mystery and incident, skillfully woven threads that blend to a surprising climax.

WRIGLEY'S

THE PERFECT GUM

Let us make you acquainted with the new, luscious flavour—

It's all that the name suggests!

Wrigley quality—made where chewing gum making is a science.

Now three flavours

Chew it after every meal

Get it wherever confections are sold

Sealed Tight—Kept Right!

MADE IN CANADA

The Flavour Lasts

SUITS THAT YOU CAN BANK ON

DEPENDABLE CLOTHES FOR MEN, YOUNG MEN AND THE BOYS

The new clothes now-a-days may be part cotton or nearly all cotton but we can show you something just like you bought three years ago. Here's the secret. They were bought outright at the right time and made up into suits as we required them.

Thats why you can buy just as good an all-wool suit to-day at nearly the same price as three years back.

All are splendidly made, will hold their shape and look well until worn out. The best of linings and trimmings.

Prices $8.00, $10.00, $12.50, $14.50 to $18.50

THESE NEW ARROW SPRING SHIRTS AND "THE GORDON" THE NEW FORM FITTING COLLAR At 1.25 Arrow Brand Shirts

Fine corded materials in light ground with black blue and helio stripes. Perfectly fast color. Large roomy body. Perfect fitting. Laundered or double French cuffs. Sizes 14 to 17.

THE GORDON

The new Arrow Form fitting collar. There's room and comfort with these. Sizes 14 to 16½, 15c.

SWELL SUMMER NECKWEAR

A choice lot of everything that's new in men's ties including sport shirt ties. 50c. & 75c.

Boys Blouses and Sport Shirts

Boys blouses with attached soft collar. Sizes 12½ to 14, color tan and blue. Each 50c.

Boys Sport Shirts

Quite the cool thing. Open back of the neck. In pretty white stripe materials. Sizes 13 to 14½. Each $1.00

Men's Sport Shirts

Swell new lines in young men's sport shirts. Beautiful cloths. Sizes 14 to 16½ at $1 and $1.50.

Bathing Suits

Two piece men's and boy's sizes. Each 50 & $1.00.

STEPHAN BROTHERS

Last Week of the Big Anniversary Sale

When you read this ad. there will be only 3 days left and they will be busy ones.

Something New on the Silk Table Daily

Black and Colored $1.50 Taffeta Silk, Crepe de chine, Crepe Mariberu 36 inches wide at $1.25 a yd.

$2.00 Heavy Black Duchess Silk 38 inches wide, Sale price $1.65 a yd.
$1.75 " " " " " " " " $1.49 "
$1.50 Black Paillette Silk 36 inches Sale price $1 30 "

8c, 10c, 12½, Embroideries and Laces, Sale price 5c per yd.
15c, 20c, 25c, " " " " " 10c " "
Corset Cover Embroideries worth 35c, 40c, and 50c, Sale price 25c a yd.

$8.00 Ladies Poplin Raincoats all sizes, Black, Tan, Navy, Green, Grey and Brown, Anniversary price $5.75 each.

Ladies $1.00 black Parasols on Sale at 75c each.

Fancy Parasols all reduced for the Big Sale.

Another lot of Ladies Waists now on Sale at 25c and 50c.

Big Clearance Sale of Men's and Boy's Straw Hats just in time for Dominion Day. See Window.

Secure your Summer Supply now. We have what you need. Tempting prices all over the Store. As soon as one line is sold up, another takes its place, so you are sure to find something interesting.

Last call to Anniversary Sale.

McBURNEY & CO.

THE PEOPLE'S STORE

Make It Yourself, Be Fashionable!

FOLLOW the example of fashionable women of Europe by making your own clothes during the war.

Butterick Patterns give you the smartest, most [illegible]ce styles—that chic simplicity so popular now in Paris. Perfectly easy for any one to make.

Make your selection now at our

Butterick Pattern Department

Phone 53 J. H. APEL Walkerton

POETS' CORNER

THE 'INDERBURG LINE.

I've bin a sweatin' sojer
For thirty months or more,
An' thort I noo a little
O' the strategy o' war;
But the thing wot gits me dizzy
An' a' muddles up me brine
Is the whereabouts and tearabouts
Of 'Indenburg's ole line.
It ain't in 'appy Flanders
Or sunny Picardy,
Though it may be up in 'Eaven
Or down in Tennessee;
It can't be in the "other place,"
'Cos 'e don't mix wi' swine—
So can you tell, oh where the 'ell
Is 'Inderburg's ole line?

Refrain

Where is the line that is never a line?
Where's the retreat that ain't a design?
We've caught lots o' 'Uns
An' plenty o' guns,
But never a sign of the 'Inderburg line.

+ + +

News About Town

Public Meeting to-night.

Public School Board to-night.

Mr. Geo. D. McKay went to Toronto on Monday.

Wedding Invitations in latest styles at the Telescope.

Mr. N. C. McKay went to Toronto on business Tuesday.

Mr. Wm. Ballantyne of Brantford is here visiting his wife.

Andrew Obrecht, the oldest person in Mount Forest is dead, aged 97.

Mr. George Wells, Carrick Road, has been laid up the past two weeks.

Miss Florence Garner has taken a position at the Canadian Express Office.

Pte. W. Lyness of Port Elgin is reported "presumed dead" in Tuesday's list.

Mrs. Wm. Wolfe is leaving Tuesday for the West where she will visit her sister.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hertle of Hanover spent Sunday at Mrs. M. Fehrenbach's.

Miss Jennie Hudson of Beamsville, has been spending a few days with old friends in town.

Mrs. E. A. Miller and two children of Toronto, are visiting her father, Mr. John L. George.

The members of the Philharmonic Society are requested to meet at the Presbyterian Church, Thursday night at 8 p. m.

The Baptist Sunday School will hold their annual picnic at Mr. James Bell's bush, north of the town, on Monday afternoon, July 2nd.

The Children's Aid Society have two nice baby boys about 6 months old for adoption. Would also like to place four year old boy in good foster home. Apply Rev. D. McLennan.

Mrs. Robert Goode is confined to her room owing of trouble with a limb which was injured two years ago.

Miss Robertson, who has been a patient at the County Hospital the past month returned to her home at Southampton yesterday, quite recovered in health.

Mrs. A. Tucket of Toronto is visiting her mother, Mrs. Moody. Mr. Tucker came up from Toronto on Friday for a few days, accompanied by his friend, Mr. C. Wilkison of the Methodist Book Room Staff.

In order to help economy, the Walkerton Electric Light and Power Co., Ltd. will furnish current to any of their customers wishing to install an electric cooking stove or any washing outfit, at the rate of 4c per K. W. with 10% off for prompt payment. The Co. will also furnish the extra meter free. Customer to pay for installing same. If said customers would rather be placed on the Hydro rates as they are in Chesley or Harriston they can be so. Orders will be taken at the office for electric washers or stoves of the best make and at the lowest possible prices.

Wool Wanted

Highest price, 52c a lb.—Jno. Arscott.

At Movieland

One of the best modern plays, Peg O' the Ring, Friday and Saturday. Dont miss the first episode.

Bowling Tournament.

Labor Day has been fixed as the date for the Annual Tournament of the Walkerton Bowling Tournament.

Lost

Ford sized automobile tire between Walkerton and Black Horse. Finder rewarded on returning same to N. C. McKay.

Expects To Move Soon

The 160th Batt'n expects to move from Wittley Camp any time now according to letters received here on Tuesday's mail. The fact that no cablegrams of any kind have been received here the past week, would also indicate that a move is imminent.

Big Barn Burned

About twelve o'clock noon, Tuesday, during a severe electrical storm, the barn of Mr. Fred. Harneck, of the 4th Con. Brant, was totally destroyed by fire. About 1500 bushels wheat, a quantity of oats, about 20 tons of hay and some implements went up in smoke. There was insurance to partly cover that loss. With wheat around the two-fifty mark, Mr. Harneck's loss in the grain alone will be nearly four thousand dollars.

A Busy Worker

Walkerton has no more ardent worker for the soldiers than Mrs. George Ingles, Gibson St. Even her young grandchildren have to take second place now to the boys in the trenches and every spare moment her fingers ply busily on a sock or some comfort for the men at the Front. Already she has knitted no less than 104 pairs of socks, 6 mufflers, 4 sleeping caps, 3 pairs of cuffs, and of these 37 pairs of socks have been knitted since Christmas. Only the soldiers appreciate what we owe to such devoted women.

Brother and Sister Meet

Miss Jessie Wilson, daughter of Rev. Thos. Wilson, has been nursing in a hospital at Neuilly-Sur-Seine, on the outskirts of Paris, for about two years. Her brother, Lieut. Mel. Wilson, has been in France over a year, but never until last week did brother and sister have an opportunity to see each other. On Saturday, Mr. Wilson received a cable from his daughter: "Melville here for ten days."

• • •

MARRIED

McKAY—NIXON—At the residence of the bride's parents on June 20th, by the Rev. Mr. Brigette Mr. J. R. McKay of Lovat to Miss Mary daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Nixon of Ashfield.

+ + +

BRANT COUNCIL

The Brant Council met on Monday, June 11th. Members all present and minutes of last meeting read and declared correct.

Rowand-Johnston, That this council hereby authorise the Treasurer fo this Township, Mr. Fred Jacklin, to draw from the reserve fund in the Royal Bank at Cargill the sum of $2500 from time to time as required.—Carried.

Gregg-Findlay. That this Council expend the sum of $2000 in grants, divided as follows: to the reeve, dep. reeve and three councillors each $100.—Carried.

Johnston-Gregg. That a grant of $100 be given to Elmwood Village for sidewalks.—Carried.

Rowand-Johnston, that the Reeve and Clerk issue orders on the Treasurer for all accounts passed at this meeting of council.—Carried.

Accounts passed as follows:

W. G. Hastie, refund of Elmwood School Debenture payment for 3 years	$ 105 00
Herman Ahrens, dragging road	6 00
D. Willoughby, 6 council meetings $19.80 and signing debentures, $2.00	21 80
W. A. Rowand, 6 council meetings	17 10
Wm. Johnston, 6 council meetings	19 80
D. W. Gregg, 6 council meetings	21 00
J. W. Findlay, 6 council meetings, $16 20, Municipal World advice $1 00	17 20
Fred Jacklin, ½ year's salary, $50 00, postage, stamps, etc., $8.30	58 30
M. A. McCallum, ½ year's salary, $100, postage $2.00	102 00

Johnston-Rowand, that this council do now adjourn to meet on Monday, July 9th, for the transaction of general business.—Carried.

M. A. McCALLUM,
Tp. Clerk.

Walkerton Markets

(Revised, Wednesday, June 27.)

Hay, per ton,	10.00 to	12.00
Oats, per bsh.	75 to	80
Wheat " "	2.25 to	2.25
Barley, " "	1 20 to	1 20
Hogs per cwt,	14.00 to	14 25
Butter, per lb,	30 to	31
Eggs, per doz	29 to	29

IF YOU WANT a good, Reliable Boot. —Try a pair of our Cushion Soles made of solid leather.

FIRST CLASS REPAIRING

C. PETTEPLACE

JEWELLRY OF ALL KINDS

Watches, Clocks, Cut Glass Silverware and Jewellry of all kinds.

C. A. FOX, & SON

"JUNE"

SILVERWARE For the Bride

The enduring gift, the useful gift, the one that pleases most.

What will it be—A cake basket, a fruit spoon, a bread tray, a salad set, a tea service, or a complete service of table silverware.

We have silverware which make exquisite wedding gifts in a variety of forms.

The price ranging from a dollar up. You can secure any pieces you want from our open sets of celebrated ware. Also beautiful pieces of Pearl handled goods.

R. L. GIBSON
JEWELER WALKERTON
Agent for The New Edison Phonograph.

The Central Grocery

Clover Leaf China

A fresh assignment just arrived. Staple lines.

Toilet Setts

Plain and printed

FARM PRODUCE WANTE D

W. G. Searle
Phone 161 Walkerton

OPENING AND CLOSING STORE

On and after Wednesday June 6th this Store will be open

Wednesday Evenings Until 9 O'clock

and will close

Thursday Afternoons at 1 O'clock

during the summer months. I will have special attractions for Wednesday evenings to give the public an opportunity to do their buying in the evening. All orders taken will be delivered Thursday morning.

C. PATRICK
PHONE 165 WALKERTON

Read Every Page!

WORTHY GROCERIES LOW PRICES

These features explain the phenomenal success of our great food market. We are well stocked with the choicest and as usual the price is low.

GOODE & McKAY
The People's Grocery
PHONE 67 WALKERTON

WALKERTON TELESCOPE

VOL. XLIX, NO. 27 WALKERTON TELESCOPE, WALKERTON, JULY 5th, 1917 $1.50 A YEAR IN ADVANCE

All Home Print - Local News on Every Page From 1 to 8

BRIDGES AND CULVERTS

Brought Down By Sunday Morning's Fierce Rainstorm—G. T. R. Track Washed Out at Scene of Former Wreck

This district experienced the worst rainstorm in years early Sunday from 3 to 9 a. m. Between here and Kincardine no less than twelve bridges and twenty culverts were reported to be down. The roads were badly flooded and in the low-lying lands many fields under crop were completely covered with water. The damage to the crops will be considerable.

South of Mildmay the Grand Trunk track was washed away, and it took the Section gang all day Sunday working hard to repair the breach. It was at the identical spot where a bad railway wreck was caused by a washout a number of years ago. The G. T. R construction gang that was working on the new water tank received orders Sunday to go to Ripley to repair a railway bridge that was down.

Clarence Oberle of the Bank of Commerce, Windsor, spent the holiday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Oberle.

J. V. Scanlan B. A. of the Brantford Collegiate Institute is spending the week with his father, Mr. John Scanlan at Beaver Glen Farm, Brant.

Turtled With Eight Passengers

Mr. and Mrs. Sol. Schwandt and their family of six children, of the South Line, narrowly escaped serious injury when their car turned turtle on Monday. They were coming down the hill west of John Tanner's at a good clip, and a team which was standing at the bottom of the hill failed to get out of the road in time. The result was Mr. Schwandt's car took to the ditch and turned over on its side. Strange to say everybody escaped without a scratch.

EXPLODED TOO SOON

Harry Denny Had Narrow Escape When Dynamite Went Off Prematurely—Blown Fifteen Feet And Loses Three Toes.

Mr. Harry Denny, the well-driller, narrowly escaped with his life when a defective fuse caused a charge of dynamite to explode prematurely on Saturday. He was drilling a well on Mr. Ferdinand Frank's farm, west of the town. He had got down 90 feet when he struck pretty thick rock. He put a charge in the casing to lower it, timing it for about two minutes. For some reason the charge exploded when it was only a short distance from the surface of the ground. The force of the charge expended itself above ground, blowing Harry about fifteen feet. Three toes on his left foot were blown entirely away. His head was slightly injured, also his ankle. Mr. Denny was taken in the ambulance to the Bruce County Hospital, where his injuries were dressed. He is now making good progress but will be on his back for a few weeks. The doctor in charge is of the opinion that Harry's foot will be pretty useful to him yet in spite of its rough experience.

No Move Yet

Letters from the boys of the 160th Battalion at Witley Camp England received here yesterday, had nothing to say about when the Battalion would likely move to France

Principal Re-engaged

The Public School Board has re-engaged Prin. H. L. Willoughby for the coming year at $1025, the same salary as last year. The other teachers' contracts expire at New Years. The estimates for the year were passed. They exceed last year's estimates by $100, of which $120 is for increased cost of coal, and the balance is salary increases.

FOR YOUR CORRESPONDENCE

The use of good writing paper is not only a reflection of your own taste but it is also a compliment to your correspondent. We have much pleasure in directing your attention to our very attractive lines of note paper, in tablets, by the quire or in boxes.

"Swan" Fountain Pens, Inks, Mucilage, Sealing Wax, Visiting and Playing Cards.

Hunter's Drug Store

Drugs and Kodaks Phone 35 C. P. R. Ticket Agency

The Rexall Store

WATERGLASS
For Preserving Eggs. 1 lb tins 15c, 2 lb tins 25c
PARIS GREEN
In bulk or in packages.
ARSENATE OF LEAD
In 1 lb and 5 lb bottles.
BUY THESE AT SIEVERIGHT'S

A. P. Sieveright
Drugs - Kodaks

WALL PAPERS
OF QUALITY

The newest effects and a wonderful assortment for the Parlor, Living Room, Dining Room, Hall, Bed Room, Kitchen, at very reasonable prices.

McCrum's

WOMEN'S
White Shoes

IN HIGH CUTS and PUMPS are having a big run.
Women's White Canvas Shoes 8 in. tops, $2.60
Women's White Reginskin High Shoes, 8 in tops, $3.50
Women's White Reginskin High Shoes, 8 in tops, $5.00
All the Leading Styles.

Ramsey
The Shoeman

NEWS ABOUT TOWN

Local News on every page.

Mr. Joe Yaeck spent Sunday in Toronto.

Clifton McKay went to Hespeler on Tuesday.

Miss V. Obrecht is visiting her parents here.

Mr. Joseph Weiler has gone on a visit to Guelph.

Miss Emma McNeil, teacher, is home for the holidays.

Miss Etta Ernest spent Monday with friends in Hanover.

Miss Tillie Ernest left on Tuesday morning for Toronto.

Mr. Chris. Opperman of Toronto is visiting his parents here.

Mr. Drummett of Toronto university is visiting in the vicinity.

Mr. Armond Whitehead was home from Toronto over the holiday.

Miss Kate Fowley has taken a position at the office of Truax & Son

Miss Connolly, Court Stenographer, has gone to Toronto for her holidays.

Mr. Johnny Hauck of Kitchener, spent the week-end at his home here.

Mrs. J. Hampson and daughter Gladys of Toronto, are here visiting relatives.

Mrs. Peter Fisher, of Fairview Farm, North Brant, is reported to be very low.

Misses Mary Lindsay and Ida Brahler took in the sports at Port Elgin on Monday.

Mrs. P. Cadigan of Superior, Wis. is visiting her nephew, Mr L. H. McNamara.

Miss Grace Van Horne has returned from Cape Chin, where she has been teaching.

Roy Heipel left on Wednesday for Harriston to work at the Pork and Bean factory.

Mrs. Irwin of the Hartley House went to Stratford yesterday for a two weeks' visit Messrs. Leander and Eric Hesch spent the holiday at the home of their parents here.

Miss Hilda White, milliner of Clinton, arrived home on Tuesday night for the summer holidays.

Master Joe Mahon of Sault Ste Marie is spending the summer at his uncle's, Mr. Connolly at Vesta.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Byers of Listowel, spent Sunday and Monday with Mr and Mrs. Justus Holm.

Principal H. L. Willoughby left this week for Toronto where he will take a teachers' summer course.

Mrs. Ben Beattie of Crayton Mines, New Ontario, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm Van Horne.

Mr. and Mrs. P. S. Moate of Dunnville visited the latter's brother, Rev. J. H. Grenzenbach the past week.

Mrs. William Anderson and daughter left Tuesday afternoon for London, where they will spend the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. John Wilhelm, Master Joie and Miss Helen Wilhelm visited with relatives at Formosa on Monday.

Local News on every page.

Mr. Albert Miller spent Sunday with friends at Chepstow.

Miss Addie Schaefer of Hanover spent over Sunday with her friend, Miss Jennie Hyslop.

Miss Ruth Kenney returned last week after a very pleasant vacation with friends at Gorrie.

Mr. Thomas Dixon spent the week-end visiting the scenes of his boyhood days around Milton.

Miss Madge Sinclair teacher of Clinton, left on Monday to take a course on physical culture at Toronto.

Miss Nettie Kenney, Stenographer, of Toronto, returned on Monday after a few days' visit with her parents here.

Mrs. A. H. Stevens, and Miss Leta are visiting friends near Hanover. Master Lorne is holidaying at Clifford.

Miss Bertha Schnurr is home for a week's holidays, from Buffalo where she has a good position in an Art store.

Mrs. Hodgson and her little son, Harrison, of Welland are here visiting Mrs. Hodgson's father, Mr. Ed. Pengelly.

Mr. Robert Long has taken the mail contract on R. R. No. 2, Walkerton for another four years commencing Oct. 1st.

Mr. Ernest Glave, who is govt. inspector in a munitions factory at Hamilton, spent Sunday with his family here.

Vernadette, Veronica, and Leona Scanlan are holidaying at their uncle's, Mr. John Scanlan, Beaver Glen Farm, Brant.

Miss Gallagher, head nurse at the County Hospital, left yesterday to spend two weeks' holidays at Southampton.

Miss Maude McGill returned to her duties as nurse after attending her father, Mr. J. McGill, who has now recovered.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank and little daughter Abbie of Mildmay, were week-end visitors at Mr. Geo. Lambertus'.

Mrs. Bonnyman, who has been very low with cancer of the stomach at the County Hospital, is reported to be gradually sinking.

Miss Verna Skelton leaves on Monday to join Mr. and Mrs. McGillvray Knowles, summer sketching party at Owen Sound.

Miss George of Port Elgin, who is recovering from an operation at the County Hospital, is reported to be making good progress.

A number of girl friends gave a kitchen shower for Miss Hattie McGregor at the home of Miss Mary Lindsay on Thursday evening.

Miss Dorothy Armstrong and her friend, Miss Kuehner, motored from Hanover and spent Monday at the home of Miss Jennie Hyslop.

On account of bad weather, the lawn social at Mr. August Pletsch's, under the auspices of the Brant Hospital, had to be postponed to the coming Friday evening.

License Inspector and Mrs. Jos. White, their son, Sergt. Russell White, who is home on leave, and their daughter, Miss Hulda, attended a family picnic at Elsinore yesterday.

Pte. Lou Anderson was home from London over the holiday. He reports that the doctors there can do nothing for his partial deafness but that his leg is benefitting from the treatment which he is getting there.

Mr. and Mrs. James Connor, and daughter Mrs. Buetz, Mr. and Mrs. Pierce Connor went to Buffalo yesterday morning to attend the admission of their daughter to the Sisterhood, she having passed the probationary period.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Annis, Miss Gertrude Wilton and Mrs. Morris of Toronto autoed up on on Sunday morning and spent over the holiday with Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Wilton. They returned on Monday taking Florence Wilton with them to spend her summer holidays at Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Annis who motored up from Toronto Saturday night to spend the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Wilton, had an experience they will not soon forget. They were out in the worst of the storm and had to turn back a number of times on account of bridges and culverts being down. At times the car was half submerged in water. They finally arrived at Walkerton about 1 p. m. Sunday.

For Play Time

As well as for business you will find the same comfort, the same easy swing, and that snappiness of style in

Our Tailored Clothes

They retain their shape no matter how hard the service you give them. Come in and get a suit before your summer vacation.

Men's Furnishings

If you are particular about your collars, shirts, neckwear, underwear, sox, hats, caps, etc., come in and make selections here.

G. T. ROURKE
Quality Tailor and Men's Wear.
Phone 186, Walkerton, Ont

AN ELOQUENT MESSAGE

Delivered To Dominion Day Audience In The Town Hall By Rev. Dr. Robt. Johnston of Montreal.

Never was a finer address given in Walkerton than the Dominion Day message which a distinguished son of Bruce, Rev. Dr. Robt. Johnston of Montreal, delivered to the citizens at the Town Hall on Sunday afternoon. Dr. Johnston spoke at Kincardine in the morning, Walkerton in the afternoon, and at Chesley at night. In order to fill all three engagements the Dr. had to make a cross-country drive which made John Gilpin's historic ride fade into insignificance. No less than twenty culverts and twelve bridges were down in the Kincardine neighborhood, as a result of the violent early morning storm and there was only one road clear out of the town. By driving his motor pell-mell through roads that were flooded deep with water and turning back several times at impossible points, the Doctor's driver, Mr. Jas. Malcolm, the Kincardine furniture manufacturer managed to land the speaker at Walkerton only a few minutes late for the afternoon meeting

Dr. Johnston took for his text: He shall have Dominion from Sea to Sea and from the River to the ends of the earth. He spoke of the four ideals held by Canadians; (1) Canada for the Canadians—too narrow and selfish; (2) Canada for the Empire—patriotic (3) Canada for Humanity, (4) Canada for Christ. The last and best includes the first three, and he showed the one and only way in which Canada reach the summit of greatness—through the surrender of the individual life to Christ. In the present National crisis, he appealed for greater sympathy and understanding with our brethren of the Lower Province.

The Doctor, who is honorary Chaplain of the 160th Bruce Batt'n appealed to the audience for a collection to be sent direct to the members of the 160th Batt'n as a gift in memory of the occasion. Similar collections were taken at Kincardine and Chesley, amounting in all, we understand, to about $500.

Mayor Johnston, and the Members of Town Council, occupied seats on the platform, Rev. C. W. Cosens occupied the Chair, and was assisted in the service by Revs. T. Wilson, J. W. Sanderson, G. C. Rock, and R. Perdue. The Chairman explained that Dr. Johnston came a long distance without charge under the auspices of the Bruce Preparedness League, at a considerable outlay of time and trouble. The presence of the Philharmonic Society, under the leadership of Mr. E. H. Leeson, added to the effectiveness of the singing. They contributed a beautiful patriotic anthem, "Lord of Hope and Glory," in fine style.

Auto Accident At Port Elgin

Greatly exaggerated reports of an auto accident at Port Elgin on the holiday, have been in circulation around the town the past two days. The facts are that Mr. Allen Bell, a middle-aged farmer living near Port Elgin, was jammed by a car driven by Miss Hunter of Kincardine against an electric light pole. One of his legs is badly swollen as a result of the impact, and is thought to have been fractured. The exact condition of the injured limb will not be known until the swelling is reduced. Otherwise he was uninjured. The driver was making a sharp turn to avoid another car when the accident happened.

Presentation To Mrs Cunningham.

A large company of neighbours and friends gathered Monday evening at the home of Mrs. George Cunningham of Brant, whose husband fell in action at Vimy Ridge on May 10th. Mr. Frank Rennie, Chairman of the Brant Preparedness League, struck the keynote of the evening when he paid a high tribute to the young woman on the brave stand she took in going back to the farm on the death of her gallant husband to save the farm for her young children. Deputy Reeve Rowand was present on behalf of Brant Township Council, Mr. James Lamb and Mr. Rennie on behalf of the Preparedness League. Mr. Nawhinney acted as chairman and called upon a number of speakers, including Rev. Mr. Henderson of Hanover, Mr. John Rowland, who made a spirited address and others. A nicely worded address was presented to Mrs. Cunningham by the admiring and sympathetic community accompanied by a well-filled purse of gold.

CONTENTS

Of This Week's Telescope

1—News About Town.
2—Editorial.
3—Serial Story.
Town and District.
4—Town News.
5—County News.
6—List Of Bruce "Good Roads".
Public School Exams.
7—Separate School Report.
Conscription Meeting.
8—News About Town.

Dog Lost

White and brown collie, answers to the name of "Collie". Finder please leave word at this office.

Collar-bone Broken

Master Joe Gill had the misfortune to be thrown off his bicycle when the wheel caught in a rut in the road on Saturday, breaking his collar-bone.

Wanted

A young man with good education to learn reporting and the work around a town newspaper office; one from a rural section preferred.—Star Office, Oakville, Ont.

Read Every Page

Under our new home print arrangement the Telescope is now local from first to last. Don't look for all the local news on the outside pages. A peep into the inside will reveal the fact that all pages are local and some of the best items are on the inside.

An Enjoyable Picnic

The children of the Baptist Sunday School enjoyed a good time at their annual picnic held in Mr. Bell's bush, north of the town. There were games and races in the field, and supper was served on tables in the grove. The children were present in full force and there was a good representation from the congregation.

Capt. R. S. Muir Dead.

Capt. R. S. Muir, an old Bruce boy of Toronto, passed away on Thursday in his fifty-seventh year. Capt. Muir was a prominent liberal and at one time contested Dundas against the late Sir James Whitney. He was born at Port Elgin and his wife was Miss Whitehead of Walkerton, sister of Mr. James Whitehead. Besides his wife he is survived by two daughters and one son. The remains were taken to Port Elgin for interment.

Picked A Good One

Mr. Alex. George bought a carriage horse, Billy Mine, from Charles Gilbert, the Toronto horseman, two weeks ago, trading his team of small ponies. The arrangement was that Billy Mine was to be held in the city until after the annual horse show on July 1st. Sandy was "tickled pink" on Tuesday when he opened his daily paper and saw Billy Mine, at the head of the prize list, winning first in his class at Toronto against nine entries, including entries by Murray, Routledge, and other well-known horsemen. "Sandy" certainly picked a good one.

McCallum—Ashley.

One of Brant's most highly respected citizens, Mr. Malcolm Alexander McCallum, Township Clerk, was united in marriage on Saturday to Miss Mary Elizabeth Ashley, daughter of Mr R. H. Ashley of Brampton, formerly of Walkerton. The bride was formerly the school teacher at Malcolm, where she was highly thought of in the community. The marriage ceremony was performed quietly at Geneva Church at 2.30 p.m. by Rev. Alexander Leslie, assisted by Rev. J. A. Hilts. The bride entered the church on the arm of her brother, Melvin T. Ashley of Brampton to the strains of the Wedding March from Lohengrin, played by Miss Ida Savage. Miss Catherine McLean attended the bride, while Mr. Andrew C. Milne acted as groomsman. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs McCallum motored directly to the station where they took the afternoon train to Toronto. From there they will take a trip through the Thousand Islands. The Telescope unites with Mr. and Mrs McCallum's host of friends in Bruce in wishing them long life and every happiness.

WALKERTON TELESCOPE
Published Every Thursday
LORNE A. EEDY · PUBLISHER

Phone No. - 48
Phone No. (Nights) 148

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

Strictly in Advance $1.50
If not paid in Advance $2.00
United States, paid in advance. .$2.00
(50c for Postage)
Great Britain, paid in advance. .$1.50
France, paid in advance $2.50
($1.00 for Postage)
50c additional if not paid in advance

WALKERTON, JULY 5th, 1917

EDITORIAL COMMENT

W. G. WEICHEL, M. P. of Waterloo, the only German born member of the House of Commons will, vote for Conscription.

✦ ✦ ✦

THE vacant postmastership at Paisley has been filled by the appointment of a civilian. Isn't it time the Government gave the returned soldier's a show?

✦ ✦ ✦

ONE of the most effective war posters in the United States runs thus:

Be a WENT,
Not a SENT!

✦ ✦ ✦

THE OTTAWA JOURNAL contrasts Borden and Laurier. One is 63, the other 76. Both are lawyers, both are married, both are childless, both are deeply religious, both have marvelous memories and are loyal to their colleagues. Here the resemblance ends. Borden dislikes politics, to Laurier it is the breath of life. Borden likes a pipe occasionally and Laurier does not. Borden is rich—was rich before he entered politics; Laurier was not.

✦ ✦ ✦

THE PASSING of the Good Roads By-law by the County Council offers Walkerton a great opportunity. This town has been hesitating for several years at the expense involved in building permanent roads, but everybody has recognized that it is a matter which could not be put off forever. The Good Roads By-law now comes along and, fortunately for Walkerton, designates the Durham Road as a County road. This means that the town will not require to finance the proposed Durham St. and Station Rd. roadway entirely out of its own pocket, which was the situation, we had been facing. Under the Good-roads by-law either 40 per cent of the first cost and 20 per cent of the up-keep will be paid by the Government or more likely (in the case of Durham Street being recognized as a trunk line) 60 per cent of the first cost and 60 per cent of the up-keep. It will now be up to the Town Council to get in touch with the Provincial Engineer's Dept. and prepare to take advantage of the opportunity which the Good Roads Scheme offers our town.

✦ ✦ ✦

CONSCRIPTION does not appeal to every one. We were talking to a man who gave us his views. He was not in favor of it. "But," said he, "I dare not go out and say so." He was willing to give us his views because he felt we were not fanatical and would not run out and denounce him as a traitor. He is as good a citizen and as patriotic as any of us, but he dare not give expression to the sentiments he holds because of unreasonableness of those around him. He hates to be denounced as a traitor, when he is not one. His attitude may not appeal to you, but he has a right to his opinion. Three years ago if any man had said conscription, he would have been called crazy. Time has changed us and we are now beginning to see that it is the only thing to save the reputation of Canada. The point we desire to make is that every man's opinion should be respected. The man who is not in favor of conscription has a right to his views, and if liberty of speech and conscience mean anything he is entitled to fair treatment the same as those who happen to differ with him.—Kincardine Reporter.

✦ ✦ ✦

GEN. CURRIE'S cable from the Front last week emphasizes the seriousness of the situation that we are facing. Our men are falling in battle and recruits are not forthcoming to fill their places. The need is urgent and immediate. The voluntary system, under its inefficient handling by the Borden Government, has fallen down. There is little use of talking now of what might have been. The Government will have to answer for its sins when it again faces the electors. What is wanted now is action. The Telescope's conviction on this question has not been changed by wading through voluminous speeches made in the House. We still believe that conscription of men and resources is the fair and effective way to meet the situation. The second reading of the conscription bill now before the House deals only with the principle. When it comes to the third reading we trust the Liberal members from Ontario will insist that conscription be made to include not only manhood but the entire resources of the country to be placed at the disposal of the government so that all Canadians at home may bear some share of the sacrifice and that the full weight of our resources may be thrown into the scale in behalf of democracy.

✦ ✦ ✦

WHY RECRUITING SLACKENED

In the course of his speech on the conscription bill, Sir Sam Hughes admitted that he had promised to raise 500,000 men by voluntary enlistment, and gave several reasons why the voluntary system had fallen down. One was the influence of prominent men who wanted cheap labor and big profits. They influenced the imperial munitions board, the cabinet, and the prime minister. The Minister of Finance had warned the Prime Minister that recruiting was going on too fast in Toronto, and that there was a storm of protest from the manufacturing and commercial interests. Journalists in German pay were also accused of discouraging recruiting, and preaching pacifism. Even a man like Lord Shaughnessy was led to publicly protest against Canada attempting to raise 500,000 soldiers.

The General then went into some protests against recruiting made to the Prime Minister by the Dominion Iron & Steel Co. Sir Sam made the bald statement that the Prime Minister had requested him to slow down on recruiting.

Sir Robert Borden: "On what occasion?"

Sir Sam Hughes: "On many occasions."

Sir Sam then proposed to read a confidential letter which he had received from the Prime Minister some time ago if the latter would consent, but the prime minister objected.

Sir Sam Hughes: "I will read one of my own then, to you; I am not ashamed of anything in my letters."

How could recruiting be successful when the government not only failed to provide proper military machinery for carrying it out, but actually stood in the way and interfered?

Rules Respecting Voters' Lists

Owing to the large number of inquiries which have been made of the department by municipal clerks and others as to the preparation of voters' lists under the amendments made to the law at the last session, the Attorney General points out:

1. That the Ontario Voters' List Act amendments, 1917, chapter 4; the Ontario Franchise Act, 1917, chapter 5, and the Election Law Amendment Act, 1917, chapter 6, were brought into force by proclamation on the 12th day of May last. The Women's Municipal Franchise Act, 1917, chapter 43, came into force on its passing, namely the 12th day of April.

2. While the Ontario Franchise Act is in force a list of voters will not be prepared under it until a further proclamation has been issued directing the preparation of that list. The list prepared under this Act is for use at elections to the Assembly only.

3. The voters' lists prepared by municipal clerks will no longer contain a Part 3, of persons entitled to vote at elections to the Assembly only, as the list prepared under the Ontario Franchise Act will take its place.

4. In the preparation of the voters' list the clerk must be guided by the assessment roll, and if the names of women entitled to vote under the changes in the law do not appear on the roll an appeal must be taken to the Court of Revision or the county judge to have their names entered.

5. A married woman owning property may, by giving a notice to the assessor or the clerk enable her husband to vote at municipal elections instead of herself, and in that case the name of the husband alone would appear on the municipal voters' list as entitled to vote, but this would not prevent the name of the wife being entered on the list prepared under the Ontario Franchise Act.

✦ ✦ ✦

OUR ALL HOME PRINT

(Petrolia Advertiser.)

The Walkerton Telescope, owned and edited by Mr. Lorne A. Eedy, B. A., came to hand last week in reduced form so far as newsprint is concerned, but chock full of local news from head to tail. It is a distinct departure from the make-up of the Walkerton papers for many years past. Hitherto they have been large eight-column papers with patent insides. Mr. Eedy has changed the Telescope to an all home print paper like The Advertiser and is now in a position to control all his advertising instead of having part of it controlled by the ready-print company.

✦ ✦ ✦

Mr. and Mrs. Partridge spent a few days here last week on their way back from their wedding tour before leaving for their home at Fairview Farm, near [illegible].

ONTARIO AFFAIRS

BIG THINGS PENDING FROM WOMEN'S VOTE

New and Vital Policies Sure to Spring from Women's Share in Politics

Germinating in the minds of the women of the province are ideas in government and public welfare which when they become expressed will profoundly influence politics.

This is one of the conclusions reached by Mrs. Margaret Hyslop, Organizing Secretary of the Ontario Women's Liberal Association, who in the past two months has visited a large number of places and come in touch with women in various localities. Mrs. Hyslop has found real interest in public affairs in cities, towns and villages alike. In her opinion the principal thing that women want and are asking for to-day is information in regard to public issues. Even before the granting of the franchise many women kept themselves in touch with developments; others did not. But at any rate all women to-day are naturally more closely interested in the government of the country than they ever were before, because now they are no longer outsiders but are voters the same as men. Mrs. Hyslop anticipates, from her observations of the last two months, that the interest of women will largely revolve around issues affecting the home, the farm and the factories and places of business where women work. In other words their interest will be a very human one defined in terms of people rather than property.

Mrs. Hyslop has been greatly impressed by the high type of women who are associating themselves together in Women's Liberal Clubs to study public problems. She is also struck with the democracy of these organizations and the fact that their membership is taken from women of varying interests and occupations.

There are now twelve clubs affiliated with the Ontario Women's Liberal Association, of which eight have been formed in the last few weeks. These new ones include Owen Sound, Grimsby, St. Catharines, Niagara-on-the-Lake, Wingham, St. Marys, Mitchell and London. In addition to these are the ones already in existence at Toronto, Hamilton, Wiarton and Brampton.

SAM CARTER LIVES A STRENUOUS LIFE

It is not only during the session of the legislature that Samuel Carter, M.P.P., maintains his unflagging activity. During the rest of the year also he is constantly engaged in some sort of public work addressing meetings under many auspices. Within the last two weeks he has appeared before the Hamilton Methodist Conference, has taken the pulpit twice in Preston, has addressed several public bodies and spoken to at least four women's societies and to several Liberal gatherings. The main topics Mr. Carter is discussing these days (apart from the direct war situation on which he feels very keenly) are the need of greater vision in the public life of the country, the baneful influence of the patronage evil, which he believes has dulled and lowered the level of politics and public life, the necessity for an ever-increasing measure of actual public control of affairs and the recent encouragements in this field of democracy. Among these he includes (1) the extension of the franchise to women, one-half the population, who were formerly excluded; (2) the victory of the Ontario Opposition in forcing the Government to tax the International Nickel Company more stringently, with the result that in the years 1916 and 1917 the Provincial Treasurer will be enriched by one and a half million, which it otherwise would not have received, thereby relieving the people of that expense if the revenue is properly administered; and (3) the further victory of the Ontario Opposition in the agitation for the suppression of race track gambling during the war, because this action removes the inequality formerly existing between rich and poor before the law.

The warm weather does not seem to affect Mr. Carter's vitality or vigor and in these addresses he has been the same old whirlwind of excitement and enthusiasm.

NOTES OF THE WEEK

H. Stewart Muir of Toronto, who in 1914 contested Dundas County with Sir James Whitney, is dead.

Mrs. C. F. Smith is President of the new Women's Liberal Club in St. Marys.

The Hospital Branch of the Toronto Women's Liberal Association gave a delightful Garden Party at Oaklands to swell their funds.

G. G. S. Lindsey presided at the meeting to organize a Provincial Liberal Association for Northwest Toronto, and Wm. Macdonald, M.P.P. of North Bruce, was the principal speaker. Ever since his series of noteworthy speeches in the legislature this session Mr. Macdonald has been in great demand. Macdonald is in some respects the Lincoln of the Ontario Liberal Party, a democrat among democrats. His nickname is "Peter Pan" owing to his never failing youthfulness. At the Northwest meeting Mr Macdonald developed his favorite topics, ridiculing the red tape and futility of the Department of Education; censuring the extravagance and exclusiveness of Government House and outlining the great hopes arising from the women's vote.

Lord Milner Expresses Hope of the Imperialists In Very Striking Words

"A TIME may come—I hope and believe a time must come—when the supreme direction of imperial affairs will be in the hands of a Government representative of and responsible to the people of all the states of which the Empire is composed." This statement, made by Lord Milner in the course of a recent speech in London, marks a very definite stage in the working out of the great problem of the future government of the British Empire, which has been growing rapidly in importance during the last decade.

For several years prior to 1914 there had been in process of development a tendency on the part of the self-governing Dominions to claim a more direct share in the government of the Empire, and there was also manifested a growing tendency amongst statesmen at home to admit the justice of these claims, and to welcome the prospect of a more comprehensive scheme of government for the Empire. Then came the war, and, for the moment, little more was heard of the question. By a common consent it was left over, as it were, for discussion in the future, and the Dominions rallied to the support of the Empire without a question asked or a whisper of "terms." Since then, however, the logic of events has gradually forced the matter to the fore again. One by one, as the Dominions' ministers visited England, they were invited to take part in the deliberations of the home government, until the policy came to be not only accepted, but taken for granted. Thus the idea of all Imperial Government, such as that indicated by Lord Milner, no longer seemed to be the dream of a visionary, but, on the contrary, very practical and acceptable politics, and when the calling together of the Imperial War Cabinet was announced, it was accepted almost as a matter of course.

LORD MILNER.

It is not, it is true, possible, at this juncture, to discuss profitably the position which is likely to evolve itself, in this connection, after the war; but if the war is proving one thing beyond doubt it is this, that many so-called emergency measures have come to stay; that there will, in fact, be a unanimous desire, on the conclusion of peace, so to adapt them to peace conditions as to render them, in all their essentials, permanent. "And so we are anxious, as far as is humanly possible," Lord Milner declared in another part of the speech already referred to, "to assure ourselves that we are acting, not only in accordance with our own judgment, but also with that of the men who enjoy the confidence of our fellow subjects across the seas. That is the meaning and purpose of the invitation we have addressed them." It is safe to say that the desire for just this assurance will not vanish with the war; but that it will, if anything, be strengthened, and that measures will be taken to make certain that, through some kind of imperial council, or in some other way, such assurance will always be readily obtainable.

Small Churches.

Many claims for the "smallest church" have been made; but the distinction, such as it is, belongs to that of Culbone, a lonely and secluded parish on the coast of Somerset. The dimensions of Culbone church are thirty-three feet by twelve feet, and it is a complete structure, with chancel, nave, and south porch. On the Western Heights at Dover may be seen the ruins of a church which in some respects is a rival to Culbone. These ruins form no more than a ground-plan, and were unearthed in 1806. They consist of foundations disclosing a western circular narthex, thirty-two feet in diameter, with a chancel twenty-four feet long. Lullington Church, on the River Cuckmere, at the foot of the South Downs, in the neighborhood of Eastbourne and Newhaven, has been called the "smallest church in England"; but, however small it may now be—it measures only some sixteen feet square—it should be said that this is but the fragment of a church. In this competition for smallness Wasdale church, at the head of Wastwater, in Cumberland, makes what is often considered to be a strong claim, says Mr. C. G. Harper in The Guardian. Its measurements are said to be forty-five feet by seventeen feet, but they do not challenge those of Culbone.

Goes to Press

JULY 20th

Please report changes required to our Local Office, to-day.

The Bell Telephone Co. of Canada

The Jubilee Of Confederation 1867-1917

YOU will surely want to know much about the beginnings and history of Confederation at this time of national celebration.

As a good Canadian, as a citizen, as one desiring to be well informed about matters of deep concern and interest, you have your desire and need for knowledge supplied in

MACLEAN'S MAGAZINE for JULY

This magazine gives you the finest and most interesting survey of Confederation you will find in any periodical. You will find there

Portraits of the Fathers of Confederation—the statesmen who launched Canada on her career of brilliant destiny.

The Story of Confederation why it was necessary, and how it came about.

The Taking Over of the North-West Territories from the Hudson's Bay Co.—a stirring story told by Agnes C. Laut.

The Story of the C. P. R.—told by C. N. McIntosh, a man who knew intimately the men who initiated, built and developed the Canadian Pacific Railway—the cord of Confederation.

The Industrial and Business Development of the Past 50 Years—by W. A. Craik. A wonderful story of progress.

Conditions Before Confederation Contrasted With Those of To-day—by Frank Yeigh. An enjoyable study of contrasts.

Statements from the Premiers of Canada's Provinces interpreting the meaning of Confederation and defining the outlook, in regard to their respective provinces.

A story—"The Draft," by A. C. Allenson, dealing with the part that certain courageous and venturesome Canadians took in the American Civil War, just before Confederation.

A Frontispiece—A Dramatic Moment—by C. W. Jefferys, brilliant Canadian artist. The scene is depicted when Sir John A. Macdonald and the Hon. Geo. Brown stood in the House—one on one side, the other on the other side, of a centre line, so tense was the feeling between the two men and the parties they represented.

A Fine Cover Design—symbolic of Confederation, in three colors, specially drawn for the July MACLEAN'S by J. E. H. Macdonald.

Beyond these special Confederation features of the July MACLEAN'S will be the customary provision of fine, short stories, and the departments which makes MACLEAN'S MAGAZINE so enjoyable and valuable to good Canadians everywhere. Get the July MACLEAN'S, double size,

AT YOUR BOOKSELLERS—15 CENTS

GIRLS NEEDED IN OFFICES

Voluntary enlistment has taken thousands of men from office work. Conscription will take more. Office help is scarce now—will be scarcer very soon. Young women must fill the vacant places and they need training.

NORTHERN Business College

remains open all summer to help to meet the demand for trained office help. Students may enter any time. No increase in fees. Circulars free on application.

C. A. FLEMING, F. C. A., Principal
Department A., Owen Sound, Ontario

PATENTS
PROMPTLY SECURED

Here's Where You Will Find the Proper

Summer Clothing

Don't be satisfied with just an ordinary suit of clothes this time, but treat yourself to a good one. It might not be a high priced one, but one that is good value for your money, whatever you pay.

T. PYE
Clothier & Furnisher.

nside the Lines

y EARL DERR BIGGERS
AND
ROBERT WELLS RITCHIE

ight, 1915, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

tortured nerves. Sip—sip. The of doubt and self pity pressing on his brain began to shred He saw things clearly now. ing was as sharp and clear as t of an icicle.

viewed with new zest his re- experiences, from the night he Louisa in the Cafe Riche up to terview with Dr. Koch. Louisa, girl with the face of a fine ani- and a heart as cold as carved thyst—why had she been so will- to intercede for Billy Capper with superiors in the Wilhelmstrasse procure him a number and a mis- to Alexandria? For his informa- regarding the Anglo-Belgian un- anding? But she paid for that. deal was fairly closed with 300 . Did Louisa go further and im in the Wilhelmstrasse out of oodness of her heart or for old ey's sake? Capper smiled wryly the absinth. There was no good- in Louisa's heart, and the strong- emory she had was how nearly Capper had dragged her down im in the scandal of the Lord letters.

the thin green blood of the ood cleared the mind, made it logical reasoning!

had Louisa instructed him to leave Marseilles by the steamer touching at Malta when a swifter boat scheduled to go to Alexandria direct was leaving the French port a few hours later? Was it that the girl intended he should get no farther than alta; that the English there should— apper laughed like the philosopher has just discovered the absolute ife's futility. The ticket—his ticket the Wilhelmstrasse which Louisa procured for him; Louisa wanted for other purposes and used him dummy to obtain it. She want- before he could arrive at Malta, got it before he left Marseilles. ouisa the wise had played with- counting the double "O" on el—fate's percentage in every She could not know the Ven- ld be warned from lingering a because of the exigency of that Billy Capper would reach ris, after all.

een logic in the glass carried along with mathematical exact- deduction. As he sipped his came a thing detached and, down from somewhere high rth, reviewed the blundering f Billy Capper's body from Alexandria—the poor deluded a dupe. With this certitude of me the beginnings of resolve. at first and intangible, then, d by the absinth to focus, was new determination. Capper nurs- , elaborated on it, took pleasure ecasting its outcome and viewing lf in the new light of a humble It was near morning, and the of Thermopylae was well nigh ed when Capper paid his score lundered through the early morn- owd of mixed races to his hotel. gs were quite drunk, but his was coldly and acutely sober.

y drunk, master," was the report , the Numidian, delivered to Dr. at the Ramleh villa. The doctor, ving Caesar to be a competent , chuckled in his beard. Caesar called off from the trail.

ross the street from Dr. Koch's on Queen's terrace was the sum- home of a major of fusileers, station was up the Nile. But summer it was not occupied. The had hurried his family back to land at the first mutterings of the t war, and he himself had to stick his regiment up in the doubtful a country. Like Dr. Koch's place, major's yard was surrounded by a wall, over which the fronds of alms and flowered shrubs draped selves. The nearest villa, aside the Kochs' across the street, was ndred yards away. At night an light, set about thirty feet from Koch's gate, marked all the road abouts with sharp blocks of light hadow. One lying close atop the about the major's yard, screened 's palms and the heavy branches me night blooming ghost flower, command a perfect view of Dr. s gateway without being himself le.

least, so Billy Capper found it on night following his visit to the an physician's and his subse- t communion with himself at the ern of Thermopylae. Almost with falling of the dark Capper had pped off the train at Ramleh sta- , ferried himself by boat down the nal that passed behind the major's ome, after careful reconnoitering, discovered that the tangle of wildwood about the house was not guarded by a watchman and had so achieved his position of vantage on top of the wall directly opposite the gateway of No. 22. He was stretched flat. Through the spaces between the dry fingers of a palm leaf he could command a good view of the gate and of the road on either side. Few pedestrians passed below him, an automobile or two puffed by, but in the main Queen's terrace was deserted and Capper was alone. It was a tedious vigil. Capper had no reliance except his instinct of a spy familiar with spy's work to assure that he would be rewarded for his pains. Some sixth sense in him had prompted him to come thither, sure in the promise that the night would not be misspent. A clock somewhere off in the odorous dark struck the hour twice, and Capper fidgeted. The hard stone he was lying on cramped him.

The sound of footsteps on the flagged walk aroused momentary interest. He looked out through his screen of green and saw a tall, well knit figure of a man approach the opposite gate, stop and ring the bell. Instantly Capper tingled with the hunting fever of his trade. In the strong light from the arc he could study minutely the face of the man at the gate—smoothly shaven, slightly gaunt and with thin lips above a strong chin. It was a striking face—one easily remembered. The gate opened. Beyond it Capper saw for an instant the white figure of the Numidian he had bumped into at the alley's mouth. The gate closed on both.

Another weary hour for the ferret on the wall; then something happened that was reward enough for cramped muscles and taut nerves. An automobile purred up to the gate. Out of it hopped two men, while a third, tilted over like one drunk, remained on the rear seat of the tonneau. One rang the bell. The two before the gate fidgeted anxiously for it to be opened. Capper paid not so much heed to them as to the half reclining figure in the machine. It was in strong light. Capper saw, with a leap of his heart, that the man in the machine was clothed in the khaki service uniform of the British army—an officer's uniform he judged by the trimness of its fitting, though he could not see the shoulder straps. The unconscious man was bareheaded, and one side of his face was darkened by a broad trickle of blood from the scalp.

When the gate opened there were a few hurried words between the Numidian and the two who had waited. All three united in lifting an inert figure from the car and carrying it quickly through the gate. Consumed with the desire to follow them into the labyrinth of the doctor's yard, yet not daring, Capper remained plastered to the wall.

Captain Woodhouse, sitting in the consultation room with the doctor, heard the front door open and the scuffle of burdened feet in the hall. Dr. Koch hopped nimbly to the folding doors and threw them back. First the Numidian's broad back, then the bent shoulders of two other men, both illy dressed, came into view. Between them they carried the form of a man in officer's khaki. Woodhouse could not check a fluttering of the muscles in his cheeks. This was a surprise to him. The doctor had given no hint of it.

"Good, good!" clucked Koch, indicating that they should lay their burden on the operating chair. "Any trouble?"

"None in the least, Herr Doktor," the larger of the two white men answered. "At the corner of the warehouse near the docks, where it is dark—he was going early to the Princess Mary, and"—

"Yes; a tap on the head—so?" Koch broke in, casting a quick glance toward where Captain Woodhouse had risen from his seat. A shrewd appraising glance it was, which was not lost on Woodhouse. He stepped forward to join the physician by the side of the figure on the operating chair.

"Our man, doctor?" he queried casually.

"Your name sponsor," Koch answered, with a satisfied chuckle; "the original Captain Woodhouse of his majesty's signal service, formerly stationed at Wady Halfa."

"Quite so," the other answered in English. Dr. Koch clapped him on the shoulder.

"Perfect, man! You do the Englishman from the book. It will fool them all."

Woodhouse shrugged his shoulders in deprecation. Koch cackled on as he began to lay out sponge and gauze bandages on the glass topped table by the operating chair:

"You see, I did not tell you of this because—well, that fellow Capper's coming last night looked bad. Even your explanation did not altogether convince. So I thought we'd have this little surprise for you. If you were an Englishman you'd show it in the face of this—you couldn't help it, eh?"

"Possibly not," the captain vouchsafed. "But what is your plan, doctor? What are you going to do with this Captain Woodhouse to insure his being out of the way while I am in Gibraltar? I hope no violence—unless necessary."

"Nothing more violent than a violent headache and some fever," Koch answered. He was busy fumbling in the unconscious man's pockets. From the breast pocket of the uniform jacket he withdrew a wallet, glanced at its contents and passed it to the captain.

"Your papers, captain—the papers of transfer from Wady Halfa to Gibraltar. Money too, I suppose we'll have to take that, also, to make appearances perfect—robbery following assault on the wharves."

Woodhouse pocketed the military papers in the wallet and laid it down, the money untouched. The two white aids of Dr. Koch, who were standing by the folding doors, eyed the leather folder hungrily. Koch meanwhile had stripped off the jacket from the Englishman and was rolling up the right sleeve of his shirt. That done, he brought down from the top of the glass instrument case a wooden rack containing several test tubes, stoppled with cotton. One glass tube he lifted out of the rack and squinted at its clouded contents against the light.

"A very handy little thing—very handy." Koch was talking to himself as much as to Woodhouse. "A sweet little product of the Niam Niam country down in Belgian Kongo. Natives think no more of it than they would of a water fly's bite, but the white man is"— "A virus of some kind," the other guessed.

"Of my own isolation," Dr. Koch answered proudly. He scraped the skin on the victim's arm until the blood came, then dipped an ivory spatula into the tube of murky gelatin and transferred what it brought up to the raw place in the flesh.

"The action is very quick and may be violent," he continued. "Our friend here won't recover consciousness for three days, and he will be unable to stand on his feet for two weeks at least—dizziness, intermittent fever, clouded memory. He'll be pretty sick."

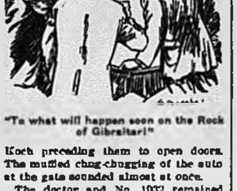
"But not too sick to communicate with others," Woodhouse suggested. "Surely"—

"Maybe not too sick, but unable to communicate with others," Dr. Koch interrupted, with a booming laugh. "This time tomorrow night our friend will be well out on the Libyan desert, with some ungentle Bedouins for company. He's bound for Fezzan, and it will be a long way home without money. Who knows? Maybe three months."

Very deftly Koch bound up the abrasion on the Englishman's arm with gauze, explaining as he worked that the man's desert guardians would have instructions to remove the bandages before he recovered his faculties. There would be nothing to tell the luckless prisoner more than that he had been kidnaped, robbed and carried away by tribesmen—a not uncommon occurrence in lower Egypt. Koch completed his work by directing his aids to strip off the rest of the unconscious man's uniform and clothe him in a nondescript civilian garb that Caesar brought into the consultation room from the mysterious upper regions of the house.

"Exit Captain Woodhouse of the signal service," the smiling doctor exclaimed when the last button of the misfit jacket had been flipped into its buttonhole, "and enter Captain Woodhouse of the Wilhelmstrasse." Turning, he bowed humorously to the lean faced man beside him. He nodded his head at Caesar. The latter dived into a cupboard at the far end of the room and brought out a squat flask and glasses, which he passed around. When the liquor had been poured Dr. Koch lifted his glass and squinted through it with the air of a gentle satyr.

"Gentlemen, we drink to what will happen soon on the rock of Gibraltar!" All downed the toast gravely. Then the master of the house jerked his head toward the unconscious man on the operating chair. Caesar and the two white men lifted the limp body and started with it to the door, Dr. Koch preceding them to open doors. The muffled chug-chugging of the auto at the gate sounded almost at once.



"To what will happen soon on the Rock of Gibraltar!"

The doctor and No. 1032 remained together in the consultation room for a few minutes, going over, in final review, the plans that the latter was to put into execution at the great English stronghold on the Rock. The captain looked at his watch, found the hour late and rose to depart. Dr. Koch accompanied him to the gate and stood with him for a minute under the strong light from the nearby arc.

"You go direct to the Princess Mary?" he asked.

"Direct to the Princess Mary," the other answered. "She is to sail at 6 o'clock."

"Then God guard you, my friend, on —your great adventure." They clasped hands, and the gate closed behind the doctor.

A shadow skipped from the top of the wall about the major's house across the road. A shadow dogged the footsteps of the tall, well knit man who strode down the deserted Queen's terrace toward the tiled station by the tracks. A little more than an hour later the same shadow flitted up the gangplank of the Princess Mary at her berth. When the big P. and O. liner pulled out at dawn she carried among her saloon passengers one registered as "C. G. Woodhouse, Capt. Sig. Service," and in her second cabin a "William Capper."

CHAPTER VII.

The Hotel Splendide.

MR JOSEPH ALMER, proprietor of the Hotel Splendide, on Gibraltar's Waterport street, was alone in his office, busy over his books. The day was Aug. 5. The night before the cable had flashed word to General Sir George Crandall, governor general of the Rock, that England had hurled herself into the great war. But that was no concern of Mr. Joseph Almer except as it affected the hotel business. Admittedly it did bring complications there.

A sleek, well fed Swiss he was, one whose neutrality was patriotic as impervious as the rocky barriers of his home land. A bland eye and a suave professional smile were the ever present advertisements of urbanity on Joseph Almer's chubby countenance. He spoke with an accent that might have got him into trouble with the English masters of the Rock had they not known that certain cantons in Switzerland are very close to the frontier of Germany, and Almer therefore was hardly to be blamed for an accident of birth.

It was 4 in the afternoon. The street outside steamed with heat, and the odors that make Gibraltar a lasting memory were at their prime of distillation. The proprietor of the Splendide was nodding over his books. A light footfall on the boards beyond the desk roused him. A girl with two cigar boxes under her arm slipped, like a shadow, up to the desk. She was dressed in the bright colors of Spain, claret colored skirt under a broad Romany sash, and with thin white waist, open at rounded throat. A cheap tortoise shell comb held her coils of chestnut hair high on her head—Louisa of the Wilhelmstrasse, but not the same Louisa, the sophisticated Louisa of the Cafe Riche and the Winter Garden. A timid little cigarmaker she was here in Gibraltar.

"Haven't I been Josepha, the cigar girl?"

"Louisa!" Almer's head bobbed up on a suddenly stiffened neck as he whispered her name. She set her boxes of cigars on the desk, opened them, and as she made gestures to point the worthiness of her wares she spoke swiftly and in a half whisper.

"All is as we hoped, Almer. He comes on the Princess Mary—a cablegram from Koch just got through today. I wanted"—

"You mean"— Almer thrust his head forward in his eagerness, and his eyes were bright beads.

"Captain Woodhouse—our Captain Woodhouse!" The girl's voice trembled in exultation. "And his number—his Wilhelmstrasse number—is—listen carefully—1032."

"Nineteen thirty-two," Almer repeated under his breath; then aloud, "On the Princess Mary, you say?"

"Yes; she is already anchored in the strait. The tenders are coming ashore. He will come here, for such were his directions in Alexandria." Louisa started to move toward the street door.

"But you?" Almer stopped her. "The English are making a roundup of suspects on the Rock. They will ask questions—perhaps arrest"—

"Me? No, I think not. Just because I was away from Gibraltar for six weeks and have returned so recently is not enough to rouse suspicion. Haven't I been Josepha, the cigar girl, to every Tommy in the garrison for nearly a year? No—no, senor; you are wrong. These are the purest cigars made south of Madrid. Indeed, senor."

The girl had suddenly changed her tone to one of professional wheedling, for she saw three entering the door. Almer lifted his voice angrily:

"Josepha, your mother is substituting with these cigars. Take them back and tell her if I catch her doing this again it means the cells for her."

The cigar girl bowed her head in simulated fright, sped past the incoming tourists and lost herself in the shifting crowd on the street. Almer permitted himself to mutter angrily as he turned back to his books.

"You see, mother? See that hotel keeper lose his temper and tongue lash that poor girl? Just what I tell you—these foreigners don't know how to be polite to ladies."

Henry J. Sherman—"yes, sir, of Kewanee, Illynoy"—mopped his bald pink dome and glared truculently at the insulting back of Joseph Almer. Mrs. Sherman, the lady of direct impulses who had contrived to stare Captain Woodhouse out of countenance in the Winter Garden not long back, cast herself despondently on the decrepit lounge and appeared to need little invitation to be precipitated into a crying spell. Her daughter, Kitty, a winsome little slip, stood behind her, arms about the mother's neck and her hands stroking the maternal cheeks.

"Cheer up, mother. Even if this first trip of ours—this 'grand tower,' as the guidebooks call it—has been sorta tough we had one compensation anyway," said the magnate of Kawanee—"we saw the Palace of Peace at The Hague before the war broke out. Guess they're leasing it for a skating rink now, though."

"How can you joke when we're in such a fix? He-Henry, you ne-never do take things seriously!"

"Why not joke, mother? Only one thing you can do over here you don't have to pay for. Cheer up! There's the Saxonia due here from Naples some time soon. Maybe we can bore a way up her gangplank, Consul says"—

Mrs. Sherman looked up from her handkerchief with withering scorn.

"Tell me a way we can get aboard any ship without having the money to pay our passage. Tell me that, Henry Sherman!"

"Well, we've been broke before, mother," her spouse answered cheerily, rocking himself on heels and toes. "Remember when we were first married and had that little house on Liberty street—the newest house in Kewanee it was, and we didn't have a hired girl then, mother. But we come out all right, didn't we?" He patted his daughter's shoulder and winked ponderously. "Come on, girls and boys, we'll go look over those Rock chambers the English hollowed out. We can't sit in our room and mope all day."

The gentleman who knew Kewanee was making for the door when Almer, the suave, came out from behind his desk and stopped him with a warning hand.

"I am afraid the gentleman cannot see the famous Rock chambers," he purred. "This is wartime—since yesterday, you know. Tourists are not allowed in the fortifications."

"Like to see who'd stop me!" Henry J. Sherman drew himself up to his full five feet seven and frowned at the Swiss. Almer rubbed his hands.

"A soldier—with a gun, most probably, sir."

Mrs. Sherman rose and hurried to her husband's side in alarm.

"Henry—Henry! Don't go and get arrested again! Remember that last time—the Frenchman at that Bordeaux town." Sherman allowed discretion to soften his valor.

"Well, anyway"—he turned again to the proprietor—"they'll let us see that famous signal tower up on top of the Rock. Mother, they say from that tower up there they can keep tabs on a ship sixty miles away. Fellow down at the consulate was telling me just this morning that's the king pin of the whole works. Harbor's full of mines and things; electric switch in the signal tower.' Press a switch up there and everything in the harbor—blam!" He shot his hands above his head to denote the cataclysm. Almer smiled sardonically and drew the Illinois citizen to one side.

"I would give you a piece of advice," he said in a low voice. "It is"—

"Say, proprietor, you don't charge for advice, do you?" Sherman regarded him quizzically.

"It is this," Almer went on, unperturbed. "If I were you I would not talk much about the fortifications of the Rock. Even talk is—ah—dangerous if too much indulged."

"Huh! I guess you're right," said Sherman thoughtfully. "You see, we don't know much about diplomacy out where I come from."

Interruption came startlingly. A sergeant and three soldiers with guns swung through the open doors from Waterport street. Gun butts struck the floor with a heavy thud. The sergeant stepped forward and saluted Almer with a businesslike sweep of hand to visor.

"See here, landlord!" the sergeant spoke up briskly. "Fritz, the barber, lives here, does he not?" Almer nodded. "We want him. Find him in the barber shop, eh?"

The sergeant turned and gave directions to the guard. They tramped through a swinging door by the side of the desk while the Shermans, parents and daughter alike, looked on, with round eyes. In less than a minute the men in khaki returned, escorting a quaking man in white jacket. The barber, greatly flustered, protested in English strongly reminiscent of his fatherland.

"Orders to take you, Fritz," the sergeant explained not unkindly.

"But I haf done nothing," the barber cried. "For ten years I haf shaved you. You know I am a harmless old German." The sergeant shrugged.

"I fancy they think you are working for the Wilhelmstrasse, Fritz, and they want to have you where they can keep their eyes on you. Sorry, you know."

"But I haf done nothing."

"Close in! March!" commanded the sergeant. The guard surrounded the hapless barber and wheeled through the door, their guns hedging his white jacket about inexorably. Sherman's hands spread his coattails wide apart, and he rocked back forth on heels and toes, his eyes smoldering.

"Come on, father"—Kitty had slipped her hand through her dad's arm and was imparting direct strategy in a low voice—"we'll take mother down the street to look at the shops and make her forget our troubles. They've got some wonderful Moroccan bazaars in town. Baedeker says so."

"Shops, did you say?" Mrs. Sherman perked up at once, forgetting her grief under the superior lure.

"Yes, mother. Come on, let's go

(To be Continued)

Town and District

Local News on every page.

Mr. Rasburn and family of Cargill motored over on Friday.

Rev Father Ferguson of Warkworth is expected here this week on a visit to his sister, Mrs. Connolly, at Vesta.

Mr. Albert Miller and Mr. N. Eidt called on friends at Mildmay, Hanover, Neustadt, and Carlsruhe on Monday.

Mr. Norman Weiler and Miss Clara Weiler of Mildmay spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Schnurr.

Mr. Jack Chalmers returned to his home at Moncton on Friday. He has taken a position in the G. T. R. freigh office at Toronto for the High School vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. George Schaab of Kitchener visited in town Saturday renewing old acquaintances. From here they motored to Chesley and Elmwood to visit friends there.

The G.T. R. construction gang which has been working on the new water tank has been taken off for a few days to help repair damage to culverts and track caused by Sunday morning's storm.

Mayor Johnston has received a letter from Sir George Perley giving a list of the institutions which benefitted the past year from the British Sailor's Relief Fund of Canada, to which Walkerton contributed $100.

The lady bank clerk had completed her first week and a friend asked her how she liked the work. "O, it's beautiful!" said the girl. "I'm at a branch where nearly all the people have accounts and it's so nice to see how little money some of your friends have in the bank!"

Liesemer & Kalbfleisch, the live local agents of the Ford Motor Co., report a good season's business. Thus far they have sold about 40 cars. The agents have received assurance from Head Office that there will be no reduction in price on Aug. 1st this year as in past years, and they look for a raise in price at any time

Old Folks Enjoyed Treat

The inmates of the House of Refuge enjoyed a visit from Miss Halladay's class from the Public School one afternoon last week. The scholars gave a splendid program of music and recitations. They also brought flowers and candy for a treat. The old people thoroughly enjoyed everything and appreciated the children's thoughtfulness.

Successful Garden Party

The Patriotic garden party given by the Aberdeen (Bentinck) Red Cross Workers of which Miss McGarity is President, was a qualified success. No less than $105.50 was realized for Red Cross purposes. Among those present were, Messrs. John Rowland, D. McKerracher, Geo. D. McKay, Major Nelson, and Lieut. Pinkerton of Walkerton.

The County Town

Port Elgin Times:—Walkerton the chief town in the county, is advancing, and the best evidence of progress is the fact that The Telescope has discarded the ready print and finds local news sufficient to print its paper all at home. The Telescope editor is getting good support from the people whom he serves. There is no better asset to any town than a good local newspaper and an editor with high ideals of journalism.

Where Potatoes Are Cheap

Mr. John D. Miller, a Telescope reader at Wiste, Alta., an old Bruce Boy, writes under date of June 4th:—We are all in good health and everything looks fine. Although the Spring was cold and backward, the fields are green. We first finished seeding June 1st. Have in crop, 250 acres, 150 in wheat, 110 in oats and we are looking forward to a good crop. What we need now is a good rain as it is getting pretty dry. Potatoes are scarce here too but we haven't got to pay the price that you have in Ontario. $1.00 per bag that's what I paid. Wishing you success.

An Unique Gathering

The Oak Lake, Man. News, tells of an unique gathering which was held on June 5th at the home of Mr. T. J. Smith, the occasion being the celebration of the Diamond Anniversary of the marriage of his parents (Mr and Mrs. Smith, formerly of Walkerton) his own silver wedding and the twenty-fourth birthday of his son. All the brothers and sisters were present with most of their children, also a large number of relatives, among those from a distance being T. R. Todd of Vancouver, Mrs (Hon) Geo. Bell of Regina, Mrs. R. J. Best of Walkerton, Mrs. T. Falconer of Morden, and D. J. Smith of Regina, a returned soldier of the 43rd. Battalion. Over seventy sat down to the sumptuous repast provided. Speeches of congratulation reminiscent of old times were given and altogether a delightful afternoon spent. Mr and Mrs. Smith sr. who are enjoying the best of health in spite of their advanced years were presented with an address by their children, in which they offered congratulations, expressions of warm affection, and of gratitude to the Almighty for permitting them to attain to the 60th Anniversary.

New Russian Calendar Has Been Made Uniform With European Nations

THE calendar is one of those things which most people take for granted. It is regarded as a simple and necessary equipment of every well-regulated household or office, and few people, probably, pause to consider the wealth of history, stretching back to the remotest period, which lies behind it. In this respect, indeed, the calendar is a snare and a delusion, for, from the very first moment when one begins to make inquiry into its history, one is involved in many other studies. There are associated with it great political questions and great religious questions. There are mazes of the most abstruse mathematical calculations to be faced, whilst it involves, or may involve, a careful study of practically the whole field of astronomy. Then, if anyone imagines, when he first engages in this inquiry, that he has simply to trace through a single thread, which has one end in the beginnings of things and the other on his writing desk, he is doomed to disappointment. There are other calendars, still in use to-day, and many others were at one time in use, and they all have histories. However, the Julian calendar, to which Russia, by a special edict, has at last conformed, after holding out successfully against it for more than three hundred years, is now by far the most important of those at present in use, and the coming in of Russia places it in the position of a world calendar.

Russia, in the change she has just made, has performed an act beside which the national writings off of an hour at the commencement of summer time is indeed a small matter. She has written off no less than thirteen days, and, in order to bring herself into line with the rest of the world, took a leap, from April 18 to May 1. Thus is a long controversy now practically settled. It had its beginnings more than three hundred years ago, and it came about in this way: In early times the Romans were wont to divide their year into ten months, but, later on, in the days of the kings, they adopted the lunar year of 355 days, divided into twelve months, with an occasional intercalary month to preserve the adjustment. In process of time, however, the priests who had charge of the matter, either through carelessness or ignorance, allowed confusion to creep in, and by the time of Julius Cæsar the matter was crying out vociferously for drastic adjustment. Julius Cæsar, accordingly, grappled with the question in B. C. 6. The year was divided into 365 days, and, every fourth year, one day was added, the length of the year being assumed to be 365¼ days. As a matter of fact, however, the year is less than 365¼ days, by eleven minutes and forty-eight seconds, and this fact was the source of all the trouble which followed, for some sixteen hundred years.

In those sixteen hundred years, the few minutes each year grew into days, and by 1582 the discrepancy between the official date and the actual date amounted to ten days. This shifting of days had caused great disturbances by unfixing the times of the celebration of Easter, and likewise of all other movable feasts, and so, in the year already mentioned, Pope Gregory XIII. decided that a reformation was necessary. After carefully investigating the matter, with the help of the astronomer Clavius, he ordained that ten days should be deducted from the year 1582, and that, in the month of October in that year, the calendar should jump from the 4th to the 15th. In order that this displacement should not occur again, it was further ordained that every hundredth year should not be counted as leap year, excepting every fourth hundredth, beginning with 1600. In Spain, Portugal, part of Italy, France and the Roman Catholic Low Countries, the change was made, although not in every case on the same date; but in the Protestant countries the innovation was strenuously resisted, and the Lutherans of Germany, Switzerland, and the Protestant Low Countries did not agree to the change until the year 1700. England stood out for another half century, and it was not until 1751 that an Act was passed for equalizing the style, in Great Britain and Ireland, with that used in other western countries of Europe. By that time the ten days of Gregory's time had grown to be eleven, and so, when the change was made, the 2nd of September, 1751, became the 14th, and an incensed populace paraded the streets of London, calling upon the authorities: "Give us back our eleven days!" Russia and Greece still held to the old style, the discrepancy, of course, accumulating all the time. Now Russia has made the leap, and Greece alone is left to represent the old order.

Not a Copper.

In the French city of Toulouse, it seems, there are no more copper sous. Instead, there are sous of pasteboard. The one-sou piece is rectangular and of exactly the same size as the two-sou piece. Just how or why is not clear, but the disappearance of the copper coins from the whole region of Toulouse has been complete. Consequently, the necessity of replacing them by this paper, or rather cardboard, money. The paper two-sou notes bear this legend: "Good for one fare." For they are tramway tickets, nothing more, though they pass freely as currency. The one-sou note has printed in the middle of it a picture—a very bad picture, of that—of that rare, precious, marvellous and no longer obtainable object, the copper sou.

News About Town

Straw Hats at half price.—S. A. Rife & Co.

Mr. H. S. Rife of Toronto spent the holiday at his home here.

Nearly every auto in town was at the Port Elgin celebration on Dominion Day.

It was announced from the R. C. Pulpit on Sunday morning that Rev. Father Haller would be away this week. Instructions by the Bishop have been changed since and Father Haller will be here until he goes to his new Parish at Deemerton about the 12th inst.

Donations to I. O. D. E.

Mrs. E. J. Skelton, treasurer of the I. O. D. E. gratefully acknowledges the following donations;—$50 anonymous, $5 from Miss Greenhow, $10.25 from the ladies of the South Line West $10 from Mrs. Wm. Exley of Lagrange, Ill., (formerly Miss Bella McVicar of Walkerton).

Visited Witley Camp

Nursing Sister A. Ferguson writes her father, Chief Ferguson, that she in company with a friend, visited Witley Camp to see her two brothers of the 160th Bruce Battalion. Unfortunately the boys were out on a route march when she arrived at the Camp but she saw a number of the Walkerton boys who were surprised and pleased to see somebody from the old town.

Ill With Meningitis

Walkerton friends learned yesterday with deep regret that Pte. Mike McNab of the 160th Battalion is seriously ill with meningitis. The news came in a cablegram to his father, Mr. Michael McNab, of Chepstow. It stated that he is at the Westcliffe Canadian Eye and Ear Hospital. Mike was connected with the local office of the Merchants Bank before he enlisted. He is a fine manly young fellow and was well liked in the town.

Mrs. Rowland, Mrs. Denton, Mrs Appel, and Miss Rowland motored to Teeswater on Monday and spent the day with friends there.

Baptist Ladies' Aid

The Ladies' Aid of the B. & C. Church held an enjoyable meeting at the home of Mrs. James L. Tolton, Brant, on Thursday afternoon. Tea was served and an excellent time enjoyed by the twenty-five ladies present. The members were driven out in autos from town through the kindness of Messrs James Whitehead, James L. Tolton and Mrs. Thompson. The Ladies Aid is having a tea this afternoon at Mrs. John Whitehead's, Brant.

An Old Walkerton Boy

Mr. David M. Hefferman, an old Walkerton boy, has been holidaying with friends near Ambleside and came in on Monday to revisit the scenes of his boyhood days. While swapping reminiscences with his old friend, Coun. Sandy McCarter he recalled that it was just eighteen years since he had left the old town. Mr. Hefferman conducts a successful grocery and meat business in Detroit. His daughter, Miss Kathleen arrived here Tuesday on a visit to friends.

An Interesting Meeting

The Women's Institute held their annual summer meeting on Mr. N. C. McKay's lawn on June the 27th, when about seventy-five ladies spent a very pleasant and profitable afternoon. Miss Collins of Ancaster, who was present to speak to the women, was both entertaining and educative, the subject of her address being—"Our Institute—Its aims and achievements." She touched on many points—war work, medical inspection of Schools, home improvements, the use of the ballot and other subjects of interest to women. Miss Jean Norrish favored the ladies with a recitation which was much appreciated. This being a picnic meeting, the lunch that was served at its close added a social hour which was very enjoyable after which the ladies joined in singing the National Anthem.

Burger's pure English paris green at 65c. per lb at Paterson Bros.

Alex Weatherhead of Lion's Head was brought to the goal on Monday on a charge of assault. He will appear before Judge Gregg on Saturday.

Death Of John Hunstein

Mr. John Hunstein, one of Mildmay's most highly regarded citizens passed away at 1 o'clock on Saturday morning after four months' illness with heart trouble. Mr. Hunstein had been in business in Mildmay about twenty years, latterly being the senior partner in the firm of Hunstein & Knecht l. He was active in the work of Evangelical Church, being leader of the choir, and for a number of years Superintendent of the Sunday School. He took an active interest in public affairs. Among the offices held by him was that of Secretary of the Public School Board. Mr. Hunstein was a man of sterling character, respected for his ability and integrity and well-liked on account of his genial and unassuming ways. He is survived by his second wife, formerly Miss Lena Dippel of Walkerton, two sons, Peter of New Hamburg and Willis at home, and one daughter Beata at home. Funeral was conducted on Sunday under the auspices of the C. O. F., the service being taken by the Evangelical pastor, Rev. Mr. Burns, assisted by Revs. Knechtel and Litt. The choir of which he was so many years the leader, sang an appropriate hymn at the grave. The funeral was largely attended by friends from all parts of the district.

BORN

BOSS—In Walkerton, on Friday, June 29th, to Mr. and Mrs. J. Elgin Boss a daughter.

GATEMAN—In Brant, on Thursday, June 28th, to Mr. and Mrs. Louis Gateman, a daughter.

LEESON—At Walkerton on Friday June 29th, to Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Leeson a daughter (Margaret Middleton).

DR. BELAND'S CAPTIVITY.

Prominent Canadian is Confined in Narrow German Cell.

C. H. Mellor, an Englishman, has just returned to London from Germany, where he was confined in the next cell to that of Hon. Dr. Belland, former P.M.G. of Canada. He reports the Canadian doctor well and regularly receiving parcels sent, but is depressed by his long confinement. The doctor's cell is about eight by ten feet, and the only furniture is a wire mattress, bed and bedding, and a wooden stool. He is shut in here every night from 7 p.m. till 9 next morning. He is allowed to exercise in the day in a seventy foot corridor and a small prison yard, where a number of criminals are exercising. The cell is clean and comfortably heated, and is well lighted. The prison commandant is kind and considerate. Nevertheless the confinement of the ordinary prison is declared by the returned man to be much harder than in an internment camp, where the latter was previously, and a very harsh measure.

Sir George Perley is informed, and it is hoped by Canadians in London that Premier Borden will make fresh efforts to ameliorate the condition of the doctor's imprisonment, which has been such for over two years.

The returned prisoner states that the food situation in Germany is very bad. A German soldier from the front was astonished to behold sandwiches, white bread and meat, which were in an Englishman's parcel from home, and was delighted to accept one. He thought England was starving. The same soldier declared the Germans in the trenches had meat only twice weekly. They went into battle on a small ration of coffee and black bread and came out again on such ration.

Our Nation's Destiny.

"Canada's Place in World Politics After the War" was the subject of an address by Rev. Dr. Eaton of Madison Avenue Baptist Church, New York, and President of the Canadian Association in that city, at the Empire Club of Toronto recently. The war had revealed three great facts in relation to the history of mankind. The first was the tendency towards democracy — the spiritual unity and equality of men, which he was glad to see had been recognised in Ontario by the extension of equal rights to women. The second was, that freedom was worth all it cost in blood and treasure. The great majority of the people of British breed would rather die than live slaves. The third great principle is that the soul is the man, and the soul is the nation. These are the great mountain peaks of human consciousness revealed by the war. Canada is on the wild and stormy sea of universal relationships. The Dominion has become a world power, and must order its future domestic institutions in the light of these international relations. Henceforth Canadians must be world-citizens, and exert their utmost force to advance the principles of justice, truth, and right. Canada will exert tremendous influence on world politics by means of her connection with the British Empire. You cannot have a nation except through the travail and pain of sacrifice. The pacifist is at fault in believing that power in life can be had without sacrifice. That is where he is at fault.

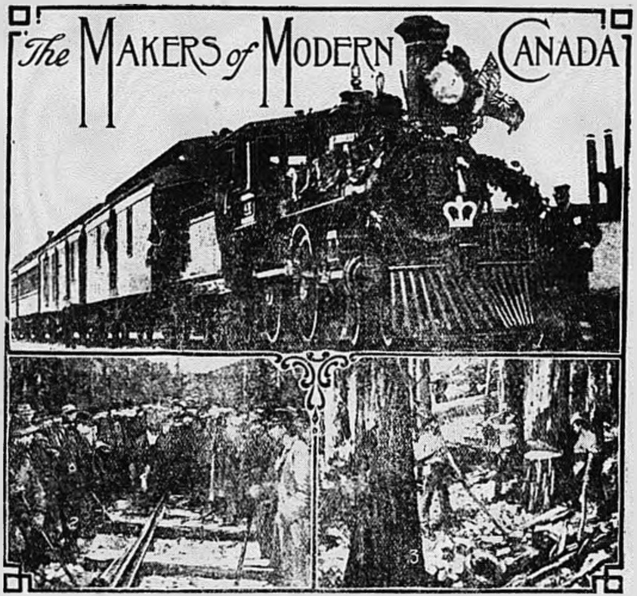
The speaker believed that Canada was as fine a specimen of democracy as the world contains, and the most successful experiment in the federal idea; and her destiny as a world servant in world politics will be along the line of applying the federal principle which she has worked out successfully under the most difficult circumstances for fifty years. Canada must profit by the mistakes of the neighboring republic. It would be an unmitigated calamity to fill this country after the war with alien immigrants. The speaker hoped Canada would have no one but Canadians in it; hence no one but men attuned with the soul of all Canada should be allowed to become part of this nation. Otherwise, when the people think they are a nation they will discover they are a house divided against itself, which cannot stand.

Canada and the Cost of Living.

Figures compiled by the Department of Labor show that Canada is faring better than most nations in the matter of the cost of living. Since the war began the price of food in the Dominion has gone up about 75 per cent. In Britain, however, prices have risen about 87 per cent.; in Germany about 250 per cent.; in Austria, 300 per cent.; in Norway, Denmark, and Sweden about 200 per cent.; in the United States about 90 per cent. According to figures just issued by the United States Labor Bureau, the cost of table necessities in the Republic to the south has increased nearly 50 per cent. within the past six months, which advance is considerably greater than in Canada. Foodstuffs such as meats, potatoes, and other vegetables of common use are higher in price in most American cities to-day than in either Montreal, Winnipeg, or Toronto. The advance in potatoes alone in New York City has been nearly 300 per cent. since the beginning of the year. Lack of production and huge shipments to belligerent countries are given as the causes. Production and still more production would seem to be the only solution of the situation.

Society Women Gardeners.

The wives of four Cabinet Ministers have offered to cultivate garden lots in Ottawa this summer. They are Mrs. Crothers, Mrs. Martin Burrell, Mrs. Roche, and Mrs. Arthur Meighen. Vacant lots have been offered to the Women's Canadian Club, and a roll has been opened of women who will be ready to help cultivate the lots. Thirty well-known society women, headed by the wives of these four Cabinet Ministers, have already signed the list.



(1) First C. P. R. train to Vancouver. (2) Donald A. Smith (Lord Strathcona) driving the last spike of the Canadian Pacific Railway at Craigellachie, B.C., Nov. 7, 1885. (3) Before confederation.

THE Dominion of Canada is celebrating the bi-centenary of Confederation. But what is Confederation? Within the last half century Canada has been confederated at least twice: once when her scattered provinces were united politically to form the Dominion, and again when the builders of the first transcontinental flung a line of steel across the country from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

What was Canada before Confederation? It was a land of vast distances, more or less unmapped, and practically unexplored west of the Great Lakes or east of the Rocky Mountains. When the late Sir Charles Tupper was High Commissioner of Canada in London, just a quarter of a century ago, he delivered an address at St. Petersburg, before the International Railway Congress. He described how Canada, prior to 1867, consisted of three groups of provinces, the Maritime Provinces, Upper and Lower Canada, and British Columbia. These three groups were isolated physically as well as politically.

The Maritime Provinces were separated from "Canada" by a wilderness of forest and flood hundreds of miles wide. Canada, in the west, was separated from British Columbia by a thousand miles of forest, a thousand miles of prairie land, and a chain of mountains five hundred miles wide. Which was the real confederation—the one that brought the representatives of the three groups of provinces together in Parliament, or the three thousand miles of steel rails which alone made the political union worth having?

Confederation was first, last and all the time a problem of transportation. British Columbia agreed to come in if it got a railway from the western limit of "Canada" to the Pacific Coast and it got the Canadian Pacific.

The political confederation of Canada began in 1841, when Ontario and Quebec, which had been separated in 1791, were re-united. On July 1st, 1867, Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick were united as the Dominion of Canada—the first Federal union in the British Empire. The Prairie Provinces were bought for £300,000 in 1870. British Columbia joined the union in 1871, and Prince Edward Island in 1873, and the inclusion of Newfoundland is more probable every day.

Who made modern Canada by making the confederation of 1867? Certainly, no one man. Sir John Macdonald has been styled the Maker of Canada, but, on the other hand, Sir Charles Tupper declared a few years before his death that without Sir George Etienne Cartier there would have been no confederation. At the first interprovincial conference, held at Quebec in 1864, there were thirty-three representatives present, and these have been termed the Fathers of Confederation.

But that was not by any means the origin of the project. As far back as 1690, Sir Francis Nicholson proposed a confederation of all the Anglo-American colonies, and the idea was revived every few years subsequently. To the Hon. A. T. Galt belongs the honor of having first advocated it in Parliament. That was in 1858, and his speech made a tremendous impression all over the country. Confederation was formally adopted as part of the programme of the Cartier Government in 1858, in the following terms:

"The expediency of a federal union of the North American Provinces will be anxiously considered, and communications with the Home Government and the Lower Provinces will be entered into on this subject."

Confederation owes its political success to the men at Ottawa. Its economic success is due to the railway men of Montreal, Mountstephen, Strathcona, R. B. Angus, Van Horne, Shaughnessy, who by linking the steel rails across the continent, linked up the trade between the east and west and annihilated distance. Quebec to-day sells 70% of its manufactures, with the exception of army supplies, west of Winnipeg, and the western prairies provide the wheat for the bread of the east. Moreover, the railway itself has new feeders in its fleets on both Atlantic and Pacific, which link China and Japan through Canada with the ports of Great Britain. Canada is now on the highway of traffic round the world, instead of being merely an outpost of the Empire.

From
THE NEW NORTHWEST PASSAGE.
(A Colloquy on the Canadian Shore.)

Canada: "Here's your Empire route a right of way whose value to compute will tax the prophets."

Britannia: "Links me closer still with all my wandering sons who tame and till the world's wild wastes, and throng each paradise. In tropic zone or under southern skies, see. Halifax, Vancouver, Sydney, set fresh steps upon a path whose promise yet even ourselves have hardly measured. Lo, far China brought within a moon or so of trade-mart London. Here it lies, the way for men and mails and merchandise striking athwart your sea-dividing sweep of land: one iron road from deep to deep—well thought well done."—(From Punch, Oct. 15, [illegible])

Office Stationery

For nice Stationery p ed from new ty
moderate prices. Tr
TELESCOPE

Read the A

Wh not giv boy and opportunit make their study easy effective? Gi them the sa chances to win p motion and suc
as the lad having advantage of

WEBSTER'
NEW INTERNATIONA
Dictionary in his home. This creation answers with final aut ity all kinds of puzzling ques in history, geography, biograp spelling, pronunciation, sports, and sciences.
400 000 Vocabulary Terms. 2700 P
Over 6000 Illustrations. Colored P
The only dictionary with the Divided P
The type matter is equivalent to of a 15-volume encyclopedia.
More Scholarly, Accurate, Conven and Authoritative than any other ish Dictionar

REG
PA
EDIT
WRITE for specimen pages,
illustrations, etc.
FREE, a set of Pocket
Maps if you name th
paper.
G. & C. MERRIAM CO.
SPRINGFIELD, MA

GRAY HAIR
Dr. Tremain's Natural Hair Resto used as directed, is guaranteed to resto hair to its natural color or money refun sitively not a dye and non-injurious post-paid. Write Tremain Supply
Toronto, Ontario.
On Sale in Walkerton at H. ter's Drug Store.

Fall Term From Aug
ELLIOTT
Business Coll
Yonge and Charles Sts.,
Is unquestionably one of best Commercial Schools.
mand for our graduates is fa our supply. Write for our Cata
W. J. Elliott, Pri

Fall Term
From, Sept. 4
CENTRAL
Business Coll
STRATFORD, ONT.
COMMERCIAL, SHORTHAN
TELEGRAPHY DEPARTME
We have thorough courses, exp
enced instructors and we place
Graduates in positions. Dem upon us for trained help is m times the number graduating.
our free catalogue.
D. A. McLACHLA
PRINCIPAL

WE PHOTOGRAPH MEN
AS MEN ARE
It's a business matter and th no fuss or bother. Your fa friends and business ass want your portrait.
FRASER STUD

HOMESEEKER
EXCURSION

MAY 8th TO OCTOBER 30th
Every
TUESDAY
"ALL RAIL" - also by
THURSDAY'S STEAMER
"Great Lakes Routes"
(Season Navigation)
Your Future Is In the West
The fertile prairies have put Western Canada on the map. There are still thousands of acres waiting for the man who wants a home and prosperity. Take advantage of Low Rates and travel via
Canadian Pacific
W. B. Howard, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, Ont.

[illegible]GHBORING VILLAGES & COUNTRYSIDE

[illegible]s of the Week Collected by a Staff of Live Correspondents

[illegible]ANT AVENUE

[illegible]he sports took in the days [illegible]ly 1st, at Port Elgin and [illegible]me next day.

[illegible] Mrs. Anstett and Miss Tillie [illegible] Kreetch of Hanover spent [illegible] Day with Jos. Ernst and [illegible]s. The town people enjoy [illegible]ves spending their holidays [illegible]arms.

[illegible]. Zettler is building another [illegible] pig-stable to shelter some [illegible]mense number of hogs from [illegible]and heat. Jos is some stock-[illegible]

[illegible]nual School picnic was held [illegible] Wm. Riley's grove again as [illegible]d much credit is due to Miss [illegible] teacher, for trying to make [illegible]ccess. She was well liked [illegible]pils and has been engaged [illegible]next school term.

[illegible]s Hyslop and his gang of [illegible]ey putting up a cement [illegible] Angus Campbell as he is [illegible]ddition to his barn this [illegible]

[illegible] drilling a well on Mr. Pete [illegible] farm recently Mr. Harry [illegible] met with a very painful acci[illegible]. While handling a charge of dy[illegible]nite which he was about to drop into the sunken well to blow up a huge rock some 100 feet deep it exploded and hurt seriously. He lies in a critical condition in the Hospital at present. Everybody wishes Harry a speedy recovery and better luck next time.

That unexpected heavy downpour of rain on Sunday 2 to 6 a. m. flooded fields worse and more quickly than many a big spring flood. It sure washed out some hollows through the fields, and also tore out many culverts and bridges.

Mr. Francis Frank who is working at Knechtel's factory in town spent Sunday and over the holiday at his home here.

Some of the folks of this neighbourhood took in the Carrick Camp Meetings on Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Herb Chesney spent last Sunday at his home at Dunkeld.

Miss Emma Kirschner of near Riversdale is working for Mr. John Hugh[illegible]

[illegible]or has it going that one of our [illegible] went to a barber shop to get a [illegible]d during the barbers performance [illegible] "lad" fell asleep some [illegible]ppenings, eh. Who was he?

MILDMAY

[illegible]H. Schnurr's father, Mr. [illegible]f Linwood and Miss [illegible]mont, spent the [illegible] of the latter's [illegible]ure.

[illegible]am played a [illegible]ly 2nd at [illegible]ated the [illegible] been teac[illegible] went to Gu[illegible]tend the summer[illegible]t the Ontario Agric[illegible]

Mr. John Kauf[illegible] in his Ford car to the loca[illegible]d has secured a 1917 touring c[illegible]

Mildmay and Neustadt played a league match in the latter place on Friday evening last week. The [illegible]unds were very greasy and wet and [illegible] hardly fit to play on. Although [illegible]dt whitewashed our boys on [illegible] to the tune of 15—0 still in [illegible]t we kept their team from [illegible]. The score was a tie 7—7. [illegible]lvin pitched and succeeded in [illegible] the Neustadt batters down to [illegible]

[illegible]e A. Eedy, editor of the [illegible]as a visitor in town last [illegible]

[illegible] Evangelical camp meet[illegible] during the past week [illegible]ay evening June 27 un[illegible]ning July 3. As the [illegible]element a good part of [illegible]owd was not as large as [illegible] services througtout [illegible]ended and good order [illegible]all times. Bishop Brey[illegible]s to come to the services [illegible]ick when he reached Lou[illegible] to return home to Read[illegible] large number of ministers [illegible]nt to conduct the services.

[illegible]t deal of damage was done in [illegible]ality by the the heavy rain [illegible] Sunday morning.

[illegible] William Diebel of Kincardine spent a few days at his home here last week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Wendt of Wroxeter visited at Mr. Chas. Wendt's on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Hauck and Mrs. Ellerg of Dashwood attended the camp meeting services here last week.

Dr. Milton Bechtel and wife and family of Elmira are spending a few days at Mr. Edward Kalbfleich's.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Miller of Kitchener renewed old friendships here Sunday and Monday while attending the camp meeting services.

HANOVER

Mr. John W. Freeborn has opened a law office in Hanover. He is a Bruce County boy and an honor graduate of Osgoode Hall.

The marriage of Miss Daisy Hetrich of Elmira to Mr. Simon Gingrich of Hanover took place on June 20th at Elmira.

Messrs. Carl Muter and I. Young arrived back from Camp Borden, they having received their honorable discharge.

Mr. William Wedow passed away at his home on lot 34, Con. 5, Brant, on June 22nd at the age of 81 years, 5 months and 14 days.

Messrs. H. H. Engel, M. J. Muter and George Reichen, representing the Hanover Industrial Association, returned home from a prospecting tour in quest of new industries. Several good prospects are in view. An effort is being made to secure an institution to provide employment for girls in Hanover.

FORMOSA

JUN. IV. TO SEN IV.

Honours—Hedwig Beninger, Irene Hihn.

Pass—Gertrude Bildstein, Rosalia Weiler, Leander Dentinger, Eleanora Waechter, Magnus Fedy, Lawrence Tiede.

SEN. III. TO JUN. IV.

Honours—Marie Schnurr, Olivia Kraemer, Hildegard Strauss, Richard Kuntz, Rupert Weishar.

Pass—Willie Waechter, Clarence Hauck, Lauretta Gutscher, Hilaria Zettel, Laura Schefter, Nettie Beninger, Johanna Fedy, Joseph Waechter, Clara Zimmer, Alice Weiler.

JR. III. TO SEN. III.

Honours—Elizabeth Massel, Marie Dentinger, Clara Oberle.

Pass—Georgina Kuntz, Leo Oberle, Magdalena Duerrer, Anthony Brick, Arthur Noll, Frank Schnurr, Mary Weiss, Andrew Kuntz, Norman Albrecht, Alfred Fischer, Leonard Vogt, Johanna Hihn.

SEN. II. TO JUN. III.

Honours—William Massel, Margaret Kraemer, Matrona Brick, Mildred Bildstein, Henrietta Zettel, Elwira Montag, Edwin Hauck, Ludwina Kuntz, Gertrude Zimmer, Mathilda Gutscher, Laura Beninger, Clarence Beninger, Clara Lehmann, Christian Rich, Norman Strauss.

Pass—Lucy Beingessner, Alfred Rettinger, Rosetta Rettinger, Emil Meyer.

JR. II. TO SEN. II.

Honours—Leonard Oberle, Edwina Weiss, Vera Noll, Henry Oppermann.

Pass—Cornelius Obermeyer, Marianne Albrecht, Otto Ditner, Julitta Weiler, Florence Morack, Daniel Weiss, William Fahrer, Margaret Beninger, Cornelius Meyer, John Schnitzler, Loretta Duerrer, Mathilda Rettinger, Patrick Altmann.

SEN. I. TO JUN. II.

Emelia Beninger, Alphonse Schill, Malinda Schnurr, Mary Fischer, Clara Heinz, Marie McCue, Elmer Schefter, Isidore Schnurr, Bernolda Bruder, Martha Tiede, Arthur Hihn, Gerald Weishar, Loretta Oppermann, Benno Dentinger, Jerome Gutscher, Bertha Noll, Irene Vogt.

JR. I. TO SEN. I.

Edward Schnurr, Henry Strauss, Henry Kuntz, Edwin Rettinger, Rosie Schill, Leonard Zettel, Marie Morack, Leo Weber, Wilfred Brick, Arthur Gutscher, Gordon Vogt, Joseph Kraemer, Rosie Duerrer, Leonard Beninger, Robert Weiler, Frank Beninger, Michael Weiler, George Fahrer, Stanley Beninger, Ralph Ditner, Reuben Schumacher.

CHEPSTOW

Miss V. Wimmer, assistant at the school, is spending the vacation at her home in Hespeler.

Among those who spent the holiday here were, Lydia Massel and Geo. Oehring of Toronto, Clara Snitzig of Kitchener, Edgar Massel of Oshawa, and Laura Wagner of Chesley.

Word reached Mr. and Mrs. M. McNab from Militia Headquarters on Tuesday morning, of the serious illness of their son Sergt. M. McNab at Witley Camp, Eng. Mike's many friends here will wish him a speedy recovery.

A few car-loads of our youth and beauty motored to Port Elgin and attended the Dominion Day Celebration on Monday.

The death occurred on Wednesday last, after a brief illness, of Andrew, 12 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Diebold. Deceased who was an exceptionally bright lad suffered from an affection of the brain and as a last resort to save his life an operation was performed on Tuesday evening from which the patient only temporarily rallied. The funeral to the R. C. cemetary on Friday morning was largely attended, his school-mates from the local school attending in a body. The bereaved parents have the sympathy of the community at large.

BRANT

S. S. NO. 4

Jr. IV. to Sr. IV.

Honours—Ralph Metcalfe.

Pass—Eva Tanner, Lola Tanner.

Sr. III.

Belva Tanner, Ruth Krueger, Lillian Litt, Minnie Schwandt, Viola Lippert.

Jr. III.

Jean Lowe, Wilfred Keip, Morgan Woods.

Sr. II.

Grace Kirstine, Allen Tanner, Elmer Woods, Esther Schwandt, Edith Smith, Beulah Woods, Oscar Tanner, Earl Litt.

Jr. II.

Clinton Lippert, Burns Kirstine.

Sr. I.

John Allardyce, Hugh Kirstine, Florence Ruhl.

Sr. Pr.

Josephine Litt, Joseph Litt, Lawrence Keip, Roy Tanner.

Jr. Pr.

Dorothy Tanner, Elmer Fritz, Gordon Tanner, Madeline Lippert, Howard McKelvy.

Jean Hamilton,
Teacher.

PINKERTON

Mr. R. L. Garland of the G. T. R. Staff, Palmerston, spent Sunday at his home here.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Pitcher, Mr. and Mrs. H. Pitcher and Mr. E. Smith of Toronto motored up to Adam Reid's on Sunday.

School closed on Friday for the summer vacation and Miss Diehl returned to her home in Paisley. She has been engaged as teacher for the next term.

Mr. Walter Birrell spent a few days at his home here.

Extensive grading has been done on some of the roads in the vicinity of Pinkerton and parts of this is now being gravelled.

Mrs. G. W. Chick is visiting friends in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Moffat of Pinkerton announce the engagement of their daughter, Annie J., to Mr. Jas. H. Brown, son of the late Robt. and Mrs. Brown of Grand Valley, the marriage to take place about the middle of July.

OTTER CREEK

We remembered the Johnstown flood on Sunday morning when bridges and fences were washed away. One young man had to take off his shoes and stockings and wade around in the water to get out fence rails which were swimming around the road, in order that he could get through with his team to church.

Mrs. Samuel Hesenauer and son and daughter of Kitchener are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dippel.

S. S. No. 3, had a very enjoyable pic nic on Saturday afternoon. The weather was fine and there was a large crowd and good programme. After the programme the scholars presented their teacher, Miss H. Bierwirth, with a handsome Toilet set which showed the high respect in which they held their teacher.

Mr. and Mrs. George Pfohl of Maple Hill were visiting relatives here on Friday.

Miss Mildred Pfohl left for Guelph on Monday morning.

Mr. Henry Wolfe was operated on in the Bruce County Hospital for hernia.

CARGILL

Dr. Watson of Listowel was in the burg on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Mason and Mr. and Mrs. Gray and children of Toronto motored up to Dr. Bricker's on Saturday and spent the holidays here.

Mrs. Vanslckle of Galt spent the holiday with her sister, Mrs. M. Bell.

Miss Loretta Kenna who has been milliner in Cameron's store for the past season left for her home in Ayton on Tuesday.

Miss Verna Loughleen and Mr. Dunn of Woodstock spent the holiday at the former's home here.

Mr. James Alexander of the Royal Bank Staff Elmwood, spent Sunday at his home here.

Miss Bella Gowanlock of Bracebridge is visiting her sister, Mrs. E. A. Ruttle.

Miss Myrtle Elder is spending two weeks with relatives in Goderich.

Miss Agnes Keyes of Chesley visited at her home on Monday.

Miss Francis Newman spent the holiday at her home in Owen Sound.

Mrs. and Misses Emma and Eva Adair spent the week-end with Mrs. Ben Neal.

The local bowling tournament held here on Monday was a decided success 10 rinks entered the competition. Two prizes were given Trophy and Consolation. The winning rinks were composed of the following players;

Trophy	Consolation
Jas. Napper	And. Anderson
Syl. Parker	Wm. Knox
Phil. Sparling	E. A. Ruttle
R. Loughleen, skip	C. W. Keeling, skip

The day was ideal and the greens in good shape. The receipts amounted to about $100 and the Red Cross Society are grateful for the contribution to their funds.

SCHOOL REPORT

ROOM II.

Jr. IV.—Sr. IV.—Honours—J. Clancy W. Sparling, P. Hettrick, A. Thompson.

Pass—L. Grainger, D. Martin.

Sr. III.—Jr. IV.—Honours—E. Reaburn.

Pass—R. Mahoney, L. Brown, C. Powers.

Jr. III —Sr. Sr. III.—Honours— G. Meyer, J. Martin, F. Clancy.

Pass—A. Hood, H. Thompson, C. Pegelo, M. Hood, J. Powers.

Sr. II.—Jr. III. — Honours—W. Streeter, E. Reaburn, W. Bester.

Pass—M. Mawhinney, M. Scharbach, M. Kyle, M. Schnett, L. Hopf, (failed in arithmatic only)—W. Wurn J. Young, J. Powers.

E. A. Ruttle,
Principal

ROOM I.

Jr. II.—Sr. II.—Honours—J. Scharbach, M. Clancy, H. Hardaker, W. Pegelo, A. Meyer.

Pass—F. Mahoney, P. Elder, I. Crawford, T. Baillie, D. Streeter, M. Grainger.

Sr. I.—Jr. II.—Honours—M. Schnett M. Mawhinney, G. Kyle, F. Hanson.

Pass—W. Reaburn, B. Hood.

Jr. I.—Sr. I.—Honours—M. Hardaker.

Pass—S. Martin, R. Mawhinney, W. Schnett, W. Young.

Sr. Pr.—Jr. I.—Honours—A. Hetzler

Primary—Jr. Pr.—Honours—F. Sharbach, E. Pegelo, L. Crawford.

Pass—R. Clark, N. Bester.

G. M. Keeling,
Teacher.

GREENOCK TP. COUNCIL

Valad's Hotel, Riversdale, June 25 1917

Council met as per adjournment, all the members present, the Reeve in the chair.

The minutes of last meeting and of Court of Revision were read and adopted.

The following accounts were presented for payment and ordered paid.

The Municipal World, suppli[illegible] for Clerk .... $	7 45
J. J. Cassidy, 5 cement tile ...	12 50
Jos Lippert, 170½ yds gravel per Young Cont. Con. 6	17 05
Jos. Freiberger drawing tile and putting in same S. L. 5	4 50
Massey Harris Co., 1 pick plow	32 00
J. C. Gibson, Paisley town line account	21 50
Wm. Rankin, 11½ days with 2 teams on grader	57 50
Jos. Cunningham, postage for Clerk	5 00
D. Phelan, Council Meetings $20 50, com. work $27 70, postage $1 67, Telephone 85c	50 72
Jas. D. Campbell council meetings $20 50, com. work $9 40	29 90
Thos. Symon council meetings $21 70, com. work 1 50	23 20
Thos. Sawyer, council meetings $22 20, com. work $11 40....	36 70
George W. Gilchrist, council meetings $22 70, com. work $7 00..........	29 70
M. M. Schurter, ½ year salary $50 00, reports to B. of Ind $3 00	53 00
Thos. H. Purdy, ½ year salary $100 00, express 75c. Fire reports $1 50..........	102 25
Mrs. P. Valad, Room for council meeting..........	1 00
Jos. Hehn, 16½ days operating grader at $2.50 per day	41 25
I. Stanley, board of Jos. Hehn	12 00

A Communication from Laura Cunningham was read asking for a grant to help the Glamis Red Cross Workers. Laid over to next meeting.

Symon–Sawyer That this Council grant the sum of $25 00 to be spent on Con. 2 and 3 opposite lot [illegible] and a sum of $20 00 on S L 25 Con 2—Carried.

Campbell–Symon–That G. W. Gilchrist and F. Sawyer be a committee to have bridge built on S L 10, Con. 18 and also one on Con. 11 opposite lot 7—Carried.

Sawyer–Campbell–That this council grant the sum of $20 00 to be spent by T. Symon in gravelling road.

Symon–Sawyer–That the Clerk be instructed to advertise for tenders for the construction of the Kaake Drain—Carried.

Sawyer–Campbell–That this council do now adjourn to meet at [illegible] on Monday, the 20th day of August for the purpose of levying rates, to open tenders for the construction of the Kaake Drain and for general business—Carried.

Thos. H. Purdy,
Clerk.

ART CLOTHES
COOK BROS. & ALLEN LIMITED

THERE'S A STYLE FOR EVERY ONE IN OUR SPRING CLOTHING DISPLAY

The diversity of styles in our Spring displays has but one object—to provide the proper style for every man.

It's an advantage that this store has developed to a remarkable degree—the styles we're featuring number rather a vast total.

ART CLOTHES tailored perfectly to your individual measure, in any of a variety of new Spring models, of a selection from hundreds of fine durable fabrics, are moderately priced—surprisingly so.

GOLD DUST
digs deep after germs

Gold Dust not only cleans but sterilizes.

Soap merely washes over the surface, leaving a greasy film behind it.

Gold Dust "goes to the bottom," and insures absolute purity, and sanitary safety. Why not sanatize your home, as well as clean it?

Soap needs muscle help; Gold Dust does all the hard part of the task without your assistance.

Gold Dust is a good, honest, vegetable-oil soap, to which are added other purifying materials in just the right proportions to cleanse easily, vigorously, and without harm to fabric, utensils or hand.

Gold Dust is sold in 5c size and large packages. The large package means greater economy.

"Let the GOLD DUST TWINS do your work"

Made by THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY, LIMITED, Montreal
Makers of Fairy Soap (the oval cake)

LOCAL NEWS ON EVERY PAGE

NOTED MUSICIAN OF MONTREAL

Advises The Use Of "FRUIT-A-TIVES", The Famous Fruit Medicine.

MR. ROSENBURG

589 Casgrain St., Montreal.
April 20th, 1915.

"In my opinion, no other medicine in the world is so curative for Constipation and Indigestion as "Fruit-a-tives". I was a sufferer from these complaints for five years, and my sedentary occupation, Music, brought about a kind of Intestinal Paralysis—with nasty Headaches, belching gas, drowsiness after eating, and Pain in the Back. I tried pills and medicines of physicians, but nothing helped me. Then I was induced to try "Fruit-a-tives", and now for six months I have been entirely well. I advise any one who suffers from that horrible trouble—Chronic Constipation with the resultant indigestion, to try "Fruit-a-tives", and you will be agreeably surprised at the great benefit you will receive". A. ROSENBURG.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

INSURANCE & REAL ESTATE

Fire, Life, Accident & Health, Plate Glass, and Guarantee Insurance in the best of Companies.

Real Estate—Several desirable residential properties for sale.

Money to Loan, Conveyancing and General Agency. Splendid Mortgage Loan Company Debentures for investment yielding good interest.

GEO. D. McKAY
Office Over Bell Telephone Agency
PHONE NO. - 179

INSURANCE
FIRE, LIFE,
ACCIDENT,
AUTOMOBILE,
GUARANTEE.
MONEY to LOAN
REAL ESTATE

Town and Farm Property for sale. See my list before making a purchase

OCEAN and RAIL
TICKETS TO ANY PART OF THE WORLD.

I represent the Canadian Northern Railway and all ocean steamship companies — English, American and Italian.

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES

T. E. ATTWOOD
GENERAL AGENT
Walkerton - Ontario

DENTAL

W. S. HALLADAY, L. D. S. D. D. S.
Dentist. Successor to Dr. Coram. Modern methods employed in all dental operations. Special attention to crown, bridge and inlay work. Three doors east of post office. Visits Cargill 1st and 3rd Thursday afternoon of each month.

C.L. GRANT, D.D.S., L.D.S
Graduate of Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario.
Dr. Lount's old stand.
Wisser Block - Walkerton

MEDICAL

DR. BROWN
Diseases of the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat, Neustadt, Ont. Will be at the Queen's Hotel, Walkerton, 1st Friday in each month from 1 to 4 p.m.

W. A. HALL, B.A., M.D., C.M.
Honor Graduate in Arts and Medicine at Queen's University. Member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons. Office and residence on corner of Colborne and Cayley Streets.

BRUCE'S GOOD ROADS

1. The Durham Road from the easterly limit of the Town of Kincardine through the Villages of Bervie, Kinloss, Riversdale and Enniskillen to the westerly limits of the Town of Walkerton, and from the easterly limits of the Town of Walkerton to the easterly limits of the County of Bruce.

2. The Saugeen or Goderich Road, commencing at its juncture with the boundary of the Counties of Huron and Bruce, thence north to the boundary of the Town of Kincardine; and commencing at the northerly limits of the Town of Kincardine, thence north to the southerly limits of the Village of Tiverton; commencing at its juncture with the boundary road of the Townships of Kincardine and Bruce about one mile east of Tiverton, thence northerly to the southerly boundary of the Village of Port Elgin, commencing at the northerly limits of the Village of Port Elgin, thence north to the Saugeen River, crossing same over Denny's Bridge, thence easterly along the north gravel road to the County boundary.

3. The Elora Road from the southerly limit of the Town of Southampton to the southerly limit of the County, excepting the portion in the Village of Paisley.

4. The boundary of the Counties of Huron and Bruce from the Goderich Road near Amberley to the end of said road at Whitechurch.

5. The road running from the northerly limits of the Village of Lucknow through the Villages of Holyrood and Kinlough to the Durham Road, Kinloss.

6. The Eighth Concession of the Township of Huron from the Saugeen or Goderich Road at Pine River to the Lucknow-Kinloss gravel road at Holyrood.

7. The fifteenth sideroad of the Township of Huron from its junction with the boundary road of the Counties of Huron and Bruce to the 12th concession of the said Township of Huron.

8. The fifteenth sideroad of the Township of Amabel, commencing at the boundary of the Townships of Arran and Amabel, thence north to the fourteenth concession of the Township of Amabel, thence north-east across the fiftieth concession of the Diagonal Survey to Central Diagonal Road, thence southeasterly one-quarter of a mile, thence north-easterly to the seventeenth concession of Amabel, thence easterly to the fifth sideroad of Amabel, thence north on said sideroad to the twenty-first concession of Amabel, thence easterly along said concession to the boundary of the Town of Wiarton. Thence from the northerly limits of the Town of Wiarton through the Township of Amabel to the boundary line of Amabel and Albemarle, thence easterly to Colpoy's Bay, thence following the eastern stage route to the limits of the Village of Lions Head.

9. The tenth concession of the Twp. of Amabel from its junction with the fifteenth sideroad of Amabel to the limits of the Village of Hepworth.

10. The 20th sideroad of Elderslie, commencing at its junction with the north gravel road near Allenford, thence south through Tara to the boundary between Arran and Elderslie, thence through Elderslie to the boundary between Elderslie and Brant, thence west on said boundary line three and three-quarters miles to the fifteenth sideroad of the Township of Brant, thence south on said sideroad to the junction of said sideroad and the Durham Road, excepting portions in Tara and Chesley.

11. The fourth concession of Elderslie from its junction with the thirtieth sideroad of Elderslie west to Concession "B" of said Township, thence along said concession to Paisley.

12. The ninth concession of the Township of Arran from the easterly limits of Tara Village to its junction with the boundary of the Counties of Bruce and Grey.

13. The fifth sideroad of the Township of Greenock from its junction with the Durham Road to the limits of the Village of Paisley.

14 The boundary between the Townships of Kinloss and Greenock and the boundary between the Townships of Kincardine and Greenock from the Durham Road to Glamis, thence along the boundary between the Townships of Bruce and Greenock to the limits of the Village of Paisley.

15. The boundary of the Townships of Bruce and Kincardine from the easterly limit of the Village of Tiverton to the twelfth concession of the Township of Greenock, thence along said twelfth concession to its junction with the Elora Road, passing through Pinkerton and Eden Grove.

16. The twenty-fifth sideroad of the Township of Kinloss from its junction with the boundary between the Counties of Huron and Bruce north to the fourth concession of said Twp., thence east on said fourth concession one and one-quarter miles to the thirtieth sideroad of Kinloss, thence north along said thirtieth sideroad to the sixth concession of the Township of Culross, thence along said sixth concession to the limits of the Village of Teeswater.

17. The Port Elgin and Tara Road from the limits of Port Elgin through Burgoyne, Arkwright, Invermay, to the thirtieth sideroad of the Township of Arran.

18. The fifteenth sideroad of the Twp. of Culross from the Durham Road to the limits of Teeswater, thence three and three-quarter miles to the boundary of the Counties of Bruce and Huron.

19. The twentieth sideroad of the Township of Carrick from the southern limits of the Town of Walkerton to the Village of Mildmay, and the sixth concession of the Township of Carrick from its junction with the Elora Road to the boundary of the Townships of Carrick and Culross, thence on the sixth concession of said Township of Culross to the limits of the Village of Teeswater.

20. The 9th concession of Tp. of Bruce from Lovat west to the Goderich Road.

PUBLIC SCHOOL EXAMS

List of Successful Pupils who will be Advanced to a Higher Form After Holidays

JR. IV TO SR. IV.

Total mark 700, Honours 525, Pass 450.

Honours—E. Searle, 571, M. Godwin 565, M. Lumley 547, H. Wilson 543, B. Hunter 539, M. Fetteplace 536.

Pass—J. Ermel 523, M. Bell 520, C. Johnston 516, M. McGregor 493, F. Crawford 482, C. Kerney 480, V. Anderson 458, K. Sutton 450, A. Reichenbach 413.

H. Willoughby,
Principal.

GRADE VI. to GRADE VII.

Honours — Irene Harrison, Alma Searle, Elmer Kolpin, Jack Knepflar.

Pass—Edwin Faust, Eric Ramsey, Mary Perdue, Eddie Fennell, Madaleen Hyslop, Doris Van Horne, Ross Van Horne, Earle Forsythe.

Promoted — Francis Nutting, Marie Schwindt, Clifford Yates, Guy Ramsey, Howard Craig, Ida Glintz.

J. Stead

GRADE V TO GRADE VI.

Honors—Waldon Forsythe, Franklin Bush, Morris McCarter, Ila Moore Jack Van Horne.

Pass—Charlie Wallace, Jack McConnell, Vinie Denny, Harry Myles, Grace George, Ethel Riley, Delbert Anderson, Dorothea Crawford, Kathleen Perdue, Willie Goode, Elden Yates, Wallace Jerome, Arthur Royce.

M. Ross.

GRADE IV TO GRADE V.

Honors—R. Hampson, J. Cotterman, N. McCartney, W. Hehn, R. Gowanlock E. Singer, D. Gowanlock, N. Forsythe, W. Hunt, W. Hartman.

Pass—R. Johnston, G. Dietsche, D. McNeill, A. Reichenbach, E. Webber

Promoted—H. Paull, A. Taggart, V. Trussler, N. Loos.

Agnes Warren.

GRADE III. TO GRADE IV.

Honours—Eldridge Truax.

Pass—Keith Perdue, Arthur Buehlow, Kathleen Fortune, Lilian Mortimer, Sanford Hehn, James Hiscox, Herbert Moore, Verna Bolden, Joe Webber, Edna Abel, O. Fisk, A. Beck, A. Frey, N. Whitehead, G. Thompson, C. Paull.

To Jr. II.—Honours - Ruth Hunter, Viola Bell, Margaret Shaw, Mildred Appel, Howard Bush, Emil Dietsche.

Pass—Lloyd Searle, Nora Hanna, Harvey Ernest, Max Player, Stewart Channing, Stuart Fennell.

A. Halladay,
Teacher.

GRADE II TO GRADE III.

Elizabeth Taylor, Merle Beemer, Archie Reichenbach, Margaret Jones, Dorothy Lancaster, Sheldon Anderson, Annie Kerney, Mabel Faust, Aileen Craig, Joe Godwin, Price McConnell, Eleanor Watts, Isaac Abell, Melville Pletsch, Gretchen Schwindt, Maud Hunt, Penny Webb, Jean George, Viola Hilker, Stanley Fields.

From Primer to First Book—Gladys Hilker, Frank Hartman, Ruth Pye, Helen Royce, Florence McCarter, Emma Leake, Clarence Buehlow, Edith Long, Marian Graham, Allie Leake, George McGregor, Billy Johnston, Jack Slamon, Walter Monk.

W. Thompson,
Teacher.

GRADE I. to GRADE II.

Donovan Hynes, Mildred Silver, Dorothy Ernest, Ernest Nutting, Percy Nutting, Hubert Dietz, Marjorie Bell, Paul George, Lola Hana, Girda Bowlby, Henry Taylor, Helen Reichenbach, Peter Van Horne, Milton Ramsey, Jack McDougall, Arthur Whitehead, Arthur Bolden, Lennox Winters, Milne Harrison, Lenore Gowanlock.

A. D. Thompson.

News About Town

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Fulton and Mr. and Mrs. Elder, of Toronto were here on a few days' visit with friends in town.

A Brilliant Student

Miss Edna Stead, a young granddaughter of Mrs. Stead of Walkerton, has taken a brilliant standing in the graduation examinations at Erie High School, Erie, Pa. It is a very large school with 257 successful candidates in the graduating class. Miss Stead was one of five pupils out of the 257 who headed the list, graduating "with distinction."

Presents For Retiring Teacher

When Miss Eleanor McGarity sent in her resignation to her School Trustees recently, the people of the section (near Durham) showed their appreciation of her services to the children and to the community the past two years by turning out in a body at the school last Thursday afternoon, and giving the retiring teacher, two beautiful presents, a handsome club bag, and a white ivory clothes brush to complete her set. Miss McGarity has been a most popular teacher and during the last year the women's Red Cross Association which she organized in the section has gone to work with a will, in a way that has been an inspiration and example to surrounding communities.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson II.—Third Quarter, For July 8, 1917.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, II Chron. xxviii, 1-27—Memory Verses, 1, 2—Golden Text, Heb. xi, 6—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

This is a hard lesson about a desperately bad man, one of the very worst of the kings of Judah, of whom it is said, "This is that king Ahaz" (verse 22). Manasseh may have been worse in some respects, but he repented, while of this man we read of no repentance. There were always some who feared God, a Godly remnant, and the sixteen years of this man's reign must have been a heartbreaking time for them, but no doubt a time of humiliation and unceasing prayer to God, and in due time deliverance came, as we shall see in our next lesson.

Days of trial are always times of faith and patience on the part of God's people, and the terrible days still before us, of which we are having already some foretastes, will give great opportunity for the manifestation of such graces (Heb. vi, 12, 15; Rev. xiii, 10). All life's story as well as all the Bible story is either a manifestation of God or the devil, and so it will be until a king shall reign in righteousness and peace and the devil be shut up in the pit for a thousand years. It is written of Ahaz that he did not right in the sight of the Lord, but walked in the ways of the kings of Israel, and they, without exception, walked in the steps of Jeroboam, son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin.

What Ahaz did that was wrong and desperately sinful is quite fully recorded in our lesson chapter and in II Kings xvi. He burned incense to other gods not only in Jerusalem, but in all the cities of Judah and on the hills and under every green tree. He burned his children in the fire like the heathen whom the Lord had cast out. He leaned on the king of Assyria and worshiped the gods of the kings of Syria. He had an altar made like one he saw in Damascus and put it in place of the brazen altar of the Lord and offered sacrifices upon it. He took the great laver from off the brazen oxen which supported it and set it on a pavement of stones. He cut in pieces the vessels of the house of God and shut up the doors of the house of the Lord. It seemed as if he could not do enough to show his hatred of God and His commandments. Yet he had a good father, Jotham, who became mighty because he prepared his ways before the Lord his God (xxvii, 6), and he had a good son, as we shall see in our next lesson.

These things are a great perplexity, just as similar things are in our own times. But there is rest in the Lord, and in Him alone, and in the fact that He cannot fail nor be discouraged (Isa. xlii, 4). The Lord brought Judah low because of Ahaz and because they had forgotten the Lord God of their fathers (verses 6, 19), but they did not repent nor turn to Him again. Isaiah and Micah were the Lord's messengers in those days, as we learn from the first verse of each of these prophecies, and the Lord sent Isaiah with a special message to Ahaz, telling him that if he would turn to the Lord the purpose of the Syrians against him would not stand nor come to pass and that he might be quiet and not be afraid of them, but that if he would not believe he would not be established. On that occasion Isaiah was to take with him his son, Shearjashub, whose name signifies the remnant shall return, for, as we said earlier in this lesson, there is always a godly remnant, and it seemed like saying to Ahaz that if he would not turn to the Lord the remnant would (Isa. vii, 1-9).

It was to this same Ahaz the Lord said, "Ask thee a sign of the Lord thy God; ask it either in the depth or in the height above," and Ahaz said, "I will not ask; neither will I tempt the Lord (Isa. vii, 10-12). He had provoked the Lord seemingly beyond all endurance, yet hear him say, I will not tempt the Lord. If he meant to say, I will not ask the Lord for anything nor have anything to do with Him, we could understand him better, for that is what his actions were saying and perhaps what he meant to say. Now hear this wonderful message from the Lord to such a man representing the house of David and at such a time: "The Lord Himself shall give you a sign. Behold, a virgin shall conceive and bear a son and shall call His name Immanuel" (Isa. vii, 13, 14). We cannot but think of the first assurance of the great deliverer being made to the devil himself (Gen. iii, 14, 15), and we know that when the devil shall come to the time of his very worst opposition to and defiance of God then shall He who in the fullness of time was really born of a virgin come in His glory to overthrow all His enemies and set up His kingdom.

When the devil incarnate, the coming antichrist, shall have gathered the kings of the earth and their armies against Him who is coming on the white horse, the Lamb shall overcome them, for He is King of kings and Lord of lords (Rev. xvii, 14; xix, 19). That will be the morning of the Sun of Righteousness of which David spake in his last words, but there will be no morning for such as Ahaz, who have no use for God or His word (II Sam. xxiii, 3-5; Isa. viii, 20, R. V.). The glorious assurances of Isaiah ix and xi and xii surely cry aloud to us.

FARMS FOR VETERANS

LORD SHAUGHNESSY TO AID "BACK TO THE LAND."

Some Details of the Thousand Ready-made Homes for the Soldiers Who Will Undertake to Cultivate the Land and Make Prosperous Communities of Overseas Men.

WHAT is to become of the soldiers after the European war? What will be the nature of the work of readjustment in the many war-ridden countries? There promises to be a greater problem than the rebuilding of cities from ashes. It is the work of human readjustment that will be the tremendous undertaking. Many a man of former sedentary occupation will have become completely unsettled by trench life. Every Government is faced with the vast responsibility of this problem.

Lord Shaughnessy, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, bids the ex-soldiers go "back to the land." He offers a practical scheme for putting them on farms. He offers to take care of 1,000 veterans. Lord Shaughnessy is giving 1,000 ready-made farms to returning soldiers. Each farm comprises 100 acres, and each is to be part of a small colony, and the locations of the various colonies will depend upon the agricultural possibilities of the land in various designated sections. Several colonies will be located in Alberta. Several colonies cated in Alberta. As a result of the completion of the Bassano irrigation system, the largest of its kind in the Western Hemisphere, 3,000,000 acres of farm lands have been made available for settlers, so that this vast area offers unlimited possibilities. Many of the "ready-made farms" will be in shape for occupation this spring, as work upon them has started and is well under way.

Canadian soldiers will be returning from the war by the thousands before long. Some will be penniless and without homes. With them will come others intent upon starting life anew. Colonization on small farms is the hope of these veterans. But it must be colonization without the mistakes of the past. The great drawbacks to colonizing have always been the first difficulties, the getting started. Where to get the money to build a house and barn and dig a well? These first difficulties have often broken the enthusiasm of hopeful settlers.

The new plan overcomes the old difficulties. Its purpose is to help the settler when he needs the help most—at the start. As a matter of fact the plan is not new. It has been thoroughly tried out and found to work. Under the plan a soldier settler will be given a comfortable house of four or five rooms, a barn large enough to house eight or ten head of stock, a well all dug with a pump installed, wire fences stretched and in place, and land ready for cultivation. The veteran settler will probably find some of his land sown to wheat, oats, and barley when he arrives. In short, the settler will find the pioneering work all done. He steps into a farm that is ready to bring in a living. All that is required of the settler is hard work. It is up to him to keep his farm going.

This great plan represents the expenditure of $3,500,000 for preparations alone. It means the building of 1,000 houses and 1,000 barns, 1,300 miles of fence, digging 1,000 wells and getting some 60,000 acres of land under cultivation. It is estimated that 20,000,000 feet of lumber will be required for the buildings.

Each returned veteran colony will be a little city in itself. Perhaps it will be the nucleus of a future metropolis. Some will be located in districts already thickly settled, others will be in more isolated sections. In either case there will be plenty of social activities, schools, and churches. The settler will know none of the loneliness that was the part of the early pioneer. Such are the plans of this unusual scheme as they have been worked out so far.

One thousand farms, of course, cannot go very far among the many, many thousands of returning soldiers. They are not expected to go far. The great value of the project lies in the fact that it is a constructive program. It points a way. The example is so practicable and of such manifest sincerity that it is sure to be followed upon a vaster scale by other parts of the British Empire.

The career of Lord Shaughnessy, the man responsible for this constructive piece of work, offers a fund of romance. It is the story of a Milwaukee boy coming to Canada, and becoming a Canadian citizen; then later an empire builder, the head of the Canadian Pacific system and a baron.

Shaughnessy had a good job with the well-organized and efficiently run Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, when he was offered the position of purchasing agent by Sir William Van Horne, who was at that time at the head of the Canadian Pacific. The Canadian Pacific of those days was in a formative state, and was a chain of many loose links. Probably Shaughnessy was attracted by these loose links. Constructive work rather than money has always allured him. He looked several years ahead. He accepted Van Horne's offer.

Promotion came rapidly to Shaughnessy. Within two years he was made assistant to the general manager. From one office to another he climbed, until he became president of the Canadian Pacific system.

Surprised.

Bertie (whose motor has broken down and who is compelled to ride in a trolley)—"Bah Jove! I had no idea these affairs were so popular!"

Homesee
Excurs
Every Monday till
LOW FA
FROM TORON
TO Albreda
Athabasca
Edmonton
Stettler
Canora
North Battleford
Regina
Forward
Saskatoon
Dauphin
Lucerne
Calgary
Hanna
Rosetown
Yorkton
Moose Jaw
Prince Albert
Brandon
Winnipeg
For Tickets, Reservations ature and Information, a
W. E. Attwood, Insurance, erton, or write R. L. Fai
G.P.A., 68 King St. E., To CANADIAN NORTH

GRAND TRUNK
ATTRACT
TRIPS
To
Muskoka Lakes
Algonquin Park
Maganetawan River
Lake of Bays
Karwartha Lakes
Georgian Bay
Round trip tourist tickets now on sale from stations in Ontari at very low fares with liberal stop overs.
Berth reservation and full particulars at all Gra Trunk Ticket Offices or write E. HORNING, District Passen er Agent, Toronto, Ontario.

A Trial
Subscri
tion to
T
F u
re
Ye O'clock
ck rac-
75
ORDER
TODAY

Summ
Styles
AS SHOWN IN erine Tailored C covered by one bu
tence "The best and ch
to be had in town."
We'd like to measure yo for your summer suit.
Hats, Caps, Ties, Shirts, Sweater Coats, all Furnishings at close prices.
WOODMAN & CO.
Next to Vogan's Hardware

NEI
News

BR

A few of t outing on returned h
Mr. and also Mrs.
Dominion
the fol themsel on the h
Mr. J. temporar of his im
the rain man.
Our a
in Mr. usual a Norrish,
it such a
by the pu
again for
Mr. Jan men are b wall for Mr. building an a summer.
Whi
Frank
-da
an.
Run sports shave a ance th strange i

Mr. John
John Schnurr
Della Schnurr of Clar past week at the hom father, Mr. John H. Sch

The Mildmay baseball t game with Teeswater on J
the sports there but were de aily being 15—8.
Miss Mildred Pfohl who t
ing at S. S No. 11, Carrick, Tuesday morning to a school for teachers
tural College. son has deal agent

gr were P
Neust
June
Neusta
winnin
Jack D keeping a few bl
Mr. L
Telescope,
Friday.

The Annual
ing was held from Wednes til Tuesday m weather was i
the time the last year. Th were well prevailed at Vogel who was taken don and ha
ing, Pa.
were pres

A gr
this l early

aranteed To Satisfy

"The "Sunshine" Furnace gives healthful, warm air heat—and plenty of it. When installed, according to plans furnished by our heating engineers, it is guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction. Write for free illustrated booklet.

McClary's
SUNSHINE FURNACE
LONDON TORONTO MONTREAL WINNIPEG VANCOUVER
ST. JOHN, N.B. HAMILTON CALGARY
SASKATOON EDMONTON

For Sale by Patterson Bros.

FIELD SEEDS

Our supply of Field Corn has just arrived. We have different varieties and the seed is excellent.

We also have a good supply of Turnip and Mangle Seed.

Don't forget we are selling Paint at 65c per quart.

S. W. Vogan

CANADIAN PACIFIC

Great Lakes
Steamship Service
wen Sound
"MANITOBA" at midnight nnecting ave lt Ste
t William via PO
CES

Plan Your Vacation Trip
Now

POINT AU BARIL
MUSKOKA LAKES
KAWARTHA LAKES
LAKE MAZINAW
FRENCH and
PICKEREL RIVERS
RIDEAU LAKES
SEVERN RIVER
are delightful resorts and easily reached via C. P. R.

NIPEG and VANCOUVER
40 P. M. Daily via 'The Pioneer Route'

Canadian Pacific Ticket Agents or trict Passenger Agent, Toronto, Ontario.

MOCKS!

Hot weather is fast approaching. Why not spend a few pleasant evenings in a new, up-to-date hammock? We have a fine assortment ranging in price from $2.00 to $6.75.

Also keep the big black flies out of the itchen by using Hobb's up-to-date SCREEN ORS AND WINDOWS. Sold by

ATTERSON BROS.
dware Stoves Graniteware

E CANADIAN BANK OF COMMERCE

SIR EDMUND WALKER, C.V.O., LL.D., D.C.L., President
AIRD, General Manager H. V. F. JONES, Ass't General Manager

PITAL, $15,000,000 RESERVE FUND, $13,500,000

FARMERS' BUSINESS

The Canadian Bank of Commerce extends to Farmers every facility for the transaction of their banking business, including the discount and collection of sales notes. Blank sales notes re supplied free of charge on application.

H. M. LAY, Manager Walkerton Branch.

MANHOOD AND RESOURCES

Public Meeting of Walkerton Citizens Called by Mayor Johnston Passes a Conscription Resolution—Crowd was Small

The public meeting called by Mayor Johnston for Thursday night for the discussion of conscription, was very slimly attended. Probably 100 persons were present. After five speakers had been heard, all favorable to conscription, the following resolution was passed, moved by David Robertson, seconded by Reeve Robt. Russell that this public meeting of the Citizens of Walkerton, called by the Mayor, to consider the question hereby declare that it is of the opinion that selective conscription of manpower and other resources of Canada should be enforced, without delay, to aid Great Britain in the present war, and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Premier of Canada and the Member for the Riding.

Mayor Johnston, who was in the chair, said he had called the meeting at the solicitation of a large number of citizens. Some people had accused him of calling the meeting for political reasons. It wasn't a political matter with him. As for himself, no matter which party backed conscription, he would support it, and he would vote for any man who would support conscription!

Mr. David Robertson said that under conscription all men needed at home would stay, and individual cases would be decided by local boards appointed by the government. If the present member would support conscription and back the government up in its war measures he would vote for him.

Took Sir Wilfred's Advice

Mr. H. M. Lay said he would not be present if he thought it was a political meeting. He quoted Sir Wilfred Laurier's assertion that in this question, every man should think for himself and act for himself. There was no doubt in his mind of the necessity of conscription Germany had one million more men now than when she started. As to conscription of wealth, he believed Parliament had power along this line without placing any further Act on the Statute Books. A good deal had been done by the Gov't to tax wealth but more should be done.

Mr. L. C. Benton announced himself emphatically in favor of conscription. He was prepared to support any candidate who would support conscription and other measures to successfully carry on the war. Speaking of taxing corporations, he believed the present gov't had done a good deal. For instance, the Ford Motor Co. had paid ¼ of a million last year. He believed the County of Bruce had about done her share in number of enlistments and conscription would mean that other districts would be brought up to the mark.

Should Tax incomes

Ex-Warden A. E. McNab said that instead of pushing on we were slackening up. Conscription is the only way, the only fair and democratic way. The Gov't can do many things to conscript wealth, and it should be done. One way would be to tax incomes. Further Legislation would be required to accomplish this.

Any Man's Fight

Rev. C. W. Cosens said that conscription was nothing new. They had a form of conscription in England during the Napoleonic Wars. In the Northern Armies that won all the important battles in the Civil War, except Gettysburg, nine out of ten men were conscripts. We are now at a crucial point. It is any man's fight yet. This year will either make us or break us. We are a democracy but when we have to fight absolution we have to do it with its own weapons. The 160th Battalion will soon be on the firing line and if reinforcements are not ready it will be just like sending men to the slaughter. If we don't stop the enemy there will be an end to the liberties for which our fathers contended. If we win out it would be the best thing that could happen Germany. The Act is not castiron and can be amended.

Mr. John Rowland said he had long favored conscription of men and money. And when Sir Robert Borden had announced conscription, he had wired him:—"Congratulations for your Conscription Bill but you should also conscript wealth" Conscription did not mean that boys who were needed on the farm would be taken. Mr. Rowland had no use for the proposed referendum. Whoever heard, he said, of a referendum to repudiate our debt and obligation which we have solemnly assumed. He wondered if the men who were making a big thing out of the war and staying at home, would be up at the station to greet the boys when they come back from the Front. He did not believe like some previous speakers in offering to buy a member of parliament by their vote to do his duty to his country. He honored Guthrie and Clark. These men loved Sir Wilfred Laurier and it was a painful thing for them to have to break with him on the conscription issue. He wanted them to quit all this talking in the House. Action is what's wanted.

Should be Quick

In seconding D. Robertson's resolution Reeve Russell said he thought everybody should be in favor of conscription. We want to try to get the government to be quick. The men at the Front want help, action is needed. Let's forget politics and all act together.

THE SEPARATE SCHOOL

Promotion Examinations from Form to Form—List of the Successful Pupils in the Various Classes

SENIOR IV.

Honors—Gladys Fehrenbach, Florence Obrecht, Rita Wiess, Melinda Schumacher. Pass—Adeline Becker, Louise Lippert, Henry Flach, Thomas Reichenbach, Karl Wiess, Albert Rustz, Lizzie O'Connor, Albert Weiller, Fred Irwin, Loretta Schumacher, Gladys Jarvis, Agnes Ward, Frank Mosack.

JUNIOR IV.

Honors—Clarence Weiler, Edwin Schmidt, Lyal Cousins. Pass—Aloysius Zettler, Herbert Schnurr, Eleanor Weber, Loretta Schuett, Alex. McNab, Norman Lobsinger, Edna Sutter, Arthur Waechter, Wilbert Freiburger, Mary Zettler, Cyril Oberle.

SENIOR III.

Honors—John Sweeney, Bernice Lambertus, Willard Walker, Gladys Eckenswiller, Laverne Yaeck Pass—Violet Freiburger, Loretta Kuennemann, Arthur Sutter, Griselda Becker, Hilda McNamara, Audrey McNeill, Clara Giesler, Harry Oberle, Beatrice Lumley, Fridolin Berberich, John Obrecht, Albert Obrecht, Alvin Cunio.

JUNIOR III.

Honors—Agnes Weber, Loretta Gillen, Albert Giesler. Pass—Kathleen Obrecht, Howard O'Neill, Joseph Batte, Joseph Gillen, Gerard Ernewein, Cleopha Weiler, Kathleen Sidle, Norman Freiburger, Albert Batte, Philip Weiler, Leona Waechter, Harold Schiestel, Antonette Wilhelm, Michael Eckenswiller.

SENIOR II.

Honors—Leona Schnurr, Arthur Klein. Pass—Erwin Lobsinger, Melinda Ernest, Anthony Cunio, Vera Oberle, Helen Wilhelm, Marie Ernewein, Andrew Fehrenbach, Lillian Freiburger, Roy Walker, Willie Dentinger, Olive Hesch, Clarence Berberich, Bernard Schnurr, Ursula Lymbery.

JUNIOR II.

Honors—Mary Giesler, Bernice Mullen, Fred Lymbery, David McNab. Pass—Lionel Rich, Isabel Zettler, Joseph Huck, Lillian Keller, Charles Schnurr, Kelley Lettner, Silvina Hesch, Joseph Wilhelm, Martina Weiler, Albert Disch, Walter Weiler, Eileen Ernewein, Christopher Wagner.

SENIOR I.

Charles O'Malley, Annie Lettner, Iona Wiess, Harry Schnurr, James King, Eileen Freiburger, Arthur Weiler, Clarence Schnurr, Edgar Oberle, Wilbert Mullen, Arthur Schiestel, Verna Schmidt, Norman Siegfried, Rowland Ellinghausen, Clarence Weiler, Dominic Gillen, Howard Yaeck, Annie Dentinger, Mamie Huck, Edwin Detzler, Clarence Becker, Alphonse Berberich, Magdalen Seidel, Joseph Obrecht.

News About Town

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Burrows spent the week-end at Owen Sound.

Mr. Edward Biebel of Elora spent three or four days in town last week.

A number of young people from town attended the picnic of S. S. No. 3, in Bogg's bush on Saturday.

Mrs. Sam Wissler and Mrs. Elmer Hahn of Hanover visited at Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Hyslop's on Monday.

Mr. Gordon Bartlieb of Kitchener spent the week-end at the home of his uncle and aunt Mr. and Mrs. Harry Giesler.

Mr. Ernie Watson of Kincardine, a former Walkerton boy, spent a few days of last week renewing acquaintances here

Ex-Warden I. Shoemaker of Paisley was greatly pleased to see the Good Roads by-law carried, Mr. Shoemaker was a booster for good roads when he sat in County Council.

New Library Books

The following books have been added to Public Library:—Maple Leaves in Flanders(Roe,), Dark Star(Chambers,); Lost Endeavor(Masefield); His Official Fiancee(Ruck.); Girl at His Billet(Ruck); The Matchmakers(Buchrose); Some Experiences of an Irish R. M. Regiment of Women(Dane.); Old Reliable(Dickson); The House of Luck (Dickson,); Hurrah and Hallelujah (Barry,); God, the Invisible Thing (Wells.)

WESTERN UNIVERSITY
LONDON - ONTARIO

Three More New Professors
Equal to Any in Canada.

Students can now obtain as good an Education in Arts and Medicine at the Western as anywhere.

President—
E. E. Braithwaite, M.A., Ph.D.

We Own and Offer
$100,000
COUNTY OF BRUCE
DEBENTURES

Bearing 6½%, maturing 1917-1936, at par.
Applications should be made at once.

W. A. Mackenzie & Co.
TORONTO, ONT.

Advertising!

in its highest sense is the creation of a new want and providing the means with which to apply that want. The aim of Advertising is not to spread the name of a firm so much as to get business for that firm. The ad. that counts is the one that makes the luxuries of today the necessities of tomorrow. A great many people advertise as they give to charity—merely to get rid of a solicitor. Then the advertiser says it doesn't pay and when done in that spirit it does not. Advertisers must put brain and selling force into their their copy, and when this is done they find that advertising is not an expense, but the finest kind of an investment.
—S. C. Dobbs, past president Associated Advertising Clubs of America.

THE TELESCOPE offers you an opportunity to get in touch with Best Homes in Walkerton and the Surrounding District and Get Their Business.

WRIGLEY'S

To Somebody Somewhere at the Front—

Every day boxes from home are going to the boys in the trenches. And of the things they get, a great prize is WRIGLEY'S — the Gum with Lasting Flavour.

It takes the place of food and drink in case of need—which is often. It keeps spirits up—gives vigour and vim. A packet in the pocket lasts a long time.

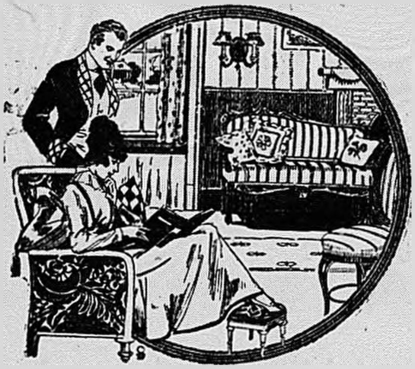
The Flavour Lasts!

Chew it after every meal

Made in Canada

Sealed Tight—Kept Right

15



IF YOU ARE STARTING HOUSEKEEPING OR IF YOUR HOUSEHOLD NEEDS REQUIRE REPLENISHING

Our stocks of Household Needs are exceptionally well assorted and economically priced. We call your attention particularly to Floor Coverings, Window Hangings, Bedding Linens and Cottons.

Numerous lines show only a fraction of the actual advance in cost that had taken effect during the last three years. For examples note the following:—

BED SPREADS

White Honeycomb, heavy quality, large size. Each $1.00 & $1.25.

LACE CURTAINS

Fine Nottingham Lace, White and Cream. 2½yds. long, 60c., 75c. & $1.00 a pair.

CURTAIN NETS

In White and Cream, special good qualities and newest designs, 25c., 35c. & 40c. a yard.

PILLOW COTTONS

English make, imported direct, circular, 40, 42, 44 & 46 inches wide. Per yd. 25c., 30c. & 35c.

TAPESTRY RUGS

Good quality, pretty colorings, border all around. Sizes 2½ & 2½ x 3 $8.50 to $13.00, sizes 3 x3 yards $10.00 to $12.50. Size 3 x 3½ yds. $12.50 to $15.00.

PILLOW CASES

Hemstitched, good quality, 25c. each.

TABLE CLOTHS

Hemmed ready for use, 2 yds. long, each $1.00. $1.50 and $2.00.

TABLE LINENS

Pure linen, bleached, 60 to 72 inches wide, rich satin finish, per yd. $1.00, $1.25 & 1.50.

STEPHAN BROTHERS

STRAW HAT SEASON IS HERE NOW

It arrived a little late this summer, so we have some real bargains to offer you in straw hats for men boys and children. All the new season's styles at reduced prices just when you need them.

Summer Hosiery is in great demand. We have a very complete line now to choose from.

The Big Sale of embroideries is still on, come and see what we can show you at 5c., 10c. and 25c. per yd.

Fancy parasols at prices that will mean quick selling.

We have exceptional values in ladies' and Misses' wash skirts, waists, middies and summer white wear of all kinds.

Men's Balbriggan shirts and drawers at 50c. each.

DO YOUR SUMMER BUYING NOW.

McBURNEY & CO.

THE PEOPLE'S STORE

SERVE!

Be productive for your country. Make your own clothes at home.

This is the example set by the noble women of France. Butterick Patterns give you identically the same smart simple styles worn by fa[illegible]ionable Paris.

Make your selection [illegible] at our

Butterick [illegible]

Phone 53 J. H. A[illegible]L Walkerton

POETS' CORNER

OUR BATTALION THE 71ST

The following stirring lines written by the late Lieut. Leslie Young express the disappointment of the men of the 71st. Batt'n when their unit, commanded by Lieut.-Col. Sutherland now of the 160th was broken up in England.

Together we stood, till together we fell,
All broken and scattered to the winds of the earth,
But the spirit remained and is with each one still.
The good fellowship spirit of the 71st.
All one when we worked, worked the will of the one
All one on parade, whence we banished all mirth.
Where we worked like a team, worked to better the corps.
To fit and to train our own 71st.
All one were the counties when blended in one.
From Wellington, Galt, Oxford, Huron and Perth
And the sons of old Bruce that completed the corps
All Ontario's sons, all the 71st.
All one in love for the unit itself;
All bound by a spirit that hell and its worst
Could never have severed, and never its worst
We are still one in spirit the 71st.
We were one in respect, in devotion, in all
That pertains to the soldier, no man could desert,
The man and the soldier, by all of us loved.
The colonel who lead us, the 71st.
All one when the blow that has done with our name,
That stood for the unit and all it was worth,
All one we are still though it isn't the same,
As when all were together, the 71st.
We are scattered and drafted, both here and in France,
Twas the saddest of days, and a day we have cursed,
But we all will remember as long as we live
With kindliest feeling the 71st.

News About Town

Local News on every page.

Mrs. McKillop is visiting friends at Maple Hill.

Mr. Mervin Norrish was in Toronto, over the holiday.

Miss Neill left on Friday to visit friends at Toronto.

Mr. Louis Yaeck has quit making brick for this season.

Warden Izzard was in town on county business yesterday.

Miss Estelle Schumacher is visiting friends at Owen Sound.

Pte. Alex Gross was home from London on Dominion Day.

Mr. Morgan of the Merchants Bank, is holidaying at Owen Sound and other points.

Teeswater raised $150 for Patriotic purposes on Dominion Day.

Mr. Orville Steinmiller of Toronto was a visitor here on Monday.

Miss Bolan of Corbetton is the guest of Miss Donalda McKechnie.

Masters Jack and Jim Hiscox have gone to Snelgrove for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Burrows are leaving next Saturday on holidays.

Miss Knechtel of Hanover was the guest of Miss Rotha Schwindt on Saturday.

Mr. O. S. Seigmiller druggist of Mildmay visited at his home here on Sunday.

Have a nice Hammock for the summer, prices from $2.00 up to $7.00 at Paterson Bros.

Miss McDonald of Toronto is visiting at the home of her friend Miss Eleda Norrish.

Two Teeswater young men narrowly escaped drowning on Sunday when their canoe capsized.

Messrs Victor Eidt, Nelson Pinkerton and Leslie Bryce took in the sports at Port Elgin on Monday.

Mrs. M. G. Parsons and little daughter, Margaret, of Toronto, are visiting at Mr. J. H. Appel's.

Miss Donalda McKechnie has resigned her position as teacher in the Shelburne Public School and has accepted a position for the coming term on the staff of the Essex school.

You don't have to tell Caretaker Walford, of the High and Public Schools anything about the phenominal growth of the grass. He knows all about it. Mr. Walford has to mow three acres of lawn a week. The big grounds are showing the result of the careful attendion they have been receiving all season.

Yesterday's casualty lists had the name of Tyrwhitt, eldest son of Principal Kidd, of Mildmay as "killed in action." "Teddie" was a fine manly chap about twenty years old. He was well-known and liked here through his attendance for a couple of years at the Walkerton High School. Until recently he was connected with the Military Post Service at the Front, but on learning of the death in action of a Mildmay chum a few months ago he asked to be transferred to the infantry and got his wish. The news of the gallant young soldier's death was heard here with deep regret.

CARRICK CAMP MEETING

(Contributed.)

The Carrick Camp Meeting which is closed today, began fifty-five years ago on the 18th of July in Mr. Abraham Eckel's bush. From there it was moved to Mr. Lindenschmidt's bush, from there to M. Switzer's. Then to the present camp ground which is nicely built up with cottages and boarding house which accomodates sleeping berths, for any who wish to stay. The present Tabernacle which was built about ten years ago holds about two thousand people. Year after year thousands of visitors visit the Sainted old spot. Many of our veterans are still here to tell of the blessings they have got through all these years. This year it opened on the 27th of June under presiding Elder Litt of Kitchener. Though the weather was very disagreeable, people came from all parts. About fifteen young men and women consecrated themselves to Christ. We surely were sitting in heavenly places. The following brethren were present, Rev. Gischler of Port Elgin, Rev. S. Hauch of Chesley, Rev. Ruppel of Naperville, Rev. H. Becker of Naperville, Ill., Rev. A. Sauer of Hanover, Rev. Schreader of Alsfeldt, Rev. Grenzenbach of Walkerton, Rev. J. Burns of Mildmay Rev. E. Gischler of Tavistock, Rev. Bean of Milverton, Rev. Becker of Crediton, Rev. F. Meyer of Dashwood, Rev. Meyer of Zurich, Rev. Campbell of Colborne, Rev. Hallman of Elmwood, Rev. Beese of Sebringville, Rev. Knechtel of Bridgeport, Rev. E. Burns of Waterloo. We surely had an enjoyable Camp-Meeting. Surely man couldn't do anything better than sit and listen to all the profitable sermons that are preached day after day by the different pastors. God Bless the Carrick Camp-Meeting and long may it live in the hearts of our people.

SOLWAY

Miss E. McGarity is spending the vacation at her home here.

Mr. Emil Dorsch from Waterloo returned to his home on Monday after spending a few days with his uncle Mr. Wm. Lamberton.

Mr. Pete McGarity returned on Tuesday from Niagara where he has been working for the past few months.

A few from this locality took in the sports at Port Elgin on Monday.

Miss G. Failley from Toronto is holidaying at the home of her sister, Mrs. Jas. Cahoon.

A few from here attended the Baptist Sunday School picnic in Mr. Bell's bush on Monday.

Miss Bert McGarity is holidaying at her home here.

A few from here took in the picnic at Maple Hill on Thursday last.

Walkerton Markets

(Revised, Wednesday, July 4)

Hay, per ton,	10.00 to	12.00
Oats, per bsh,	75 to......	80
Wheat " "	2.25 to......	2 25
Barley, " "	1 20 to......	1 20
Hogs per cwt,	15 25 to......	15 50
Butter, per lb,	31 to	31
Eggs, per doz	28 to......	28

GIRLS NEEDED IN OFFICES

Voluntary enlistment has taken thousands of men from office work. Conscription will take more. Office help is scarce now—will be scarcer very soon. Young women must fill the vacant places and they need training.

NORTHERN Business College remains open all summer to help to meet the demand for trained office help. Students may enter any time. No increase in fees. Circulars free on application.

C. A. FLEMING, F. C. A., Principal
Department A., Owen Sound, Ontario

IF YOU WANT a good, Reliable Boot. —Try a pair of our Cushion Soles made of solid leather.

FIRST CLASS REPAIRING

C. PETTEPLACE

JEWELLRY OF ALL KINDS

Watches,
Clocks,
Cut Glass
Silverware
and Jewellry
of all kinds.

C. A. FOX, & SON

"JUNE" SILVERWARE For the Bride

The enduring gift, the useful gift, the one that pleases most.

What will it be—A cake basket, a fruit spoon, a bread tray, a salad set, a tea service, or a complete service of table silverware.

We have silverware which make exquisite wedding gifts in a variety of forms.

The price ranging from a dollar up. You can secure any pieces you want from our open sets of celebrated ware. Also beautiful pieces of Pearl handled goods.

R. L. GIBSON
JEWELER WALKERTON
Agent for The New Edison Phonograph.

The Central Grocery

Clover Leaf China

A fresh assignment just arrived. Staple lines.

Toilet Setts

Plain and printed

FARM PRODUCE WANTED

W. G. Searle
Phone 161 Walkerton

OPENING AND CLOSING STORE

On and after Wednesday June 6th this S[illegible]
will be open
Wednesday Evenings Until 9[illegible]
and will close
Thursday Afternoons at 1 O'cl[illegible] during the summer months. I will have special [illegible]tions for Wednesday evenings to give the public an opportunity to do their buying in the evening. All orders taken will be delivered Thursday morning.

C. PATRICK
PHONE 165 WALKERTON

Read Every Page!

WORTHY GROCERIES
LOW PRICES

These features explain the phenomenal success of our great food market. We are well stocked with the choicest and as usual the price is low.

GOODE & McKAY
The People's Grocery
PHONE 67 WALKERTON

WALKERTON TELESCOPE

VOL. XLIX, NO. 28 WALKERTON TELESCOPE, WALKERTON, JULY 12th, 1917 $1.50 A YEAR IN ADVANCE

All Home Print - Local News on Every Page From 1 to 8

LATE MRS. A. BONNYMAN

Passed Away at the County Hospital Tuesday Evening—A Kind-hearted Lady Who Had Many Friends

A cheery Scotch body whose kindly presence will be deeply missed by many a friend and neighbor passed away at the Bruce County Hospital on Tuesday evening, July 10th, in the person of Margaret Finlayson, relict of the late A. Bonnyman.

Mrs. Bonnyman had been poorly since last February. Cancer of the stomach was pronounced to be the trouble and her condition grew gradually worse. Three weeks ago she was removed to the Hospital. Her bedside was cheered during her last illness by the presence of her brother, Mr. William Finlayson, her only surviving relative in this country, with the exception of her niece, Margaret. Mr. Finlayson came East from Alberta several weeks ago and remained with his sister to the last.

Mrs. Bonnyman was born in Rosshire, Scotland, 68 years ago, and came to this Country thirty-one years ago. She was shortly afterwards married to her late husband, who was at that time farming on the South Line, Brant. Eighteen years ago on the death of her husband, she came to live in Walkerton. She was a woman of sterling character and good neighborly qualities. Latterly her thoughts centred largely in the War. A large number of her nephews have been in the fighting from the first, one sister alone having no less than ten sons in the Army and Navy. The pride which she felt for the magnificent part which her gallant nephews were playing, was latterly mingled with deep sadness as the names of one after another appeared in the casualty lists as killed in action or wounded.

Her niece, Margaret Bonnyman, who has made her home with her aunt, will be taken by her uncle to Calgary to complete her education, where she will reside with a cousin.

The funeral will take place on Friday afternoon to the Walkerton Cemetery. Service will be conducted by Rev Thos. Wilson, pastor of Knox Church, of which the deceased was for so many years a faithful member.

PRESENTED WITH PURSE

Rev. Father Haller Also Receives Fine Address from Town Members of R. C. Congregation.

The Town members of the R. C. congregation turned out in large numbers on Tuesday evening to say good-bye to Rev. Father Haller, who is leaving this week to take charge of a parish at Deemerton. During his four and a half year Curacy, Father Haller has endeared himself to the members of the congregation in a special way and all are sorry to see him go.

During the evening, Mr. John O'Malley was called upon and read an address expressing the congregation's high appreciation of his faithful work here, while little Miss Henning, on behalf of the congregation presented him with a well-filled purse of gold. Father Haller replied feelingly, thanking the people heartily for their very great kindness. Rev. Father Cumming's spoke in terms of warm praise of the faithful work of his assistant. Messrs. J. J. Schumacher and Alex. Haas also referred to the Reverend Father's readiness and willingness at all times to help by word or deed. Musical numbers were contributed by Miss Oberle, Messrs. R. Schust and Herb Hauck, and a social hour spent before the company dispersed.

Killed By A Sniper

A letter from a chum of Signaller Teddy Kydd of Mildmay, whose death in action was reported last week, states that Ted was shot by a German Sniper

PINNED UNDER BIG AUTO

Family from Powassan were Victims of Accident on the Durham Road last Wednesday Evening

A family party of five, hailing from Powassan, narrowly escaped death when their heavy touring car turned turtle at a bad spot on the road near Maple Hill. Fine sand has been piled high in the middle of the highway at this point and drivers claim that it is a menace to the lives of autoists. Mr. Mitchell, sash and door manufacturer, of Powassan, his wife, two grown-up daughters, and fifteen year old son, were in the car, making the journey Powassan to Lucknow. Mr. Mitchell did not know what happened after the car struck the sand but it turned turtle pinning all the occupants underneath with the engine still running. Fortunately Mr. Rogers, who lives near by, saw the accident and came to the rescue. Mrs. Mitchell received the worst injuries, her collar-bone being broken as well as three ribs. At first it was thought that her husband was hurt internally but fortunately it proved to be nothing less than a severe bruising and shaking up. The young ladies were rather severely bruised but the boy escaped without a scratch. The family were conveyed to the Bruce County Hospital. By Friday all were ready to proceed to their destination except Mrs. Mrs. Mitchell, one of her daughters remaining to keep her company.

YOUNG SOLDIER CALLED

Sergt. Michael McNab of the 160th Batt'n Succumbs to Meningitis in English Hospital on Sunday.

A cablegram received by Ex-Warden Alex McNab on Monday from Capt Roy Whitehead, adjutant of the Bruce Batt'n at Wittley Camp, England, asked him to convey to the bereaved parents the sad intelligence that their son, Sergt. Michael McNab had passed away on Sunday. "Mike" had been ill with meningitis and the record office had reported his condition "serious" last week.

Probably a finer or cleaner speciman of young manhood has not left Walkerton for the Front than the fine strapping young chap, who laid down his pen in the Merchants Bank to go Overseas with the Bruce Battalion. Mike was a lad with spirit and kind, genial ways. Everybody liked him. The spirit which led him to enlist for King and Country was the spirit with which our best Canadian boys meet death in the trenches of F ance, and his life was just as nobly, though less dramatically, sacrificed as though he had fallen on a battlefield in France. Deepest sympathy is felt for the parents, Mr. and Mrs Michael McNab, of Chepstow, in the death of their gallant son, whose memory will be treasured in the hearts of all who called him friend.

Gave His Life For Country

SERGT. MICHAEL McNAB

Wedded At Galt

A former Walkerton boy, George Mason of Galt, nephew of Mr. Jos. Lindsay, was married on Saturday, June 30th at Galt to Miss Elizabeth Wallace Donaldson.

Appointed Flight Commander

Eric Robertson of the Royal Flying Corps, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Robertson of Walkerton, has been promuted to the position of Flight Commander with the rank of Captain. He has been acting Flight Commander the past few months and now his appointment is confirmed.

Brant Man Very Ill

Joseph Whitehead, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Whitehead of Brant, was taken to the County Hospital on Monday suffering from an acute attack of appendicitis, and was operated upon Tuesday morning. His condition is reported to be serious and the outcome will be in doubt, for two or three days.

Purse for Father Haller

On Sunday afternoon July 1 the members of the R. C. Church resident in Centre Brant assembled at the home of Mrs. John Rudolph and presented Rev. Father Haller, who is leaving to take charge of the parish of Deemerton, with a purse of $22. An address was read by Mr. John Hanmore and the presentation was made by Miss Margaret Quirk.

Lawn Social

A lawn social under the auspices of the Brant Ladies Hospital Aid in aid of the Bruce County Hospital and Brant Preparedness League will be held on Mr. Frank Rennie's lawn on Thursday, July 19th. A good program is being arranged, a special feature of which will be a baseball match between Brant Sodbusters and Walkerton Bankers at 7 o'clock. Admission 25c. Lunch free. Town ladies, please do not forget what we have done for you. Cake, candy and sandwiches requested. —28-29

Raised $110

The Brant Ladies Hospital Aid are to be congratulated upon the success of the postponed garden party which they gave at Mr. August Pletsch's on Friday evening. Nearly $110 was cleared above expenses. A short program included solos by Misses Ermel and Whitehead. A baseball game between Walkerton and Maple Hill teams aroused great interest and was certainly a tight game. At the end of five innings when darknes intervened, the score was a tie. The boys propose to break the tie at Walkerton Exhibition grounds on Wednesday night.

Kain—McGregor.

A pretty wedding took place in Brant, on Tuesday, July 10th, when Miss (Hattie) Henrietta McGregor, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert. McGregor of Walkerton, was united in marriage, to Mr. Orville Kain, second son of Mr. and Mrs. John Kain. The bride, who was given away by her father, looked pretty in pearl grey taffeta and georgette crepe with hat to match. The ceremony was performed under an arch of orange blossoms by Rev. Roy Kain, brother of the groom. Both bride and groom were unattended. After a round of congratulations and good wishes, the company which included the immediate relatives and friends sat down to a dainty dejeuner. The evening was spent enjoyably in dancing. The many presents received by the popular bride were much admired. Both Mr. and Mrs. Kain are well-known in town where they have lived all their lives. Lately Mr. Kain took a position with his uncle in Brant, where Mr. and Mrs. Kain will reside. Their many friends here extend best wishes to the happy couple.

DIED OF HIS WOUNDS

Gallant Walkerton Boy Who had to Fight to Get to Front, Received Fatal Wound After a Few Weeks in France.

Walkerton friends learned with deep regret on Saturday of the death at the Front of Will Lindsay, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Lindsay of the old McLean farm at Moscow. Will was wounded with gunshot in the neck on June 9th, was two days at a dressing station, and died at the Military Hospital at Lipreport, France, on June 12th. For some reason his death was not reported by the record office and it was through a letter written by a friend at the Front to his uncle, Mr. T. E. Attwood, that the news of his death reached here. Mr. Attwood wired Ottawa and in the course of a couple of days, Ottawa confirmed the sad news. Will was well-known in Walkerton, having attended High School here for three years. Later he spent a year in Robertson & McNab's office. When the war broke out he was a member of the staff of the Canadian Bank of Commerce at Peterboro. He was very eager to enlist, but three successive times he was rejected on account of his rather delicate constitution. Ifhe lacked in physical strength, he certainly did not lack in spirit or pluck. Finally he succeeded in getting to England as a member of the Paymaster's dept. of the 29th Batt'n. In England he managed to get to France with a draft of the 76th Batt'n., reaching the Front only about two months ago.

A soldier-friend writes to Mrs. Lindsay:—During the weeks we spent together in London he was the prince of good friends to me and I shall ever cherish those weeks so long as memory lasts. He was one of nature's noblemen, possessed of an optimism that was as undimmed by thoughts of approaching death as is the shining of God's brightest star. He was not constitutionally strong; yet, I have never known a man whose undaunted spirit rose so majestically above his conscious weakness. Never have I known him depressed in months of ill-health; always there was to-morrow with its hopes of better and stronger days. In the hearts of many friends he will live until the end of time has come.

Nurse Girl Wanted

For summer months, apply Mrs. R. M. Player.

Teeswater Races

Teeswater races, $900.00 in purses. August 6th. See large posters.

Young Lady Wanted

For steady position. Apply at the Telescope Office.

Big Milk Snake

Milk snakes are not uncommon around here this year. Mr. Thomas Wilt n has killed two of them on his farm in Brant recently, one of which measured 52 ins. long.

Death of Mrs. Lake.

Mrs. William Lake, a former Walkerton resident, passed away at a Toronto Hospital on Friday, following an operation for the removal of her limb. Mrs. Lake had been poorly for some years, and was a patient at the Bruce County Hospital for a lengthy period last year. Her husband was employed for several years at R. E. Truax & Son's and is well-known here. Besides her husband, she leaves a family of three sons, two of whom are in khaki, and three daughters. The funeral took place at Durham on Sunday afternoon.

NEWS ABOUT TOWN

Local news on every page.

T. Pye is selling all straw hats at cost.

Irwin Bros. shipped a carload of horses yesterday.

Miss Pauline Clapp has been visiting at Mount Forest.

Latest styles in wedding stationery at the Telescope.

Mrs. Claude Cooper left on a visit to Toronto yesterday.

Mr. John Krueger is visiting his son, Clarence, at Creemore.

See the new shape in W. G. & R. colars that Pye is showing.

Entrance Examination results are expected some time next week.

Mrs. Ray Vogan is spending a couple of days with f iends in Toronto.

Pye gets a shipment of newest patterns in neckwear every two weeks.

Let us give you a price on an up-to-date bath installed.—Paterson Bros.

Mrs. George Hodson and children of Toronto are on a visit to her home here.

Prin. and Mrs. Morgan left on Saturday to spend the vacation in Toronto.

Mrs. McNeil and little son Stanley of Chicago are visiting at her home here.

Have your home heated with a Sunshine Furnace. Sold at Paterson Bros.

Mrs. Parsons and little daughter of Toronto are visiting Mr. and Mrs. John H. Appel.

Master Stanley Hind of London is visiting at the home of his uncle Mr. R. K. Sutton.

Water is reported to have been two ft. deep on the streets at Neustadt during the recent storm.

Miss Mabel Crawford who has been in Toronto, returned home Tuesday on a week's holiday.

Miss Mae Cryderman B. A. teacher at Durham High School, is home for the summer vacation.

Miss Roberta Schnurr returned on Monday to Buffalo, N. Y. after a weeks' vacation at her home here.

Mrs. Small, Miss Florence and Master Lloyd Small of Fergus spent over Sunday with friends in town.

Miss Emma Wilhelm is spending a few days of this week with her grandmother, Mrs. Uhrig of Formosa.

Rev. and Mrs. Roy Kain of Thamesville motored here on Monday to attend the wedding of the former's brother.

The house of Ferd. Frank of Brant was struck by lightning last week. Fortunately very little damage was done.

Miss Madeline Schultheis of Toronto spent a few days of her vacation at the house of Mr. John D. Bell of Otter Creek.

Mrs. Hodgson and little son, who had been visiting the former's father, Mr. Ed. Pengelly, returned to Welland on Friday.

Mrs. James Gill and son Joe. left Tuesday on a two week's visit to friends at Chatsworth, Holland Centre, and Owen Sound.

Mrs. E. Pryne of West Michigan and daughter, Mrs. F. Flath of Toronto and two children are visiting at the home of Mrs. Wm. Pryne.

Mrs. John McLean left on Tuesday on an extended visit to her sons, Adam and Peter Johnston at Goodlands, Man. She will also visit at Regina.

Oscar M. Schwindt, who passed the recent examinations at Stratford Normal, has secured a position as teacher at the Otter Creek School.

Mr. John McCool, Rev. and Mrs. C. W. Cosens and Brian McCool motored to Paisley on Monday to attend the funeral of the late Mrs. Harry Reid.

Mrs. Thos. Dixon is expected home from the West about the end of the week. Her daughter, Mrs. Fisher of Claresholm, will accompany her home on a visit.

W. B. Beatty, B. A. Sc., Dominion and Ontario Land Surveyor of Creighton Mine, Ontario, is spending his vacation at the home of his wife who was formerly Miss Beth Van Horne.

Mr. John Kunts and daughters Irene, Melinda, Tessie and Hilda and Master Harry, of Kitchener, motored to town on Tuesday and spent a few days with friends and relatives here.

CONTENTS

Of This Week's Telescope

1—News About Town.
2—Editorial.
  Mr. Truax's Speech on the Conscription Bill.
3—Serial Story.
4—Town News.
5—Country News.
  Rural School Reports.
6—Soldier's Letter.
  Town and District.
7—Local News.
8—News About Town.

FOR YOUR CORRESPONDENCE

The use of good writing paper is not only a reflection of your own taste but it is also a compliment to your correspondent. We have much pleasure in directing your attention to our very attractive lines of note paper, in tablets, by the quire or in boxes.

"Swan" Fountain Pens, Inks, Mucilage, Sealing Wax, Visiting and Playing Cards.

Hunter's Drug Store

Drugs and Kodaks Phone 35 C. P. R. Ticket Agency

The Rexall Store

Necessities for the Summer's Toilet

Rexall Vanishing Cream - 25cts.
Harmony Face Powder - 25cts.
or
Violet Dulce Vanishing Cream - 50cts.
" " Face Powder - - 50cts.
" " Talcum flesh or white 25cts.

A. P. Sieveright

Drugs - Kodaks

WALL PAPERS OF QUALITY

The newest effects and a wonderful assortment for the Parlor, Living Room, Dining Room, Hall, Bed Room, Kitchen, at very reasonable prices.

McCrum's

WOMEN'S White Shoes

IN HIGH CUTS and PUMPS are having a big run.
Women's White Canvas Shoes 8 in. tops, $2.50
Women's White Reginskin High Shoes, 8 in tops, $3.50
Women's White Reginskin High Shoes, 8 in tops, $3.00
All the Leading Styles.

Ramsey The Shoeman

For Play Time

As well as for business you will find the same comfort, the same easy swing, and that snappiness of style in

Our Tailored Clothes

They retain their shape no matter how hard the service you give them. Come in and get a suit before your summer vacation.

Men's Furnishings

If you are particular about your collars, shirts, neckwear, underwear, sox, hats, caps, etc., come in and make selections here.

G. T. ROURKE

Quality Tailor and Men's Wear.

Phone 186, Walkerton, Ont.

WALKERTON TELESCOPE
Published Every Thursday
LORNE A. EEDY - PUBLISHER

Phone No. - 48
Phone No. (Nights) 148

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

Strictly in Advance $1.50
If not paid in Advance $2.00
United States, paid in advance..$2.00
(50c for Postage)
Great Britain, paid in advance..$1.50
France, paid in advance. $2.50
($1.00 for Postage)
50c additional if not paid in advance

WALKERTON, JULY 12th, 1917

EDITORIAL COMMENT

NOT a single Ontario member of Parliament, Liberal or Conservative, voted against the second reading of the Conscription Bill.

+ + +

"OUR forefather's fought in 1812: better a thousand times that we had lost in 1812 than that we should lose in 1917. Had we lost in 1812 today we should be under another form of democratic government—that would be the only change. But if we lose in this conflict we lose all that democratic government stands for: we become not our own master, but the slaves of others."—Hon. Geo. P. Graham.

+ + +

WHILE not so dramatic as the arrial of the first British Army in Belgium in 1914 the landing of a division of the United States army represents one of the great occasions of the war and of history. Never before has a United States army taken part in European conflict. The traditions of the great republic in this important respect and in all pertaining to the policy are shattered forever. The earth, after all, is also one and indivisible. New York and California can no more live in comfort with the Kaiser at Potsdam than a man can walk easy with a pebble in his shoe.

+ + +

NOW that the Military Service Bill is practically certain to be carried, it is to be hoped that the government will give heed to the suggestions made by F. F. Pardee M. P., acting on the invitation of the Premier, and make one last enthusiastic effort to fill the ranks with volunteers. The London Advertiser suggests that as the recruiting meeting and personal canvass have had their days, this could be done effectively by sending out notices without delay to all the most likely recruits pointing out to them that as conscription was now certain to be put in force by a certain date unless the required numbers volunteered before that date, and requesting all to reconsider their attitude and preserve the voluntary character of Canada's army by offering their services! It would bring home to the individual the, fact that he personally was known to the Government and would be one of the first called under compulsion. Let Quebec be circularized as thoroughly as any other province, and let the needs of the nation be brought vividly before the young French-Canadians. Even if the scheme should not prove a complete success, it would strengthen the hands of the Government in enforcing conscription if it could show that one real earnest effort had been made to avoid the necessity.

+ + +

WOULD HELP LOCAL MERCHANTS

Mr. John Kennedy, vice-president of the Grain Growers Grain Co. of Winnipeg, who is prominent in the United Farmers movement, said at a big meeting at Listowel last week that he didn't believe that it was wise for the United Farmers to do anything to interfere with the success and preservation of the towns and villages, and we wish, he stated, to preserve local business men so long as it doesn't cost too much. The position of the local merchant today is the same, said the speaker, as with the farmer when unorganized. He is the victim, the speaker stated, of the wholesale. Usually his order is small and unattractive and often not for cash, with the result, Mr. Kennedy claimed, that he was at a disadvantage in competing with catalogue houses, doing a large volume of business and with millions of cash, which enabled them to ignore the wholesaler and buy direct from the manufacturers. The wholesaler, said Mr. Kennedy, exacts a profit of 20 per cent. to 30 per cent. To this is added the local merchant's profit of from 10 per cent. to 30 per cent., which makes a wide margin between what the manufacturer secures and the purchaser pays. In order to overcome this he would have the merchants organize the same as the Grain Growers' Company. "If they cannot organize," said Mr. Kennedy, "we are prepared to take them under our wings."

+ + +

Read Every Page

Under our new home print arrangement the Telescope is now local from first to last. Don't look for all the local news on the outside page. A peep into the inside will reveal the fact that all pages are local and some of the best items are on the inside.

Mr. R. E. Truax's Speech

Favors the Principle of Conscription—Votes to Let the People Have Their Say.

Mr. Speaker, this is one of the most important matters that has been considered by this House since Confederation. It affects the whole of the Canadian people, and for that reason will have to be very carefully considered.

When I was home about ten days ago, I was asked what had become of about 75,000 of the men who enlisted in Canada. There are many rural mail delivery routes in Ontario; practically all the farmers take the daily papers and read them carefully. On January 22 the Prime Minister stated that we had enlisted up to that time 413,279 volunteers. He said that in addition, 5,000 French reservists, 7,500 Russians and 5,000 Italians had gone overseas from Canada, making a total of 434,500. The Minister of Militia stated a couple of weeks ago in answer to a question that 312,503 men of all ranks had crossed the ocean and that 25,475 were drilling in Canada. According to those figures, 75,000 men who enlisted are missing not accounted for. I think that the Government ought to give a fuller explanation of this matter than has already been given, because the people cannot understand the cause of the discrepancy.

A good deal has been said about voluntary enlistment. Since August 4, 1914, nearly 2,490 volunteers have left the County of Bruce for the front. About 800 of these went with the first and second contingents and the remainder trained with the 71st Battalion of Galt. On October 15, 1915, permission was given for the raising of a battalion in the county of Bruce. A commanding officer was selected and sent out by the Minister of Militia. He took charge of the work and carried it on actively; the citizens co-operated with him; public meetings were held in every town, village and hamlet throughout the country. In many township halls, meetings were held in which the county judge took a very prominent part. The result was that after three months' work a battalion of 1,350 men was organized. In fact, the enlistment of the battalion was completed by the 1st of February. The Government gave no assistance to that work. The Minister of Militia did not visit the county. If a by-election had been taken place in the county, we would have had a visit from the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Sir George Foster) and the Solicitor General Hon. Arthur Meighen. They usually pay the county a visit on such occasions. Not a dollar was given by the Government to assist the work of recruiting there, nor did any of the Cabinet Ministers come into the county to lend their aid.

The sources from which we may be enabled to get men for military service do not appear to me to be extraordinary large. The following is a statement of the number of men, single, married, and widowed, of the various classes mentioned in the Military Service Bill, who were in Canada in 1911:

Class	Age	Number of men
1 and 4	20-23	346,674
2 and 5	24-28	396,147
3 and 6	29-34	373,667
7 and 8......	35-41	355,010
9 and 10	42-45	161,761
Total................		1,634,449

In classes 1, 2, 4 and 5, ages 20 to 29, the proportion of single men to married men is: single men, 521,932; married men, 224,771. In classes 3, 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10, ages 30 to 45, the estimated number is 837,740, in the proportion of 5 married men to 2 single men. The male population of Canada of all ages over twenty-one years is 2,197,746, viz., British-born, 1,851,223; foreign-born, 346,523. Of the British-born population, 78 per cent is native Canadian and 22 per cent from Great Britain. Of the foreign-born population, only 39 per cent is naturalized.

In estimating the population now available for conscription, the following facts and figures must be borne in mind:—

1. Number already enlisted, 411,000.
2. Essential occupations cannot be drawn upon except to a limited extent.

(a) Agriculture—The rural population, which is mostly engaged in agriculture, is more than one-half the total, 3,924,394 rural to 3,280,444 urban.

(b) Transportation—including railways, lakes, canals, teaming, cartage.

(c) Mining, lumbering and fisheries.

Nearly all those engaged in the above occupations are adult males. The Canada Year Book, 1915, gives the following figures: Total Industrial workers, 2,723,631. In agriculture, 933,735 in transportation, 217,544; in mining, 62,767 in forestry, 42,014; in fishing, etc., 34,812. Total, 1,291,772, or nearly one-half of the total workers. To this must be added the male adult population necessarily working in munitions.

3. The daily rejections by the medical authorities prove that a very large percentage is physically unfit; too small in height, narrow chested, afflicted with bad eye-sight, or suffering from infirmities.

4. The French-Canadian population is two-sevenths of the Canadian total, that is 2,050,800. It is largely occupied in agriculture and lumbering much more so than the population of Ontario, and the total number of French-Canadians enlisted is only 14,000.

5. One-fourteenth part of Canada's population is of enemy origin: Germany, Austria-Hungary and Bulgaria, to the number of 528,298. Therefore, it will be seen that when conscription comes into force we shall not have a very large number of men to draw from.

As to recruiting in the county of Bruce, in one township of 2,800 people 159 have voluntarily enlisted. I take this from the number of enlistments given weekly in a weekly paper published in the township. Six of these men have been killed at the front and one has died of wounds. If the same energy in recruiting had been displayed in other counties in Ontario, that province alone would have brought forth every volunteer the Premier has asked for, not to speak of the western provinces and eastern provinces. I have nothing to say in reference to recruiting in Quebec. The people in that province are perfectly competent to take care of that matter.

We must be careful not to draw away all the help from the farmers. I notice this article in today's "Citizen" in regard to this matter:

> The Organization of Resources Committee is putting forth special effort to secure competent help to assist farmers in the Ottawa Valley district, who cannot get help locally, for haying and harvesting operations. The plan is to secure able-bodied men chiefly from the manufacturing centres, who by special arrangements with their employers, are permitted to go to the farmers' assistance for a period of three weeks. Two three-week periods are being arranged for, one to begin on July 16th and the other on August 6.
>
> Farmers desiring this special help should write at once to the office of the honourary secretary, Mr. L. H. Newman, Canadian Building, Ottawa. The suggested minimum wage of these men is the military wage of $1.10 per day, but the farmer is expected to pay for services rendered.

I believe that before the Bill is put into force, every effort should be made to secure voluntary enlistments, and the greatest effort that was ever put forth by the people of Canada should be in the interests of voluntary enlistment. I think the whole energies of the loyal British people of Canada should be put into force to encourage enlisting. In my opinion selected conscription should not be put in force until the volunteer enlisting has completely failed.

We are asking the farmer to produce. Great care must be taken not to rob the farmers of the help they will require to take off their hay and harvest. It looks at the present time as if Ontario would have a very large crop, and as a great number from the rural sections have already enlisted, it has left the farmers very short of help. We have been asking and urging them to increase food production and at the same time their help has been leaving them. The farmers have made a special effort this year to put in as large a crop as possible. This has been caused largely by the increased prices, and the great call for food production has stimulated them to them to a greater degree than any thing else could The three Prairie Provinces to the west of us are apparently going to have a fairly large crop. In former years they have drawn from Ontario ten to fifteen thousand of our young men to help in the harvest field. A certain number of these young men have gone West, and have stayed in those provinces until November to help with the threshing and fall ploughing. Some of them take up land and remain there. It must be kept in mind that the West has received in the last thirty years from the province of Ontario a very large immigration, which has steadily, year after year, drained the young men from the older part of Canada. Many of them have taken up land in the West and have become well-to-do farmers.

Many of the wood-working establishments in Ontario are very short of help, and if conscription is put into force, it no doubt will take many young men and farm labourers away from the farms, and it will also take a large number of young men from the factories, which they can ill afford to spare.

The cost of living during the last two years has increased in many cases nearly fifty per cent. It is true that wages have advanced in a great many cases, but not in proportion to the increased cost of living. In many cases some lines of manufacturers could employ a third more men than they are doing now. The very best of our young men have enlisted and gone to the front. In many cases the best mechanics that we have in the province have gone, and this has left the manufacturers short of skilled help. It is true that the munition factories are paying very high wages, more than factories manufacturing other lines of goods can afford to pay, and so well they might, as I notice that twenty-two of these Canadian firms paid last year $5,297,270 in excess profit taxes. This great sum was only 6 per cent of their profits in excess of 7 per cent. This would show that each of these twenty-two firms, after paying the Government this large amount, had each of them nearly three-quarters of a million dollars of profit over and above their 7 per cent.

I have no objection to those firms making good fair profits, but I think the amount that they are making is exorbitant, and unfair to our soldier boys who are standing up in the firing line for $1.10 a day. I think it is unfair to pay munition workers $5 and $7 a day when we are asking the flower of Canada, the finest young men we have, to stand up in the firing line for $1.10 a day. The Government should increase the pay of our soldiers materially, say from $2.50 to $3 per day, and for this purpose they should conscript the wealth of this country as well as our man power.

I am in favor of the principle of conscription. I am not in favour of the present Bill. I shall vote for the referendum.

BOWLERS AT CARGILL

Three Walkerton Rinks Enjoy A Friendly Match at Neighboring Town Thursday Night.

The Bowlers went up to Cargill last Thursday night and had a good time with their neighboring brethren. The visitors barely on out won the play, being one shot up. The score:—

WALKERTON.	CARGILL.
C. H. Rogers	C. Powers
H. G. Hooker	W. Knox
T. Pye	C. W. Keeling
A. McNab	R. A. Fowlie
skip 10.	Skip 24.
C. Petteplace	C. Thompson
T. Brown	W. D. Cargill
E. McConnell	G. F. Sanders
J. T. Clancy	R. Loughleen
Skip—17	Skip—13.
Dr. Clapp	T. Brownscombe
Major Henderson	Dr. Bricker
A. Henluger	Jas. Garland
A. P. Stevetight	C. Kyle
Skip—20,	Skip—10.

CARRICK

Mildmay, June 25th 1917.

Carrick Council met this day pursuant to adjournment. All the members present. The Reeve in the chair. The minutes of last meeting were read and adopted.

The following account were recommended to be paid:

A Durrer, gravel accout.	9 54
W Perschbacker, 67 yds gravel..	4 69
P Kreitz, gravel account	3 40
I Gowdy, repairing grader	2 10
P Schumacher, 66 yds gravl.......	4 62
Mildmay Elec Light Co	223 00
H Keelan, ½ yrs sal as treasurer..	45 00
J A Johnston ½ yrs sal as clerk..137	50
H Wolfe, 84 yds gravel	5 88
Buhlman & Schmaltz, for ham...	20 79
E Stroder, 50 yds gravl	3 50
J Palm, 56 yds gravel	3 92
P Heuch, ½ cost work Norm Dev..	14 40
J Hahn, 155 loads gravel	9 30
J Palm, making concrete tile ...160	85
S Huber, 68 yds gravel	47 6
J Drummond, 79 yds gravel ...	7 90
Hy Wolfe, 77 loads gravel......	4 62
M. Filsinger, 1 mtg, 2½ dys R&B	9 00
L Doering, 1 mtg. 1 day R & B..	5 25
Joe Montag, 1 mtg, 2 dys R &B.	7 75
A Lewis, 1 mtg. 1½ dys R & B..	6 50
C Wagner, 1 mtg. 2 dys R & B..	7 72
STATUTE LABOR
D W Clubine, 186 hrs work......	32 55
Gus Schnurr, 90 hrs	14 40
J Schefter, 64 hrs	10 24
Dick Culliton, 10 hrs	1 50
John Weiler, 45½ hrs with team and hauling grader	16 17
Sol Bilger, 30 hrs work	4 80
Hy Schmidt, hauling lumber ...	1 22
Geo Culliton, 20 hrs with team..	7 00
Frank Lobsinger, 10 hrs, team.	3 60

A delegate of fifty representative rate-payers of the Township of Carrick waited on Council praying that the sum of One Thousand dollars be granted to the Y. M. C. A which is doing such splendid work for the soldiers at the front. Capt McNabb, a representative of the Y. M. C. A. and others addressed the Council.

After the matter was given due consideration, it was moved by Filsinger, seconded by Doering, that the sum of $1000 be granted to the Y. M. C. A.

Wagner - Montag - That the Council do now adjourn to meet again on Monday, the thirtieth day of July next for the transaction of general business. - Carried

PURITY FLOUR
the Efficient Flour

The real baking foundation for white, even-textured bread; delicious, dainty cakes and light, flaky, mouth-melting pastry. High in food values and distinctively pleasing to the taste.

SPECIAL
The Purity Flour Cook Book

the latest publication on modern kitchen practice; a 180 page de luxe, general purpose, kitchen encyclopedia, carrying between its covers reliable and tried recipes for all manner of dishes for the ordinary meals, as well as economical instructions for the preparation of dainty desserts and delicious confections for special occasions.

Mailed postpaid on receipt of 20 cents.

WESTERN CANADA FLOUR MILLS COMPANY, LIMITED
TORONTO - WINNIPEG

Goes to Press

JULY 20th

Please report changes required to our Local Office, to-day.

The Bell Telephone Co. of Canada

Fall Term From August 27

ELLIOTT
Business College

Yonge and Charles Sts., Toronto, is unquestionably one of Canada's best Commercial Schools. The demand for our graduates is far beyond our supply. Write for our Catalogue.

W. J. Elliott, Principal.

WE PHOTOGRAPH MEN AS MEN ARE

It's a business matter and there is no fuss or bother. Your family, friends and business associates want your portrait.

FRASER STUDIO

Fall Term
From, Sept. 4th

CENTRAL
Business College
STRATFORD, ONT.

COMMERCIAL, SHORTHAND & TELEGRAPHY DEPARTMENTS

We have thorough courses, experienced instructors and we place our graduates in positions. Demand upon us for trained help is many times the number graduating. Get our free catalogue.

D. A. McLACHLAN
PRINCIPAL

Inside the Lines

By EARL DERR BIGGERS
AND
ROBERT WELLS RITCHIE

Copyright, 1915, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

down and look 'em over." Sherman's good humor was quite restored. He pinched Kitty's arm in compliment for her guile. "Maybe they'll let us look at their stuff without charging anything. But we couldn't buy a postage stamp, remember."

They sailed out into the crowded street and lost themselves amid the scourings of Africa and south Europe. Almer was alone in the office.

The proprietor fidgeted. He walked to the door and looked down the street in the direction of the quays. He pulled his watch from his pocket and compared it with the blue face of the Dutch clock on the wall. His podgy hands clasped and unclasped themselves behind his back nervously. An Arab hotel porter and runner at the docks came swinging through the front door with a small steamer trunk on his shoulders, and Almer started forward expectantly. Behind the porter came a tall well knit man dressed in quiet traveling suit—the Captain Woodhouse who had sailed from Alexandria as a passenger aboard the Princess Mary.

He paused for an instant as his eyes met those of the proprietor. Almer bowed and hastened behind the desk. Woodhouse stepped up to the register and scanned it casually.

"A room, sir?" Almer held out a pen invitingly.

"For the night, yes," Woodhouse answered shortly, and he signed the register. Almer's eyes followed the strokes of the pen eagerly.

"Ah, from Egypt, captain? You were aboard the Princess Mary, then?"

"From Alexandria, yes. Show me my room, please. Beastly tired."

The Arab porter darted forward, and Woodhouse was turning to follow him when he nearly collided with a man just entering the street door. It was Mr. Billy Capper.

Both recoiled as their eyes met. Just the faintest flicker of surprise, instantly suppressed, tightened the muscles of the captain's jaws. He murmured a "Beg pardon" and started to pass. Capper deliberately set himself in the other's path and, with a wry smile, held out his hand.

"Captain Woodhouse, I believe." Capper put a tang of sarcasm, corroding as acid, into the words. He was still smiling. The other man drew back and eyed him coldly.

"I do not know you. Some mistake," Woodhouse said.

Almer was moving around from behind the desk with the soft tread of a cat, his eyes fixed on the hard bitten face of Capper.

"Hah! Don't recognize the second cabin passengers aboard the Princess Mary, eh?" Capper sneered. "Little bit discriminating that way, eh? Well, my name's Capper—Mr. William Capper. Never heard the name—in Alexandria—what?"

"You are drunk. Stand aside!" Woodhouse spoke quietly. His face was very white and strained. Almer launched himself suddenly between the two and laid his hands roughly on Capper's thin shoulders.

"Out you go!" he choked in a thick guttural. "I'll have no loafer insulting guests in my house."

"Oh, you won't, won't you? But supposing I want to take a room here—pay you good English gold for it. You'll sing a different tune, then."

"Before I throw you out, kindly leave my place." By a quick turn Almer had Capper facing the door; his grip was iron. The smaller man tried to walk to the door with dignity. There he paused and looked back over his shoulder.

"Remember, Captain Woodhouse," he called back, "remember the name against the time we'll meet again. Capper—Mr. William Capper."

Capper disappeared. Almer came back to begin profuse apologies to his guest. Woodhouse was coolly lighting a cigarette. Their eyes met.

CHAPTER VIII.

Chaff of War.

DINNER that evening in the faded dining room of the Hotel Splendide was in the way of being a doleful affair for the folk from Kewanee, aside from Captain Woodhouse, the only persons at table there. Woodhouse, true to the continental tradition of exclusiveness, had isolated himself against possible approach by sitting at the table farthest from the Shermans. His back presented an uncompromising denial of fraternity. As for Mrs. Sherman, the afternoon's visit to the bazaars had been anything but a solace, emphasizing, as it did, their grievous poverty in the midst of a plenty contemptuous of a mere letter of credit. Henry J. was wallowing in the lowest depths of nostalgia. He tortured himself with the reflection that this was lodge night in Kewanee and he would not be sitting in his chair. Miss Kitty contemplated with melancholy the distress of her parents.

A tall, slender youth with tired eyes and affecting the blase slouch of the boulevards appeared in the door and cast about for a choice of tables. Him Mr. Sherman impaled with a glance of disapproval which suddenly changed to wondering recognition. He dropped his fork and jumped to his feet.

"Bless me, mother, if it isn't Willy Kimball from old Kewanee!" Sherman waved his napkin at the young man, summoning him in the name of Kewanee to come and meet the home folks. The tired eyes lighted perceptibly and a lukewarm smile played about Mr. Kimball's effeminate mouth as he stepped up to the table.

"Why, Mrs. Sherman—and Kitty! And you, Mr. Sherman—charmed!" He accepted the proffered seat by the side of Kitty, receiving their hearty hails with languid politeness. With the sureness of English restraint Mr. Willy Kimball refused to become excited. He was of the type of exotic Americans who try to forget grandpa's corn fed hogs and grandma's hand churned butter. His speech was of Rotten row and his clothes Piccadilly.

"Terrible business this!" The youth fluttered his hands feebly. "All this harrying about and peeping at passports by every silly officer one meets. I'm afraid I'll have to go over to America until it's all over—on my way now, in fact."

"Afraid!" Sherman sniffed loudly and appraised Mr. Kimball's tailoring with a disapproving eye. "Well, Willy, it would be too bad if you had to go back to Kewanee after your many years in Paris. Now, wouldn't it?"

Kimball turned to the women for sympathy. "Reserved a compartment to come down from Paris. Beastly treatment. Held up at every city; other people crowded in my apartment, though I'd paid to have it alone, of course; soldier chap comes along and seizes my valet and makes him join the colors and all that sort"—

"Hah! Your father managed to worry along without a val-lay, and he was respected in Kewanee." This in disgust from Henry J.

Kitty dashed a reproving glance at her father and deftly turned the expatriate into a recounting of his adventures. Under her unaffected lead the youth, who shuddered inwardly at the appellation of "Willy," thawed considerably, and soon there was an animated swapping of reminiscences of the great terror—hours on end before the banks and express offices, dodging of police impositions, scrambling for steamer accommodations—all that went to compose the refugee Americans' great epic of August, 1914.

Sherman took pride in his superior adventures: "Five times arrested between Berlin and Gibraltar, and what I said to that Dutchman on the Swiss frontier was enough to make his hair curl.

"Tell you what, Willy; you come on back to Kewanee with us and mother and you'll lecture before the Thursday Afternoon Ladies' Literary club," Sherman boomed, with a hearty blow of the hand between Willy's shoulder blades. "I'll have Ed Porter announce it in advance in the Daily Enterprise, and we'll have the whole town there to listen. 'Ezra Kimball's Boy Tells Thrilling Tale of War's Alarms'—that's the way the headlines 'll read in the Enterprise next week."

The expatriate shivered and tried to smile.

"We'll let mother do the lecturing," Kitty came to his rescue. "'How to Live In Europe on a Letter of Discredit'—that will have all the gossips of Kewanee buzzing, mother."

The meal drew to a close happily in contrast to its beginning. Mrs. Sherman and her daughter rose to pass out into the reception room. Sherman and Kimball lingered.

"Ah-h, Willy"—

"Mr. Sherman"—

Both began in unison, each somewhat furtive and shamefaced.

"Have-you any money?" The queries were voiced as one. For an instant confusion; then the older man looked up into the younger's face—a bit flushed it was—and guffawed.

"Not a postage stamp, Willy! I guess we're both beggars, and if mother and Kitty didn't have five trunks between them this Swiss holdup man who says he's proprietor of this way station hotel wouldn't trust us for a fried egg."

"Same here," admitted Kimball. "I'm badly bent."

"They can't keep us down—us Americans!" Sherman cheered, taking the youth's arm and piloting him out into the reception room. "We'll find a way out if we have to cable for a warship to come and get us."

Just as Sherman and Kimball emerged from the dining room there was a diversion out beyond the glass doors on Waterport street. A small cart drew up. From its seat jumped a young woman in a duster and with a heavy automobile veil swathed under her chin. To the Arab porter who had bounded out to the street she gave directions for the removal from the cart of her baggage, two heavy suit cases and two ponderous osier baskets. These latter she was particularly tender of, following them into the hotel's reception room and directing where they should be put before the desk.

The newcomer was Jane Gerson, Hildebrand's buyer, at the end of a motor flight from Paris. In the French capital she had managed after considerable difficulty to have an interview with the American ambassador and his wife. The latter was completely won by Jane's story of her anxiety to get herself and her gowns quickly back to New York. It was the ambassador's wife who suggested her going to Gibraltar and who arranged the necessary details of the trip for her. Cool, capable, self reliant as on the night she saw the bastions of the capital's outer forts fade under the white spikes of the searchlights, Jane strode up to the desk to face the smiling Almer.

"Is this a fortress or a hotel?" she challenged.

"A' hotel, lady, a hotel," Almer purred. "A nice room—yes. Will the lady be with us long?"

"Heaven forbid! The lady is going to be on the first ship leaving for New York. And if there are no ships I'll look over the stock of coal barges you have in your harbor." She seized a pen and dashed her signature on the register. The Shermans had pricked up their ears at the newcomer's first words. Now Henry J. pressed forward, his face glowing welcome.

"An American, a simon pure citizen of the United States! I thought so. Welcome to the little old Rock!" He took both the girl's hands impulsively and pumped them. Mrs. Sherman, Kitty and Willy Kimball crowded around, and the clatter of voices was instantaneous: "By auto from Paris. Goodness me!" "Not a thing to eat for three days but rye bread!" "From Strassburg to Luneville in a farmer's wagon!" Each in a whirlwind of ejaculation tried to outdo the other's story of hardship and privation.

The front doors opened again, and the sergeant and guard who had earlier carried off Fritz, the barber, entered. Again gun butts thumped ominously. Jane looked over her shoulder at the khaki coated men and confided to the Shermans:

"I think that man's been following me ever since I landed from the ferry."

"I have," answered the sergeant, stepping briskly forward and saluting. "You are a stranger on the Rock. You come here from"—

"From Paris by motor to the town across the bay, then over here on the ferry," the girl answered promptly. "What about it?"

"Your name?"

"Jane Gerson. Yes, yes, it sounds German, I know. But that's not my fault. I'm an American—a redhot American, too, for the last two weeks."

The sergeant's face was wooden.

"Where are you going?"

"To New York on the Saxonia just as soon as I can. And the British army can't stop me."

"Indeed!" The sergeant permitted himself a fleeting smile. "From Paris by motor, eh? Your passports, please."

"I haven't any," Jane retorted, with a shade of defiance. "They were taken from me in Spain, just over the French border, and were not returned."

The sergeant raised his eyebrows in surprise not unmixed with irony. He pointed to the two big osier baskets, demanding to know what they contained.

"Gowns—the last gowns made in Paris before the crash, fashion's last gasp. I am a buyer of gowns for Hildebrand's store in New York."

Ecstatic gurgles of pleasure from Mrs. Sherman and her daughter greeted this announcement. They pressed about the baskets and regarded them lovingly.

The sergeant pushed them away and tried to throw back the covers.

"Open your baggage—all of it!" he commanded snappishly.

Jane, explaining over her shoulder to the women, stooped to fumble with the hasps.

"Seventy of the darlingest gowns, the very last Paul Pierre and Hacket and Gerth made before they closed shop and marched away with their regiments. You shall see every one of them."

"Plans of what?" the sergeant glared.

"Hurry, please! My time's limited!" the sergeant barked.

"I should think it would be, you're so charming," Jane flung back over her shoulder, and she raised the tops of the baskets. The other women pushed forward with subdued coos.

The sergeant plunged his hand under a mass of colored fluffiness, groped for a minute and brought forth a long roll of heavy paper. With a fierce mien he began to unroll the bundle.

"And these?"

"Plans," Hildebrand's buyer answered.

"Plans of what?" The sergeant glared.

"Of gowns, silly! Here, you're looking at that one upside down! This way! Now, isn't that a perfect dear of an afternoon gown? See that lovely basque effect? Everything's moyen age this season, you know."

Jane, with a shrewd sidelong glance at the flustered sergeant, rattled on, bringing gown after gown from the baskets and displaying them to the chorus of smothered screams of delight from the feminine part of her audience. One she draped coquettishly from her shoulders and did an exaggerated step before the smoky mirror over the mantelpiece to note the effect.

"Isn't it too bad this soldier person isn't married, so he could appreciate these beauties?" She flicked a mischievous eye his way. "Of course he can't be married or he'd recognize the plan of a gown. Clean hands there, Mr. Sergeant, if you're going to touch any of these dreams! Here, let me! Now look at that mousquetaire sleeve, the effect of the war—military, you know."

The sergeant was thoroughly angry by this time, and he forced the situation suddenly near tragedy. Under his fingers a delicate girdle crackled suspiciously.

"Here—your knife! Rip this open! There are papers of some sort hidden here." He started to pass the gown to one of his soldiers. Jane choked back a scream.

"No, no! That's crinoline, stupid! No papers"— She stretched forth her arms appealingly. The sergeant humped his shoulders and put out his hand to take the opened clasp knife.

A plump, doll faced woman who possessed an afterglow of prettiness and a bustling, nervous manner, flounced through the doors at this juncture and burst suddenly into the midst of the group caught in the imminence of disaster.

"What's this, what's this?" She caught sight of the filmy creation draped from the sergeant's arm. "Oh, the beauty!" This in a whisper of admiration.

"The last one made by Gerth," Jane was quick to explain, noting the sergeant's confusion in the presence of the stranger, "and this officer is going to rip it open in a search for concealed papers. He takes me for a spy."

Surprised blue eyes were turned from Jane to the sergeant. The latter shamefacedly tried to slip the open knife into his blouse, mumbling an excuse. The blue eyes bored him through.

"I call that very stupid, sergeant," reproved the angel of rescue. Then to Jane:

"Where are you taking all these wonderful gowns?"

"To New York. I'm buyer for Hildebrand's and"—

"But, Lady Crandall, this young woman has no passports—nothing," the sergeant interposed. "My duty"—

"Bother your duty! Don't you know a Gerth gown when you see it? Now go away! I'll be responsible for this young woman from now on. Tell your commanding officer Lady Crandall has taken your duty out of your hands." She finished with a quiet assurance and turned to gloat once more over the gowns. The sergeant led his command away with evident relief.

Lady Crandall turned to include all the refugees in a general introduction of herself.

"I am Lady Crandall, the wife of the governor general of Gibraltar," she said, with a warming smile. "I just came down to see what I could do for you poor stranded Americans. In these times"—

"An American yourself, I'll gamble on it!" Sherman pushed his way between the littered baskets and seized Lady Crandall's hands. "Knew it by the cut of your jib—and—your way of doing things. I'm Henry J. Sherman, from Kewanee, Illynoy—my wife and daughter Kitty."

"And I'm from Iowa—the red hills of ole Ioway," the governor's wife chanted, with an orator's flourish of the hands. "Welcome to the Rock, home folks!"

Hands all around and an impromptu old home week right then and there. Lady Crandall's attention could not be long away from the gowns, however. She turned back to them eagerly. With Jane Gerson as her aid, she passed them in rapturous review, Mrs. Sherman and Kitty playing an enthusiastic chorus.

CHAPTER IX.

An Unexpected Meeting.

A PURSY little man with an air of supreme importance—Henry Reynolds he was, United States consul at Gibraltar—catapaulted in from the street while the gown chatter was at its noisiest. He threw his hands above his head in a mock attitude of submissiveness before a highwayman.

"'S all fixed, ladies and gentlemen," he cried with a showman's eloquence. "Here's Lady Crandall come to tell you about it, and she's so busy riding her hobby—gowns and millinery and such—she has forgotten. I'll bet dollars to doughnuts."

"Credit to whom credit is due, Mr. Consul," she rallied. "I'm not stealing anybody's official thunder." The consul wagged a forefinger at her reprovingly. With impatience the refugees waited to hear the news.

"Well, it's this way," Reynolds began. "I've got so tired having all you people sitting on my doorstep I just had to make arrangements to ship you on the Saxonia in self defense. Saxonia's due here from Naples Thursday, day after tomorrow; sails for New York at dawn Friday morning. Lady Crandall here—and a better American never came out of the middle west—has agreed to go bond for your passage money. All your letters of credit and checks will be cashed by treasury agents before you leave the dock at New York, and you can settle with the steamship people right there.

"No, no; don't thank me. There's the person responsible for your getting home." The consul waved toward the governor's lady, who blushed rosily under the tumultuous blessings showered on her. Reynolds ducked out the door to save his face. The Shermans made their good nights and, with Kimball, started toward the stairs.

"Thursday night, before you sail," Lady Crandall called to them, "you all have an engagement, a regular American dinner with me at the government house. Remember!"

"If you have hash—plain hash—and don't call it a rag-owt we'll eat you out of house and home," Sherman shouted as addendum to the others' thanks.

"And you, my dear"—Lady Crandall beamed upon Jane—"you're coming right home with me to wait for the Saxonia's sailing. Oh, no; don't be too ready with your thanks. This is pure selfishness on my part. I want you to help plan my fall clothes. There, the secret's out. But with all those beautiful gowns surely Hildebrand will not object if you leave the pattern of one of them in an out of the way little place like this. Come on now; I'll not take no for an answer. We'll pack up all these beauties and have you off in no time."

Jane's thanks were ignored by the capable packer who smoothed and straightened the confections of silk and satin in the osier hampers. Lady Crandall summoned the porter to lift the precious freight to the back of her dogcart, waiting outside. Almer, perturbed at the kidnaping of his guest, came from behind the desk.

"Your silence—perhaps you will do me that favor."

"You will go to your room now?" he queried anxiously.

"Not going to take it," Jane answered. "Have an invitation from Lady Crandall to visit the statehouse, or whatever you call it."

"But, pardon me, the room—it was rented, and I fear one night's lodging is due. Twenty shillings."

Jane elevated her eyebrows, but handed over a bill.

"Ah, no, lady; French paper—it is worthless to me. Only English gold, if the lady pleases." Almer's smile was leonine.

"But it's all I've got. Just came from France, and"—

"Then, though it gives me the greatest sorrow, I must hold your luggage until you have the money changed. Excuse"—

Captain Woodhouse, who had dallied long over his dinner for lack of something else to do, came out of the dining room just then, saw a woman in difficulties with the landlord and instinctively stepped forward to offer his services.

"Beg pardon, but can I be of any help?"

Jane turned. The captain's heart gave a great leap and then went cold. Frank pleasure followed the first surprise in the girl's eyes.

"Why, Captain Woodhouse, how jolly to see you again after"—

She put out her hand with a free gesture of comradeship.

Captain Woodhouse did not see the girl's hand. He was looking into her eyes coldly, aloofly.

"I beg your pardon, but aren't you mistaken?"

"Mistaken?" The girl was staring at him, mystified.

"I'm afraid I have not had the pleasure of meeting you," he continued evenly. "But if I can be of service—now"—

She shrugged her shoulders and turned away from him.

"A small matter. I owe this man 20 shillings, and he will not accept French paper. It's all I have."

Woodhouse took the note from her.

"I'll take it gladly—perfectly good." He took some money from his pocket and looked at it. Then to Almer, "I say, can you split a crown?"

"Change for you in a minute, sir—the tobacco shop down the street." Almer pocketed the gold piece and dodged out of the door.

Jane turned and found the deep set gray eyes of Captain Woodhouse fixed upon her. They craved pardon—toleration of the incident just passed.

Woodhouse hurried to Jane Gerson's side and began to speak swiftly and earnestly:

"You are from the States?"

A shrug was her answer. The girl's face was averted, and in the defiant set of her shoulders Woodhouse found little promise of pardon for the incident of the minute before. He persisted:

"This war means nothing to you—one side or the other?"

"I have equal pity for them both," she answered in a low voice.

"We are living in dangerous times," he continued earnestly. "I tell you frankly were the fact that you and I had met before to become known here on the Rock the consequences would be most—inconvenient—for me." Jane turned and looked searchingly into his face. Something in the tone rather than the words roused her quick sympathy. Woodhouse kept on:

"I am sorry I had to deny that former meeting just now—that meeting which has been with me in such vivid memory. I regret that were you to allude to it again I would have to deny it still more emphatically."

"I'm sure I shan't mention it again," the girl broke in shortly.

"Perhaps since it means so little to you—your silence—perhaps you will do me the favor, Miss Gerson."

"Certainly." Woodhouse could see that anger still tinged her speech.

"May I go further and ask you to—promise?" A shadow of annoyance crossed her brow, but she nodded.

"That is very good of you," he thanked her. "Shall you be long on the Rock?"

"No longer than I have to. I'm sailing on the first boat for the States," she answered.

"Then I am in luck—tonight." Woodhouse tried to speak easily, though Jane Gerson's attitude was distant. "Meeting you again—that's luck."

"To judge by what you have just said, it must be instead a great misfortune," she retorted, with a slow smile.

"That is not fair. You know what I mean. Don't imagine I've really forgotten our first meeting under happier conditions than these. I know I'm not clever. I can't make it sound as I would, but I've thought a great deal of you, Miss Gerson—wondering how you were making it in this great war. Perhaps"—

Almer returned at this juncture with the change, which he handed to Woodhouse. He was followed in by Lady Crandall, who assured Jane her hampers were securely strapped to the dogcart. Jane attempted an introduction.

"This gentleman has just done me a service, Lady Crandall. May I present"—

"So sorry. You don't know my name. My clumsiness. Captain Woodhouse." The man bridged the dangerous gap hurriedly. Lady Crandall acknowledged the introduction with a gracious smile.

"Your husband is Sir George"— he began.

"Yes; Sir George Crandall, governor general of the Rock. And you"—

"Quite a recent comer. Transferred from the Nile country here. Report tomorrow."

"All of the new officers have to report to the governor's wife as well," Lady Crandall rallied, with a glance at Jane. "You must come and see me—and Miss Gerson, who will be with me until her boat sails."

Woodhouse caught his breath. Jane Gerson, who knew him, at the governor's home! But he mastered himself in a second and bowed his thanks. Lady Crandall was moving toward the door. Her ward turned and held out a hand to Woodhouse.

"So good of you to have straightened out my finances," she said, with a smile in which the man hoped he read full forgiveness for his denial of a few minutes before. "If you're ever in America I hope"— He looked up quickly. "I hope somebody will be as nice to you. Good night."

CHAPTER X.

No. 1932.

WOODHOUSE and Almer were alone in the mongrel reception room. The hour was late. Almer began sliding folding wooden shutters across the back of the street windows. Woodhouse lingered over the excuse of a final cigarette, knowing the moment of his rapprochement with his fellow Wilhelmstrasse spy was at hand. He was more distraught than he cared to admit even to himself. The day's developments had been startling—first the stunning encounter with Capper there on the very Rock that was to be the scene of his delicate operations—Capper, whom he had thought sunk in the oblivion of some Alexandrian wineshop, but who had followed him on the Princess Mary. The fellow had deliberately cast himself into his notice, Woodhouse reflected. There had been menace and insolent hint of a power to harm in his sneering objurgation that Woodhouse should remember his name against a second meeting. "Capper—never heard the name in Alexandria, eh?" What could he mean by that if not that somehow the little ferret had learned of his visit to the home of Dr. Koch? And that meant—why, Capper in Gibraltar was as dangerous as a coiled cobra!

Then the unexpected meeting with Jane Gerson, the little American he had mourned as lost in the fury of the war. Ah, that was a joy not unmixed with regrets! What did she think of him? First, he had been forced coldly to deny the acquaintance that had meant much to him in moments of recollection; then he had attempted a lame explanation, which explained nothing and must have left her more mystified than before. In fact, he had frankly thrown himself on the mercy of a girl on whom he had not the shadow of claim beyond the poor equity of a chance friendship—an incident she might consider as merely one of a day's travel as far as he could know. He had stood before her caught in a deceit, for on the occasion of that never to be forgotten ride from Calais to Paris he had represented himself as hurrying back to Egypt, and here she found him still out of uniform and in a hotel in Gibraltar.

Beyond all this, Jane Gerson was going to the governor's house as a guest. She, whom he had forced, ever so cavalierly, into a promise to keep secret her half knowledge of the double game he was playing, was going to be on the intimate ground of association with the one man in Gibraltar who by a crook of his finger could end suspicion by a firing squad. This breezy little baggage from New York carried his life balanced on the rosy tip of her tongue. She could be careless or she could be indifferent. In either case it would be bandaged eyes and the click of shells going home for him.

It was Almer who interrupted Woodhouse's troubled train of thought.

"Captain Woodhouse will report for signal duty on the Rock tomorrow, I suppose?" he insinuated, coming down to where Woodhouse was standing before the fireplace. He made a show of tidying up the scattered magazines and folders on the table.

(To be continued)

CANADA LOSES LITTLE.

Loss by Abrasion on Gold Coins Negligible.

The circulation of gold coins in Canada never gained large proportions, but since the war none of the Government gold is sent out whatever. Consequently, the loss which Canada sustains is a negligible consideration in this country. However, some countries, notably the United States, lose large amounts in this way.

Reports indicate that half the gold in circulation on the Pacific slope in the States is lightweight, ranging from 51 cents to $1.75 per $1,000. While Canada has lost very little in this way, there is, nevertheless, a law to provide against it. This law states that when one-half of one per cent. of a gold coin is lost through abrasion, it is no longer legal tender. On the smaller gold coin the loss through abrasion is proportionately larger.

Immediately the war started an order-in-Council was passed by the Government stating there would be no Government movement of gold, and the banks took all theirs in. The weights of Canadian gold coins are: Twenty dollars, 516 grains standard, too light for currency, 513.42 grains; ten dollars, 258 grains standard, too light for currency, 256.71 grains; five dollars, 129 grains standard, and too light for currency, 128.355 grains.

Silver is known as token money, and the weights are: one dollar, 360 grains; fifty cents, 180 grains; twenty-five cents, 90 grains; ten cents, 36 grains; five cents, 18 grains. As long as silver is recognizable it is legal tender.

England has a different law. Gold there is sold by the ounce, and the denomination or the amount of abrasion is not taken into consideration.

Canadian Pulp Industry.

The progress that Canada is making toward becoming the world's centre for the manufacture of pulp and paper is indicated in figures recently published by the Department of Trade and Commerce. For the year ended July, 1916, the exports of paper amounted to $21,678,868, of which 88 per cent. went to the United States and 6.2 per cent. to the United Kingdom. This total is an increase of 31 per cent. over the figures for the year previous. The first export shipment of paper from Canada was made in 1892. The total exports for 1902 were but $24,000 and for 1913 only $6,327,000.

The total exports of paper, pulp, and pulpwood for the year ended July, 1916, were $40,865,266, of which the United States received 87 per cent and the United Kingdom 6 per cent. The increase over the previous year was 27 per cent. On the other hand, Canada imported, during the year ended July, 1916, $6,327,228 worth of paper and manufactures of paper.

The foregoing facts, in conjunction with the use by Canadian pulp and paper mills of nearly $9,600,000 worth of pulpwood, indicate the tremendous drain upon Canadian pulpwood resources, according to a statement issued by the conservation commission. This drain is likely to increase rather than diminish, in view of the rapid depletion of accessible supplies of timber suitable for pulpwood in the United States.

If this great source of national wealth is to be perpetuated, much more stringent measures than in the past must be taken to prevent destruction by fire and to insure the restocking to valuable species of cut-over and burned-over areas.—Monetary Times.

Getting More Orders.

The slacking up of munitions orders for the United States, which has been apparent for some time, gets a partial explanation in the increasing activity in munitions manufacture in Canada. Operations here are now conducted under the sole authority of the British Minister of Munitions without responsibility of any kind to the Canadian Government. It is stated as a fact that Canada is now manufacturing more munitions than any other country in the world, except Germany, prior to the war. Munitions factories are located in every province, except Prince Edward Island, but the component parts of shells are largely supplied by the United States. In addition to existing establishments, the British Government has provided for the expenditure of many millions on new munition plants. There is every indication that this business will be expended to its utmost extent, the limit depending largely upon Canada's power to provide credits from which the British Government would pay. The Minister of Finance not only expects this to be done, but looks for fresh subscriptions to future loans which would automatically draw further war orders from Great Britain and her allies.

Codfish Sink a Schooner.

"Codfish Sank Big Schooner" was the title of a news item of recent date, which besides being most unusual, seems to open up a new method of sinking wooden ships of the nations at war at a trifling cost compared with the present $5,000 to $10,000 torpedoes used by submarines and destroyers.

The schooner Ponhook, under a captain and crew of seven men, left St. John, N.B., for the Azores, with a cargo of dried codfish, explains the Popular Science Monthly. Soon afterward she ran into a heavy sea and shipped considerable water. The dry codfish absorbed this like a sponge, and it was but a couple of days before the expansive pressure of the swelled codfish had forced open the seams of the vessel's planking so that the water began to seep in, little by little, until the ship was beyond saving and had to be abandoned.

Be it ever so homely, there is no face like your own.

DELIGHTFUL PROGRAM

Given by Toronto Artists at Presbyterian Church last Wednesday Evening to an Invited Audience.

Walkerton music lovers enjoyed an exceptional treat on Wednesday evening of last week through the good offices of Mr. E. H. Leeson. While Mr. Peter C. Kennedy, principal of the Academy of Music, Toronto, was here examining Mr. Leeson's pupils on the Academy examinations, he arranged to have two of the Academy's most talented pupils, Miss Martin, pianist, and Miss Wilson, soprano vocalist, and pupil of Signor Morando, of the Academy, for an invitation recital. In the short time available, Mr. Leeson was able to see only a limited number of citizens, but those who were present enjoyed one of the finest musical treats ever provided in this town. Both young ladies are absolute artists of exceptional ability. Miss Martin's piano numbers were remarkable. Probably Liszt's XII. Rhapsody bringing out almost every degree of feeling, gave the best idea of her wonderful gift. Miss Wilson, who has a wonderful soprano voice of which she has absolute control as well as faultless techinque, sang a number of pieces of which "With Verdure Clad", a dignified number from Haydn's Creation, a dainty piece, "Will O' The Wisp" and "Big Lady Moon" by Coleridge Taylor were especially enjoyed. Mr. Kennedy acted as accompanist for his pupil.

News About Town

Mrs. Stögel of New York is visiting at Mr. John Tolton's.

Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Klein and family are summering at their cottage at Port Elgin.

Mrs. R. B. Ferguson is visiting her daughter, Mrs. W. E. Hanna at Niagara Falls.

Mrs W. C. Winters was able to be out for the first time this week following her very severe illness.

Mrs. M. J. Ramsey and son Milton, arrived home on Tuesday from a trip to Toronto, Hamilton and Niagara.

Mr. Harry Denny who had his foot badly injured in a dynamite explosion last week, is reported to be doing fine at the Hospital.

Robt. Ritchie of Tessier Sask. who visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. Ritchie here recenty, has been ill with a heavy attack of grippe and lumbago since returning home but is now recovering.

Mr. Will. Sutton of St. Thomas, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Sutton, is holidaying at his old home. Will has completed his four years' apprenticeship as an expert machinist and will remain at the M. C. R. Machine Shops.

Prof. and Mrs A. G. Ede spent Sunday in town at the latter's uncle's, Mr. Thos. Cunningham, while motoring from Woodstock to Mrs. Ede's old home at Olephant. On Sunday evening Mr. and Mrs. Ede delighted the congregation at the Methodist Church with a duett.

Wanted

A housemaid Apply at the Hospital

Young Lady Wanted

For steady position. Apply at the Telescope Office.

Rain Scarce in West

It seems strange that with most of Bruce County swimming in rain-water, parts of the West are actually suffering from drought. Robert Ritchie writes his parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. Ritchie, from Tessier, Sask., that moisture is badly needed in that section. Unless rain comes soon, he writes, the harvest will be light.

Arrested at Owen Sound

Chief of Police Ferguson received instructions this week from the Chief of Police at Owen Sound to arrest two former Walkerton men, Fred Zarn and Joseph Sammons, charged with fraud. The Chief has since learned that these two men are now locked up at Owen Sound. No particulars of the case have reached here.

Want Advertisements

One of the ways in which Want Ads. can be useful to you is in selling for fair prices in cash, any "second hand" articles you may own. They must be good, of course—and priced so that the buyer secures bargains. You can sell any article of furniture, any piece of machinery—anything that still has usefulness for the man who has use for it—through the medium of our advertising columns. Give it a trial.

Removing to Waterloo

Walkerton is losing a highly respected citizen, Mr. Joseph Weiler who is leaving shortly with his family to live in Waterloo. Mr. Weiler intends closing up his wagon business here and disposing of the stock on hand. He is taking a position at Waterloo with the idea of going into business for himself in a short time. Their many Walkerton friends will regret the removal of Mr. and Mrs. Weiler and family from the town.

THE TOWN COUNCIL

Coun. McCarter Demands Apology From Local Publisher and Withdraws From Council Meeting When Mayor will not Back Him up

The Town Council held its regular monthly meeting on Monday night. Present:—Mayor A. P. Johnston, Reeve Russel, Couns. H. Truax, Sanderson, McKinnon, McGregor, McCarter, Vogan.

The outstanding feature of the meeting was Coun. McCarter's demand that the representative of the Herald-Times be not permitted to attend the meetings of Council until he apologized for an article published in his paper headed "Donkey Legislation." He would not sit at the same table with the Times man until he apologized. Coun. McCarter said he recognized the privelege of the press to publish a report of the doings of the Council and to comment fairly but the article in question did not give an account of what was done. It was scurrilous add insulting. The Coun. went to tell the Times man what he thought of him and his paper which he referred to as a "yellow sheet."

Reeve Russell said the article was certainly uncalled for but he personally did not care what they said about him.

Coun. McKinnon said he agreed with Conn. McCarter that the Herald man should apologize.

Coun. Sanderson said the press had a right to criticize the Council in a gentlemanly way but he considered the article in the Times uncalled for and an insult to the Council.

Mayor Johnston said the article should never have been published but he could not agree with Coun. McCarter that the Times man be excluded from the room.

Mr. Wesley said on his own behalf that if Mr. McCarter had a grievance let him air it in Court. He knew his rights in the matter. It had been fought out in Court a dozen times. The Council could not prohibit him for entering the room. Did the Council wish to curtail the freedom of the press?

Somebody moved that the Council adjourn. Coun. McCarter said he wanted the matter settled there and then. As the Councillors did not seem disposed to do anything further, Coun. McCarter a moment later withdrew from the room and did not return for the rest of the meeting.

The Canada Bobbin Co. and other property owners on Durham St. East petitioned for a sidewalk on the North side of Durham St. from the East end of the race bridge to William St. A by-law was put through providing for the walk.

A by-law, fathered by Couns. Truax and McGregor was passed, increasing Night Watchman Swanston's pay from $1 60 to $2.00 per day.

A deputation appeared from the Methodist Trust Board composed of Rev. C. W. Cosens, M. Dippel, and W. G. Searle, regarding the proposed sewer connecting up the Methodist Church and several private properties between Jackson and Yonge Sts. The Streets Committee presented an estimate of cost of the work, $119, and recommended that the Methodist Church pay $90., several private residents $10., leaving $10. to be paid by the town

Garden Ruined by Flood.

Mrs. E. W. Garner wrote the council that her garden had been partially destroyed by the flooding of the water course near her property, and asked to have the matter attended to. The Streets Committee declined to accept responsibility for the damage but suggested that the Mayor appoint a committee, along with the Street's Committee, to see what could be done about the overflowing of Silver Creek. Mayor Johnston, Couns. Truax and Sanderson were named for the purpose.

That Driveway Again

Reeve Russell pointed out that no attention had been paid to the resolution passed at last Council meeting giving Major Henderson and Mr. Goode two weeks to quit using the town property for driveway. He asked what the Council was going to do about it.

Mayor Johnston said he didn't believe the Councillors would have supported the resolution if they had known that the first row of trees at the Town Hall extended into Major Henderson's property and according to law could be trimmed off. Considering the present state of the whole property, it did not look reasonable to complain of the Major using the "park."

Coun. McGregor stated that according to law, the trees would have to be trimmed off, root, branches and all.

Coun. Sanderson said he understood Major Henderson claimed he had a right to use the driveway and the question of ownership should be decided. If the town was trespassing on the Major's property, the trees should be cut down.

Mr. Collins said he had been talking to Major Henderson and the Major did not claim any rights whatever in the matter.

Coun. Russell said he only wished the town's rights protected.

It was agreed that Messrs. Henderson and Goode be permitted to continue using their driveways with a written understanding that they were doing so as a privelege granted by the town, and not as a right.

Lorne A. Eedy was appointed to the Public Library Board, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late James Warren.

Nothing From Hydro Yet

Mayor Johnston asked if any communication had been received from Hydro. Mr. Collins replied that nothing had been received. The Mayor said that Engineer James had told Reeve Russell at Eugenia Falls recently that a statement from Hydro would be here for the July meeting. Mayor Johnston asked the Clerk to write the Hydro Electric Commission and ask for the statement so that it would be here before next meeting sure.

Trouble With Sandy Straightened

Chief Alex. George, who recently sent in his resignation owing to what he considered high-handedness of the Council in purchasing fire supplies without consulting him, appeared before the Council to come to an understanding. In threshing the affair out it was found that there had been a misunderstanding all round. All the Council were in favor of retaining Chief George and giving him full responsibility for the working of the brigade with no interference.

The Peterboro City Council wrote asking the Council to petition the Dom. Gov't. not to make any grant to G. T. R. and Can. Northern—fyled.

The Queen Alexandra Sanitorium of London, where consumptive soldiers are treated, asked for a grant.—Fyled.

The Firemen's Salary list for the last two months was presented for payment, $7.50.

The report of the Town Potato Fund, Mr. Andrew O'Neil, treasurer, stated that 97 bags of potatoes at $3.75 had been handed out, and the balance of the $500 granted by the town, amounting to $173.75 had been handed to the Town Treasurer.

Chief Ferguson reported $9 fees collected for June.

Alex George and a number of other property owners on Durham St. West asked that, as the street-oiling had not been started owing to the lateness of the season, it be dispensed with on their part of the street.—Granted.

A number of small accounts were passed.

News About Town

Didn't Mind A Touch

It isn't often that a "touch" provokes a smile. It all depends on the circumstances. A Walkerton father came out of the telegraph office the other day, his eyes shining with good news. "My boy telegraphed me for twenty dollars "he said. "My, but I was afraid it was something worse"

+ + +

BORN

GOWANLOCK—In Walkerton July 5th, to Mr. and Mrs. James Gowanlock, a daughter.

McCANNEL—In Walkerton, July 6th, to Mr. and Mrs. Alex McCannel, a son.

JOHNSON—In Toronto, on June 13th to Mr. and Mrs. Harold Joseph Johnston, (nee Mary Ellen Butler) a daughter.

EIDT—In Carrick, on July 4th, to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Eidt, a daughter.

SIEGEL—On Thursday, July 5th, to Mr. and Mrs. A. Siegel of Chepstow, a son.

+ + +

DIED

MARSHALL—At Moosejaw, Sask. on June 23rd, Thomas Marshall, formerly of Walkerton, aged 65 years.

Walkerton Markets

(Revised Wednesday, July 11)

Hay, per ton,	10 00 to 12 00
Oats, per bsh,	70 to...... 70
Wheat " "	2.00 to...... 2 00
Barley, " "	1 20 to...... 1 20
Hogs per cwt,	15 50 to...... 15 50
Butter, per lb,	31 to 31
Eggs, per doz	28 to 28

GRAY HAIR

Dr. Tremain's Natural Hair Restorative used as directed, is guaranteed to restore gray hair to its natural color or money refunded. Positively not a dye and non-injurious. Price $1.00, post-paid. Write Tremain Supply Co., Dept. Toronto, Ontario.

On Sale in Walkerton at H. G. Hunter's Drug Store.

WESTERN UNIVERSITY
LONDON - ONTARIO

Three More New Professors Equal to Any in Canada.

Students can now obtain a good an Education in Arts and Medicine at the Western as anywhere.

President — Ex. 8

E. E. Braithwaite, M.A., PhD.

READY-MADE TANKS.

Armadillo, for Instance, Is Well Protected Against Assault.

Now that fighting men are going back to the wearing of armor for protection in battle, it is interesting to note the fact that nature has made similar provision for many animals.

The early Spanish invaders of tropical America were greatly interested in certain species of armored mammals, wholly new to them, which they found plentifully distributed over that part of the New World. They called them "armadillos," because they were encased in coats of mail.

The so-called "great armadillo" attains a length of nearly five feet. It is clad in a complete coat of flint-like armor-plates, and its tail, as solid as if forged in metal, has the shape of a trumpet. In fact, the aborigines of the Amazon valley use it as a trumpet for signaling in war. Even the smaller species of armadillos, however, are equally well protected, the head being defended by a sort of helmet. If attacked by a beast or bird of prey, the creature instantly rolls itself into a ball, thus rendering itself proof against injury.

In ancient times there lived in South America a giant ancestor of the modern armadillos. One of its huge shells, some years ago, was found by an English naturalist in use as a playhouse by half a dozen children. In another native camp (it was in the Pampas region) he came across a trumpet as big as those commonly employed on ships. It was the tail of a specimen of the extinct armored mammal.

Alligators and crocodiles, of course, are familiar to-day as types of the armored reptile. They are clad in complete mail, which is certainly proof against buckshot, and is hardly penetrable by a rifle bullet, unless a weak point in the armor be struck. Such a bullet, striking one of the plates, is fairly sure to be deflected harmlessly.

There are no armored birds. So far as known, there never were any. It is a fact accepted by naturalists that all birds are descended from reptiles, but in the process of acquiring wings and feathers for purposes of flight they might have been expected to discard unnecessary encumbrances.

In antediluvian days there were many species of armored fishes, some of which are represented today by survivors, in this respect degenerate. Evidently nature, which is forever making experiments, did not think the idea worth perpetuating.

In the insect kingdom, however, there are to-day not merely a few, but hundreds of thousands of armored species. These are the beetles, which are clad in complete suits of mail. Their armor, in fact, is made of a material far more indestructible than steel—namely, "chitine." Chitine cannot be destroyed except by certain mineral acids.

There are several species of beetles whose "shining armor" is reputed to contain gold or silver, and, owing to this belief, people often gather them and melt them. Most remarkable of those are the "gold bugs" of the genus "plusiotis." One might easily imagine a specimen to be the work of some clever artificer in metal, the head and wing cases being brilliantly polished, with all the seeming of metal to sight and touch, and with a lustre as of gold itself.

Baby Stopped Gunfire.

A day was dawning on a battlefield in northern France through a fog so thick that none could see more than a few yards from the trenches. In the night the Germans had drawn back their lines a little and the French had closely advanced, but between the two positions a lone farmhouse was still standing. As the sun rose and the fog cleared and the gunners found their ranges, heavy guns began to boom and answer back. Thus began again the old, old, wearisome story of day after day of desolation and death.

But suddenly on both sides the firing ceased and there fell a peculiar dead stillness. Midway between the trenches, near the now shattered farmhouse, there was—no, it must be impossible, it must be a delusion! But no—there in the green meadow, crawling on its hands and knees, was a little child, a mere baby. It appeared perfectly happy and contented, and in the sudden dumbness of the soldiers the baby's laugh was heard as it clutched a dandelion. Not a sound was to be heard but that; not a shot was fired; scarcely did a soldier on either side dare breathe.

Suddenly a soldier jumped out of a German trench and ran to where the child was crawling. He tenderly took it up and carried it back to shelter. From the trenches of the French there came no shots, but there rang along both lines a mighty cheer.

But soon, alas, the guns were booming again and answering back, and the flowering bit of meadow was plowed by shells; for war is war, and men must not long yield to pity.

Verdun Will Be Rebuilt.

The once neat town of Verdun is almost erased to the ground. Nothing remains but heaps of debris, but in time all signs of destruction will be removed and a new Verdun, more beautiful in structure, will arise out of its ashes. The blood-soaked, shell-churned soil, however, may last forever. The most terrible mark left by the battle is to be found in the long, narrow strip of ground on both sides of the Meuse. This blood-soaked gash on the face of the earth begins on the west, near Avocourt and crossing the river, runs to about Abaucourt, a distance of between twelve and fifteen miles. In depth it varies from a few hundred yards to about three miles. Within this strip is to be found the graveyard of Germany's last hope of dominating France.—L' Illustration.

The Montreal General Hospital was founded in 1822.

Office Stationery

Fornice Stationery printed from new type at moderate prices. Try the

TELESCOPE

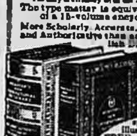
Why not give your boy and girl an opportunity to make their home study easy and effective? Give them the same chances to win promotion and success as the lad having the advantage of

WEBSTER'S NEW INTERNATIONAL

Dictionary in his home. This new creation answers with final authority all kinds of puzzling questions in history, geography, biography, spelling, pronunciation, sports, arts, and sciences.

400,000 Vocabulary Terms. 2700 Pages. Over 6000 Illustrations. Colored Plates. The only dictionary with the Divided Page. The type matter is equivalent to that of a 15-volume encyclopedia.

More Scholarly, Accurate, Convenient, and Authoritative than any other English Dictionary.



REGULAR AND INDIA-PAPER EDITIONS.

WRITE for specimen pages, illustrations, etc. FREE, a set of Pocket Maps if you name this paper.

G. & C. MERRIAM CO., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

GIRLS NEEDED IN OFFICES

Voluntary enlistment has taken thousands of men from office work. Conscription will take more. Office help is scarce now—will be scarcer very soon. Young women must fill the vacant places and they need training.

NORTHERN Business College

remains open all summer to help to meet the demand for trained office help. Students may enter any time. No increase in fees. Circulars free on application.

C. A. FLEMING, F. C. A., Principal
Department A., Owen Sound, Ontario

Here's Where You Will Find the Proper

Summer Clothing

Don't be satisfied with just an ordinary suit of clothes this time, but treat yourself to a good one. It might not be a high priced one, but one that is good value for your money, whatever you pay.

T. PYE
Clothier & Furnisher.

HOMESEEKERS' EXCURSIONS

MAY 8th TO OCTOBER 30th
Every
TUESDAY
"ALL RAIL" - also by
THURSDAY'S STEAMER
"Great Lakes Route"
(Season Navigation)

Your Future is in the West

The fertile prairies have put Western Canada on the map. There are still thousands of acres waiting for the man who wants a home and prosperity. Take advantage of Low Rates and travel via

Canadian Pacific

W. B. Howard, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, Ont.

PATENTS PROMPTLY SECURED

We solicit the business of Manufacturers, Engineers and others who realize the advisability of having their Patent business transacted by Experts. Preliminary advice free. Charges moderate. Our Inventor's Adviser sent upon request. Marion & Marion, New York Life Bldg, Montreal; and Washington, D.C. U.S.A.

NEIGHBORING VILLAGES & COUNTRYSIDE

News of the Week Collected by a Staff of Live Correspondents

GLAMIS

Miss Ethel McEachern of London is the guest of her friend Miss Lila Cunningham.

Miss Edith Howson is home from Clifford.

Miss Kate McLean returned to Toronto on Saturday.

Miss Nora McNally has been engaged to teach in S. S. No. 11 on con. 10 Kincardine.

Mr. R. W. Burgess purchased a new Ford Car from Mr. Patterson of Tiverton last week.

Mr. McCauley spent last week with his parents in Tara.

Miss Jennie McKeeman has returned home from a visit in Beamsville.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert McLennan and babe of Melville, Sask. are visiting his parents here.

Mr. and Mrs. MacKlem of Ripley and Miss Hilda White nurse in training at Kincardine Hospital, spent the week-end with Mrs. Woodstock.

Mrs. Wm. H. Gilchrist has returned home from Walkerton Hospital All are glad to see her home again and that she may be restored to usual strength again.

Mr. Dan Montgomery is home from Detroit, Mich.

The Ladies Missionary Society met at the home of Mrs. John. Deeham on Wednesday.

Mr. J. D. Robertson has been improving the appearance of his residence by having a cement foundation built.

The Union S. S. picnic on Tuesday was a huge success. A large turnout and every one enjoyed themselves.

Mr. George Webb is on the sick list. All hope for his speedy recovery.

Mr. McCauley and Rev. Waddell of Tiverton exchanged pulpits in the Baptist Church on Sunday. The latter preaching Anniversary Services here.

(Intended for last week.)

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Burgess of Cabri, Sask., are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Cunningham.

Miss Minnie McNally is home from Lapeer, Mich. on summer vacation.

Miss Margaret McLennan of Grace Hospital, Detroit Mich. has returned to her duties.

Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Peacock and family of Meaford, were week-end visitors here. They were accompanied home by her mother, Mrs. N. C. McFarlane

Miss Lily McKinnon of Brantford is holidaying at her home.

Miss Garland and Master Thompson Garland of Pinkerton visited at James [illegible]mpson s last week.

[illegible] Mayme Bell of Lucknow spent a [illegible]ys at her home.

[illegible] Flossie McLennan, who has [illegible] on the 6th Bruce for the past [illegible] presented with a beautiful [illegible]e by her scholars, at the closing [illegible] term in that section.

[illegible] Mayme McLean of Toronto is [illegible] a short vacation.

[illegible] Margaret Campbell of Harriston [illegible]daying at her home here.

[illegible]er Rhoderic Thompson has enlisted [illegible] the York and Simcoe Forestry [illegible]nd is now in training at Camp [illegible]. All were sorry to see Rhody [illegible] His many friends wish him good [illegible]

[illegible] J. A. Pickard and family spent [illegible] few days here, prior to leaving for [illegible]eir new home in Guernsey Sask. [illegible]ere they will in future reside.

Chas. J. McKinnon of Wallaceburg is [illegible]me for the summer holidays.

Pte. Terrance McKinnon, a Glamis [illegible]y of the 160th Battalion D. Co., had [illegible]e honor of being one to go to London, [illegible]ngland, on July 1st as a guard of Hon- [illegible] to the King.

[illegible]iss Nettie Gunn is home from Nor[illegible]d.

[illegible]r. McCauley was presented with a [illegible]utiful fountain pen by his scholars [illegible] S. S. No. 4 Bruce.

[illegible]iss Ethel Stewart is home from [illegible]ph, and is accompanied by her [illegible], Miss Agnes Carter.

[illegible] our sad duty to report the death [illegible]rs. W. J. Graham, who passed [illegible] on Friday, June 29th at the age [illegible]ears, 8 months and 25 days. A full [illegible]tuary will appear elsewhere in this paper.

Those from a distance who were here attending the funeral of the late Mrs. [illegible]aham were Mrs. Loney of Oxenden, [illegible] and Mrs. George Beacock, Wiarton; [illegible] A. Beacock, Wiarton; Mr. and Mrs. [illegible]ertson, Lindsay, Mrs. Atkins, Tor[illegible]; Mrs. McNally, Sarnia.

FORMOSA

The constant deluge of rain is having its effect on the crops. Farmers state that a good deal of grain on the flat lands is already ruined.

This has been a quiet week in the village, no happenings of importance.

MILDMAY

Mrs. W. J. Spencer and daughter of Earlton, New Ontario, are visiting for the coming month at Dr. Huck's.

Messrs J. M. Fischer, Thomas Jasper, Moses Bilger Andrew Smith and Dr. Huck were in Guelph July 2nd, 3rd, and 4th attending the judging class. These well-known men are now provincial judges.

Mrs. Reba Schwalm and Mr. Wm. F. Wendt made a motor trip to Toronto on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of last week.

Mr. Fred Diebel of Didsbury is visiting at the home of his father, Mr. John Diebel. It is fourteen years now since Mr. Diebel has been in Mildmay.

At the baseball game here Friday evening, July 6th, between Ayton and Mildmay, the former went down to defeat, the score being 15–5. Mr. Sam Liesemer of Detroit umpired the game giving fair decisions to both teams. The game only lasted five innings but we scored 9 runs in one inning.

Mrs. D. Pender of Guelph is a visitor this week at the home of Dr. Huck's.

Mr. Conrad Reis and two daughters of Wroxeter, spent Sunday at Mr. Ed. Kalbfleisch's.

Mr. Ed. Diebel of Elora is spending two weeks' vacation at his home here.

Miss Rose Helwig is ill this week with an attack of inflammatory rheumatism.

Miss Margaret Selling, nurse of Oshawa General Hospital, is spending her vacation at her home here in Mildmay.

Mr. Sam Liesemer and son Gordon of Detroit, are visiting for a week or two at the home of his mother, Mrs. C. Liesemer.

Miss Mildred Braun of Crediton is a visitor at the home of her sister, Rev. Mrs. Burn.

Early Monday morning a car containing five Kincardine young men while running at a good rate of speed turned turtle when a few rods past the Presbyterian Church. The men were not in the best condition to run a car and no doubt the accident was caused by carlessness. Only one of the occupants came out unscathed. McGaw, the driver of the car, had his hip dislocated. George Brahler sustained several sprains and the other two had their faces badly scratched. The car was badly smashed, but Mr. Ed. Kalbfleisch had the damages repaired by four o'clock, when the party returned in the car to Kincardine.

HANOVER

St. Andrews Sunday School picnicked in McWhinney's grove on Dominion Day.

At the recent Stratford Normal exams., Misses Kathleen Bell and Albertine Schilling were successful in securing a permanent second-class teacher's certificate, and Misses Josephine Armstrong and Gertrude Twietmeyer and Mr. Aaron Jacklin obtained interim certificates, valid for five years.

Mr. Aaron Diebel, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Diebel, went to London last week to commence training with the 32nd (Bruce) Regiment. Aaron had joined the artillery some time ago but was transferred to the infantry.

Mr. Herman Stadtlander, a well-known and highly esteemed citizen of Hanover, passed to the Great Beyond on Monday morning of last week at the early age of 44 years, 6 months and 1 day. He had suffered long, patiently and indomitable pluck and fortitude, and when death supervened to relieve him from his suffering it perhaps was not unwelcome. His death will cause general regret.

The young people of St. Mathews Lutheran church, Hanover, together with the young people of the Walkerton and Elmwood Lutheran churches, held a most enjoyable picnic at Pearl Lake on Monday, July 2nd.

CARG..L

Aniversary services will be held in the Holy Trinity Church here on July 15th. Rev. Mr. Shore, a former pastor here, will have charge of the services both morning and evening. Confirmation service will be held on Monday evening, July 16th.

Dr. Watson gave treatment to a number of patients here on Monday.

Miss L. Doll of Guelph is visiting at the home of Mr. W. A. Grainger.

Mrs. Jas Peel of Whitby, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. R. A. Fowlie.

Mr. and Mrs. Shortreed of Priceville spent the week-end with the former's sister, Mrs. W. Bell.

Mr. and Mrs John Sirrs and family motored here from La Fray on Saturday and are visiting at the home of Geo. Sirrs.

Miss Lila Hettrick spent the past week with her friend Miss Alice Hamilton in Chesley.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Fowlie and Miss Margaret, accompanied by Mrs. Peel of Whitby, are spending a week's vacation at Inverhuron. Mr. George is the relieving manager at the bank here.

Mr. Joseph Clancy made a business trip to Toronto on Saturday.

Mrs. Thomas Grice is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Faster, in Bracebridge.

Miss Vera and Master Delbert Anderson of Walkerton are visiting their grandmother, Mrs S. Anderson.

Mrs. Roy Sparling of Goderich is visiting at the home of Henry Sparling.

PINKERTON

Miss Nellie Donnelly of Denver, Col. is visiting at her home here.

Dr. and Mrs. Gale of Bay City, Mich. Mr. and Mrs. Cleghorn and Miss C. Cleghorn of Kitchener spent Sunday at the Manse.

Mr. and Mrs. Walker of Park Head motored down and spent a few days at Mrs. N. Garland's.

Mr. Cassidy of Riversdale has purchased the carding-mill and is now busy pulling it down.

Mr. Tom Houston had a very successful barn-raising on Wednesday last when nearly 200 men assembled and helped raise the big structure. Messrs. Cecil Garland and Wm. McFadyen were chosen captains and after a strenuous and exciting finish, the latter's side managed to win out. Mr. Wrightson was the contractor.

CHEPSTOW

Dr. Thos. O'Hagan of Ottawa spent the week-end with his nephew, P. O'Hagan.

Mr. George Lippert had a successful barn-raising last Thursday. Our popular reeve who was a participator in the operations had the misfortune to fracture a number of ribs and as a result is enjoying an enforced rest. The young people were entertained to an enjoyable dance in the evening.

Mr. Geo. O'Neil of Guelph spent a few days of the past week with friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Roegel spent the past week with relatives in Toronto.

The tragic news of the death at Witley Camp Eng. on Sunday, of Sergt. M. McNab was received by his parents here on Monday morning. The first intimation of his illness was contained in an announcement from Ottawa about the middle of the past week, stating that he was in a hospital suffering from meningitis. "Mike" as the deceased was familiarly known was one of our most popular and promising young men and was employed at the Merchants Bank, Walkerton, when the organization of the 160th was commenced. Heeding the call of his Country he joined the ranks and sailed with the battalion for England last autumn, where shortly after his arrival he was promoted to the rank of Sergeant Of a kind and jovial manner, "Mike" enjoyed a large host of friends, who will mourn his untimely death and sympathize with the bereaved parents and family in their sorrow.

BRANT AVENUE

Who said more rain? It would sound better if they'd say give us a few weeks of good haying weather, as the hay has turned out to be a pretty fair crop in spite of the backward spring, and late seeding. The grain crops are doing fine.

Mr. J. V. Scanlan who has been on the teaching staff at Brantford, spent a few days at his home at Beaver Glen Farm. He also called on his uncle here, Mr. Peter Scanlan, before returning to his new position at Kingston University.

Quite a few attended the Garden Party last Friday evening at Mr. Aug. Pletsch's on 2nd con., and reported a dandy time.

Miss Cecilia Ruetz spent Sunday with her sister, Mrs. George Zettler, at Carlsruhe.

Mr. John Reutz has built an addition to the rear of his driving shed last week. Mr. Ruetz believes in having his implements under a good roof and not around the fence corners like some farmers do.

During the two recent heavy rainstorms on Sunday a lot of young fowl such as ducks and goslings perished, which would mean a boost to the H. C. of L. in the Fall. Immense patches of potatoes also got drowned.

Mr. Amos Denny is at present running the well-drilling outfit for his brother, Harry, who was hurt last week. The latter is getting along fine and expects to be shortly on the job again himself. He seems to be bound to get a good supply of water for Mr. Frank.

Mr. John Whitehead purchased a new hay-tedder to handle his hay crop in case of much rain. Mr. Whitehead is an up-to-date farmer alright.

Mr. Jack Lunday & Son are doing a land-office business in buying all kinds of rubber, rags, etc., some workers they are.

Joe Zettle, our cattle king, shipped a bunch of hogs on Tuesday, paying $15.50

OTTER CREEK

Mr. and Mrs. J. Allendorf and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stroeder and son and Mr. August Stroeder motored up from Palmerston on Wednesday last and spent the day with their uncle, Mr. J. Fenner.

The premises of Mr. J. Fenner were so flooded that they had to wade in water a foot deep to the barn. A lot of wood was carried off and the pigs started swimming to get their morning meal.

Mrs. J. Buck of Hanover, visited at Mr. Thomas Hutton's.

Rain is the order of the day. Some of the crops are completely ruined by the wet weather. The hay is rotting in the fields. The rain yesterday washed stretches of gravel and fences away and ditches in the farmers' fields that a man could stand in. What will become of the farmers in these war times with no help and so much rain. The farmers have a hard battle to fight till they have their crops in, which no one knows but themselves.

Mr. and Mrs. George Scott took a motor trip to Stratford, London, and Woodstock on Saturday, returning home Monday night.

COUNTRY SCHOOL REPORTS

S. S. No. 1

(Promotion Examination)

To Sr. IV — Wallace Johnston, Stanley Tolton, Georgia McLennan.

To Jr. IV — Leander Geisler, Eric Wilton.

To Jr. III — Mary Hodgson, Paul Misch, Albert Schultz.

To Sr. II — Florence Childs.

To Sr I — Andrew Waechter, Ear Johnston, Beata Misch.

To Jr. — Alwena Glintz, Annie Johnston, Hilda Schultz.

Ruby E. Norrish, teacher.

+ + +

S. S. No. V. GREENOCK.

Jr. IV. to Sr. IV. — Honors — Alberta Pinkerton 75, Gladys Gale 75.

Pass — Artour Donnelly 74, Cleophas Kenny 60, Vera Lambertus 66.

Sr. III. to Jr. IV. — Pass — Stanley Clark 62, Hilda Kenny 60.

Recommended — Geraldine Knox, Isabella Chick, Humphrey Desmond.

Sr. II. to Jr. III. — Honors — Eileen Lambertus 77, Edmund Campbell 76.

Pass — Joe Kenny 74, Eva Chick 73, Everett Pinkerton 73, Merton Taylor 67.

Recommended — Ray Clark, Dennis Donnelly.

Jr. II. to Sr. II. — Pass — Eddie Lambertus 70, Florence Richardson 67, Patricia Desmond 66, Ray Taylor 65, Roy Campbell 64, Joe Kraemer 60.

Recommended — Charlie Andrews.

Sr. Pr. — Pass — Carl Elphick, Stella Donnelly, Charlie Desmond.

Jr. Pr. to Sr. Pr. — Pass — Gerald Donnelly, Hilda Lambertus, Marie Donnelly, Florence Kenny.

Jr. Pr. — Pass — Elwood Pinkerton, Eileen Donnelly, Hazel Trumbly, Gretta Richardson.

Note — The foregoing is a report of only those pupils who made a pass standing or were recommended.

Florence M. Diebl,
Teacher.

+ + +

S. S. NO. 2

Sr. III to Jr. IV — Honors — Frank James, Emerson Rapp. Pass — Elroy Etsell, Norman Eckenswiller. (Har- Inglis absent from examinations but promoted on his term's work).

Jr. III to Sr. III — Honors — Charlie James. Pass — Gertrude Ellis, Edith Etherton.

Sr. II to Jr. III — Honors — Jack James. Pass — Irene Etsell, Agnes Walter, Howard Ernest.

Jr. II to Sr. II — Honors — Irvin Ernest, Rustin Beirnes. Pass — (Gertrude Ashley, Wilfred Eckenswiller)

Jr. I to Sr. I — Honors — Gordon Ingles, Morrison Ellis, Alfie Walter. Pass — Antoinette Stroeder.

Sr. Pr. to Jr. I — Honors — Verna Etsell. Pass — Byron Beirnes.

Enter Pr. — Honors — Florence Tanner, (Lillie Rapp. Ernest Stroeder). Pass — Gladys Beirnes, Maudie Ashley.

+ + +

S. S. No. 7

Sr. IV — Jack McKeeman.

Jr. IV — Verna Blue, Florence Smith, Tom Young, Arthur Young, Maurice Young.

Sr. III — Harry Scott, Edith Blue, Marjorie Brown, Lela Kerry, Nelson Kerry.

Jr. III — Frank Desmond, Sophie Kauffman, Melvin Pearson, Mansel Napper, Gertie Greenaway, Jennie Alexander.

Sr. II — Percy Gregg, Joe O'Reilly.

Jr. II — Charles Greenaway.

Sr. I — Annie Kauffman, Dorothy O'Reilly, Grace Kerry.

Jr. I — Verna Young, Vera Gallinger, George Gregg, Polly Kauffman.

Pr. (b) — Henry Young, Wallace Napper.

Pr. (a) — Daisy Kerry, Mary Young, James Cassidy, Clara Edmonds.

No. on roll 34, Blanche I. Powell,
Av. att. 30, Teacher.

WALKERTON TELESCOPE

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

Three months	$ .40
Half year	.75
Year	1.50

In advance. If not so paid, $2.00 per annum.

OUTSIDE CANADA

(In Advance Only)

Great Britain	$ 1.50
United States	2.00
France, Greece and other War Fronts	2.50

WE PHOTOGRAPH MEN AS MEN ARE

It's a business matter and there is no fuss or bother. Your family, friends and business associates want your portrait.

FRASER STUDIO

Western Fair

LONDON, CANADA

September 7th to 15th, 1917

1867—"A half Century of Success"—1917

The Great Agricultural Exhibition of Western Ontario

$32,000.00 in Prizes and Attractions

A very interesting Programme, including Military and other features—Twice Daily.

Fireworks Each Night

Two Speed Events Daily

REDUCED RAILWAY RATES

Prize Lists, Entry Forms and all information from the Secretary.

LIEUT.-COL. W. M. GARTSHORE, President
A. M. HUNT, Secretary

Overland

The Smartest Utility Car Ever Produced

No other smart sport model sells for so low a price.

No other smart sport model can be operated for so little.

No other smart sport model is so easy to handle and park.

Here at last is an economical utility car with snappy, distinctive, pleasing style.

And it's a wonderful performer.

It has a wonder of a motor—smooth—lively—powerful.

Front seats are adjustable forward or back—to suit the driver's reach.

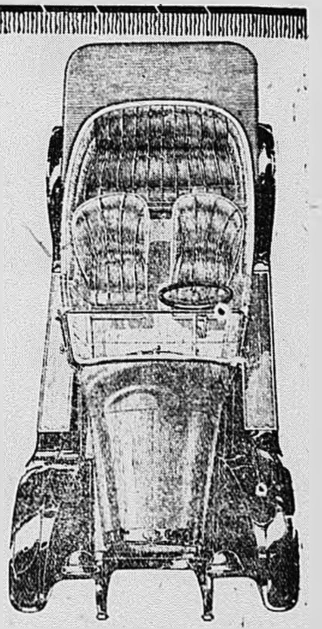
The body is grey—the trim black enamel and nickel—the wire wheels red.

The smartest economy-utility car on wheels!

Come in and get your Country Club today.

Country Club

$1110



J. E. McGREGOR, Agent - Walkerton, Ont. - Phone 142

TWO LONG YEARS HE SUFFERED

"Fruit-a-tives" Made Him Feel As If Walking On Air

Orillia, Ont., Nov. 28th. 1914.

"For over two years, I was troubled with Constipation, Drowsiness, Lack of Appetite and Headaches. One day I saw your sign which read "Fruit-a-tives make you feel like walking on air." This appealed to me, so I decided to try a box. In a very short time, I began to feel better, and now I feel fine. I have a good appetite, relish everything I eat, and the Headaches are gone entirely. I recommend this pleasant fruit medicine to all my friends".

DAN McLEAN.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Office Stationery

For nice Stationery printed from new type at moderate prices. Try the

TELESCOPE

Read the Ads.

INSURANCE & REAL ESTATE

Fire, Life, Accident & Health, Plate Glass, and Guarantee Insurance in the best of Companies.

Real Estate—Several desirable residential properties for sale.

Money to Loan, Conveyancing and General Agency. Splendid Mortgage Loan Company Debentures for investment yielding good interest.

GEO. D. McKAY

Office Over Bell Telephone Agency

PHONE NO. - 179

INSURANCE

FIRE, LIFE, ACCIDENT, AUTOMOBILE, GUARANTEE.

MONEY to LOAN

REAL ESTATE

Town and Farm Property for sale. See my list before making a purchase

OCEAN and RAIL

TICKETS TO ANY PART OF THE WORLD.

I represent the Canadian Northern Railway and all ocean steamship companies — English, American and Italian.

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES

T. E. ATTWOOD

GENERAL AGENT

Walkerton - Ontario

DENTAL

W. B. HALLADAY, L. D. S. D. D. S.

Dentist. Successor to Dr. Coram. Modern methods employed in all dental operations. Special attention to crown, bridge and inlay work. Three doors east of post office. Visits Cargill 1st and 3rd Thursday afternoon of each month.

C.L. GRANT, D.D.S., L.D.S

Graduate of Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario.

Dr. Lount's old stand.

Wisser Block - Walkerton

MEDICAL

DR. BROWN

Diseases of the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat, Neustadt, Ont. Will be at the Queen's Hotel, Walkerton, 1st Friday in each month from 2 to 6 p.m.

W. A. HALL, B.A., M.D., C.M.

Honor Graduate in Arts and Medicine at Queen's University. Member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons. Office and residence on corner of Colborne and Cayley Streets.

SIGHTS OF OLD LONDON

By a 160th Boy who Writes Home an Account of What He Saw in Visit to World's Metropolis

The following is a copy of a letter received by Mrs. James Thompson of Glamis, from her son, Pte. James Thompson of 160th Bruce Battalion.

Wittley Camp, Eng. May 27, 1917.

Dear Mother;—

I intended to have written you in the middle of the week, but we were up in London on Wednesday, and there isn't very much chance of writing there.

We went up Wednesday afternoon and got back Friday afternoon. It was not a very long pass but we managed to get to see most of the important sights. I was with D. A. McDougall from down the 10th of Kincardine. The first place we went to was the Zoo. They have about every animal on the face of the earth there, at least a representative. I saw most of them up in Edinburgh, but they have the rhinoceros, hippopotamus, and giraffe there. Then we went up Buckingham Palace. It is a wonderful place. We went through the King's stables. It is certainly worth one's while to visit there. The horses stand in about three feet of straw. The posts are all gold-mounted and also the horses harness. A guide showed us through the stables. He took us to the Royal carriage that the King and Queen ride in. The Coronation carriage which is 200 years old, was used for the Coronation of six different Sovereigns. This carriage is 24 feet long without the pole, and is 127 feet with the horses in it. It took three years to build it, the whole thing is hand carved out of oak.

Just as we were through seeing the stables the guide told us if we went around to the front of the palace that we would see the King and Queen, so we waited for about ten minutes and they drove out right past us. We saluted them and he raised his cap to us.

From here we went to Westminster Abbey. There was a service on and we waited for that. When we got through here we went to the Parliament Buildings, the house was sitting, the soldiers were given a permit to go up to the gallery. So we listened to England's brains for a while. Bonar Law gave a speech while we were in. All the Cabinet ministers were there. We stopped at a Club not more than 30 yards from the palace.

On Friday forenoon we were to St. Paul's Cathedral, it is a wonderful building. The Dome is 200 feet high. It is here that Wellington and Nelson are buried. We saw their tombs.

From there we went to the National Art Gallery, that is where there are so many wonderful paintings, some of them 500 years old. By the time we got through it was very near noon and we had to catch the train at 12.40.

Neil McDermid had a letter from Dan to-day. He is up in London Hospital. I wish we had known that before we went up, and would have gone to see him. I think Neil is going to try and go up this week. It was at the Battle of Vimy Ridge he was wounded.

Jack went away this morning for three weeks. He went as Batman with our new platoon officer. He is going on a three weeks course. That means that Jack has practically nothing to do for the next three weeks. Houston is the name of the officer. He is a good head too. They went down to a place called Bexhill, on the sea. It is near Hastings where I was.

Billy Oliver went over with their draft of 600 last night about 10 o'clock. I hear there are other battalions coming from Canada to take their places. You remember that Highland Batt. that was recruiting at London at the time of the Ex. I hear they are coming in some of these days.

It may be well on to the 1st of July before we leave here. There is no talk of us going yet. We have a new Colonel. He is the Col. who came over to England with Ernie Reid, Sammy Reaburn and Wendell Russell and others like them. He went to France with the 51st. He has been wounded twice.

I have not seen Billy Johnson for a couple of weeks. He is here yet. He has no idea when they will go across. There has been no word from home for a couple of weeks. We expect a big mail in to-morrow or next day.

Well I will close for this time. I will write again the middle of the week. Good-bye. With love to all.

Jim.

No. 652210, Pte. J. Thompson,
D. Co., 160th Batt.

LIGHTNING STRUCK TOWER

Brick and Shingle Splinters Flew when Bolt Ran Down the Flag Pole at Public School Saturday

With a crash that could be heard all over town, a heavy bolt of lightning struck the tower of the Public School at 12.30 a. m. Saturday. Fortunately it ran down the outside of the building and the damage was slight. But splinters of brick and shingle scattered all over the yard were striking evidence of the force of the bolt. A heavy wooden ornament at the edge of the front roof was thrown completely over the school and hit near the vacant school building nearly a block away.

The lightning struck the tip of the flagpole running lightly down its side. At the base of the pole it split into two sections; running down two sides of the tower, the east and south. On the shingles of the tower and below on the brick wall of the tower it left a wiggly mark like the trail of a snake. The bricks were gouged to the depth of four to five inches, the fragments being thrown all over the yard. From the tower the lightning ran down the eavetroughing to the ground. Mr. Walford gathered up over a pailful of brick fragments which were strewn over the yard. Fortunately nobody was around the building when it was struck.

The old saying that lightning never strikes in the same place was disproved in this case. The same identical spot was hit a few years ago with no more serious results. The vacant school building at the rear was also hit several years ago, a strip of shingles being torn off the middle of the roof.

The value of lightning rods has long been a disputed question but statistics recently published by the government should put an end to doubts. Practically no rodded buildings at all have been burned the past two or three years. All fires have been in buildings which were not so equipped. In the light of these facts, all our public buildings should certainly be equipped with lightning rods.

A Bruce boy, Pte. Walter Olheiser of Teeswater had the honor to be chosen as one of the twelve men from the 5th division to go with one hundred men from all Divisions to form a Guard of Honor to the King at the Service in commemoration of Confederation and our Honored dead held in Westminster Abbey on July 1st. A 160th Bugler, Cliffod Kempson of Kincardine, was one of the buglers chosen to take part.

Feeling the need of a restful nap one afternoon last week, Mr. Alex Blue, laid down to sleep, and when he awoke his wife noticed there was something wrong with him as his speech was affected and he had lost the use of his left side limb. A doctor was summoned, and found that Mr. Blue had suffered a stroke of paralysis. He has since almost wholly recovered and is around again as usual.—Paisley Advocate.

THE COAL SHORTAGE

THE anticipated shortage in hard coal affecting thousands of Canadian homes may become a reality next winter if consumers delay their orders to the dealers till fall.

This is the opinion of railway men who say that while they are doing everything possible to assist Mr. C. A. Magrath, Controller of Canadian Fuel Supply, the co-operation of the consumer also is necessary to meet an undoubtedly serious situation.

The hard coal used in the east for the average furnace is imported from the United States, and the problem of supply is largely a problem of transportation. Owing to the shortage of labor and a very hard winter, the Canadian Railways last year faced a severe congestion of traffic, which was accentuated during the winter months by the demand for furnace coal.

In order to prevent if possible a similar condition next season, the railways are concentrating every effort on the supply of coal-carrying equipment. The Canadian Pacific, for instance, has decided to adapt at once and concentrate a considerable portion of additional freight equipment for coal haulage, increasing its capacity during the next six months by cars capable of hauling over a million additional tons during that period. It is withdrawing a large number of cars from other services, is adapting other types of cars, and has just put into force a new rule under which every foreign coal car is at once returned empty to the mines for fresh coal instead of being delayed by loading with return freight, although this move means added expense.

Within a few days the coal merchants will thus have prospect of rapid deliveries, but unless consumers co-operate by giving their orders to the merchants now for their winter supplies, then unloading cars quickly, the congestion experienced last winter will be accentuated and prices may rise to unheard of heights. Consumers are also recommended to be exceptionally careful in the use of coal, avoiding waste and burning wood where possible. The merchants themselves are also being asked to co-operate by having cars loaded to the maximum capacity and by promptly unloading the cars as soon as received, thus releasing them for further service.

The situation apparently is more serious in the East than in the West, owing to the accepted use of box cars in the latter territory. The supply of the open cars required in the east is, however, limited, and unless deliveries are spread more than they have been over the summer months by the recommended co-operation of consumers, the approaching winter will come with tragic force upon the Canadians in Ontario, Quebec, and the Maritime Provinces.

The coal, according to Mr. Magrath, is available. The cars, according to the railways, are coming—but will carry the coal only if the orders are known before winter puts on the brakes.

SUNDAY SCHOOL

Lesson III.—Third Quarter, For July 15, 1917.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, II Chron. xxx, 1-12. Memory Verses, 11, 12—Golden Text, Heb. xi, 6—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

The story of Hezekiah, son of Ahaz, who reigned twenty-nine years in Jerusalem and who did right in the sight of the Lord, working good and right and truth before the Lord his God and doing it with all his heart, so that there was none like him among all the kings of Judah either before him or after him in the matter of trusting in the Lord God of Israel (II Chron. xxix, 2; xxxi, 20, 21; II Kings xviii, 5), occupies eleven chapters of Scripture (II Kings xviii-xx; II Chron. xxix-xxxii; Isa. xxxvi-xxxix). When we consider that these kings were spoken of as sitting on the throne of the Lord, to be kings for the Lord their God (I Chron. xxix, 23; II Chron. ix, 8), we see more clearly the monstrous sin of Ahaz and the great contrast in his son, whose name signifies the strength of Jehovah and which he so well illustrated during the greater part of his life. Our lesson chapter tells of the great passover which he kept for all Israel from Dan to Beersheba, and this feast always points us in three directions—to the night of the nation's birth, to Christ our passover crucified for us and to the rebirth of the nation in the future when they shall be gathered from all nations and the passover shall be fulfilled in the kingdom of God.

Let us look a little at the rest of his story before we take up the day's lesson. He began his good reign by opening the doors of the house of the Lord, which his wicked father had closed up, and by cleansing the temple of its filthiness, which occupied them sixteen days (xxix, 3-5, 17). He set the priests and Levites to work with the inspiring and encouraging words of xxix, 11, and, having restored the vessels which his father had cast away, he made atonement for all Israel and had the true worship restored with praises and gladness and rejoicing (xxix, 24, 30, 36). Then they kept the great passover, sending invitations throughout all Israel and Judah urging all to turn to the Lord God of Abraham, Isaac and Israel and yield themselves unto the Lord (xxx, 1-9).

Although some laughed the invitation to scorn and mocked, there were those of Asher and Manasseh and Zebulun who humbled themselves and came to Jerusalem to keep the feast (xxx, 10-12). They found such joy in keeping the feast of unleavened bread spake to the heart of all the Levites and the priests praising the Lord day by day and teaching the good knowledge of the Lord, and Hezekiah so spake to the heart of all the Levites that the whole assembly took counsel to keep the feast seven days more, which they did with gladness, and there was not so great joy in Jerusalem since the time of Solomon. The praise and prayer were heard in heaven, the habitation of His holiness (xxx, 21-27). The contrast between this and the sin and unbelief and rebellion of Ahaz's reign helps us to understand just a little better the contrast between Israel's present unbelief and suffering and the time drawing ever nearer, when they shall obtain joy and gladness and sorrow and sighing shall flee away (Isa. xxxv, 10; li, 11).

After this great passover and time of rejoicing there followed a cleansing of the land as far as possible from idolatry and idols, and the brazen serpent which Moses had made in the wilderness and which Israel was now worshiping as an idol was destroyed (xxxi, 1; II Kings xviii, 4). Such a turning from idols to God to serve the Living and True God (I Thess. i, 9) was too much for the devil to take quietly, and so he stirred up Sennacherib and his hosts to go up against Jerusalem and with great blasphemy defy the Living God, the God of Israel. Hezekiah encouraged his princes and people with the words of chapter xxxii, 7, 8, saying, "With him is an arm of flesh, but with us is the Lord our God to help us and to fight our battles." Hezekiah, the king, and the prophet Isaiah prayed and cried to heaven as they spread the wicked letters before the Lord and asked the Living God so to work on behalf of His people and because of His name which had been so reproached, that all the kingdoms of the earth might know that He was the Lord God, and He only (xxxii, 20; II Kings xix, 14-19).

Note the same great desire on the part of Joshua and David (Josh. iv, 24; I Sam. xvii, 46, 47). That God may be glorified should be the one and constant aim of every believer (Phil. i, 20; I Pet. iv, 11). That night the prayer of the king and the prophet was answered by the angel of the Lord passing over the Assyrian host and taking off the earth 185,000 men. Sennacherib returned to Nineveh and was slain by his own sons (II Kings xix, 35-37). The rest of Hezekiah's story is not so honoring to the Lord. He became sick unto death and was told by Isaiah that his time had come to die. But he prayed to the Lord with sore weeping, and the Lord added to his life fifteen years and gave him a wonderful sign on the sundial (Isa. xxxviii, 1-8). Some of his words at this occasion are very memorable.

◆ ◆ ◆

Great American Citizen Who Worked for Allies And Admired the British

◆ ◆ ◆

IT has been often said that before the United States went to war against the Germans, the people of that country whose sentiment was pro-Ally, were pro-French rather than pro-British. Among the really great men of the United States this was not the fact. One of these men was Joseph Choate, who recently passed away in New York after a long and fortunate life. For two generations this man, "the leading citizen of New York," so the newspapers proclaim him, has given fruitful aid to every work of humanity and patriotism, and to every cause of better government where his influence could be exerted. His good fortune persisted to the end, even Azrael seemed to withhold the shadow of his wing until this American was made happy and content by the course his country took in the most tremendous of earthly events. He had a wonderfully gallant old age, hopeful, useful, radiant, and unquenched. He might have wished perhaps to live long enough to see his ardent hopes concerning the outcome of the war brought to fruition, but at least the last public event in which he took part was one which must have given him great satisfaction. He bore an honored part in the welcome of the British Commissioners, and saw what he had always hoped to see, the great Anglo-Saxon democracies drawn more closely together. The union of France and England with his own country in a great common aim, inwrought with the fabric of civilisation, woke all his enthusiasm. Far beyond the immediate struggles he saw the vision of a world at peace. Mr. Choate spoke up stoutly for the prosecution of the war to the end; but he was a lover of peace and of justice secured by peaceful means. At the second Hague Conference he was the champion of every method of abolishing war. In one speech at The Hague he had an impassioned burst about the alternatives to settlement of international disputes by judicial process—a burst which almost has a prophetic air, in view of what has since occurred:

HON. JOSEPH CHOATE

"Let us resume all the savage practices of ancient times. Let us sack cities and put their inhabitants to the sword. Let us bombard undefended towns. Let us cast to the winds the rights of security that have been accorded to neutrals. Let us make the sufferings of soldiers and sailors in and after battle as frightful as possible. Let us wipe out all that the Red Cross has accomplished at Geneva, and the whole record of the First Peace Conference at The Hague, and all the negotiations and lofty aspirations that have resulted in the summoning of the present conference."

If Mr. Choate the past two years showed that a kind of saeva indignatio burned in his heart against Germany, it was mainly because his instincts as an international lawyer and a friend of peace had been so outraged by her reversion to barbarous warfare.

Diceless Dicing, Now.

It's pencilitis now.

Automobile poker has had its fling and now comes pencilitis.

Pencilitis is not a disease. It is found mostly in cigar stands around town. It takes more than one to have pencilitis.

The next time you step into a cigar store and see a customer standing against the case keeping a clerk busy rolling a pencil back and forth between them, look out for you will find out what it is.

It's diceless dice.

Some wise clerk in one of the stores conceived the idea of taking an ordinary six-sided lead pencil and marking its six sides with numbers corresponding to those on dice. The pencil is rolled and the one who rolls the highest number wins a "horse," as they call a trick in Indian dice. Two tricks out of three win the game

While not as handy as dice, the pencils are helping some. And there is not the risk of being arrested for having a gambling device, for lawyers say they have not found a case where a court held that a pencil could be placed in the same category as cards and dice.

Training Farmers.

France is teaching some of her wounded soldiers how to be up-to-date farmers in spite of their disabilities. At Oillard, in the Department of the Loire, an institution has been opened with a complete equipment of modern farm machinery for the cultivation and harvesting of crops, including a tractor for plowing and other purposes. The instruction is essentially practical, the staff consisting of a competent agriculturist and an expert mechanic versed in farm machinery.

Homeseekers Excursions

Every Monday till October

LOW FARES FROM TORONTO TO

Albreda	[illegible]
Athabasca	[illegible]
Edmonton	[illegible]
Stettler	[illegible]
Canora	[illegible]
North Battleford	[illegible]
Regina	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
Saskatoon	[illegible]
Dauphin	[illegible]
Lucerne	[illegible]
Calgary	[illegible]
Camrose	[illegible]
Hanna	[illegible]
Rosetown	[illegible]
Yorkton	[illegible]
Moose Jaw	[illegible]
Prince Albert	[illegible]
Brandon	[illegible]
Winnipeg	[illegible]

For Tickets, Reservations, Literature and Information, apply to W. E. Attwood, Insurance, Walkerton, or write R. L. Fairbairn, G.P.A., 68 King St. E., Toronto.

CANADIAN NORTHE

GRAND TRUNK

ATTRACTIV TRIPS

To

Muskoka Lakes
Algonquin Park
Maganetawan Riv
Lake of Bays
Karwartha Lakes
Georgian Bay

Round trip tourist ticket on sale from stations in O at very low fares with stop overs.

Berth reservation and full particulars at all Trunk Ticket Offices or wri E. HORNING, District Pa er Agent, Toronto, Ontario

A Trial Subscri tion to t Telesco

From no until Nev Years for 75c

ORDER IT TODAY!

Summer Styles

AS SHOWN IN OUR Sup erior Tailored Clothing a covered by one brief se tence "The best and chea to be had in town."

We'd like to measure you your summer suit.

Hats, Caps, Ties, Shirts, Sweater Coats, all Furnishings at close prices.

WOODMAN & CO.

Next to Vogan's Hardware

Built To Please YOU

—and does please you because it offers that rare combination of service, satisfaction and economy. Ask our local dealer to show you the "Sunshine," or write for free, illustrated, descriptive booklet.

McClary's SUNSHINE FURNACE

LONDON TORONTO MONTREAL WINNIPEG VANCOUVER ST. JOHN, N.B. HAMILTON CALGARY SASKATOON EDMONTON

For Sale by Patterson Bros.

Carborundum

We have a good supply of Carborundum Goods. such as Razor Straps, Razor Hones, Scythe Stones and Section Files.

S. W. Vogan

CANADIAN PACIFIC

Great Lakes Steamship Service
via Owen Sound
STEAMSHIP "MANITOBA"
leaves Owen Sound at midnight each THURSDAY (connecting train leaves Toronto 5.25 p. m.) for Sault Ste Marie, Port Arthur and Fort William.
SERVICE via PORT McNICOLL COMMENCES JUNE 2.

Plan Your Vacation Trip Now
POINT AU BARIL
MUSKOKA LAKES
KAWARTHA LAKES
LAKE MAZINAW
FRENCH and PICKEREL RIVERS
RIDEAU LAKES
SEVERN RIVER
are delightful resorts and easily reached via C. P. R.

for WINNIPEG and VANCOUVER
Leave Toronto 6.40 P. M. Daily via 'The Pioneer Route'

Particulars from Canadian Pacific Ticket Agents or
W. B. HOWARD, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, Ontario.

Oil Stoves Oil Stoves

We have only a few left at the old price, be a lucky buyer and get in while the price is right, a New Perfection Jewel, or a Florence Automatic is all you wish to choose from.

Call and pick yours at—

PATTERSON BROS.
Hardware Plumbing & Heating

THE CANADIAN BANK OF COMMERCE

SIR EDMUND WALKER, C.V.O., LL.D., D.C.L., President
JOHN AIRD, General Manager. H. V. F. JONES, Ass't General Manager

CAPITAL, $15,000,000 RESERVE FUND, $13,500,000

FARMERS' BUSINESS

The Canadian Bank of Commerce extends to Farmers every facility for the transaction of their banking business, including the discount and collection of sales notes. Blank sales notes are supplied free of charge on application. 224

H. M. LAY, Manager Walkerton Branch.

NEWS OF TOWN AND DISTRICT

Local news on every page.

Live merchants are live advertisers.

Try the Telescope for tasty job printing.

Mr. R. E. Truax M. P. was home from Ottawa over Sunday.

Mr. Wm. Flett of Paisley vicinity, was a visitor in town Friday.

Misses Tillie and Minnie MacGregor of Paris are visiting at their home here.

Belmore and McIntosh Congregations will erect a new manse for their pastor.

The Junior Farmers Association of Culross picnicked at Silver Lake recently.

Mrs. Bowlby of Hamilton is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. VanHorne.

Miss Lottie Hunsperger of Paris is visiting her friend, Miss Minnie MacGregor.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Watt and babe of Toronto are visiting at the former's home here.

The Annual Meeting of the Carrick Branch of the Preparedness League will be held Friday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Fox and daughter Brenda, of Montreal, visited the former's old home here last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Adams and babe of Toronto are visiting the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Truax.

Mr. B. Beattie of Creighton Mines, New Ontario, is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. VanHorne.

Messrs A. McCarter, D. George, P. Jenkins, and T. Forsythe motored to Kincardine Friday to attend the races.

Engineer Gilf. Moore and family motored to Teeswater and spent Sunday at the former's old home there.

Mrs. Anthony Schumacher and daughters Melinda and Loretto visited with friends at Formosa on Sunday.

Messrs. Thos. and Geo. Eisell attended the funeral at Durham of Mrs. Wm. Lake, a former resident of Walkerton.

Owing to the wet weather, the town has been saving its street oil this season. Durham St. received its first coat on Friday.

The W. M. S. of the Methodist Church are meeting at Mrs. B. S. Brockelbank's in Brant this afternoon. The ladies are being motored out by some kind autoist friends.

Mr. David Noble, con. 4, Brant, is one of the first farmers in this part of the country to use milking machines. Mr. Noble milks fourteen animals and finds the automatic arrangement very satisfacory.

A young deer was seen among some cattle on the road just north of Orchardville the past week. The doe bounded away over the fence and into the bush when an attempt was made to capture it.

Mr. W. H. Adams, general secretary of the Ontario Reform Association, was in town over Sunday, coming up with Mrs. Adams and babe, who will pay an extended visit to Mrs. Adams' parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Truax.

After Jan. 1, 1918, head-lights on automobiles must be so arranged that direct rays do not rise more than 42 inches from the ground measured 75 ft. or more ahead of the car when on level surface. Spot-lights and search-lights are forbidden.

Peter Robinson, a well-known farmer near Ripley, in Huron Township, died suddenly from lockjaw last week. On Saturday he was leading an animal on a rope. There was a snap on the end of the rope. The animal became frightened and started to pull away. The rope ran through his hand, the snap catching in the palm of the hand, tore the cords of the thumb out. Lockjaw developed and he passed away the following night.

Farm Changes Hands.

Mr. Wm Morgan of Brant, has bought Mr. Joseph Whitehead's farm and will use it as a grass farm. Mr. Whitehead has not yet decided where he will locate but expects to buy a farm somewhere near at hand.

July Rod & Gun.

The July issue of Rod and Gun in Canada is a good number to tuck into the grip of the sportsman or Tourist on vacation bent. A glance at the list of contents shows the following titles: "With The Maskinonge and The Shark: Two Opening Days," by Bonnycastle Dale; "Tu-boo" by Wm. MacMillan; "Trout Fishing in Northern Ontario," by C. W. Young; "The Beloved Vagabond," by Edward M. Towler; "The Last Trip Ashore," by F. V. Williams; etc. etc. and in addition well maintained departments devoted to Guns and Ammunition, Fishing Notes, Kennel and Trapshooting. W. J. Taylor, Ltd., Woodstock, Ont., are the publishers of this representative Canadian sportsman's magazine.

Local news on every page.

Will some reader kindly favor us with a Telescope of May 24th?

Mr. Joseph Pace of Huron Tp. called on friends in town Friday.

Miss Cecelia Schnurr of Mildmay spent Sunday at her home here.

You will find money by reading the advertisements in the Telescope.

Mr. James Claney spent over Sunday with friends and relatives at Guelph.

Pte. Harold Hamlet of Hanover was reported killed in action in Saturday's list.

Mr. Arthur Truax of Durham spent a few days last week at Mrs. Levi Welch's.

Mr. Fred Wolfe of Weston motored over on Thursday to visit his mother, Mrs. John Wolfe.

Little Ida Kitchen, who has been visiting in town has returned to her home in Kincardine.

Miss May Poole returned last week after spending a month with friends in Guelph and Goderich.

Dr. and Mrs. Stalker spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Malcolmson of Kincardine.—Hanover Post.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Oglesby and little daughter, Marjorie, returned on Saturday to their home at Buffalo, N. Y. after a two week's visit with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Wilhelm.

Miss Joan Hyslop has some interesting old copies of the Toronto Globe, containing individual pictures of the fathers of Confederation and a historical sketch of the negotiations preceding the formation of the Dominion.

Speaking of of the removal of Rev Father Ferguson from Ayton to the larger parish of Arthur, the Ayton Advance says:—He has been very active in various movements such as Red Cross work, recruiting etc. He has made many warm friends here and his departure will be deeply regretted.

On Last Leave.

Pte. Sam. Truax, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Truax, now of Toronto, paid a visit to the old town on Wednesday and Thursday last before leaving London for Overseas with a Forestry Draft. Sam. signed up originally with the 160th Bruce Batt'n but at the final medical examination was rejected. His persistence has been rewarded and in a few days he will be on his way to the Front.

Lambertus—Brennan.

A quiet wedding took place at St. Mary's Cathedral, North Bay, on Monday, June 25th at 8 a. m. when Miss Loretta Brennan, daughter of the late John and Mrs. Brennan of North Bay, was united in marriage to Mr. James A. Lambertus, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Lambertus of Walkerton. The bride was assisted by her sister, Miss Dora Brennan, while Mr. Nelson Lambertus acted as best man. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Monahan. Mr. and Mrs. Lambertus left on their honeymoon to spend a few days at the former's old home at Walkerton, before visiting New York and Atlantic. On their return they will reside at North Bay, where Mr. Lambertus, is engaged in the drug business.

POETS' CORNER

THE BOY WHO DIDN'T PASS

A sad-faced little fellow sits alone in deep disgrace,
There's a lump arising in his throat and tears stream down his face;
He wandered from his playmates, for he doesn't want to hear
Their shouts of merry laughter since the world has lost its cheer.
He has sipped the cup of sorrow, he has drained the bitter glass,
And his heart is fairly breaking; he's the boy who didn't pass.

In the apple tree the robin sings a cheery little song,
But he doesn't seem to hear it, showing plainly something's wrong;
Comes his playful little spaniel for a romp and bit of play,
But the troubled little fellow sternly bids him go away.
And alone he sits in sorrow, with his hair a tangled mass,
And his eyes are red with weeping; he's the boy who didn't pass.

Oh, you who boast a laughing son and speak of him as bright,
And you who love a little girl who comes to you to-night
With smiling eyes and dancing feet, with honors from her school,
Turn to that lonely boy who thinks he is a fool,
And take him kindly by the hand, the dullest in the class;
He is the one who most needs love—the boy who didn't pass.

WESTERN UNIVERSITY
LONDON - ONTARIO

Three More New Professors Equal to Any in Canada.

Students can now obtain as good an Education in Arts and Medicine at the Western as anywhere.
President—
E. E. Braithwaite, M.A., PhD.

We Own and Offer
$100,000
COUNTY OF BRUCE DEBENTURES

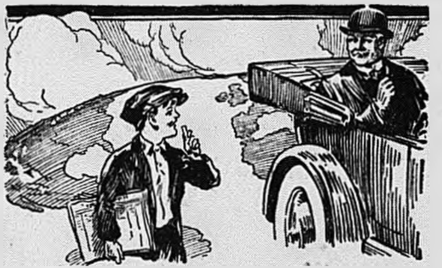
Bearing 5½%, maturing 1917—1936, at par.
Applications should be made at once.

W. A. Mackenzie & Co.
TORONTO, ONT.

Advertising!

in its highest sense is the creation of a new want and providing the means with which to apply that want. The aim of Advertising is not to spread the name of a firm so much as to get business for that firm. The ad. that counts is the one that makes the luxuries of today the necessities of tomorrow. A great many people advertise as they give to charity—merely to get rid of a solicitor. Then the advertiser says it doesn't pay and when done in that spirit it does not. Advertisers must put brain and selling force into their their copy, and when this is done they find that advertising is not an expense, but the finest kind of an investment. —S. C. Dobbs, past president Associated Advertising Clubs of America.

THE TELESCOPE offers you an opportunity to get in touch with Best Homes in Walkerton and the Surrounding District and Get Their Business.



A Little Stick of WRIGLEY'S Makes the Whole World Kin!

This famous chewing gum aids appetite and digestion, quenches thirst, keeps the teeth clean and breath sweet.

Fresh, clean, wholesome and delicious always.

No wonder WRIGLEY'S is used around the world, whenever and wherever people want lasting refreshment.

ON SALE EVERYWHERE

The Flavour Lasts

"After every meal"

Sealed Tight—Kept Right

Made in Canada

16

WRIGLEY'S SPEARMINT THE PERFECT GUM JUICY FRUIT
WRIGLEY'S DOUBLEMINT

A Big Showing of Ladies' Dainty NEW COLLARS

All the newest and prettiest styles in white organdie, Voile and Georgette Crepe prettily trimmed with fine net, lace and bandings. The choicest lot of fine neckwear we have ever shown at the price.

50c., 75c., $1.00, $1.25 & $1.50.

WhiteWash Skirts

SPECIAL AT $1.50, $2.00 $2.50 & $3.00.

These are just about the nicest skirts you could imagine. The materials are White Palm Beach Cloth, fine Gaberdines and poplins and the styles are very pretty indeed, with belt and the pockets include the "brother" and patch affects. Pearl buttons are used on belt, pockets and down fronts.

Splendid fitters and remarkable good values.

Children's Wash Dresses

Ready to Wear, made from good quality Chambras and Percales in very pretty new styles for the young kiddies of 3 to 6 years and the young lady of 7 to 12 years. Colors: butcher's blue, rose, pink and fawn. Collar and belt trimmed with contrasting shades.

Prices 75c., $1.00, $1.50 & $2.00.

Colored Wash Skirts

In Palm Beach shade with new printed effects in blocked stripes and hair line stripes. These stripes come in rose, blue and fawn over Palm Beach shade. Very pretty styles with patch pockets. Price 2.75.

MEN-Now a New Straw Hat

Sennit straw sailors and new shapes in soft straws in very becoming shapes. Easy fitting leather sweat bands.

Prices 75c., $1.00 & $1.50.

Boys' Sailor and Fancy Straw Hats, 50c, 75c and $1.00

STEPHAN BROTHERS

SUMMER SILKS Are Selling Now

Chantung, Habutai, Tassale, Natural and Colored Pongee Silks at 50c, 60c, 75c & $1.

New Crepe de Chines in pretty, light shades, on sale at 65c a yard.

Pretty Pailette and Taffetta Silks, in all the new shades.

New Summer Blouses

New Summer Blouses for ladies in this week. Silk Crepe in white, peach, pink, mais and flesh colorings, beautiful Voile Waists at $1.50, $2. $2.50 to $4.00 each.

Buy your summer Parasol now at a Bargain.

Exceptional values in Misses' and Children's Summer Dresses. Ask to see them.

Japanese and Union Rugs for summer wear; cool and clean. Sizes 3x3, 3x3½, 3x4 at $2.50 $2.75, $3.00 to $11.00 each.

Straw Hats for Men, Boys, Youths and little Tots, all on sale at specially reduced prices to clear during July. Choose now before sizes are broken.

McBURNEY & CO.

NEWS ABOUT TOWN

Local news on every page.

Telescope want ads. bring results.

Monday, August 6th, Walkerton Civic Holiday.

If you have visitors, let the Telescope know. Phone 48.

The Ladies of the Hospital Aid are giving a series of Verandah Teas.

Mrs. L. Anderson and Belle Liddel are visiting in London.

Mrs. Rausch of Detroit, is visiting her mother, Mrs. Glinta.

Miss Margaret Jones is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Fisher of Hanover.

Misses Winnifred and Ruth Warren are visiting relatives in Kincardine.

Master Frank Mosack left on Friday on a months' visit to Kitchener and Preston.

Rev. Thos. Wilson exchanged work on Sunday with Rev. J. A. Lemon of Clifford.

Gunner O. Knechtel of Southampton was reported killed in action on Monday's lists.

It will mean money in your pocket to read the merchants' advertisements in this week's Telescope.

Mrs. Jim Henderson of Walkerville is home on a visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. Saunders.

Mr. Joe Kain and son Percy, motored here from Guelph to attend the Kain—McGregor wedding.

Sapper Mel. Kain and Robt. McGregor of the 64th Battery, Petawawa, are home on a few days' leave.

You can save time, trouble, and a little expense by ordering your daily newspapers at the Telescope.

Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Hahn and daughter, Katherine of Detroit, were visitors this week with Mr. and Mrs. Dan Miller.

Miss Daisy Benton, treas. of the Soldiers Aid Society sent a cheque for $5 rent for Hall for Philharmonic Society. Amount remitted.

Mr. Fred Wolfe accompanied by Mrs. Chas. Glebe and grandmother, Mrs. Esson and Frank Mosack, motored to Preston to visit friends.

Misses Annie and Pearl Kappler of Toronto, are here on a few weeks vacation at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Kappler.

Dr. McLean of Welland, motored up and spent a few days this week with his mother in Brant. His sister, Miss Kate, returned to Welland with him.

Mrs. Reid, wife of Henry Reid, and one of Paisley's most highly esteemed residents, died very suddenly last Thursday morning from heart failure.

Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Ede of Woodstock, Mr. James Hutchinson of Gorrie, and Miss Verna Glebe of Hanover, were Sunday visitors at Mr. Thos. Cunningham's.

Miss Stella Blough left on Tuesday to join her father at Acme, Alberta. With so many warm friends here, Miss Blough will not easily forget the old home town.

Mrs. Albert Fennell and her four children left yesterday on a two months' trip to the West. They will visit Messrs John and Simon Fennell at Hartney, and Crandall, Man., and Mrs. Fennell's mother, Mrs Whyte at Saskatoon.

Economical Travel

Whether you are going west to homestead or only for a trip the most economical method of travel is to take advantage of our low Homeseekers' fares, good going on special excursions every Monday. For tickets and full particulars apply to T. E. Attwood, Town Agent.

Too Much Wet

A further deluge of rain on Monday night, continuing throughout Tuesday, has caused considerable anxiety for the crops. A large portion of the grain on low-lying lands is already ruined. Many town gardens have been under water and in the neighbourhood of Silver Creek several West Ward garden crops have been partially or entirely destroyed.

The Canadian Northern Rockies

If you do not know about the wonderful mountain scenery including Jasper and Mount Robson Parks, traversed by the transcontinental line of the Canadian Northern Railway between Edmonton and Vancouver get a copy of our handsome descriptive booklet, to be had for the asking from, T. E. Attwood town agent.

Family Reunion

Mr. and Mrs. James Lambertus of North Bay were here this week on their honeymoon spending a few days with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Lambertus. Mr. Lambertus has been conducting a highly successful drug business at North Bay the last five years, and his youngest brother, Nelson, who is also a Pharmacy graduate, is employed with him. On Sunday the Lambertus family had a reunion at the home of their sister, Mrs Seigner, South Line where Mr. and Mrs. Lambertus sr. were the centre of a happy company which included their sons, Joseph and Will of Cargill, Herman of Eden Grove, Mrs. Frank of Mildmay, Mrs. Seignor and their fine young families. On Monday the bride and groom left to complete their wedding trip by a week's visit to New York and Atlantic City.

+ + +

EXPRESS THEIR SYMPATHY

The following is a copy of the address read at the presentation to Mrs. George Cunningham on Monday of last week:

Dear Mrs. Cunningham:

Your friends in School Section No. 3 have met to-night to endeavour to give expression to our deep feelings of sympathy in the loss of your gallant husband, Pte. George Cunningham, who laid down his life for King and Country at the glorious battle of Vimy Ridge on April 9th, 1917.

While grieving that a heroic young life was cut short, we cannot but feel that the sacrifice thus made has not been in vain but will deepen the feelings of true patriotism in the breasts of those who knew him in Bruce County.

Your husband proved by the sacrifice which he made that the highest type of citizenship is exemplified in the man who is willing to lay down his life for King and Country and we are proud to bear witness to the nobility of his loyalty and devotion to the Empire of which we form a part.

Never, while the British Empire lasts, can we forget these glorious sons and brothers who have given their lives so bravely for the Flag which binds us all together.

We trust and pray that the Great Father of all will bless, comfort and sustain you and your little children as you journey through life.

We ask you to accept this gift as a token of our friendship and esteem.

Yours in deepest sympathy.

Signed, John C. Leach, Thos. Scales, Charles Glauser.

+ + +

PRESENTATION TO TEACHER

S. S. No 10 was the scene of gay activities last Thursday afternoon. The Red Cross workers and children had planned a surprise for their teacher Miss McGarity who is leaving this section. About three o'clock a knock was heard at the door, it opened, and the school began to fill with ladies loaded down with lunch baskets. Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Ashton of Mulock headed the party and Mr. Ashton relieved the "nervous tension" by several musical selections and a short address. When all had arrived Miss McGarity was asked to take her place on the platform and immediately four of her pupils went forward and presented her with a handsome club bag and white ebony clothes brush while the following address was read.

Aberdeen, June 28 1917.

Dear Miss McGarity:

It was with feelings of regret, we learned of your intention to leave us. You have been very faithful in all your duties, and your labors for Red Cross, have been such that language would fail to describe. We would rather have you continue with us, but since you feel you must go, we wish you the Divine blessing.

Will you kindly accept this Club Bag, and Clothes Brush, as a small token of the esteem, and appreciation in which you are held by us. We wish you every success, for your future.

Yours very sincerely,
The Red Cross Workers, and Pupils of Aberdeen School.

Though taken entirely by surprise and deeply moved by such kindness, Miss McGarity gave a suitable reply expressing her appreciation and good wishes for Aberdeenites. Several recitations were given and the children sang some of their favourite choruses. Miss McGarity gave a reading 'My School' which was full of deep meaning and expression. Mrs. Lamb, the President of the workers, on behalf of the ladies, expressed their regret at having to part with Miss McGarity and thanking her for her efforts while at Aberdeen. Lunch was served followed by God Save the King and after many farewells the crowd dispersed.

IF YOU WANT a good, Reliable Boot. —Try a pair of our Cushion Soles made of solid leather.

FIRST CLASS REPAIRING

C. PETTEPLACE

JEWELLRY OF ALL KINDS

Watches, Clocks, Cut Glass Silverware and Jewellry of all kinds.

C. A. FOX, & SON

SILVERWARE For the Bride

The enduring gift, the useful gift, the one that pleases most.

What will it be—A cake basket, a fruit spoon, a bread tray, a salad set, a tea service, or a complete service of table silverware.

We have silverware which make exquisite wedding gifts in a variety of forms.

The price ranging from a dollar up. You can secure any piece you want from our open sets of celebrated ware. Also beautiful pieces of Pearl handled goods.

R. L. GIBSON

JEWELER WALKERTON

Agent for The New Edison Phonograph.

The Central Grocery

Clover Leaf China

A fresh assignment just arrived. Staple lines.

Toilet Setts

Plain and printed

FARM PRODUCE WANTED

W. G. Searle

Phone 161 Walkerton

THE PEOPLE'S STORE

SERVE!

Be productive for your country. Make your own clothes at home.

This is the example set by the noble women of France. Butterick Patterns give you identically the same smart, simple styles worn by fashionable Paris.

Make your selection now at our

Butterick Pattern Department

Phone 53 J. H. APPEL Walkerton

STRAWBERRIES Every Day

All kinds of Fruit in Season.

CAUSTIC SODA

Owing to the high cost of tin I am selling Caustic Soda in bulk, CHEAP. Bring a tin along as it will not carry in paper.

Another lot of that Japan Tea at 35c lb or 3 lb for $1. Also that famous Black Princess at 60c a lb.

Figs, to arrive, at low prices (watch the window.)

Open Wednesday Evening until 9 p. m.; close Thursday at 1 p. m.

C. PATRICK

PHONE 165 WALKERTON

Read Every Page!

WISE PEOPLE BUYING FROM GOODE & McKAY

The People's Grocery

WALKERTON

The thrifty man or woman, those who are getting the most out of every dollar in these days of high prices will find gratification in the fact that purchasing their wants from the Leading Grocery solves the question of how to remain well fed in spite of high prices.

Don't hesitate to send the smallest order here.

WALKERTON TELESCOPE

LIX. NO. 29 WALKERTON TELESCOPE, WALKERTON, JULY 19th, 1917 $1.50 A YEAR IN ADVANCE ll Home Print - Local News on Every Page From 1 to 8

'S BULLET WOUND

e Death of Corporal Will Which was reported Last —Hit Just as He was Entering Trenches.

particulars have been receiv- last issue regarding Cor- Lindsay, son of Mr. and Mrs. y of Moscow, who died of rance on June 11th. It was let which caused the fatal he was stepping into the all figure no doubt prov- mark. A friend writes: t grazed the muscle near as far as we could see, in the body. He was rst, but was rapidly re- peared to be even in the fore I left him. He died rning of the 11th in the the Base in France. It shock to us as the wound the doctor at the dress- was most optimistic. In that he was here, Bill made a name for himself as man and a good soldier. He inent for his coolness, nerve ry and would soon be due for To say that he was brave ums it up. We shall miss y."

believe that Will's death some measure of the fact not have the usual physical fore going to the firing line, d his constitution did not have suffi- power of resistance. Although down three times, Will succeed- getting to England and by what considered a lucky chance being drafted to France after only six weeks' training. By an odd coincidence he went to France with another Walkerton boy, George Porter, son of Dr. and Mrs. R. T. Porter.

HIGH SCHOOL ENTRANCE

List of Successful Candidates in East Bruce—Large Percentage of Walkerton Pupils Pass

The report of the High School Entrance Exams which is always eagerly awaited by a host of children and parents, was announced by Inspector McCool last Thursday afternoon. Mr. McCool saved the candidates a good deal of anxiety by mailing the entire list of certificates to the successful candidates and their marks to the unsuccessful pupils, all within a few hours after word had been received from the Department releasing the report. This meant an exceedingly busy time for the Inspector but his thoughtfulness and consideration for the anxious youngsters was appreciated.

As will be seen by the summary below, Walkerton Schools did exceedingly well, and both the Public and Separate Schools deserve praise for their good work. The pupils who took the highest marks were:—1. Rose Moss, Chesley, 531; 2. Ruby Burnett, Chesley, 529; 2. Magdalen Stiegle, Mildmay Separate School, 524; 4. Gladys Miller, Walkerton P. S., and Chas. McDonald No 2. Elderslie 521.

SUMMARY FOR EAST BRUCE

	No of Candidates	Successful
Chesley	46	29
Wiarton	43	14
Walkerton	41	33
Lion's Head	20	8
Hepworth	9	7
Tara	28	16
Mildmay	25	16
Cargill	26	16

WALKERTON

Names in order of merit—75 per cent of total constitutes Honours.

Honours—Gladys Miller, Violet Bush, Margaret Yack and William George.

(Continued on page 8.)

IT'S YOUR LIVER

That ...stipation, dull head, bad breath, loss of appetite and yellow skin. Tone up the liver and feel well. NYAL'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS cure. A small pill, small dose, and 50 in a bottle for 25c.

Hunter's Drug Store

Drugs and Kodaks Phone 35 C. P. R. Ticket Agency

The Rexall Store

Necessities for the Summer's Toilet

Rexall Vanishing Cream - 25cts.
Harmony Face Powder - 25cts.
or
Violet Dulce Vanishing Cream - 50cts.
" " Face Powder - - 50cts.
" " Talcum flesh or white 25cts.

A. P. Sieveright

Drugs - Kodaks

WALL PAPERS
OF QUALITY

est effects and a w ssortment for t or, Living Room, ng Room, Hall, Bed Room, Kitchen, at very reasonable prices.

McCrum's

WOMEN'S
White Shoes

IN HIGH CUTS and PUMPS are having a big run.
Women's White Canvas Shoes 8 in. tops, $2.50
Women's White Reginskin High Shoes, 8 in tops, $3.50
Women's White Reginskin High Shoes, 8 in tops, $5.00
All the Leading Styles.

Ramsey
The Shoeman

FRUIT PLENTIFUL HERE

Apples Will be the Only Poor Crop in Bruce This Year—Small Fruits of Most Varieties Abundant.

It looks as though the people of Bruce will have no difficulty in following the Food Director's advice to put down lots of fruit. With the exception of apples, the crop in this district promises well. Apples are an entire failure.

Strawberries are fairly good. The plants suffered from lack of moisture last Fall, and some of the fruit is rotting from the present excess of rain. A local grower informed the Telescope on Tuesday that the strawberries were about one-half done for this season.

Prospects are good for an abundant cherry crop. One grower says his raspberries will be the best yet. Plums will be fairly plentiful, gooseberries and currants a medium crop. Some growers state that their tomatoes are not developing owing to the excessive rain during the polonizing period. Mr. N. P. Schmidt, who has 6,000 plants this year, says his tomatoes are coming along fine, and the first will be ready for picking in three or four days.

WETTEST MONTH YET

Records of the Local Weather Man Show That the Month Ending Sunday Last Beats Anything Experienced Here.

The past month has been the wettest on record in this section. This statement is not made from hearsay. It is shown by the official record of rainfall, kept by Mr. N. P. Schmidt, the local weather-man. For the month ending July 16th, the total rainfall was 10.27 inches. For the same period last year, it was 6.13, and for 1915 it was 1.82 inches.

The figures show that the rain storm on Sunday, July 1st, was a regular old rip-snorter. It takes a good heavy shower to give a half-inch of rain, but the Dominion Day downfall was 2.4 or nearly 2½ inches. June 16th, 1915, showed the heaviest rainfall on record. On that occasion 3.1 inches fell but as the ground was dry, it did not cause the same amount of flooding as the recent Dominion Day spill. Reports from other parts of the County indicate that the recent rainstorm was even heavier in the direction of the lake. At Lucknow the fall during the 24 hours of July 1st, was 2.88 or nearly 3 inches.

NEWS ABOUT TOWN

Local news on every page.

Bruce County rate this year will be 4.4.

Mr. John Rumworm is rebuilding his barn.

Mr. John Hickling is putting up a new kitchen.

Paris Green and Arsenate of Lead at Hunter's.

If you have visitors, let the Telescope know. Phone 48.

Judge Frank Wade of Cleveland, was a visitor in town this week.

Mrs. Jno. Smith left on Tuesday on an extended visit to the West.

Miss Pauline Clapp returned on Monday from a visit to Mount Forest.

Mr. Alvin Meyers was visiting at Wm. Klein's, Mildmay, on Sunday.

Miss Leona Hahn of Kitchener is the guest of her cousin, Miss Gertie Eckel.

Get the habit—Buy your C. P. R. tickets at town office—Hunter's Drug store.

Wolfe Bros. of Clifford are busy shingling a number of barns in this vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Dahms of the sixth con. were visiting at Mr. John Pfohls on Sunday.

Miss Gladys McCarter left on Tuesday for Toronto where she will spend two weeks.

Miss Elizabeth Wilson of the Essex High School Staff, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Lorne A. Eedy.

Mrs. Litkes and daughter, Miss Laura, of Toronto, who have been visiting at Mr. George Eckel's returned on Monday to Toronto.

SALE

Saturday July 21st.

ALL STRAW AND PANAMA HATS ON SALE AT HALF PRICE.

Our Tailoring

Supply yourself with some of our loose fitting comfortable underwear, sport shirts, silk hose and low cut collars.

For summer include every desirable wear designed for real comfort, for hot weather.

To Keep Cool

We know you will find here just the cloth for your suit you are looking for, and our prices are always right. Leave your order to-day, suits $18 up.

G. T. ROURKE

Quality Tailor and Men's Wear.

Phone 186, Walkerton, Ont.

Local news on every page.

Paisley had three funerals in one day last week.

Walkerton Civic Holiday, Monday August 6th.

Mrs. Adam Ruppel of Hanover, visited friends here.

Dr. Berkley Stalker motored over from Hanover on Sunday.

Walter Collins of Chicago is holidaying at the old home.

Miss Mary McKee of Pinkerton was a visitor in town last week.

J. J. Ernst of Brant, has timothy hay in the field which measures 5 ft.

You will save money for yourself by reading the advts. in the Telescope.

Miss Florence Potter is leaving this week on a few week's visit to Bayfield.

Miss Vina Shantz of Lethbridge, Sask. is here renewing old friendships.

Miss Nellie Beattie, formerly of Truax's office, has taken a position at Cobalt.

Mrs. Norrish and Miss Jean left last week on a month's visit to Toronto and Ottawa.

Elda and Alma Searle are holidaying at their uncle's, Mr. Thos. Washburn at Kirkton.

Mrs. Porteous has the position of housekeeper for Rev. Father Haller at Deemerton.

Masters Clarence and Irvin Schmidt of Galt, are visiting at the home of Mr. Geo. Bruder.

Mr. Michael Ryan of Greenock had a serious operation performed on his nose by Dr. Hall, on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Becker and Mr. D. Dippel of Mildmay were visiting at Mr. David Gress on Sunday.

Mr. Duncan Ross and his son of Chesley, motored over on Tuesday and were guests of Dr. and Mrs. Hall.

A sturgeon 5 feet 10 inches was caught at Southampton dam the other day. The fish weighed over 100 lbs.

Masters Paul and Walter Misch of New York, are visiting at the home of their uncle, Mr. Albert Misch.

Harry Denny is reported to be getting along fine. He will be out of the Hospital about the end of next week.

Geo. McKay, a Culross farmer, recently sold a pig on the Teeswater market for $90. It weighed about 700 lbs.

Mr. Ward, Gen. Sec. of the Y. M. C. A. at Hamilton, and Mrs. Ward, are spending a few days with Dr. and Mrs. Clapp.

Mr. Joe Kain and son Percy, returned last week to Guelph. They were accompanied by Miss Tillie McGregor and Spr. Mel. Kain.

Corp. Art. Dean, who has been trying an examination in the Borden N. C. O. S. in England, has passed in the first class as instructor.

The Kincardine town council contemplate the building of a sea-wall, 150 ft. in length, for the protection of the lake front south of the municipal power plant, and directly facing Lansdown Park.

CONTENTS

Of This Week's Telescope

1—News About Town.
2—Editorial.
News About Town.
3—Serial Story.—Inside the lines.
4—160th's Drumhead Service at Bramshott.
5—Country Correspondents.
6—Yoho Valley Illustration.
News About Town.
7—Town And County News.
8—News About Town.

Wanted

Girl 12 to 14 years. Apply Mrs. Edward Baty, Rosedale Cottage, Southampton.

For Sale

Team of driving horses, harness and wagon. Apply to Frank Antonio Walkerton.

Buy Grass Farm

Irwin Bros. have purchased 100 acres of land in Brant from Mr. Wm. Riley, which they will use for pasture.

"Some" Peas

Mr. J. H. Appel has garden peas in his well-kept garden which should hold the record for length. They measured 63 inches long this week.

Bowlers at Mount Forest

A Walkerton rink composed of T. Brown, A. Benninger, H. G. Hunter, and W. H. McBurney, skip, left on Tuesday morning to take part in the tournament at Mount Forest.

Remember This Date

The Women's Hospital Aid are giving a garden party on the Court House grounds, Thursday, July 26th. Supper served from 5 to 7 for 25 cents:—sandwiches, coffee, cake and ice cream. Ice cream cones for sale.

Nearly Lost Finger

Louis Siegfreid nearly lost the index finger of his right hand while running a shaper at the Knechtel Factory on Monday afternoon. The finger was almost severed by the blade, but the doctor states that it will recover in good shape.

Death of Jacob Eckel

Mr. George Eckel received word on Sunday of the death of his brother, Mr. Jacob Eckel, a highly respected resident of Clifford. He was in his 81st year, and leaves a widow and a large family. Before retiring to Clifford a number of years ago, he farmed on the 6th con. Carrick. Mr. and Mrs. Eckel and Miss Gertie attended the funeral at Clifford yesterday.

Tramp Gets 10 Days

Chief Ferguson drove out into Carrick on Sunday and arrested a tramp named Patrich Brady, who had been bothering the farmers between here and Formosa. Brady was a tough-looking character and as he was somewhat abusive and acted queerly, the farmers were afraid he would do some mischief. Brady was given ten days for vagrancy after which he will be invited to shake the dust of this section from his feet.

Lawn Social

A lawn social under the auspices of the Brant Ladies Hospital Aid in aid of the Bruce County Hospital and Brant Preparedness League will be held on Mr. Frank Rennie's lawn on Thursday, July 19th. A good program is being arranged, a special feature of which will be a baseball match between Brant Sodbusters and Walkerton Bankers at 7 o'clock. Admission 25c. Lunch free. Town ladies, please do not forget what we have done for you. Cake, candy and sandwiches requested. —28-29

Visiting Old Home

A former Walkerton girl, Mrs Tamblyn (nee Miss Kit Price) is here with her husband, Staff-Sergt. W. J. Tamblyn, on their honeymoon. They motored over from Blythe on Monday and are spending the week with Mr. and Mrs. C. Patrick. Staff Sergt. Tamblyn, who was formerly a member of the Teaching Staff of Toronto Schools, has been in England the past year and a half doing Red Cross Work at Shorncliffe Military Hospital and is at present home on three months' leave. When he returns to England he will take a commission in the Imperial Flying Corps, which is connected with the British Army.

A WALKERTON AVIATOR

Capt. Eric Robertson of the Royal Flying Corps, Son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Robertson, Is Reported Missing

A message came by cable from the Old Country on Tuesday which caused intense anxiety to Mr. and Mrs. Norman Robertson, and the anxiety of the parents is reflected in the hearts of the people of the town. The only information in the cable was that their son, Capt. Eric Robertson was missing. His friends are hoping that this means that his machine has been brought down in neutral or in enemy territory and that better news may follow.

Capt. Robertson is one of the many Walkerton boys who have been a credit to their town in this war. After receiving a Commission in the Royal Flying Corps, he was so well thought of at headquarters in England that he was given a Staff position. This however did not suit him and he soon went back to his daring and efficient work as aviator again won him promotion and he was recently gazetted flight commander with the rank of Captain. For several months he has been on the firing line, flying out over the enemy lines not once but many times a day, a task that is possibly the most hazardous in the whole service. His bride of a few months, who was a Milton, Ont., girl, is still in England.

Louis Dippel Promoted

Signaller Louis Dippel, who won the Military Medal for bravery at the Somme, has recently been promoted to rank of bombardier. Louis has been at the Front nearly two years with only one short leave and has been in the thick of some of the heaviest fighting.

Here's The Remedy

The Shoe & Leather Journal for July says:—If local merchants did more advertising and less whining about departmental stores there would be less to whine about. The brightest and most successful men in business to-day are those who have built up their trade through local advertising.

A Second Decoration

Pte. Jack McGarity, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. McGarity, has won further destinction at the Front. Jack was decorated with the Military Medal for valorous conduct at the Somme. He has now won a bar for his medal, meaning that for further distinguished bravery he has again been singled out, and the honor of wearing his decoration, is now twice-won.

Turns on Informant

Alexander Weatherhead, a big husky farmer from Cape Chin, appeared before Judge Greig in County Court yesterday, on two charges of pointing a gun at a neighbor. He was fined $10 on each charge. As soon as he was released Weatherhead went to Magistrate Tolton and laid a charge against the informant, charging him with false arrest, and also with supplying him with a jug of whiskey.

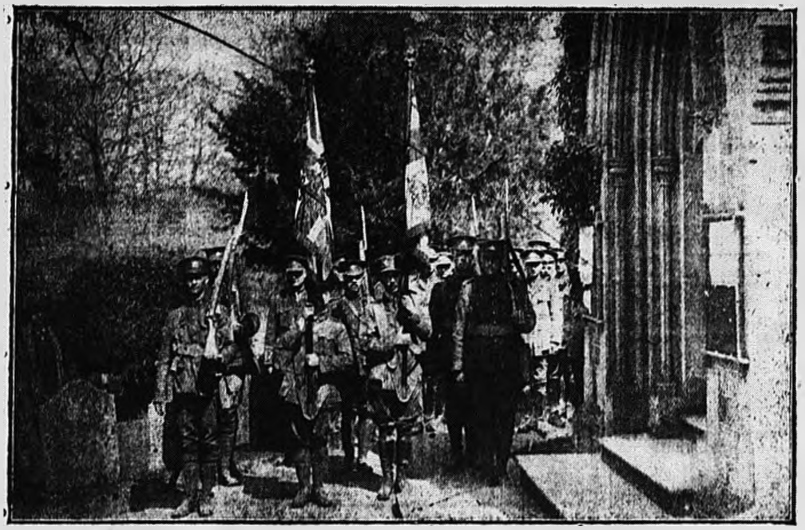
Wet Summer Recalled

An old resident informs the Telescope that it is nearly 50 years since there has been such a wet summer. He recalls that in the year 1869 it rained all season and only let up for two weeks in September. With the coming of the equinoxial storms, the rain turned to snow. The farmers did not have a chance that year to harvest their crops, which were almost a total loss. While the weather this summer has been the wettest for many years, the crops will still be good with anything like favorable weather from now on.

Drank Cider, Abused Horse

Two young men of Riversdale, who were installing lightning rods last Friday for Robt. Trench of Teeswater, indulged rather freely in hard cider at a farmer's near Chepstow. As a result they loaded up a peck of trouble for themselves. They ill-treated the team they were driving so badly that one of the animals fell dead. License Inspector White laid information against them, charging them with being drunk in a public place. For this offence, they were fined $20 and costs each by Magistrates Tolton and Richardson. On a charge of ill-treating the horses, laid by Chief Ferguson, they were allowed to go on suspended sentence, by paying $13 costs. They will also have to settle with their employer, who paid the entire court bill amounting to $83. The pair, who are brothers, were defended by Mr. David Robertson. Mr. O. E. Klein appeared for the Crown.

Depositing the 160th Battalion Colors



Lieutenants Herderson and McLeod Bearing the Colors, About to Enter Little Old Bramshott Church

WALKERTON TELESCOPE
Published Every Thursday
LORNE A. EEDY - PUBLISHER
Phone No. 42
Phone No. (Night) 146

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

Strictly in Advance	$1.50
If not paid in Advance	$2.00
United states, paid in Advance (with Postage)	$2.00
Great Britain, paid in advance	$1.50
50c. additional if not paid in advance

WALKERTON, JULY 19th, 1917.

HE that is too old to intrench, let him retrench.

✦ ✦ ✦

CAN you look a potato in the eye, asks the Orillia Packet, and say, "I have done my duty?"

✦ ✦ ✦

IT'S not the numbers of motorists injured but the number who escape in dangerous accidents who provide cause for wonder.

✦ ✦ ✦

THE FINANCIAL POST says that few people in Canada realize the seriousness of the military situation. It claims that Premier Borden has information which he should let the people know.

✦ ✦ ✦

SUNDAY labor has been given an exhaustive try-out in England and, as was to be expected, it has been found wanting. Thorough tests have proven beyond doubt that more work can be done by a man by working six days per week than seven.

✦ ✦ ✦

SIR Joseph Flavelle's Company made five millions out of bacon alone last year and hundreds of others are being made millionaires out of the war. If the government fails to conscript this class of wealth by means of a heavy income tax, it will be sadly failing in its duty.

✦ ✦ ✦

THE O'Connor report presented in Parliament last week establishes absolutely the fact that many corporations are becoming vastly enriched, owing to war conditions, at the expense of the ordinary people. The government can surely no longer ignore conditions which permit the poor to be robbed to enrich the rich.

✦ ✦ ✦

DIFFERENT corporate bodies throughout Ontario, such as Daughters of the Empire, men's social clubs, etc., in regulating their bills-of-fare to meet war conditions, have resolved to make veal and lamb taboo. The reason of this is obvious and the effect cannot fail to be generally helpful. A wholesale killing off of young live-stock for present gain is a mischievous policy.

✦ ✦ ✦

AS the Northern Fair has decided to go out of business an effort should be made to secure the government grant for the Christmas Fair. Heretofore the Christmas Fair has been financed entirely by private subscription. The securing of the government grant would be a big boost for the Christmas Fair. It would enable the Directors to greatly increase the prize list and to widen the scope of the show. At the same time the organization should be broadened by taking in representative farmers from the surrounding district and making it a district rather than a local affair. By getting government recognition and the co-operation of the leading farmers, the Christmas Fair should soon develop into something worth while.

NEWS ABOUT TOWN

Mr. and Mrs. N. Hiscox left on Saturday for a weeks' visit to Niagara Falls and Shallgrove.

Civil servants in Ontario must pay income tax according to a decision handed down last week.

Mrs. J. P. McConnell of New York is the guest of Dr. and Mrs. H. H. Sinclair. Mrs. McConnell's husband, an old Walkerton boy, is engaged in the advertising business in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. D. A. McDonald and children motored up from Toronto, and are visitors with Mrs. McDonald's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Rife. Mr. McDonald is the Cost expert with the Newel Higel Co.

Mr. Frank Cuyler of Kincardine had a letter last week from Dr. W. C. Minifie, from London, Eng., thanking him for kindness shown while in Kincardine and enclosing him a cheque as a reward for what he did.

The T. Eaton Company are to open up general stores in several Ontario towns. It is understood that Port Elgin has had a visit from an Eaton representative, but it is not known that one of the stores will be located here.— Port Elgin Times.

Word has been received from the Hydro Electric Commission that the wiring gang will be here in a few days to complete the work of wiring Tara streets. The prospects are that the light will be turned on about the first of September — Tara Leader

Parcels to France

No parcel to France can cost more than 32 cents. The rate is 24 cents on to three pounds, and 32 cents for seven pounds, which is the limit for parcels to France.

Economical Travel

Whether you are going west to homestead or only for a trip the most economical method of travel is to take advantage of our low Homeseekers' fares, good going on special excursions every Monday. For tickets and full particulars apply to T. E. Attwood, Town Agent.

Write it Out

Attention is drawn in a circular to relatives and friends of soldiers at the front that when writing to them or sending parcels they must be addressed either "Battalion" or "Battery." Many people, it is claimed, have got into the habit of simply writing "Batt., and failing to spell the word out to its full length. This to a certain extent shortens the address and takes up less space, but it is impossible for the postal authorities to determine whether the letter is addressed to a battalion or battery.

Apples Light Everywhere

Official reports still indicate a crop of winter apples everywhere under the average, particularly in the Lake Erie Counties and the shore Counties of Lake Huron. Lake Ontario Counties will not be so bad, but the Georgian Bay section is lighter than for years. This year's most favorable weather conditions give promise of a crop of summer and fall apples much better in quality than that of last year. In any case extravagantly high prices are hardly possible, owing to the cutting off of export to the United Kingdom. So far, according to the Ontario Government's report, peaches, pears, grapes and sour cherries promise well; sweet cherries may be light.

Fisher's mill dam at Paisley sustained $500 damage in the last storm.

Ripley is observing Thursday afternoon half holidays during July and August.

$117,000 On His Life

The largest life insurance claim paid in Canada during the year has just been issued, namely, $117,000, on the life of Lieut.-Col. E. M. Thompson, a well-known Winnipeg barrister and former Walkertonian who met death on the Somme. He was the son-in-law of the late Sir Thomas Taylor of Hamilton.

The Canadian Northern Rockies

If you do not know about the wonderful mountain scenery including Jasper and Mount Robson Parks, traversed by the transcontinental line of the Canadian Northern Railway between Edmonton and Vancouver get a copy of our handsome descriptive booklet, to be had for the asking from, T. E. Attwood, town agent.

Bruce Boy's Good Work

Mr. Frank Sanderson of Oakville, is holidaying with his parents, Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Sanderson this week. Mr. Sanderson who is Principal of Oakville Public Schools, had the honor of passing one hundred per cent of his 30 Entrance pupils this year, 8 of them taking Honors. The Oakville Board of Education has showed its appreciation of Mr. Sanderson's efficient services by increasing his salary from $1250 to $1500 for the coming year.

Culross Man Injured

Mr. Kenneth McKenzie of Culross, manager of the South Bruce Telephone Co., was the victim of a rather serious accident last week. He was hauling gravel and his horses became suddenly frightened at an object on the roadside and ran away. Before Mr. McKenzie became aware of what was happening he was thrown off the load, under the wagon, which passed over his body. He was able to get up and make his way home, but very soon afterward his injuries became very painful. Upon the doctor's examination it was found that he had four ribs fractured, besides sustaining other injuries.—Mildmay Gazette.

Town Merchant's Chance

New and serious problems for town merchants in Ontario are foreshadowed by the action of a large Toronto mail order house in establishing an order department in the town of Brampton. The mail order evil has been serious enough but now the big mail order octopus has taken another step and placed a personal representative in an adjoining town. With its frontiers enlarged the big business house will doubtless be encouraged to contemplate further encroachments on the rights of smaller merchants. There is one cheering aspect of the case and that is that the hand ally of the big merchant is also available for the help of the small merchant. We refer to the power of effective newspaper advertising. Indeed, in one way the small merchant has the big fellow handicapped in the race for local trade and favor. Most of the town newspapers are partial to the town merchants and refuse to accept mail order advertising. This leaves the local merchant with a free field in which to practice intensive cultivation of selling ideas looking to the greater production of paying customers.

LETTER FROM FRANK SHAFTER

Canadian Composite Pioneer Co.
May 15th, France.

My Dear Sister:

I received your very welcome letter but parcels take longer but it will turn up soon now. Will send a Field P.C. whenever it comes. We are still in the same district as the last time I wrote and we won't be sorry to leave. We have been fairly successful as we are ranged quite a bit ahead since last I wrote as everything goes ahead slow but sure, after getting Fritz out of his dugout we can put him out of any place. It is grueling work for both sides but it has got to go on. I dare say you do see lots back home, there is a lot more you wont see and there is at present nothing to indicate when the end of it will be. However I have no cause to complain. We are not badly fed. A fairly decent tent as long as nothing lands on top of it but tar paper won't keep out much. However you don't get hit till your turn comes. Then you can't get out of it. Willie is lucky but we can't all come over here which is a good job. I should have had a pass from France by this time but they are stopped in the meantime. The weather here is beautiful this last week or two, quite a change it has made on the appearance of the country and when there is no shelling you would hardly believe you were on such a battlefield. Very seldom the guns are quiet and there are always aeroplanes about but mostly our own.

Dear Maud, we can't say much as you are aware so I will close with best love to you and Will.

I remain your ever loving brother,
Frank.

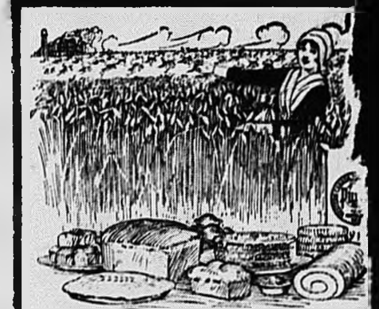
POETS' CORNER

WHEN THERE'S AN IRISH KAISER

The following lively verses were sent to Mr. C. A. Fox, jeweler, by a friend across the Line. They are said to have been read with good effect at a number of recruiting stations.

When the war is over, laddies, just take a tip from me,
There'll be no German submarines a-diving through the sea,
For in Fatherland is Kaiser Bill, the guy we're going to lick,
We will have a brand new Kaiser, and the same will be a Mick.
We'll change the song, "Der Wacht am Rhein" into an Irish reel,
And make the Dutchman dance it, if so inclined we feel.
For the police force in Berlin will be Micks from the County Clare,
When we put an Irish Kaiser in the palace over there.
Shure, in every German parkway you'll find a sweet colleen,
And the fields of waving sauerkraut we'll plant a shamrock green.
No liverwurst or sausage when the Dutchman drinks his suds,
But he'll eat corned beef and cabbage and good old Irish spuds.
The heathen's guns and gas bombs, we'll throw them all away,
And make them use shillalahs, or bricks of Irish clay,
They'll wear no Iron Crosses, shure, 'tis shamrocks they will wear,
When we put an Irish Kaiser in the palace over there.

DANNY MACK.



IT IS NECESSARY

THE GREATLY DECREASED PURCH
ING POWER OF OUR INCOMES DEMA
THAT WE CONCENTRATE OUR F
PURCHASES UPON SUBSTANCE
HIGH FOOD VALUE.

PURITY FLOU

with its stored up wealth of nutriment, the perfectly milled pro sturdy wheat of Canada's famous wheat lands, furnishes the thrifty with the logical solution of her problems in meeting the expensive these days.

With her delicious, even-textured bread; tasty, light, whit crisp, flaky pastry she satisfies the appetites of her family, while furnishing them with the nutriment necessary to their health and str

ANNOUNCEMENT

Handsomely bound in grey and gold the PURITY FLOUR COOK offers 180 pages of the latest tried information upon the preparation of al of nutritious dishes from delicious and strength giving soups to dai desserts. A work from the pen of Miss E. Wester, Specialist on food pr and Domestic Science Expert, and carries the approval of the famous M College. Its text is in the easily understood and non-technical language home kitchen.

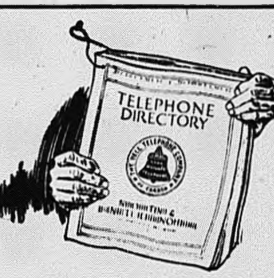
Mailed postpaid on receipt of 20 cents.

WESTERN CANADA FLOUR MILLS COMPANY, LIMITE
TORONTO——WINNIPEG



Goes to Press

JULY 20th

Please report changes required to our Local Office, to-day.

The Bell Telephone Co. of Canada

LOCAL NEWS ON EVERY PAGE

Western Fair

LONDON, CANADA

September 7th to 15th 1917

1867—"A half Century of Success"—1917

The Great Agricultural Exhibition of Western Ontario

$32,000.00 in Prizes and Attra
A very interesting Programme
Military and other features—
Fireworks Each Ni
Two Speed Events Daily
REDUCED RAILWAY RATES

Prize Lists, Entry Forms and all information from the Secretary
Lieut.-Col. W. M. Gartshore, A. M. Hunt President Secretary

nside the Lines

y EARL DERR BIGGERS
AND OBERT WELLS RITCHIE
right, 1915, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

eport for signal duty?" the other ed coldly. "How did you know I to report for signal duty here?"

"In the press a few weeks ago," the el keeper hastily explained, "your nsfer from the Nile country was nounced. We poor people here in braltar, we have so little to think out, even such small details of ese"—

"Ah, yes. Quite so." Woodhouse led back a yawn.

"our journey here from your station on the Nile—it was without inci-" Almer eyed his guest closely. atter permitted his eyes to rest mer's for a minute before re-to." Woodhouse threw his cigarette in the fireplace and started for dra.

most unusual—such a long journey thout incident of any kind in e of universal war, with all gone mad." Almer was twid- o combination of a small safe the wall by the fireplace, and tter seemed only incidental to orbing work he had at hand. will the madness end, Captain ouse? What will be the bound- s of Europe's nations in, say, e rose as he said this and turned to look squarely into the other's ce. Woodhouse met his gaze steadily and without betraying the slightest tion.

1932—I wonder," he mused, and his speech unconsciously appear- t throaty intonation of the Teu- tongue.

on't go yet, Captain Woodhouse. re you retire I want you to sam- some of this brandy." He brought of the safe a short squat bottle d glasses. "See; I keep it in the fe, so precious it is. Drink with me, captain, to the monarch you have come to Gibraltar to serve—to his majesty King George V!"

Almer lifted his glass, but Woodhouse appeared wrapped in thought. His hand did not go up.

"I see you do not drink to that toast, captain."

"No—I was thinking of 1932."

"So?" Quick as a flash Almer caught him up. "Then perhaps I had better say drink to the greatest monarch in Europe."

"To the greatest monarch in Europe!" Woodhouse lifted his glass and drained it.

Almer leaned suddenly across the table and spoke tensely. "You have—something maybe—I would like to see—some little relic of Alexandria, let us say."

Woodhouse swept a quick glance around, then reached for the pin in his tie.

"A scarab; that's all."

In the space of a breath Almer had seen what lay in the back of the stone beetle. He gripped Woodhouse's hand fervently.

"Yes, yes—1932! They have told me of your coming. A cablegram from Koch only this afternoon said you would be on the Princess Mary. The other, the real Woodhouse—there will be no slips—he will not"—

"He is as good as a dead man for many months," Woodhouse interrupted. "Not a chance of a mistake." He slipped easily into German. "Everything depends on us now, Herr Almer."

"Perhaps the fate of our fatherland," Almer replied, cleaving to English. Woodhouse stepped suddenly away from the side of the table, against which he had been leaning, and his right hand jerked back to a concealed bolster on his hip. His eyes were hot with suspicion.

"You do not answer in German—why not? Answer me in German or by"—

"Ach! What need to become excited?" Almer drew back hastily, and his tongue speedily switched to German. "German is dangerous here on the Rock, captain. Only yesterday they shot a man against a wall because he spoke German too well. Do you wonder I try to forget one native tongue?"

Woodhouse was mollified, and he smiled apologetically. Almer forgave him out of admiration for his discretion.

"No need to suspect me, Almer. They will tell you in Berlin how for twenty years I have served the Wilhelmstrasse. But never before such an opportunity—such an opportunity. Stupendous!" Woodhouse nodded enthusiastic affirmation. "But to business. 1932— This Captain Woodhouse seven years ago was stationed on the Rock for just three [illegible] oodhouse, will be expected to [illegible] knowledge of the signal tower, to [illegible] which you will have access." Almer climbed a chair on the opposite side of the room, threw open the face of the old Dutch clock there and removed from its interior a thin roll of blue drafting paper. He put it in Woodhouse's hands. "Here are a few plans of the interior of the signal tower—the best I could get. You will study them tonight, but give me your word to burn them before you sleep."

"Very good." Woodhouse slipped the roll into the breast pocket of his coat. Almer leaned forward in a gust of excitement and, bringing his mouth close to the other's ear, whispered hoarsely:

"England's Mediterranean fleet—twenty-two dreadnaughts, with cruisers and destroyers—nearly a half of Britain's navy, will be here any day, hurrying back to guard the channel. They will anchor in the strait. Our big moment—it will be here then! Listen! Room D in the signal tower—that is the room. All the electric switches are there. From Room D every mine in the harbor can be exploded in ten seconds."

"Yes, but how to get to Room D?" Woodhouse queried.

"Simple. Two doors to Room D, captain; an outer door like any other, an inner door of steel protected by a combination lock like a vault's door. Two men on the Rock have that combination—Major Bishop, chief signal officer, he has it in his head; the governor general of the Rock, he has it in his safe."

"We can get it out of the safe easier than from Major Bishop's head," Woodhouse put in, with a smile.

"Right. We have a friend in the governor's own house, a man with a number from the Wilhelmstrasse like you and me. At any moment in the last two months he could have laid a hand on that combination. But we thought it better to wait until necessity came. When the fleet arrives you will have that combination. You will go with it to Room D, and after that"—

"The deluge," the other finished.

"Yes, yes; our country master of the sea at last and by the work of the Wilhelmstrasse, despised spies who are shot like dogs when they're caught, but die heroes' deaths." The hotel proprietor checked himself in the midst of his rhapsody and came back to more practical details:

"But this afternoon—that man from Alexandria who called you by name. That looked bad, very bad. He knows something?"

Woodhouse, who had been expecting the question and who preferred not to share an anxiety he felt himself best fitted to cope with alone, turned the other's question aside.

"Never met him before in my life to my best recollection. My name he picked up on the Princess Mary, of course. I won a pool one day, and he may have heard some one mention it. Simply a drunken brawler who didn't know what he was doing."

Almer seemed satisfied, but raised another point:

"But the girl who has just left here—am I to have no explanation of her?"

"What explanation do you want?" the captain demanded curtly.

"She recognized you. Who is she? What is she?"

"Devilish unfortunate," Woodhouse admitted. "We met a few weeks ago on a train while I was on my way to Egypt, you know. Chatted together—oh, very informally. She is a capable young woman from the States—a 'buyer,' she calls herself. But I don't think we need fear complications from that score; she's bent only on getting home."

"The situation is dangerous," urged Almer, wagging his head. "She is stopping at the governor's house; any reference she might make about meeting you on a train on the continent when you were supposed to be at Wady Halfa, on the Nile"—

"I have her promise she will not mention that meeting to anybody."

"Ach! A woman's promise!" Almer's eyes invoked heaven to witness a futile thing. "She seemed rather glad to see you again; I"—

"Really?" Woodhouse's eyes lighted.

The Splendide's proprietor was pacing the floor as fast as his fat legs would let him. "Something must be done," he muttered again and again. He halted abruptly before Woodhouse and launched a thick forefinger at him like a torpedo.

"You must make love to that girl, Woodhouse, to keep her on our side," was his ultimatum.

Woodhouse regarded him quizzically, leaned forward and whispered significantly:

"I'm already doing it," he said.

CHAPTER XI.

At Government House.

TURNING to consider the never stale fortunes of one of fate's bean bags—

Mr. Billy Capper, ejected from the Hotel Splendide, took little umbrage at such treatment. It was not an uncommon experience, and, besides, a quiet triumph that would not be dampened by trifles filled his soul. Cheerfully he pushed through the motley crowd on Waterport street down to the lower levels of the city by the Line wall, where the roosts of sailors and warrens of quondam adventurers off all the seven seas made for more congenial atmosphere than that of the Splendide's hollow pretense. He chose a hostelry more commensurate with his slender purse than Almer's, though as a matter of fact the question of paying a hotel bill was farthest from Billy Capper's thoughts. Such formal transactions he avoided whenever feasible. The proprietor of the Sán Roc, where Capper took a room, had such an evil eye that his new guest made a mental note that perhaps he might have to leave his bag behind when he decamped. Capper abhorred violence—to his own person.

Alone over a glass of thin wine—the champagne days, alas, had been too fleeting!—Capper took stock of his situation and conned the developments he hoped to be the instrument for starting. To begin with, finances were wretchedly bad, and that was a circumstance so near the ordinary for Capper that he shuddered as he pulled a gold guinea and a few silver bits from his pocket and mechanically counted them over. Of the 300 marks Louise—pretty snake!—had given him in the Cafe Ikbo and the expense money he had received from her the following day to cover his expedition to Alexandria for the Wilhelmstrasse naught but this paltry residue! That second cabin ticket on the Princess Mary had taken the last big bite from his hoard, and here he was in this black and tan town with a quid and little more between himself and the old starved dog life.

But—and Capper narrowed his eyes and sagely wagged his head—there'd be something fat coming. When he got knee to knee with the governor general of the Rock and told him what he, Billy Capper, knew about the identity of Captain Woodhouse, newly transferred to the signal service of Gibraltar, why, if there wasn't a cool £50 or a matter of that as honorarium from a generous government Billy Capper had missed his guess—that's all.

The little spy anticipated no difficulty in gaining audience with the governor. Before he had been fifteen minutes off the Princess Mary he had heard the name of the present incumbent of Government House—Crandall—Sir George Crandall, the same who had been in command of the forts at Rangoon back in '90. Oh, yes, Capper knew him, and he made no doubt that if properly reminded of a certain bit of work Billy Capper had done back in the Burmese city Sir George would recall him—and with every reason for gratefulness. Tomorrow—yes, before ever Sir George had had his morning's peg—Capper would present himself at Government House and tell about that house on Queen's terrace at Ramleh; about the unconscious British officer who was carried there and hurried thence by night, and the tall, well knit man in conference with Dr. Koch, who was now come to be a part of the garrison of the Rock under the stolen name of Woodhouse.

Government House, one of the Baedeker points of Gibraltar, stands amid its gardens on a shelf of the Rock about midway between the Alameda and the signal tower, perched on the very spine of the lion's back above it. Its windows look out on the blue bay and over to the red roofs of Algeciras, across the water on Spanish territory.

Thither on the morning after his arrival Captain Woodhouse went to report for duty to Major General Sir George Crandall, governor of the Rock. As the captain emerged from the straggling end of Waterport street and strode through the flowered paths of the Alameda he did not happen to see a figure that dodged behind a chevaux-de-frise of Spanish bayonet on his approach. Billy Capper, who had been pacing the gardens for more than an hour, fear battling with the predatory impulse that urged him to Government House, watched Captain Woodhouse pass, and his eyes narrowed into a queer twinkle of oblique humor. So Captain Woodhouse had begun to play the game—going to report to the governor, eh? The pale soul of Mr. Capper glowed with a faint flicker of admiration for this cool bravery far beyond its own capacity to practice. Capper waited a safe time, then followed, chose a position outside Government House from which he could see the main entrance and waited.

"Welcome to the Rock, captain."

A tall, thin East Indian with a narrow, ascetic face under his closely wound white turban and wearing a native livery of the same spotless white answered the captain's summons on the heavy knocker. He accepted the visitor's card, showed him into a dim hallway hung with faded arras and coats of chain mail. The Indian, Jaimihr Khan, gave Captain Woodhouse a start when he returned to say the governor would receive him in his office. The man had a tread like a cat's—absolutely noiseless. He moved through the half light of the hall like a white wraith. His English was spoken precisely and with a curious mechanical intonation.

Jaimihr Khan threw back heavy double doors and announced, "Cap-tain Wood-house!" He had the doors shut noiselessly almost before the visitor was through them.

A tall, heavy set man with graying hair and mustache rose from a broad desk at the sight of a large room and advanced with hand outstretched in cordial welcome.

"Captain Woodhouse of the signal service? Welcome to the Rock, captain. Need you here. Glad you've come."

Woodhouse studied the face of his superior in a swift glance as he shook hands. A broad, full face it was—kindly, intelligent, perhaps not so alert as to the set of eyes and mouth as it had been in younger days when the stripes of service were still to be won. General Sir George Crandall gave the impression of a man content to rest on his honors, though scrupulously attentive to the routine of his position. He motioned the younger man to draw a chair up to the desk.

"In yesterday on the Princess Mary, I presume, captain?"

"Yes, general. Didn't report to you on arrival because I thought it would be quite tea time, and I didn't want to disturb"—

"Right!" General Crandall tipped back in his swivel chair and appraised his new officer with satisfaction. "Everything quiet on the upper Nile? Germans not tinkering with the mullah yet to start insurrection or anything like that?"

"Right as a trivet, sir," Woodhouse answered promptly. "Of course we're anticipating some such move by the enemy—agents working in from Erythrea—holy war of a sort, perhaps, but I think our people have things well in hand."

The general stretched a hand across the desk.

"Your papers, please, captain. I'll receipt your order of transfer and you'll be a member of our garrison forthwith."

Captain Woodhouse brought a thin sheaf of folded papers from his breast pocket and passed it to his superior. He kept his eyes steadily on the general's face as he scanned them.

"C. G. Woodhouse, chief signal officer, Ninth grenadiers, Wady Halfa"—General Crandall conned the transfer aloud, running his eyes rapidly down the lines of the form. "Right. Now, captain, when my orderly comes"—

A subaltern entered and saluted.

"This is Captain Woodhouse." General Crandall indicated Woodhouse, who had risen. "Kindly conduct him to Major Bishop, who will assign him to quarters. Captain Woodhouse, we—Lady Crandall and I—will expect you at Government House soon to make your bow over the teacup—one of Lady Crandall's inflexible rules for new recruits, you know. Good day, sir."

Woodhouse, out in the free air again, drew in a long breath and braced back his shoulders. He accompanied the subaltern over the trails on the Rock to the quarters of Major Bishop, chief signal officer, under whom he was to be junior in command. But one regret marked his first visit to Government House—he had not caught even a glimpse of the little person calling herself Jane Gerson, buyer.

But he had missed by a narrow margin. Piloted by Lady Crandall, Jane had left the vaulted breakfast room for the larger and lighter library, which Sir George had converted to the purpose of an office. This room was a sort of holy of holies with Lady Crandall, to be invaded if the presiding genius could be caught napping or lulled to complaisance. This morning she had the important necessity of unobstructed light, not a general commodity about Government House, to urge in defense of profanation. For her guest carried under her arm a sheaf of plans—by sterling architects of women's fancies—and the imp of envy would not allow the governor's wife to have peace until she had devoured every pattern. She paused in mock horror at the threshold of her husband's sanctum.

"But, George, dear, you should be out by this time, you know," Lady Crandall expostulated. "Miss Gerson and I have something—oh, tremendously important—to do here." She made a sly gesture of concealing the bundle of stiff drawing paper she carried. General Crandall, who had risen at the arrival of the two invaders, made a show at capturing the plans his wife held behind her back. Jane bubbled laughter at the spectacle of so exalted a military lion at play. The general possessed himself of the roll, drew a curled scroll from it and gravely studied it.

"Miss Gerson," he said, with deliberation, "this looks to me like a plan of Battery B. I am surprised that you should violate the hospitality of Government House by doing spy work from its bedroom windows."

"Foolish! You've got that upside down for one thing," Lady Crandall chided, "and, besides, it's only a chart of what the lady of Government House hopes soon to wear if she can get the goods."

"You see, General Crandall, I'm attacking Government House at its weakest point," Jane laughed. "Been here less than twelve hours, and already the most important member of the garrison has surrendered."

"The American sahib, Reynolds," chanted Jaimihr Khan from the double doors, and almost at once the breezy consul burst into the room. He saluted all three with an expansive gesture of the hands.

"Morning, governor! Morning, Lady Crandall, and same to you, Miss Gerson. Dear, dear! This is going to be a bad day for me, and it's just started." The little man was wound up like a sidewalk top, and he ran on without stopping:

"General Sherman might have got some real force into his remarks about war if he'd had a job like mine. Miss Gerson—howdy! Heard from the Saxonia. Be in harbor some time tomorrow and leave at 6 sharp following morning." Jane clapped her hands. "I've wired for accommodations for all of you. Just got the answer. Rotten accommodations; but, thank heaven, I won't be able to hear what you say about me when you're at sea!"

"Anything will do," Jane broke in. "I'm not particular. I want to sail—that's all."

The consul looked flustered.

"Um! That's what I came to see you about, General Crandall." He jerked his head around toward the governor with a birdlike pertness. "What are you going to do with this young lady, sir?" Jane waited the answer breathlessly.

"Why—um—really, as far as we're concerned," Sir George answered slowly, "we'd be glad to have her stop here indefinitely. Don't you agree, Helen?"

"Of course, but"—

"It's this way," the consul interrupted Lady Crandall. "I've arranged to get Miss Gerson aboard, provided, of course, you approve."

"You haven't got a cable through regarding her?" the general asked. "Her passports—lost—lot of red tape, of course."

"Not a line from Paris even," Reynolds answered. "Miss Gerson says the ambassador can't vouch for her, and"—

"Indeed he could!" Jane started impulsively toward the general. "It was his wife arranged my motor for me and advanced me money."

General Crandall looked down into her eager face indulgently.

"You really are very anxious to sail, Miss Gerson?"

"General Crandall, I'm not very good at these 'please spare my lover' speeches," the girl began, her lips tremulous. "But it means a lot to me—to go, my job, my career. I've fought my way this far, and here I am—and there's the sea out there. If I can't step aboard the Saxonia Friday morning it—it will break my heart."

Gibraltar's master honed his chin thoughtfully for a minute.

"Um. I'm sure I don't want to break anybody's heart—not at my age, miss. I see no good reason why I should not let you go if nothing happens meanwhile to make me change my mind." He beamed good humor on her.

"You really are very anxious to sail, Miss Gerson."

"Bless you, general!" she cried. "Hildebrand's will mention you in its advertisements."

"Heaven forbid!" General Crandall cried in real perturbation.

Jane turned to Lady Crandall and took both her hands.

"Come to my room," she urged, with an air of mystery. "You know that evening gown—the one in blue? It's yours, Lady Crandall. I'd give another to the general if he'd wear it. Now one fitting and"—

Her voice was drowned by Lady Crandall's "You dear!"

"Be at the dock at 5 a. m. Friday to see you and the others off, Miss Gerson," Reynolds called after her. "Must go now—morning crowd of busted citizens waiting at the consulate to be fed. Ta-ta!" Reynolds collided with Jaimihr Khan at the double doors.

"A young man who wishes to see you, General Sahib. He will give no name, but he says a promise you made to see him—by telephone an hour ago."

"Show Mr. Reynolds out, Jaimihr!" the general ordered. "Then you may bring the young man in."

CHAPTER XII.

Capper Plays His Cards.

MR. BILLY CAPPER, who had, in truth, telephoned to Government House and secured the privilege of an interview even before the arrival of Woodhouse to report and had paced the paths of the Alameda since, blowing hot and cold on his resolutions, followed the soft footed Indian into the presence of General Crandall.

"Awfully good of you to see me," he babbled as he stood before the desk, turning his hat brim through his fingers like a prayer wheel.

General Crandall bade him be seated. "I haven't forgotten you did me a service in Burma," he added.

"Oh, yes, of course," Capper managed to answer. "But that was my job. I got paid for that."

"You're not with the Brussels secret service people any longer, then?"

The question hit Capper hard. His fingers fluttered to his lips.

"No, general. They—er—let me go. Suppose you heard that—and a lot of other things about me; that I was a rotter—that I drank"—

"What I heard was not altogether complimentary," the other answered judiciously. "I trust it was untrue."

Capper's embarrassment increased.

"Well, to tell you the truth, General Crandall—ah—I did go to pieces for a time. I've been playing a pretty short string for the last two years. But"—he broke off his whine in a sudden accession of passion—"they can't keep me down much longer. I'm going to show 'em!"

General Crandall looked his surprise.

"General, I'm an Englishman. You know that. I may be down and out, and my old friends may not know me when we meet—but I'm English, and I'm loyal!" Capper was getting a grip on himself; he thought the patriotic line a safe one to play with the commander of a fortress.

"Yes, yes. I don't question that, I'm sure," the general grunted, and he began to riffle some papers on his desk petulantly.

Capper pressed home his point. "I just want you to keep that in mind, general, while I talk. Just remember I'm English—and loyal."

The governor nodded impatiently.

Capper leaned far over the desk and began in an eager whisper:

"General, remember Cook—that chap in Rangoon—the polo player?" The other looked blank. "Haven't forgotten him, general—how he lived in Burma two years, mingling with the English, until one day somebody discovered his name was Koch and that he was a mighty unhealthy chap to have about the fortifications? Surely"—

"Yes, I remember him now. But what"—

"There was Hollister too. You played billiards in your club with Hollister, I fancy. Thought him all right, too, until a couple of secret service men walked into the club one day and clapped handcuffs on him. Remember that, general?"

The commander exclaimed snappishly that he could not see his visitor's drift.

"I'm just refreshing your memory, general." Capper hastened to reassure. "Just reminding you that there isn't much difference between a German and an Englishman, after all—if the German wants to play the English man and knows his book. He can fool a lot of us."

"Granted. But I don't see what all this has to do with"—

"Listen, general!" Capper was trembling in his eagerness. "I'm just in from Alexandria. Came on the Princess Mary. There was an Englishman aboard bound for Gib. Name was Captain Woodhouse, of the signal service."

"Quite right. What of that?" General Crandall looked up suspiciously.

"Have you seen Captain Woodhouse, general?"

"Not a half hour ago. He called to report."

"Seemed all right to you—this Woodhouse?" Capper eyed the other's face narrowly.

"Of course. Why not?"

"Remember Cook, general! Remember Hollister!" Capper warned.

General Crandall exploded irritably:

"He's a German Spy!"

"What the devil do you mean? What are you driving at, man?"

"What do I mean? I mean this chap who calls himself Woodhouse isn't Woodhouse at all. He's a German spy—from the Wilhelmstrasse—with a number from the Wilhelmstrasse. He's on the Rock to do a spy's work."

"Pshaw! Why did Brussels let you go?" General Crandall tipped back in his seat and cast an amused glance at the flushed face before him.

Capper shook his head doggedly. "I'm not drunk, General Crandall. I'm so broke I couldn't get drunk if I would. So help me, I'm telling God's truth. I got it straight"— Capper checked his tumult of words and did some rapid thinking. How much did he dare reveal? "In Alexandria, general—got it there—from the inside, sir. Koch is the head of the Wilhelmstrasse crowd there—the same Cook you knew in Rangoon. He engineered the trick. The wildest dreams of the Wilhelmstrasse have come true. They've got a man in your signal tower, general—in your signal tower!"

"Suppose the Germans have a spy in my signal tower or anywhere here," he began argumentatively. "Suppose they learn every nook and corner of the Rock—have the caliber and range of every gun in our defense. They couldn't capture Gibraltar in a thousand years."

"I don't know what they want," Capper returned, with the injured air of a man whose worth fails of recognition. "I only came here to warn you that your Captain Woodhouse is taking orders from Berlin."

"Come—come, man! Give me some proof to back up this cock and bull story," General Crandall snapped.

"Here it is, general—all I've got of the story. The real Woodhouse comes down from somewhere up in the Nile—I don't know where—and puts up for the night in Alexandria to wait for the Princess Mary. No friends in the town, you know; nowhere to visit. Three Wilhelmstrasse men in Alexandria, headed by that clever devil Cook or Koch, who calls himself a doctor now. Somehow they get hold of the real Woodhouse and do for him—what I don't know—probably kill the poor devil.

"General, I saw with my own eyes an unconscious British officer being carried away from Koch's house in Ramleh in an automobile—two men with him." Capper fixed the governor with a lean index finger dramatically. "And I saw the man you just this morning received as Captain Woodhouse leave Dr. Koch's house five minutes after that poor devil—the real Woodhouse—had been carried off. That's the reason I took the same boat with him to Gibraltar, General Crandall—because I'm loyal and it was my duty to warn you."

"Incredible!"

"One thing more, general." Capper was sorely tempted, but for the minute his wholesome fear of consequences

(To Le Continued)

NEWS OF TOWN AND DISTRICT

Haying has commenced.

Local news on every page.

Mount Forest's tax rate is 26 mills.

Live merchants are live advertisers.

Miss Halladay is visiting at Toronto.

Saleslady wanted at Ramsey's Shoe Store.

Miss Stella Bush spent a few days in Hanover.

Mrs. M. Connors went to Toronto on Wednesday.

Lieut. Pinkerton paid a visit to Toronto this week.

Robt. Ormiston of Teeswater, was a visitor in town Tuesday.

Crops throughout Bruce are looking better than average this year.

Smart boy wanted to learn the shoe business at Ramsey's Shoe Store.

The Telescope will be glad to get the names of your visitors. Phone 48.

Mrs. Wm. Mullen and Mrs. J. Jones spent Monday with friends in Hanover.

Mr. Robert W. Bell of Goderich is visiting his sister, Mrs. Henry Williams

Mrs. Mac. Jones and babe of Toronto are visiting her mother, Mrs. P. Heffernan.

Miss Pearl Wright, of Hanover spent the week-end with her friend, Miss Helen Bryce.

Miss May Bryce intends leaving next week on a visit to her uncle, Mr. John Carroll, at Girvan, Sask.

Mrs. McNeill and little son of Chicago, are visiting her father, Mr. James White, East Ward.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Wettlaufer motored up from Kitchener and spent a few days at the old home here.

Misses Hazel Nelson, Kate McKay, and Mr. Chas. Nelson of Toronto, are guests of Miss Jennie Hyslop.

You can save time, trouble, and a little expense by ordering your daily newspaper at the Telescope office.

Mr. and Mrs. John Becker went to St. Clemens on Friday to attend the funeral of the latter's brother.

Mrs. Harry Stephan and little daughter, Mary, and Miss McCormick, have been visiting friends at Aberdeen.

Mrs. Dan Sheehan, (nee Ida Ernest) and daughter Dorothy of Buffalo are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Ernest.

Mrs. Wm. Clement is leaving on a two months' visit to her daughter at Napinka, Man. and other relatives in the West.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Schnurr and babe of Orangeville spent Sunday with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. Schnurr.

Mr. John Tegler and Miss Lena and Olive were attending the wedding of their cousin Miss Lena Kool of Normanby on Wednesday.

Mrs Sam Vogan will receive for the first time since her marriage on Friday, July 27th, and afterwards on the first Tuesday of each month.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Polmatier and children who have been visiting at Mr. A. Oberle's, returned to their home in Mount Forest on Monday.

Miss Mae Cryderman B. A. left on Monday morning to spend the balance of her vacation at the home of a girl college friend, who lives in Manitoba.

Miss George of Arran, who under went two serious operations at the Bruce County Hospital, was sufficiently recovered to return home on Saturday.

Mr. Herbert Zisterer, an employee of the Knechtel Furniture Co., had the middle fingers of his right hand badly lacerated by getting same in the cog wheels.

Messrs William and Henry Kirstine of Brant, were called to Halleybury last week owing to the serious illness of Mr. Andrew Kirstine sr. Mr. Kirstine is in a very low condition and his recovery is not expected.

Corp. Harold Trotter of the 1st North Dakota Reg't. spent a few days here this week visiting at Mr. Robt. Bryce s. On Monday he received a telegram to report for duty and he expects to be drafted to France

Mrs. McMillan of Erin and her two daughters, Mrs. Cox of Rathwell, Man. and Miss Margaret McMillan of North Bay, were visitors with Mr. and Mrs. D. McKechnie, the past week. Mrs. McMillan is Mr. McKechnie's sister.

Coun. Alex. McCarter had a letter from his nephew, David McCarter, now in France, saying that he just had his first spell in the trenches. David, who is a son of Mr. and Mrs. James McCarter of Brant, enlisted in the Toronto Beavers.

Lieut.-Col. G. F. McFarland, of the Greys, and lately in command in England, has gone on active service to the front, to which many of the officers and men of the Greys have gone. His command in England has been taken over by Col. Gordon.

Local news on every page.

Let the Telescope know about your visitors.

Mrs. Stevens sr. is visiting relatives at Cargill.

Mr. Joe Hewitt has been very ill with heart-trouble.

Master Tom Etherton is leaving this week on a visit to Galt.

Miss Coats of Detroit visited at Mr. A. Hehn's on Monday.

Mrs. A. H. Stevens is visiting at Mr. Wm. Lamont's at Malcolm.

Mr. Cann of Toronto is visiting his daughter, Mrs. (Dr.) Fortune.

D. D. Campbell has been engaged for Bradley School, Greenock, at $750.

Mr. W. G. Ritchie of Paisley visited his uncle, Mr. P. Ritchie, this week.

Miss Kathrine McKay of Toronto is visiting at Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Hyslop's.

Eleven Paisley pupils wrote on the High School Entrance all being successful.

Miss Kathleen Heffernan of Detroit is a guest at the home of Mrs. P. Heffernan.

Mrs. Thos. Hyslop visited with her friend, Mrs. Sam Winsler, at Hanover on Monday.

Miss Vyna Shantz of Brooklin, Ont. spent a few days with her friend Mrs. J. Bergmann.

Miss McKenzie, con. 10, Bruce has been appointed organist of Knox Church, Paisley.

Rev. Father Hoffarth, began his duties as curate at Walkerton R. C. Church on Sunday.

Mrs. (Lieut.) Helwig, nee Miss Madge Smith of Drayton. is visiting her friend Miss Ruby Norrish.

Half price Straw and Panama Hat Sale on Saturday July 21st. Watch for window display.—G. T. Rourke.

Mrs. Arch McDougall of Crawford visited in town at Mr. Morgan's and Mr. Richardson's the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Krueger came up from Buffalo Monday, on a visit to their grandson, Mr. Ralph Krueger.

Mrs. Sharp and Miss Sharp, and Miss Della Connor of Paisley were visitors with Mr. and Mrs. P. Ritchie on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Bender and two children, and Miss Dietrich motored up from Ayton and spent Monday at Mr. A. Hehn's.

Mrs A. McCartney, who underwent a serious operation at the Hospital a week ago Monday, is reported to be doing nicely.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Appel and daughter, Mildred, are spending a week with Mr. Appel's mother on the old homestead near New Hamburg.

Mr. Will Lettner arrived here Tuesday night from Eyebrow, Sask. to join Mrs. Lettner and the children who have been visiting here for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. David Ritchie and family motored over from Teeswater, Tuesday, on a visit to Mrs. Ritchie's parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. Ritchie.

Messrs. W. M. Shaw and son Norman, and Mr. Walter Collins who is home from Chicago, on holidays, left here Tuesday morning on a canoe trip to Southampton.

Rev. and Mrs. C. N. McKenzie of Riversdale left on Tuesday for a trip to Bruce Mines and Port Arthur. They were accompanied by Miss Grace McDonald who will visit her aunts in Manitoba.

Rev. J. Grenzenbach, pastor of the Evangelical church Walkerton, visited the Carrick Bible Union on Tuesday night and gave a very appropriate talk on the Sunday School Lesson, which was very attentively listened to by all.

John Willoughby, the ten-year old son of Mr. William Willoughby of Bentinck township, met with a most distressing accident lately when he was kicked by a horse just over the left eye, and it is feared he will lose the sight of the optic.

Mr. Roger Clancy of Chepstow sold a farm of 206 acres, in Glenelg Township, north of Durham, last week to Mr. Michael Kieffer of Formosa. The farm will be worked by Mr. Kieffer's son. The deal was put through by Mr. James Whitehead.

The Walkerton Telescope recently discarded the "readyprint inside," and is now, like The Signal, an "all-home-print" paper. The Telescope is showing a new vigor and represents the county town of Bruce in a creditable manner.—Goderich Signal.

An interesting presentation took place in St. Andrew's Presbyterian church here, when the Misses Adela and Clara George and Helen Sutherland were presented with diplomas given by the Ontario Sunday School Association, as fully qualified S. S. teachers. These three young ladies have successfully passed all the prescribed examinations required by the Association and achieved the remarkable success of obtaining 100 per cent on all their examinations.

A Memorable Occasion at Br

100th Bruce Battalion Holds a Drumhead Service in Commemoration of T

Mr. John Buehlow, who has been laid up the past month with a serious nervous attack is very much improved, and left this week, accompanied by his son Clarence, on a short visit to his daughter, Mrs. (Rev.) H. R. Moeig at New Hamburg.

Mr. Peter McGregor, the oldest resident of Hanover and one of the oldest residents of this district, passed away at his home here on July 10th, at the age of 96 years, 6 months and 16 days. He fell and injured his hip bone a couple of years ago and since then has had two or three more falls which has kept him under "the weather." He had no particular disease and passed peacefully away as though tired out and wanting to sleep. He was conscious to the last minute. He had only been sick once in his life, about 40 years ago when he had rhematic fever.

Going to Walkerville

Miss Mabel Clancy, the popular Bell Telephone operator at Cargill, is leaving on Saturday to take a position in the post office at Walkerville. Miss Clancy will be greatly missed but her many friends are glad to know that she is getting a real good position.

Lutherans Extend Call

The Walkerton Lutheran Congregation has extended a call to Rev. I. Strempfer of Elmira. The reverend gentleman is well and favorably known. He is a middle-aged married man and has been a number of years in the ministry. A reply to the invitation is expected soon.

School's Good Record

Riversdale School, of Mr. Joe Dietrich is the popular teacher, had a record at the recent High School Entrance that would be hard to beat. Of three candidates all were successful. Two of them were the only pupils at Teeswater who passed with honours. Helene Dietrich, who headed the list of nineteen successful candidates writing at Teeswater, is the young sister, of her proud teacher and Frank O'Hagan, who came second with honours, is a cousin

HIGH SCHOOL ENTRANCE

(Continued from page 1.)

George Thompson. Pass—Gladys McCarter, Graeme Kirstine, Eileen Cryderman, Kathleen Oberle and Harold Walker, Mildred Royce, Ada Bolden, Elgin Bell, Irwin Inglis, Cecilia Cunic, Kathleen James, Madeleine Weiler, Clement Wilhelm, Wilbert Weiler, Bertha Polfus and Lucy Thompson, Mary Gillen and Melvin Schmidt, Otilda Polfuss and Frances Ernst and George Lettner, Robert Wilhelm, Zenobia Miller, Margaret McCurdy and Florence Wilton and John Flewelling, Rosellia McGarity and Leonard Kelly.

The following recommended on account of farm work will, doubtless, receive their certificates in due time. Layton Glauser, George Pinkney, Rhoda Pfohl, Laura Scott, Stanley Wilton.

CARGILL

Nellie Scharbach, Dan. McKeeman, Stuart Cargill, Camilla Coumans, Melinda Mullin, Alice Hamilton, Lottie Crawford, Henrietta Wagner, Ethel Donnelly, Marie Ernewein, Eleanor Teasdale, Dorothy Spong, Emily Teasdale, Marjorie Abell, George Strauss, Carlyle Garland. Edward Cargill recommended to the Education Department on account of work on farm—Certificates will probably be sent in due time.

MILDMAY

Honours.—Magdalen Stiegle. Pass—Tena Bemus, Clayton W. Fink, Kathleen Heringer, Dorothy Schwalm, Mary Missere, Helen Sauer, Annie Thompson, Peter Thompson, Leo Kraemer, Anthony Missere, Joseph Diemert, Hildegard Kuntz, Martha S. Bickel, Alfred Hammer, Tabitha Hunstein.

The following recommended on account of farm work. Will doubtless, receive certificates in due time. Harry Baetz, Rosetta Ernewein, Johanna Ruland, Leander Schnurr, Loretta Schill, Henry Schwindt, Leo Weiler, Andrew Zimmer.

TEESWATER

Entrance Candidates at Teeswater, (West Bruce Inspectorate) in order of merit.

Honours—Helen E. Dietrich, Frank P. O'Hagan. Pass—Elsie Armstrong, Hampton Ballagh, Adeline Erb, Irene Hanna, Marion Hodgins, Wilfrid Kroeplin, Annie Marshall, Margaret McGregor, Gertrude O'Hagan, Marion Petteplace, Dorothy Stephens, James Weifham, Olive Yuill.

Pupils of highest standing in West Bruce Inspecturate were;—Louise Garcutt, Lucknow, Ont. and Rhoda Knechtel, Southampton, Ont.

GLAMIS

On Friday evening June 29th 1917, at her late home "Fairview Farm", Glamis, Ont., Sarah Elizabeth Beacock, beloved wife of W. J. Graham, passed to her reward, aged 59 years, 8 months and 25 days. The deceased was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Beacock, and was born in the Twp. of Cartright County of Durham, on Oct. 1st, 1857. When but a child she moved with her parents to Manvers. On Oct. 26th 1881 she was united in marriage to W. J. Graham of West Orm, Victoria Co. who survives her. In 1882 Mr. and Mrs. Graham moved to Bruce Co. first settling on 6th con. Bruce, where they resided a short time later moving to 8th con. Bruce near Lovat, there they spent five years. In 1889 they moved to Glamis "Fairview Farm" where the deceased resided until her spirit took its flight to God who gave it. The late Mrs. Graham was a member of the Wesley Methodist denomination since a very young girl and during the past few years was united with the Free Methodist denomination. By her death her church here has lost one of its leading members. She was always present at the means of grace whenever possible leaving a bright influence and example for those left to mourn her death. Owing to her illness she was unable to attend church services for a few months past, yet she enjoyed the sweet fellowship in her home. About ten months ago she became seriously ill and it was advised that an operation be performed for cancer of the stomach. After an incision was made the specialist and doctors found an operation would be of no use and that it was but a matter of a very short time for her to live. However she seemed to rally and gradually gained up in strength again and much improved in health and was around doing her work for some months. About four months ago she became ill again but was able to be up every day until a short time before her death when she was confined to her bed. All that loving hands and kind hearts could do was done for her but all in vain. Her work on earth was done, her mansion on high was prepared and God called her home, Trusting in Him and always looking forward to the time of his coming. She was bright and cheerful, she was very cheerful in her sufferings, making it easy for those waiting on her. She was kind-hearted and of a loving disposition, her home was always open for strangers, and friends and a hearty welcome was there. A large circle of friends mourn her loss. Besides a devoted husband and loving son Charles, she leaves to mourn her demise three sisters and three brothers (her death being the first of the family,) Mrs. Robertson, Victoria Co.; Mrs. Nicholson, Durham Co.; Mrs. Loney Grey, Co.; Thomas of Durham Co.; Abraham of Grey Co.; and George of Wiarton. The funeral services were conducted at her late home on Monday afternoon July 2nd by her pastor Rev. E. A. DeMille assisted by local clergymen. The remains were interred in Starkvall Cemetery, Paisley, there to await the resurrection morn. To all who mourn heartfelt sympathy is extended.

"I FEEL LIKE A NEW BEING"

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" Brought The Joy Of Health After Two Years' Suffering

MADAM LAPLANTE

85 St. Rose St., Montreal. April 4th.

"For over two years I was sick and miserable. I suffered from constant Headaches, and had Palpitation of the Heart so badly that I feared I would die. There seemed to be a lump in my stomach and the Constipation was dreadful. I suffered from Pain in the Back and Kidney Disease.

I was treated by a physician for a year and a half and he did me no good at all. I tried "Fruit-a-tives" as a last resort. After using three boxes, I was greatly improved and twelve boxes made me well. Now I can work all day and there are no Headaches, no Palpitation, no Heart Trouble, no Constipation, no Pain or Kidney Trouble and I feel like a new being—and it was "Fruit-a-tives" that gave me back my health".

MADAM ARTHUR LAPLANTE.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Fall Term From, Sept. 4th

CENTRAL Business College.
STRATFORD, ONT.

COMMERCIAL, SHORTHAND & TELEGRAPHY DEPARTMENTS

We have thorough courses, experienced instructors and we place our graduates in positions. Demand upon us for trained help is many times the number graduating. Get our free catalogue.

D. A. McLACHLAN
PRINCIPAL

Office Stationery

For nice Stationery printed from new type at moderate prices. Try the

TELESCOPE

GIRLS NEEDED IN OFFICES

Voluntary enlistment has taken thousands of men from office work. Conscription will take more. Office help is scarce now—will be scarcer very soon. Young women must fill the vacant places and they need training.

NORTHERN Business College

remains open all summer to help to meet the demand for trained office help. Students may enter any time. No increase in fees. Circulars free on application.

C. A. FLEMING, F. C. A., Principal
Department A., Owen Sound, Ontario

Here's Where You Will Find the Proper

Summer Clothing

Don't be satisfied with just an ordinary suit of clothes this time, but treat yourself to a good one. It might not be a high priced one, but one that is good value for your money, whatever you pay.

T. PYE
Clothier & Furnisher.

HOMESEEKERS' EXCURSIONS

MAY 8th TO OCTOBER 30th
Every
TUESDAY
"ALL RAIL" - also by
THURSDAY'S STEAMER
"Great Lakes Route"
(Season Navigation)

Your Future is in the West

The fertile prairies have put Western Canada on the map. There are still thousands of acres waiting for the man who wants a home and prosperity. Take advantage of Low Rates and travel via

Canadian Pacific

W. B. Howard, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, Ont.

Parish Church, England

the Battalion who Rest in Bramshott Graveyard

NTAL
, L. D. S. D. D. S.
or to Dr. Coram.
mployed in all den-
pecial attention to nlay work. Three office. Visits Carursday afternoon of

NT, D.D.S., L.D.S
of Royal College
l Surgeons of
's old stand.
- Walkerton

MEDICAL

DR. BROWN of the Eye, Ear, Nose and stadt, Ont. Will be at the tel, Walkerton, 1st Friday nth from 2 to 6 p.m.

HALL, B.A., M.D., C.M. raduate in Arts and Medin's University. Member of of Physicians and Surged residence on corner of Cayley Streets.

RANCE
RE, LIFE,
CCIDENT,
TOMOBILE,
JARANTEE.
NEY to LOAN
AL ESTATE
Farm Property for sale.
before making a purchase
AN and RAIL
S TO ANY PART OF
THE WORLD.
t the Canadian Northern d all ocean steamship
- English, American and MARRIAGE LICENSES
E. ATTWOOD
ENERAL AGENT
rton - Ontario

URANCE &
L ESTATE
Life, Accident &
h. Plate Glass.
Guarantee Insur-
in the best of anies.
Estate—Several
ble residential perties for sale.
y to Loan, Conveyancing
General Agency. Splendid gage Loan Company De-tures for investment yielding
d interest.

GEO. D. McKAY
Office Over Bell Telephone Agency
PHONE NO. - 179

WE PHOTOGRAPH MEN
AS MEN ARE
It's a business matter and there is no fuss or bother. Your family, friends and business associates
want your portrait.
FRASER STUDIO

BRANT

MAPLE HILL.

Promotions based on June exams. and Class work.

Jr. IV. to Sr. IV.—Pearl Sickel, Craigie Leach, Wilmer Glauser, Reuben Harnock, Laverne Brocklebank, Mayme Pinkney.

Jr. III. to Sr. III.—Douglas Walker, Anna Schilling, Grace Leach, Graham Pinkney.

Jr. II. to Sr. II.—Laureena Schilling, Audrey Pinkney, Gertrude Harnock.

Sr. I. to Jr. II.—Ornell Pfohl.

Jr. Pr. to Sr. Pr.—Emma Fisk.

Jr. Pr.—Verna Little, Mary Schilling, Dora Sickel, Chester Cunningham, Margaret Fisk, Elmer Pfohl, Richard Burrell.

E. Teeple,
Teacher.

OTTER CREEK

A group of young tourists started out on a pleasant trip by auto recently from Mildmay to Chippawa by way of Niagara to visit a short time with E. Fenner's brother, Rev. J. D. Fenner who is pastor at Willoughby Church. We autoed on to Guelph, then through Grimsby which neighborhood is a great fruit-growing district for fruit such as peaches, grapes, raspberries and strawberries,, then to St. Cathrines having some good roads to travel over and some beautiful windings through lovely evergreens. From St. Catherines we enquired our way out to Pelham Centre to Rev. Mr. A. Kellerman's who at one time had charge of Walkerton Evangelical Congregation. Having arrived there around 5 o'clock, we partook of something pertaining to bodily strength and after spending an enjoyable time there left shortly before eight on our way to Niagara, first crossing the Welland Canal before we reached Niagara. There we saw the Niagara Falls a pretty sight but just here we had a little difficulty as we come to closed gates guarded by a volunteer as (so we learned) there are large power houses or plants on those premises and unless you have a pass (which is difficult to obtain) you cannot go through so we found our way out of Niagara to Chippawa and there got on what is called the Solorm road which is a government road, a splendid road, so we soon reached our destination it being ten o'clock. The country around there is very flat and the roads outside of the government roads, are very sticky on wet days. Sunday we were at Willoughby Church, they having their Children's Day and we heard a splendid programe made up of Octetts, Quartettes, duets, solos and as a whole choir accompanied by organs, violins and flutes. One can readily see the generous spirit of the Willoughby people their collection, amounting to $47 towards missions and not a large membership. Monday we visited the two different large barns and stablings of a large Holstein breeder is Mr. Houch who has some splendid herds of cattle. Then we proceeded to Fort Erie where we met with Miss Lilian Gress, a sister of one of our company, who is working in Buffalo, then to Erie Beach where we enjoyed a few amusements, then to Crystal Beach where we also saw some grand sights. Tuesday morning we proceeded on our homeward journey.

Read the Ads.

GLAMIS

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Panabaker and family of Hespeler are holidaying at John Deehan's.

Miss Lily McKinnon returned to Brantford on Tuesday.

Miss Mabel Lillico of Chesley is a guest of Miss Jennie McKeeman.

Rev. G. L. Bock of Walkerton (an ex-pastor of the Baptist Church here) will exchange pulpits with Mr. McCauley on Sunday.

John Currie spent the week-end with frends in Kincardine.

Mrs. N. C. McFarlane has retorned home from visiting in Meaford.

Miss Hendry of Weston is visiting at the home of her sister, Mrs. W. J. McKeeman.

Mr. and Mrs. Cunningham, Miss Laura, Mr. and Mrs. Burgess and daughter, spent Sunday with' Bervie friends.

Miss Nora C. McNally is visiting friends in Owen Sound.

Mr. Wm. Cunningham returned to his home in Alliston on Saturday.

Mr., Miss and Master Guthrie Chittick of Stoney Creek, Miss Reid of Beamsville motored here last week and called on friends.

Miss Mamie Francis of Toronto has been a visitor at Murdock McKay's.

Pte. Rhoderick Thompson of The Railway Construction Batt. at Camp Borden, was a week-end visitor at his home here. All were glad to see Rhody again He returned to Camp on Tuesday.

Richard Kirktown had the misfortune to be kicked by a horse on Friday. Hope he may soon recover.

The name of Lance Corp. Craig C Tibb, appeared in the casualty list on Thursday as wounded, following an official telegram of his being dangerously wounded, another message came, he had died from wounds. Craig was well known here, his father being pastor of St. Pauls Church here a few years ago but now at Blackstock. To the bereaved ones heartfelt sympathy is extended.

Miss Edna Browning of Durham, was a visitor at J. D. Robertson's the past week.

James Gilchrist of Kincardine Sundayed at his home.

Mrs. Edward Wood and daughter Miss Margaret, of Superior Wis. are visiting at the home of her mother, Mrs. Kenneth McLennan.

Misses McKenzie of Kincardine visited at Neil Currie's the latter end of the week.

Miss Flossie McLennan left last week on a visit to her sister, Mrs. Arthur Pinkerton of Rocanville, Sask.

The three pupils who wrote from the Glamis School on Entrance Exams, namely—Pearl Kirktown, Mary Deehan and Clarence McLennan were all successful in passing their exams. To the Teacher and pupils congratulations are extended.

Mrs. Ed. Wood and Miss Margaret McLennan spent Monday in the County Town.

GRAY HAIR

Dr. Tremain's Natural Hair Restorative used as directed, is guaranteed to restore gray hair to its natural color or money refunded. Positively not a dye and non-injurious. Price $1.00, post paid. Write Tremain Supply Co., Dept. Toronto, Ontario.

On Sale in Walkerton at H. G. Hunter's Drug Store.

Miss Mamie McLean has returned to Toronto.

On Saturday evening "A Mystic Tea", given by Mrs. Joseph Wrightson and other Red Cross Friends in aid of The Red Cross, was served in the I. O. O. F. Hall here, which was tastefully decorated for the occasion with flowers and flags. During the evening phonograph music was rendered. There was considerable amusement over the Menu, which was a mystery and served in European style. The menu consisted of sandwiches, cakes, pies, ice cream etc. Home-made candy was also on sale, from which a neat sum was raised. A cake donated by Mrs. Stevenson was sold by auction, which helped to swell the funds. A large crowd attended, and best of order was maintained throughout the evening. The event was a huge success both financially, and socially. The handsome sum of $50.00 was realized. All present were well pleased. A vote of thanks to all who helped to make it such a success.

PINKERTON

Mr. and Mrs. Semple of Tiverton visited at Mr. D. Pinkerton's last week.

Mrs. R. Geary of Niagara Falls came up last week to wait on her daughter, Miss Jessie Geary, who is ill.

Miss Mary McKee of Stratford is holidaying at her home here.

Mr. Dennis Donnelly of Denver, Col., is visiting his brothers, J. J. and R. Donnelly.

Rev. and Mrs. Gale, Misses Hattie and Gladys Gale leave this week for Alma where they will spend their vacation. On Sunday next Rev. Mr. Bridge, who is so well-known here, will preach.

Mr. Joe Gale of Alma spent Sunday at the Manse.

On Sunday afternoon a memorial service for the late Pte. Edgar Garland will be held in the Anglican Church here.

Rev. A. Shore, a former rector in the Anglican Church here, preached last Sunday to a large congregation.

Miss Ida Overand of Stratford visited at Mr. Alf Fiddis' on Sunday.

Miss Ethel Donnelly and Mr. Norman Alexander have been successful in passing their entrance examinations. Congratulations.

Word was received here last week by Mrs. Jas. Murray that her grandson Colin Murray and only son of Mr. Wm. Murray, a former resident here but now of Vancouver, had been killed in action.

At the regular meeting of the Red Cross Society, the members of the Society sent the following motion of sympathy to Mrs. S. Garland:—Moved by Mrs. T. Birrell, seconded by Mrs Bell: That we, members of the Pinkerton Branch of the Red Cross Society, desire to express to Mrs. Samuel Garland, the very deep regret with which we learned that her son, Edgar, had fallen in France at the battle front, fighting for the cause of liberty and justice.

Those of us who have known Edgar from his childhood, have always admired him for his upright and manly qualities, and feel that his death is not only a great loss to his family but also to the community.

We desire to convey to Mrs. Garland our sincere sympathy with her in her sorrow, and also to express the hope, that the knowledge that her son made made the supreme sacrifice for such a noble cause, will in measure sustain her in this time of trial.

Miss Walker of Parkhead visited Miss Myrtle Garland last.

NEWS OF FARM & COUNTRYSIDE

MILDMAY

Mr. Ed. Kalbfleisch and Messrs Peter Huhnstein, Edward Wittich and Charles Buhlman motored to London on Friday of last week and returned with three new cars Friday night.

Mr. Alf. Weber met with an accident near Rothsay Sunday evening in his Ford. A Chevrolet car run into Mr. Weber's car and sent it into the ditch bending the front axle. Mr. Kalbfleisch went to Rothsay Monday and repaired the car.

Mildmay baseball team journeyed to Moltke Monday evening to play the game that was to have been played last Friday evening. Mr. Jack Devlin heaved the ball for our team and did good work. The score was 5—3 in Moltke's favor but Moltke got four of the five runs in one inning. Mr. Ed. Wittich umpired the game.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. H. Swift of Toronto accompanied by the latter's sister, Miss Dorothea Wicke, are visiting their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas Wicke.

The local Ford Agents have delivered a new Ford roadster to Father Haller who is now stationed at Deemerton.

Flower Sunday was observed in the Methodist Church last Sunday.

Miss Rose Helwig and Miss Dora Wendt motored to Southampton on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson E. Dahms of Floradale are spending a couple of months with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Voelzing.

Stewart Brohman of Maple Creek, Sask. is spending a few weeks at the home of his father, Mr. Alex Brohman.

On Friday evening at the Town Hall the Carrick branch of the Bruce County Preparedness Leage held a meeting. The speakers were Prof. S. C. MacCready and Miss Constance Braithee. A fair sized crowd was in attendance at the meeting.

Our liveryman Mr. Henry Smith, is at present engaged in completely rebuilding his barn. A foundation of concrete is being put in.

Miss Lizzie Seiling accompanied by her sister Edna Seiling, visited friends in Drayton last Thursday.

Mrs. J. A. Johnston went to Glencoe on Thursday of last week to be present at the marriage of her sister, Miss Marion Innes to Avery R. Gillette of Chatham.

Mr. Wm. F. Wendt has been re-engaged as teacher in S. S. No 6 Carrick, for the coming year.

BRANT AVENUE

Mrs. Timothy Foley, and her mother, Mrs. Connolly, spent Sunday with Mrs. Frank Ernest.

Quite a few farmers had a quantity of hay cut just before last week's rain and calculated on getting it hauled in Monday. Tuesday's rain knocked their calculations in the head. The hay is very heavy this year, but it is a question whether the crop can be saved or not.

A hired man in this neighborhood, who attended the Dominion Day celebration at Port, expected to get a ride home with a friend, but missing him he started off on foot, arriving home in time for breakfast the following morning. He found the first part of the thirty-five mile trip very easy walking, but the last thirteen were like a hundred.

Len Long was laid up for a few days last week, his brother Bob relieving him for a few days on the cream route.

Harry Childs arrived home last week to help his father with the haying and harvest. Mr. Childs is making a good recovery from his recent injuries.

Mr. and Mrs. John Ruetz spent Sunday with their daughter, Mrs. Geo. Zettler, at Carlsruhe. Mr. Ruetz reports the crops in Carrick to be looking fine.

Mrs. Andrew Zettler spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Sutter.

The root crop is in bad shape from the continued rain.

CARGILL

Miss Marie Martin who has been in the employ of Keeling & Co. left on Saturday to take a position in the Post-Office in Georgetown. We wish Marie every success in her new office. Miss Lila Hettrick is the new employee at Keeling's.

Miss Myrtle Elder, who has been visiting relatives in Goderich and Wingham returned home on Saturday.

Rev. Mr. Storey spent a few days in Toronto this week.

Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Shore of Ilderton spent a few days of last week at the home of Mr. George Sirrs. Mr. Shore took charge of the Anniversary Services in the Anglican Church on Sunday.

Miss Bessie Abell of Wingham visited friends here on Sunday.

Mrs. Geo. Keeling is visiting at the home of C. W. Keeling here

Mrs. B. J. Ferguson and children of Teeswater are visiting at the home of W. D. Cargill.

Mrs. Thomas Chisholm had a very successful tea on Friday last, in aid of the Women's Patriotic League. The proceeds amounted to $10.00 and a donation of $10.00 was received from a friend.

Spr. W. L. Keeling of the Div. Signallers Ottawa is spending a few days at his home here.

Miss Grace Kyle is visiting her aunt Mrs. Ostic in Toronto.

Mr. James Clancy of Walkerton spent the week-end at his home here. Jim is pretty badly used up with rheumatism and we wish him a speedy recovery.

Mr. Lou Balson of Toronto is visiting his brother F. F. Balson.

Staff. Sergt. and Mrs. Wm. Tamblyn of Blyth called on their friend Miss Gladys Keeling on Monday.

Miss Nellie Stansal of New York is visiting her sister, Mrs. George Welsford.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Fowlie and Miss Margaret returned home from Inverhuron on Monday after having a real good week at the lakeside.

CHEPSTOW

Miss Lizzie Hunsiger of Kitchener is on a two weeks' vacation at her home.

Miss Blanche Wingefelder of Walkerton was a visitor at the King Edward over the Sunday.

We are glad to report that Mr. Jos. Fritz, who sustained a nasty wound in the calf of his leg through the accidental discharge of a gun is progressing favorably.

Mr. Denis Donnelly of Denver, Col. is a visitor to his mother and relatives here.

An operation for an affection of the lung was performed on Tuesday upon Blanche little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Zettel. We trust that the little one may have a speedy recovery.

Miss Emma Lippert of Toronto accompanied by a lady friend is enjoying her vacation at her home.

Mr. Andy Ditner, our popular drover, accompanied a car of choice beefers to the city market on Saturday.

SCHOOL REPORT

Sr. IV—M. Bechberger, M. Mullen, M. Meagher, L. Phillippi, J. Zettel; Conditionally:—F. Wagner, L. Zettler.

Jr. IV—A. Ohlheiser, C. Bester, B. Graf, E. Ernst, M. Strauss, C. McNab, F. Zisterer.

Sr. III—A. Meagher, J. Ernst, G. Zettel, A. Bechberger, S. Zettler, H. Schmidt, H. McNab, M. Zettler, F. Walter, T. Fleming; Conditionally:—M. Fleming, M. Doerr, L. Zettler, L. Schmidt.

V. J. Schurter. (Principal)

Jr. III—A. Walter, M. Wagner, A. Graf, P. Zettel, A. Lippert, F. Schmidt, B. Phillippi, M. McNab, Johanna Bross, A. Zettler, L. Schankle, J. Hehn, J. Dieboldt; Conditionally:—M. Ohlheiser, J. Bross, E. Whitman, A. Zisterer.

Sr. II—B. Bechberger, A. Strauss, W. Downs, T. Ohlheiser, J. Mullen, S. Zettler.

Jr. II—G. Schmidt, K. Fleming, L. Siegel, W. Siegel, C. Zettler, P. Zettler, H. Doerr, J. Walter; Conditionally:—R. Schmidt, J. Whitman.

Sr. I—M. Ernest, F. Graf, M. Graf, F. Meagher, L. Ohlheiser, R. Ohlheiser, M. Strauss, M. Zettel, J. Hehn; Conditionally:—J. Mullen, F. Lacey.

Jr. I—F. Bechberger, T. McNab, S. Siegel, J. Wagner, Jos. Schankle, John Schankle L. Schankle, L. Zisterer.

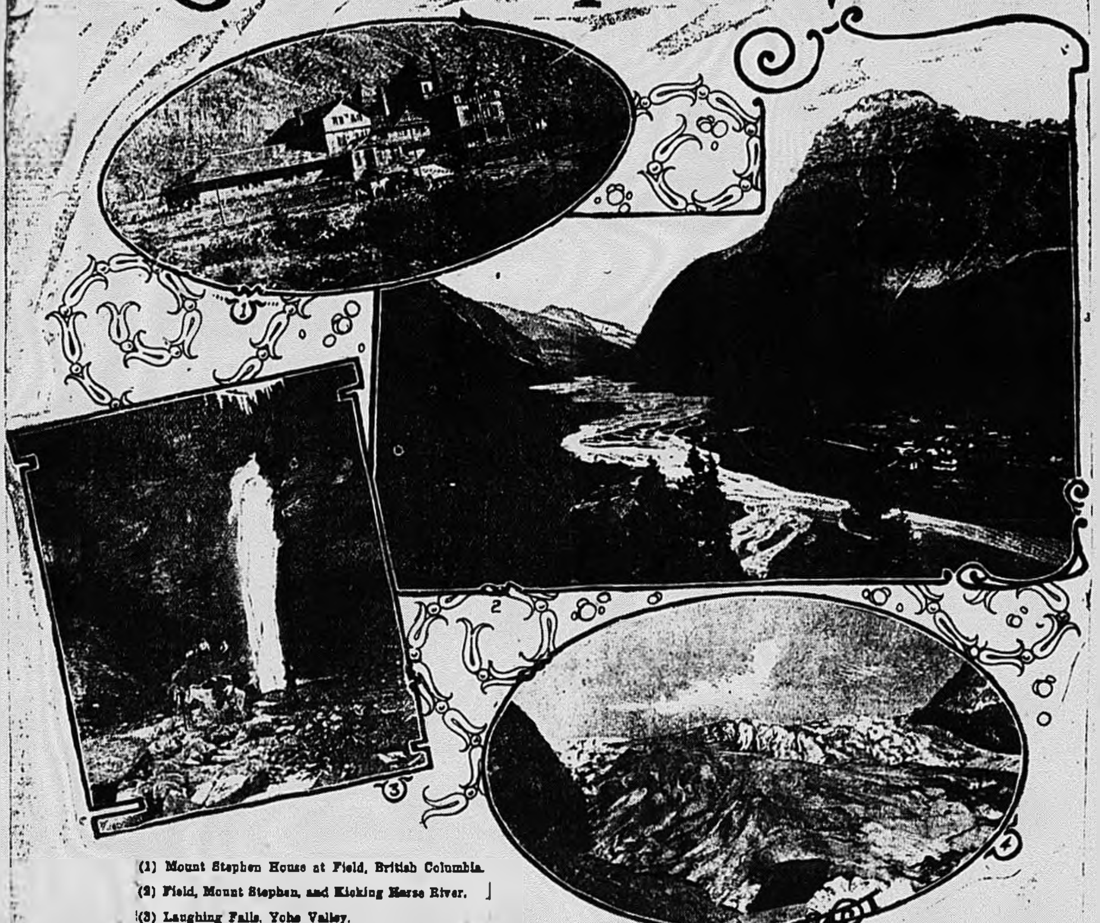
Primer—A. Clancy, A. Siegel, H. Kritz, W. Schmidt, J. Schmidt, G. Schmidt, C. Walter, J. Boegel.

V. Wimmer, (Assistant)

HANOVER

Nurse Mary Adams, daughter of James Adams of the Merchants Bank here, was given a royal welcome on her arrival home on leave from the front, where she has been engaged in hospital work for the past two years and a half. She was met at the station and welcomed by Mayor Taylor and representatives of the council. A procession was formed, and she was conveyed in an auto to her home. In the evening a splendid public reception was accorded her in the town hall. The hall was was beautifully decorated and filled with enthusiastic citizens. The program consisted of music and addresses of welcome by Mayor Taylor and Rev. Mr. Jackson. Miss Adams gave a very interesting talk on her work overseas. A very pleasing part of the program was the presentation to Miss Adams of a basket of beautiful roses by the Daughters of the Empire, and a magnificent bouquet of carnations by the Women's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church. The mayor, on behalf of the citizens of the town, presented her a jewel case containing a $10 goldpiece. Miss Adams has two brothers on active service.

THE GATE to the YOHO VALLEY



(1) Mount Stephen House at Field, British Columbia.

(2) Field, Mount Stephen, and Kicking Horse River.

(3) Laughing Falls, Yoho Valley.

(4) The Great Yoho Glacier.

FIELD, nestling at the foot of glorious mountains in the heart of the Kicking Horse Valley, is an important stopping place for tourists through the Canadian Rockies. Here, at the foot of the gigantic Mount Stephen, is the delightful Chalet of the Canadian Pacific, called after the great mountain. From this point there are beautiful drives and pony rides. Along the Ottertail road to the valley of that name is where a magnificent view of the triple-headed Mt. Goodsir is to be had. Then, again, the drive along the Yoho road is one of the longest and finest in the Rockies. It crosses the Kicking Horse River and, following the stream, reaches the Yoho Valley; then swinging round the shoulder of Mt. Field, and continuing up the valley, precipitous cliffs are met. The road ends a short distance past the Takakkaw Falls, a splendid cascade falling over a thousand feet. Near this point every year is a camp which the tourist may make the base for exploring the upper reaches of the Yoho Valley. Those who have more time to spend in the Yoho Valley drive from Field to Emerald Lake where there is another delightful chalet. Another especially fine trip from Mt. Stephen is that over the Dennis and Duchesnay passes. On arrival at the latter pass the descent is made into a beautiful valley, under the precipitous crags of Mt. Odaray, the valley being followed until the Lake O'Hara trail is reached. The climbers should not fail to visit the lake, one of the most beautiful in the Rocky Mountains. The return journey is made by way of an excellent trail to Hector Station.

NEWS ABOUT TOWN

Mayor Johnston and Mr. C. B. Robinson are attending Grand Lodge A. F. & A. M. at Belleville this week.

Clarence Oberle of the Bank of Commerce at Chatham who has been visiting his parents here returned to Chatham on Monday.

Mr. R. H. McKay left on Monday morning to spend a week with his daughter, Mrs. Wm. Lumsden at Belleville. While in the city Mr. McKay will attend the Annual meeting of Grand Lodge, A. F. & A. M.

A Horse Case

An interesting horse case was tried before Judge Greig at Underwood last week. Hugh Smith, Kincardine Twp., sued Thos. Currie, 6th Bruce, for damages. He bought a horse from Currie and the horse afterwards developed cataracts on both eyes. Currie claims he told Smith the horse's eyes was sore at the time of the sale. Smith stated that Currie told him the veterinary said the horse would be alright in a short time. J. Armitage, V. S. and J. F. Marcus V. S., both of Kincardine, swore that the horse's eyes were affected with cataract. The judge's decision was reserved.

Good Cattle Prices

The most successful sale of Shorthorns in Canada for a quarter of a century was held at Elora when Messrs. Watt & Gardhouse sold 63 head, exclusive of calves at foot, for $40,160. Thirty-nine head were taken by American buyers at an average of $827, and 24 head by Canadian purchasers at an an average of $586. The top price, $2,600, was paid by J. E. Crosbie, of Tulsa, Oklahoma, for the bull, Marquis of Lancaster, two years old in August. Mr. Crosbie also paid the second highest price of the sale, $3,025, for Britannia, two years old in October. Mr. Crosbie bought six head all told.

Rev. and Mrs. H. R. Moog are expected here from New Hamburg on holidays the end of next week. Rev. Mr. Moog will preach at Elmwood on July 29th.

Killed in Action

Mrs. James Murray of Pinkerton received word recently that her grandson, Pte. Murray of British Columbia had been killed in action in France. The young soldier was the only son of Mr. John Murray, formerly teacher at Pinkerton, but now of B. C.

Poor Roads Expensive

Orillia Packet:—Poor roads are very expensive things for country communities. The farmers who think that improved highways are mainly for the benefit of those who drive automobiles should reflect on the results of a recent investigation by the United States Department of Agriculture which finds that the cost of hauling farm produce over ordinary country roads is twenty three cents a ton mile whereas over hard-surfaced roads it is only thirteen cents.

Freak of Lightning

A peculiar freak of lightning was noticeable during the storm at Mr. John Seips' gate in Howick. The lightning struck the pole there on line 25 of the Robert Wightman phone system, making the wire so hot that it lit up four insulators on the pole for ten minutes like four electric lights. The wire down the pole to the ground was also red hot from the stroke. There was no sign of a mark on the pole but a hole was left in the ground at the bottom of the pole. This demonstrates beyond a doubt that ground wires are a protection to the line, the same as rods are a protection to buildings. In this instance not one phone on line 25 was damaged by the stroke.—Clifford Express.

Timely Helps for the Housewife

Buttermilk is cheaper than fresh-drawn milk.

* * *

Excessive bluing may be boiled out of a garment.

* * *

Sweet corn and popcorn must not be planted together.

* * *

Any kind of steam-cooked oats may be used in breads.

* * *

A good salad is made of asparagus and peas on lettuce.

* * *

Grape fruit with the rusty brown skin is always the sweetest.

* * *

A gentle simmer is much more effective than hard boiling.

* * *

Pieces of dry bread and toast will keep well in a covered jar.

* * *

A pink-and-white decorated table is always an appetizing one.

* * *

Custards of all kinds should be cooked slowly, or they may crack.

* * *

Spinach is not done until it is so tender the fork will not hold it.

* * *

Cotton stockings are much better than lisle for children's sensitive feet.

* * *

A side of mutton can often be economically used for home supplies.

* * *

Buckwheat is a partial substitute for wheat and an excellent crop for poor land.

* * *

If you do without potatoes, eat more cornmeal, beans, celery and cabbage. Skim milk is almost as good as whole milk if it is to be eaten with bread.

Kerosene will dissolve the grease that collects in a drain pipe.

* * *

A good material for a baby's creeper is heavy black sateen.

* * *

A "good" table need not by any means be an expensive table.

* * *

Save the water in which potatoes are boiled to mix the bread with.

* * *

Remove match marks from paint by rubbing with a piece of lemon.

* * *

Before roasting a chicken it should be thoroughly washed and rinsed.

* * *

If grease is spilled on a wooden floor throw cold water over it instantly to harden the grease.

* * *

The successful sponge cake depends on beating the eggs and sugar until all the sugar is dissolved.

* * *

Keep a box of crayons and some old magazines to amuse the child who comes visiting with its mother.

* * *

A bookmark stuffed with shot is a handy thing to keep beside the kitchen recipe book to hold down the leaves.

* * *

There should be a pencil-pocket in all work aprons. This will save many wasted moments used in hunting a pencil.

* * *

One of the best laxatives is bran, and in every household where there are children bran bread should frequently be on the table.

* * *

Onions should be taken out of the ground as soon as they are well grown. Let them lie on the ground until they are well cured in the air, then spread them out in a dry place.

* * *

A delicious oatmeal soup is made with chicken broth for foundation. Put into a quart of it three tablespoonsful of oatmeal and cook half an hour in a double boiler. Season with celery leaves, a little onion, carrot and parsley branches.

Leftover fish can be used up in several ways, including creamed fish and salad.

* * *

Cucumbers should not stand in their dressing unless you do not mind their wilting.

* * *

It is not economy to get on with a broken egg beater or any other broken tools.

* * *

To keep enamelware from cracking and scaling off, never let it heat too suddenly.

* * *

A good doorstep is made of a brick covered with velvet the color of the woodwork.

* * *

Rhubarb is delicious baked with raisins or prunes. The raisins should be cooked first.

* * *

Omelettes are not extravagant, especially if the eggs are mixed with other ingredients.

* * *

Keep the top of the dining table in condition by wiping it over with a cloth and olive oil.

* * *

An egg that has the slightest roughness of shell or irregularity of surface will not hatch.

* * *

The oyster should never be cooked too long, or it will be dry. Cook it just enough to heat through.

* * *

Washed and steamed prunes cut open and filled with whipped cream and crushed macaroons are delicious.

* * *

Patent leather and kid boots will take on a brighter polish if they are first wiped over with a sponge dipped in milk. Let dry and apply blacking.

* * *

Scorch can be taken out by wetting and rubbing soap on the scorched places, then covering with thin, cold starch and spreading in the sunshine.

* * *

When a shoe pinches dampen a sponge in very hot water and hold it over the part that hurts. The leather will expand and give relief.

Homesee
Excurs
Every Monday t
LOW F
TOR
Albreda
Athabasca
Edmonton
Stettler
Camrose
North Battleford
Regina
Forward
Saskatoon
Dauphin
Lucerne
Calgary
Camrose
Hanna
Rosetown
Yorkton
Moose Jaw
Prince Albert
Brandon
Winnipeg
For Tickets, Reser
ature and Inform
W. E. Attwood, In erton, or write R
G.P.A., 68 King E,
CANADIAN N
GRAND TRUN
ATTRAC
TRIP
To Muskoka Lak
Algonquin P
Maganetaw
Lake of Bay
Karwartha
Georgian B
Round trip tou
on sale from st at very low fa
stop overs.
Berth r and full partic
Trunk Ticket
E. HORNING
er Agent, Toro
A Trial
Subsc
tion to Telesc
From n until N
Years
75
ORDER
TODAY
Summ
Styles
AS SHOWN IN erior Tailored Cl covered by one bri
tence "The best and ch
to be had in town."
We'll like to measure you f
your summer suit.
Hats, Caps, Ties, Shirts,
Sweater Coats, all Furnish
ings at close prices.
WOODMAN & CO
Next to Vogan's Hard

ott

'hose Members of

DEI
W. S. HALLADAY
Dentist, Succes
Modern methods
tal operations.
crown, bridge and doors east of post gill 1st and 3rd T
each month.

C.L. GRA
Graduate of Dent
Ontario.
Dr. Louns
Wisser Block

Disease
Throat, No Queen's H
in each m

W. A.
Honor G
ctise at Osg
the Colleg
ons. Office an Colborne and

INSU
FI
A
AU
GU
MO
RE
Town and See my list

OCE
TICKE
I represen Railway ar companies
Italian.
ISSUER O
T.
Walk

INS
RE
Fire,
Heal
and ance
Com
Real dea pro

Ask Our Local Dealer

When installed according to plans furnished by us, the Sunshine Furnace will heat your home comfortably, healthfully and economically. Ask our local dealer to tell you how it's done, or write for free booklet.

McClary's
SUNSHINE FURNACE
LONDON TORONTO MONTREAL WINNIPEG VANCOUVER
ST. JOHN, N.B. HAMILTON CALGARY
SASKATOON EDMONTON

For Sale by Patterson Bros.

Carborundum

We have a good supply of Carborundum Goods. such as Razor Straps, Razor Hones, Scythe Stones and Section Files.

S. W. Vogan

CANADIAN PACIFIC

Great Lakes Steamship Service
via Owen Sound
STEAMSHIP "MANITOBA"
Owen Sound at midnight
THURSDAY (connecting Leaves Toronto 3.25 p. m.)
Sault Ste Marie, Port Arthur
Fort William.
SERVICE via PORT McNICOLL
COMMENCES JUNE 2.

Plan Your Vacation Trip Now
POINT AU BARIL
MUSKOKA LAKES
KAWARTHA LAKES
LAKE MAZINAW
FRENCH and
PICKEREL RIVERS
RIDEAU LAKES
SEVERN RIVER
are delightful resorts and easily reached via C. P. R.

WINNIPEG and VANCOUVER
Leave Toronto 6.40 P. M. Daily via 'The Pioneer Route'

Particulars from Canadian Pacific Ticket Agents or
W. B. HOWARD, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, Ontario.

Furnace Time

Now is the time to have that New Furnace installed, also have your house furnished with an up-to-date bath.

Call and see us about having them installed at once.

PATTERSON BROS.
Hardware Plumbing & Heating

THE CANADIAN BANK OF COMMERCE

SIR EDMUND WALKER, C.V.O., LL.D., D.C.L., President
JOHN AIRD, General Manager. H. V. F. JONES, Ass't General Manager

CAPITAL, $15,000,000 RESERVE FUND, $13,500,000

FARMERS' BUSINESS

The Canadian Bank of Commerce extends to Farmers every facility for the transaction of their banking business, including the discount and collection of sales notes. Blank sales notes are supplied free of charge on application.

H. M. LAY, Manager Walkerton Branch.

NEWS OF TOWN AND DISTRICT

Let the Telescope have the names of your visitors.

Major Kenneth McCrimmon was royally welcomed home from the Front by the Kincardine citizens last week.

It is proposed that everybody in England wear the kilts to cut down the high cost of trousers. Bowlegged men take this as a personal insult.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Fowlie and daughter of Cargill and Mrs. Peel of Whitby are camping this week at the Beach.—Tiverton Watchman.

Mr. Robert Irwin, wife and family of Walkerton, were here last week calling on friends. Miss Hazel Irwin will spend a portion of her holidays with friends in Ripley.—Ripley Express.

Mr. John Connell of Florida is spending a few months with relatives in this section. Mr. Connell states that the orange crop in Florida will not be heavy this year on account of the very heavy frosts in February.—Mildmay Gazette.

A farmer of Kincardine township was carved for appendicitis, and took the little ornament home in a bottle. A little while after another saw-bones pruned him and is said to have handed him another appendix. Now the case has gone to court about who is to get the money for the operation. It may be, though, that in these days of increased production, the appendix crop has caught the spirit of the times.—Guelph Mercury.

Sent Home Souvenirs

Pte. W. M. McDonald, No. 651020, of 160th Batt., sent home to his father, Mr. Norman McDonald, B. Line, a webb belt. It was covered with about 35 crests of different regiments and units which "Mac" has met since going overseas. There is also a piece of German shrapnel among the collection. It certainly has jagged edges and is the stuff that lays the boys out. At the time of writing "Mac" and his two brothers, Pte. N. J. McDonald and Sergt. Neil McDonald of Walkerton, were in the best of health. Mr. McDonald is a proud father and the action of his boys is an example for all young men.—Kincardine Reporter.

Saw a Deer in Carrick

Mr. James J. Darling of the Elora road, while walking over his farm one day last week, noticed a strange looking animal pasturing in his neighbor's barley field. He made his way quietly nearer, and was astonished to discover that the animal was a red deer. An auto coming along the road frightened the deer, and it ran in great bounds to an eminence some distance away, where it stood and viewed the surroundings. There is absolutely no doubt as to the identity of the animal, but how it got down to this section of the country is quite a mystery. It is over forty years since a deer was seen running at large in the township.—Mildmay Gazette.

GAVE HIS LIFE FOR COUNTRY

PTE. WM. LINDSAY.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lindsay, of Moscow, who died of wounds in France on June 12th.

A clergyman, whose salary had not been paid for several months, told the trustees that he must have money as his family were suffering for want of the necessaries of life. "Money," exclaimed one of the trustees noted for his stinginess, "do you preach for money? I was under the impression you preached for the good of our souls." The minister replied, "So I do; but I can't eat souls, and if I could, it would take a thousand such as yours to make a meal."

Johnston—Fortune

A pretty wedding took place at the home of the bride's brother, Mr. William Fortune, at Vesta, on Wednesday afternoon, July 11th, when Miss Margaret Fortune was united in marriage to Reeve Joseph Johnston of Arran Twp. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. H. A. Hills of Geneva Presbyterian Church, Chesley. The bride was prettily gowned in white crepe de chene and carried a lovely bouquet of bridal roses and sweet peas. After a dainty luncheon had been served, the bride and groom left for their home near Elsmore. The bride, a graduate nurse of Bruce County Hospital, afterwards taking a postgraduate course at a New York Hospital and has since practiced her profession in this district. Both bride and groom are well-known and have a wide circle of friends in Bruce, whose best wishes for every happiness are extended at this time. Among those present at the ceremony were Dr. and Mrs. Fortune and family, Mrs. Howie and daughter, Miss Mabel, of Walkerton.

Just Like Dad.

One of our school teachers has received the following note from the mother of one of her pupils: "Dear Miss. You writ me about whippin Sammy. I give you permission to beat him up any time he wont lern his lesson. He is just like his father and you have to bet him up with a club to lern him enything. Pound noledge into him. Don't pay no attention to what his father says. I'll handle him."

Lightning's Freak

Lightning plays many a prank, and gives many a close call without doing any great harm, but rarely does it play a stranger trick than it did at Thomas Bowler's, Ashfield, during a storm the end of last week. To the fact that Mrs. Bowler was away from home for the night, she likely owes her life. She had gone to J. Hogan's to care for her children, Mr. and Mrs. Hogan being away for the night at Teeswater. During the night the Bowler house was struck by lightning. The current struck the peak of the gable, and after tearing studding and lumber somewhat, it descended and went clean through the bed on which Mr. Bowler was sleeping. He had a rude and sudden awakening by being thrown upon the floor. On examination it was found that the lightning had made a fairly clean-cut hole through the bedding, mattress and all, large enough to put one's head through. The current then reached the ground without doing further damage. Had Mrs. Bowler not happened to be away that night, there likely would be a different story to tell.—Lucknow Sentinel.

WESTERN UNIVERSITY
LONDON - ONTARIO.
Three More New Professors
Equal to Any in Canada.
Students can now obtain as good an Education in Arts and Medicine at the Western as anywhere.
President—
E. E. Braithwaite, M.A., Ph.D.

Fall Term From August 27
ELLIOTT
Business College
Yonge and Charles Sts., Toronto.
Is unquestionably one of Canada's best Commercial Schools. The demand for our graduates is far beyond our supply. Write for our Catalogue.
W. J. Elliott, Principal.

Read the Ads.

Advertising!

in its highest sense is the creation of a new want and providing the means with which to apply that want. The aim of Advertising is not to spread the name of a firm so much as to get business for that firm. The ad. that counts is the one that makes the luxuries of today the necessities of tomorrow. A great many people advertise as they give to charity—merely to get rid of a solicitor. Then the advertiser says it doesn't pay and when done in that spirit it does not. Advertisers must put brain and selling force into their their copy, and when this is done they find that advertising is not an expense, but the finest kind of an investment. —S. C. Dobbs, past president Associated Advertising Clubs of America.

THE TELESCOPE offers you an opportunity to get in touch with Best Homes in Walkerton and the Surrounding District and Get Their Business.

WRIGLEY'S

The Password to pleasure, for the fighters abroad and workers at home is

WRIGLEY'S

The name of the famous Chewing Gum that has won its way everywhere.

Three fine flavours

Small in cost—Big in benefit

It is a Sweetmeat, a Stimulant and a Health-help all in one. It benefits teeth, breath, appetite and digestion. It steadies stomach and nerves. It is ever-ready refreshment when you're fagged.

Made in Canada

Sealed Tight—Kept Right

17

The Flavour Lasts

WE FEEL abundantly satisfied with our choice of lovely Wash Fabrics for the simple reason that everyone enthuses over them just as much as we do ourselves. The variety is wide enough to suit all tastes; the prices represent the very best of values. Here are some of them:

Silk Stripe Crystalline 36 inches wide, a beautiful fine silky fabric with printed dash designs in different colors on delicate blue, pink, yellow and mauve. 60c, 75c & 85c yd.

English Fancy Printed Voiles 36 to 40 in. wide, white and colored grounds with spot and floral patterns; yd 50c

Silver Stripe and Plain White Voiles Swiss and American makes in fine sheer weaves both plain and beautiful stripe effects. 35c to $1.00 a yard.

Black and White Voiles In wide variety of pretty and very dressy stripes. Per yard 50c, 75c & $1.00

Palm Beach Cloth In white and fawn or natural shade with beautiful large figured spots. Splendid suiting weight, 36 inches wide. Per yard 50c

Awning Stripe Beautiful combinations of colors in those Crêpo Cloths and Ducks. Per yard 35c and 40c.

Extra Fine Shantung Silk Particularly good quality and every thread pure silk. A weave that wears and washes well and is much used this season. These are the best qualities we've had for a good while. Per yard 50c, 60c and 75c.

You Can Save on these Beautiful New Floor Rugs

Bought a good while ago but the last of them arrived just this week. This winds up our old contract for Import Rugs and even to-day we would have to pay at least 40 per cent higher for them.

If you are considering the purchase of a rug of any kind or size for present use or if you should need one at a future date, visit our House Furnishing Department. Here we have Tapestry, Brussels, Axminster and Velvet Rugs in all the wanted sizes, rich and beautiful in color and the very best grades, all priced full 40 per cent below today's best values. It's worth your while to investigate.

STEPHAN BROTHERS

News About Town

Mrs. J. A. McGill is visiting friends in Orangeville.

Mr. James Clancy spent the week-end at his home in Cargill.

Mrs. William Clement left Tuesday on an extended visit to the West.

Miss Connie Reichenbach of Toronto is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. Reichenbach.

Miss Rubena Clark of Toronto is spending this week with her sister, Mrs. W. B. Thompson.

Mrs. M. Schmidt of Preston is visiting at the home of her brother-in-law, Mr. Philip Schmidt.

Mrs. M. O'Hara and daughter Kathleen of Wiarton, are here visiting at Mrs. John Lobsinger's.

Mrs. O. Beingessner and children of Formosa, spent a few days with her mother, Mrs. Frank Oberle.

Mr. Jos. Leohardt of Grand Rapids Mich. is visiting at the home of his sister, Mrs. Jos. Zettel.

Miss Annie Kappler returned on Monday to Toronto after a few week's vacation at her home here.

Mrs. John Batte and babe of Windsor, are here on an extended visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Ryan.

Mrs. Frank Oberle and sister, Miss Tillie Mosack were at Mildmay on Friday attending the funeral of a relative.

The G. T. R Construction gang which was away repairing bridges damaged by the storm, is back at work on the new water tank.

Mr. K. O. Noecker and family and Mrs. Gussie Noecker and Mrs Noecker Sr. of Drayton visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Dippel.

Miss Emma Wilhelm returned from Formosa and was accompanied by her grandmother, Mrs. Chas. Whig, who will spend a week here prior to her departure for the West.

Will Sutton, who has been holidaying with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. K Sutton, returned to St Thomas on Monday. His sister, Gladys, accompanied him and will visit friends at St. Thomas.

Bridget Glynn, who is working in the Pork & Bean factory at Harriston, discovered on returning home to spend the week-end that the hay on her yard had been cut and removed by Tony Zuber. Zuber claims that the property belongs to him and that he purchased it from the late John Bester. Bridget admits no such claim and has laid information before Magistrate Tolton, charging Zuber with trespass.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mrs. Samuel Dickison of the South Line, Brant, on Wednesday afternoon, July 4th, at four o'clock when her daughter Miss Sadie, became the bride of Mr. Norman E. Riley of Cantaur, Sask., son of Mr. and Mrs. James Riley of Toronto, formerly of Hanover. Rev. Mr. Shaw of Hanover performed the ceremony.

Somewhat Better

Joseph Whitehead of Brant, who has been dangerously ill at the hospital with appendicitis and peritonitis has shown decided improvement the last three days.

In Chicago, they have a law for autoists, "Both hands on the steering wheel." This caused the arrest of 14 sentimental drivers in the parks on Saturday night. The old gray horse and the top buggy still have a few points in their favor.

Killed By Lightning

Mr. Joseph Lambertus of Carrick had a choice cow killed by lightning in the field on Tuesday afternoon.

Appointed Notary Public

Mr. Geo. D. McKay has been appointed Notary Public for the townships of Brant and Carrick by the Ontario Government.

Native of North Brant

REV. FATHER T. FERGUSON

Who Goes From Ayton to New Parish at Arthur.

On Saturday evening says the Ayton Advance, a small delegation of men called upon Rev. Father Ferguson to express the gratitude and regret of St. Peter's parish on the occasion of his departure for his new appointment in Arthur. An address was read by Jas. J. Culliton while Mr. P. J. Beninger presented the Rev. Father with a handsome purse containing approximately $800. Father Ferguson replied very feelingly, tersely expressing his heartfelt gratitude to the congregation for their generosity towards their pastor, for their Christian goodwill and particular reverence for the minister of God, and finally, for their hearty co-operations in his life-work, the salvation of souls. In concluding, he repeated his appreciation of their material offering, and asked to be often remembered in their spiritual meditations. At Services on Sunday morning he bade farewell to the congregation, again expressing his sentiments of gratefulness.

A Bruce Boy

A soldier in an English Hospital speaking of Elliott Dixon of Walkerton, said he was the decentest, cleanest and fairest officer he had ever worked under.

Fishing Was Poor

The Eganville Leader reports that it has heard nothing from a motor fishing party, of which Dr. J. A. Lambertus, an old Walkerton boy, was a member. "Like the news from the war zone, says the Leader, "only successes are reported."

Can't Write Often

Mr. Henry Williams had a brief letter recently from Victor Bell, who is a prisoner in Germany, stating that he was well. He said that he was not permitted to write often now, this being one form of punishment used by his overseers.

BORN

PREISS—In Brant on July 9th, to Mr and Mrs. John Preiss, a son.

SCHNURR—In Carrick on July 4th, to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schnurr, a son.

Walkerton Markets

(Revised. Wednesday, July 13)

Hay, per ton,	10.00 to	12 00
Oats, per bsh,	70 to......	70
Wheat " "	2.00 to......	2.00
Barley, " "	1 20 to......	1 20
Hogs per cwt,	15.00 to......	15 00
Butter, per lb,	31 to	31
Eggs per doz,	28 to	28

WALKERTON TELESCOPE

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

Three months	$ .40
Half year	.75
Year...	1.50

In advance. If not so paid, $2.00 per annum.

OUTSIDE CANADA
(In Advance Only)

Great Britain	$ 1.50
United States	2.00
France, Greece and other War Fronts	2.50

Why not give your boy and girl an opportunity to make their home study easy and effective? Give them the same chances to win promotion and success as the lad having the advantage of WEBSTER'S NEW INTERNATIONAL Dictionary in his home. This new creation answers with final authority all kinds of puzzling questions in history, geography, biography, spelling, pronunciation, sports, arts, and sciences.

400,000 Vocabulary Terms. 2700 Pages. Over 6000 Illustrations. Colored Plates. The only dictionary with the Divided Page.

The type matter is equivalent to that of a 15-volume encyclopedia.

More Scholarly, Accurate, Convenient, and Authoritative than any other English Dictionary.

REGULAR AND INDIA-PAPER EDITIONS.

WRITE for specimen pages, illustrations, etc. FREE, a set of Pocket Maps if you name this paper.

G. & C. MERRIAM CO., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

IF YOU WANT a good, Reliable Boot. —Try a pair of our Cushion Soles made of solid leather.

FIRST CLASS REPAIRING

C. PETTEPLACE

JEWELLRY OF ALL KINDS

Watches, Clocks, Cut Glass Silverware and Jewellry of all kinds.

C. A. FOX, & SON

SILVERWARE For the Bride

The enduring gift, the useful gift, the one that pleases most.

What will it be—A cake basket, a fruit spoon, a bread tray, a salad set, a tea service, or a complete service of table silverware.

We have silverware which make exquisite wedding gifts in a variety of forms.

The price ranging from a dollar up. You can secure any pieces you want from our open sets of celebrated ware. Also beautiful pieces of Pearl handled goods.

R. L. GIBSON
JEWELER WALKERTON
Agent for The New Edison Phonograph.

The Central Grocery

Preserving Season is Here

We have a full line of Jem Jars, Jar Rubbers and Tops

And the best brands of Preserving Sugar.

FARM PRODUCE WANTED

W. G. Searle
Phone 161 Walkerton

Special Summer Snaps—Priced Now for Quick Selling

Light and dark colors in prints and percales, 30 to 36 inches wide 15c, 16c, 18c, 20c & 22c a yd.

Ladies' $8 00 Raincoats on sale at $5.75.

Men's black and colored cotton and lisle sox worth 40c and 50c on sale at 25c a pair.

Boys' cotton jerseys with short sleeves at 25c each.

Men's and boys' bathing suits, indigo dye, on sale at 75c each.

8c, 10c & 12½c embroideries on sale at 5c a yd.

Men's straw hats $3.00 for $3.75, $2 50 for $1.75, $2 50 for $2.00 and $2 00 for $1.50.

Childrens' straw hats at bargain, see window.

Childrens' summer dresses 50c, 75c, 85c, $1.00, $1.25 and $3.00.

Men's white duck trowsers only $1.25 a pair

Men's summer vests, $1.50 for $1.00, $1 25 for 95c, $1 00 for 50c.

McBURNEY & CO.

THE PEOPLE'S STORE

Make It Yourself Be Patriotic and Fashionable

Do something. Be productive. That is the way to serve your country in war-times.

Do things yourself that release other hands for other work.

Make your own clothe at home. This is the example set by the fashionable women of Europe.

Use Butterick Patterns and dress in the smart, simple styles worn by Paris.

The Illustrated Instructions with each Butterick Pattern show you just how easy it is.

Make your selections now at our

Butterick Pattern Department

Phone 53 J. H. APPEL Walkerton

STRAWBERRIES Every Day
All kinds of Fruit in Season.

CAUSTIC SODA

Owing to the high cost of tin I am selling Caustic Soda in bulk, CHEAP. Bring a tin along as it will not carry in paper.

Another lot of that Japan Tea at 35c lb or 3 lb for $1. Also that famous Black Princess at 60c a lb.

Figs. to arrive, at low prices (watch the window.)

Open Wednesday Evening until 9 p. m.; close Thursday at 1 p. m.

C. PATRICK
PHONE 165 WALKERTON

Read Every Page!

WISE PEOPLE BUYING FROM GOODE & McKAY
The People's Grocery
WALKERTON

The thrifty man or woman, those who are getting the most out of every dollar in these days of high prices will find gratification in the fact that purchasing their wants from the Leading Grocery solves the question of how to remain well fed in spite of high prices.

Don't hesitate to send the smallest order here.

WALKERTON TELESCOPE

VOL. XLIX. NO. 30 WALKERTON TELESCOPE, WALKERTON, JULY 26th, 1917 $1.50 A YEAR IN ADVANCE

DIED AT HAILEYBURY

Andrew Kirstine Sr., a Respected Brant Tp. Pioneer, Reached a Ripe Old Age—Had Been Poorly for Several Months

The death occurred at Haileybury on July 21st at Haileybury, of Mr. Andrew Kirstine sr. a former well-known resident of the South Line, Brant. Mr. Kirstine had been poorly for several months with catarrh of the stomach, and for some weeks his recovery had been despaired of. He was in his 85th year. Mr. Kirstine settled in Brant about 60 years ago. In 1863 he was married to Miss Susan Hoar of Brant Tp. who survives him. He was a man of sterling character, and kindly ways, respected by all. He was a faithful and active member of Knox Presbyterian Church, and for many years a member of the Church Session. About nine years ago he and his wife removed to Haileybury where his son Fred resides. Besides his widow, the following sons survive:—William and Andrew, South Line; Walter of Mathieson, Fred of Haileybury; David of Summerland, B. C. The funeral which was held at Haileybury on Tuesday was attended by the members of the family from here.

160th Soldier Dies

The 160th Battalion lost another member by death recently, Pte. Given of Mar, near Wiarton. He succumbed to gastritis at Bramshott Military Hospital. Pte. Given is the sixth man to pass away during the past year out of the 1350 men who enlisted in the Bruce Battalion.

Interesting Souvenir

Mr. Thos. Cunningham received a curious souvenir from his son, Chester, in France, in the form of a miniature helmet, cleverly fashioned from a German shell nose. The shell bears the date 1917, and was fired at Vimy Ridge from a position afterwards taken by the Canadians. The helmet bears the crest of the famous 10th Trench Mortar Battery of which Chester is a member.

160TH STILL TRAINING

Took Part in Sham Battle After 16 Miles March—Special Thanksgiving Service Held on Dominion Day.

A young officer of the 160th Batt'n, writing to his parents at Walkerton, gives an interesting account of a three days trip which the Battalion took recently. First they marched to a bivouac sixteen miles away, where they slept out under actual war conditions. The next day they had a very realistic sham battle with another battalion, using blank ammunition. On July 1st, the 50th Anniversary of Confederation, the battalion had open air Service of Prayer and Thanksgiving in the woods near the officers' mess. Afterwards there was a special Communion Service for the troops to which 100 members of the Battalion stayed. The writer states that the battalion is in cracking good shape and ready to make a mighty good showing when the opportunity comes. He describes Lt.-Col. Sutherland, the new commanding officer as a splendid officer, who requires punctuality and has the high respect of everybody.

Help Wanted.

Help wanted to weed onions, male or female. A. E. Wahn, 133 r 41

Lady Delegates at Toronto

Mrs. Ramsey and Mrs. Wisser are attending the Food Convention at Toronto this week, the former as a delegate from the Bruce Preparedness League and the latter as a delegate of the local Chapter of the I. O. D. E.

Leg Smashed at Hanover

John Wilson, a young man 19 years of age, had his leg badly jammed while breaking on the marl freight train at Hanover Cement Plant on Friday. He is a son of Mr. George Wilson, con. 2, Brant.

A Nervy Thief

Some cheeky person walked into Mr. O'Malley's Bakery on Tuesday night while Mr. O'Malley was out for a minute, helped himself to a $10 bill out of the till, and quickly effaced himself from the scene.

IT'S YOUR LIVER

That causes constipation, dull head, bad breath, loss of appetite and yellow skin. Tone up the liver and feel well. NYAL'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS cure. A small pill, small dose, and 50 in a bottle for 25c.

Hunter's Drug Store

Drugs and Kodaks Phone 35 C. P. R. Ticket Agency

AMATEUR PHOTOGRAPHERS

GET YOUR

Eastman Films and Supplies

AT

A. P. Sieveright's

Drugs - Kodaks

WALL PAPERS OF QUALITY

The newest effects and a wonderful assortment for the Parlor, Living Room, Dining Room, Hall, Bed Room, Kitchen, at very reasonable prices.

McCrum's

WOMEN'S White Shoes

IN HIGH CUTS and PUMPS are having a big run.

Women's White Canvas Shoes 8 in. tops, $2.50

Women's White Reginskin High Shoes, 8 in tops, $3.50

Women's White Reginskin High Shoes, 8 in tops, $5.00

All the Leading Styles.

Ramsey

The Shoeman

NEWS ABOUT TOWN

Tanlac agency at Hunter's.

Civic Holiday, Monday, Aug. 6th.

Fly oil for horses and cattle at Hunter's.

Hospital Aid Lawn Tea to-night. Ice Cream etc.

Latest styles of wedding invitations at the Telescope.

Mrs. Geo. Gould visited friends in Toronto last week.

Mr. Frank Yaeck of Hamilton spent the week-end here.

The weather man has been carrying the joke a little too far.

Miss Eleanor Greig has returned from an extended visit to Almonte.

The Misses Lindsay of Arthur, are the guests of Miss Flossie Cosens.

Mr. Peter Lambertus left Monday on a holiday trip to Chicago and Milwaukee

Mrs. W. G. Cheshire and family are returning home from Wiarton this week.

Miss Vina Shantz who has been visiting here is returning to Sask. this week.

Making your dollar go as far as possible shouldn't mean sending it out of town.

Mr. W. H. Beattie who has been visiting at Mr. W. H. Van Horne's returned to Creighton Mines this week.

Mr. Stanley Cummer of Hamilton and Miss Kate McKay of Toronto are visiting at Mr. David Noble's, Brant.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Greig and two children of Almonte are visiting Mr. Greig's parents, Judge and Mrs. Greig.

Miss Hilda McNamara is spending her summer vacation with her grand mother, Mrs. McNamara, at French River.

Misses Annie and Jennie Hudson of Pontiac, Mich., are spending this week at the home of their uncle, Mr. James Crawford.

Miss Jo Yack who has been on a three weeks' visit to friends in New Hamberg, Kitchener and Preston returned home on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernie Bonnell of Owen Sound spent the week-end with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Jasper, in Carrick.

In this fruit and vegetable season people should eat what they can and what they can't, can.

The farmers have had good haying weather so far this week and they are making the most of it. Hay should run about two tons to the acre in this district.

Mr. P. Bugg and family have not been at all well this spring and summer. Comparatively few of them have been able to be about, but nobody else is filled with regret.

Guests at Coun. J. E. McGregor's are his father, Mr. John McGregor of Blyth; his neice Miss Mary Knox of Blyth, and his sister, Miss Maud McGregor, High School teacher of Winnipeg.

Miss Helstrom and Miss Warren are spending the week with Rev. Mr. Conning of Baltimore, formerly pastor of Knox Church, who is camping with his family at Red Bay.

THE NEWEST SUMMER STYLES IN

Mens' Furnishings

Sport shirts, ties, combination and two piece underwear, silk and lisle hose, ducks and flannel trousers. We know you will find here just the apparel you are needing and our prices are always pleasing.

Your Blue Suit For Present or Fall

We have the goods in fast colors at reasonable prices.

A blue suit is always in place, you can wear it on most any occasion and when worn with flannel trousers, makes an ideal outing suit.

We have time now during the quiet period in August to make you a nice suit.

Leave your order to-day.

G. T. ROURKE

Quality Tailor and Men's Wear.

Phone 186, Walkerton, Ont.

Mrs. Milton Hunt of Toronto, is visiting her father, Mr. Joseph McConnell.

Miss Nina Widmyer of Ayton is the guest of her brother, Mr. Walter Widmyer.

Miss Helen Bryce spent over Sunday with her friend, Miss Pearl Wright of Hanover.

Miss Jean Hamilton, teacher at the South Line School, is holidaying at Ottawa.

St. Thomas Church Sunday School picnicked at the Bend on Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Merrill of Brantford is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. E. J. Shelton.

Pte. W. H. Livingstone of Elmwood was reported wounded in Tuesday's casualty list.

Why not take some yarn on that vacation? The soldiers need socks—and more socks.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Truax and family have gone to their summer cottage at the Sauble.

Miss Ruth Grenzenbach of Walkerton is visiting with Miss Della K. Hall.—Listowel Banner.

Mr. John Hewitt of Kincardine was here to see his brother, Mr. Joe Hewitt, who has been ill.

Miss Felsinger of Ayton, is visiting her Uncle and Aunt, Rev. and Mrs. G. H. Grenzenbach.

Come and get your supper at the Court House Grounds, where it's cool, to-night from 5 to 7.

Mr. and Mrs. Campbell of Toronto are visiting at the home of the latter's aunt, Mrs. Thos. Etsell.

Little Marjorie Robinson of Newbury, is visiting her grandmother, Mrs. Wm. Pryne, East Ward.

There are only three counties in Ontario that are to-day enjoying lower taxation than Bruce County.

Phyllis Scoggin a little girl from Toronto, is having a holiday with Rev. Mr. and Mrs. D. McLennan.

Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Weiss and family are away on a motor trip to Stratford, Goderich and other points.

Miss C. Stevens of Paris and Mr. and Mrs. R. Stevens of Chesley visited friends in town on Sunday.

You will be money in pocket by making a careful study of the Telescope advertisements every week.

Walter Grainger, who is in training with the Flying Corps at Camp Borden, was home over the week-end.

Mr A. Cameron, Principal of Byng Inlet Public School, was a visitor at Mr. D. McKechnie's last week.

Principal H. S. Sanderson of Chesley Public School, is visiting his parents, Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Sanderson.

Mrs. John Golden and two little sons of Minneapolis, arrived here Saturday on a visit to Mrs. Golden sr. at Chepstow.

Miss Sarah Little, daughter of Mr. John Little of Brant, has been engaged as teacher for a school near Brampton for the coming year.

Mrs. Hood and Mrs. Wright of Peterboro accompanied by their neice Miss Fema Porter of Paisley were guests of Mrs. Stauffer last week.

Mrs. S. B. Black and three children, Vernon, Earl and Alraine, of Dryden, New Ontario., are visiting Mrs. Black's sister, Mrs. M. G. Dippel.

Mrs. W. R. Patterson Jr. will receive for the first time on Thursday and Friday, August 2nd and 3rd from 2.30 to 5, also the following Thursday and Friday at the same hour.

All public buildings should be equipped with lightning rods, is a moral drawn by The Walkerton Telescope, and in this particular case at least, it justifieits name—it is far-seeing.—Mt. Forest Confederate.

The most absent-minded man we have come across was a Walkerton professional man, who put in his office door the other day the words "Out—Will be back soon" and on his return sat down on the doorstep to wait for himself.

Boy (just in from school)—Ma, teacher told us to-day that it wasn't patriotic for people to hoard food. What do you think about it ma? Ma—I guess the teacher's right, my son. Boy—Say, Ma, mayn't I have some of that pie you're saving for to-morrow.

Mr. G. L. McLennan, and Mrs. McLennan (nee Norma Lamb) arrived here from Sherbrooke on Monday to visit the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Lamb in Brant. Mr. McLennan is ass't. Manager of the Bank of Montreal at Sherbrooke.

CLEARED OVER $200

Brant Ladies Lawn Social for County Hospital Was a Big Success—Bankers and Sod-busters Have Tight Game.

The lawn social given at Mr. Frank Rennie's last Thursday evening by the Brant Women's Hospital Aid was an unqualified success. The fine spacious grounds were thronged with people and it looked as if every auto in town and country was present. The ladies, who spared no pains to make the affair a success, reaped a fitting reward as they will have $200 to help the Hospital after paying expenses. An interesting feature was a real live baseball game between the Sodbusters and the Town Bankers which resulted in favour of the townsters by a score of 4–3. A good supper was served by the ladies during the evening. A fish pond and refreshment booth also helped to swell the proceeds. The drawing for a patriotic quilt made and donated to the Preparedness League by Master Cecil Wilton, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Wilton, was announced. The winner, Prof. Borchman, again donated it for patriotic purposes. The quilt which was cleverly made and will be a valuable acquisition for somebody, will be drawn for again.

A good program followed the refreshments. Mr. W. D. Cargill M. L. A. who was chairman, called upon Messrs. H. M. Lay, John Rowland, John Purvis, David Robertson for speeches, all of whom responded, speaking along patriotic lines. Solos by Mrs. C. S. Stephan and duets by Hopper Bros. were greatly enjoyed. Miss Hazel Irwin gave a splendid recitation and Herb Hauck sang some comic songs in his best style.

New Tank Finished

Water was turned on in the new G. T. R. water tank on Tuesday.

Help the French

Walkerton Chapter, I. O. D. E. have voted $50 in money, and 50 pairs of home-knit socks for French Relief.

Printing at Reasonable Price

The Telescope has unexcelled equipment for producing fine printed matter of allkinds. Business Stationary and Office Forms, Advertising Booklets, Circulars, bills, tickets, envelopes, etc. Prices are always reasonable.

Good Crops Around Durham

Mr. Joe Truax, who is in town for a few days on business, says that in the Durham neighborhood the crops are looking fully better than around here. The light soil and rolling land have been able to stand the continuous rainfall in fine shape.

Three Grandsons Serving

Mrs. Geo. Gould now has three grandsons in khaki, of whom two are in France and one in the Artillery at Petawawa training camp. Her son, Sergt. Wm. Gould, who is in his 60th year, has been in the trenches in France for several months and writes home that he is standing it fine.

Here From the West

Mr. John G. Uhrich of Tribune, Sask. is here on a short visit to his relatives, and is visiting his wife's people, west of Walkerton. Mrs Uhrich, who was formerly Miss Mary Ernst, likes the West fine and it agrees well with her. Mr. Uhrich owns and farms 320 acres of land and has a former Walkerton boy, Ed. L. Ernst working for him. He states that crops in that District are looking fairly good considering the dry weather they have had since April His aged mother who has been residing alone at Formosa since her husband's death last winter, is returning with him on Saturday.

+ + +

BORN

HAMEL—In Brant, on Monday July 23rd, to Mr. and Mrs. John Hamel, Con 10, a son.

+ + +

MARRIED

BROWN—MOFFATT – At the residence of the bride's father, Mr. W. H. Moffatt, by Rev. R. M. Gale Pinkerton, Henry James Brown of East Luther, and Annie Jane Moffatt of Greenock, on Wednesday, July 18th.

GREGORY—COMBA—At the Methodist Parsonage, Walkerton, on July 24th, by Rev. C. W. Cosens, Mrs. M. C. Comba of Arthur to Mr. Joshua Gregory, of Maryboro Tp.

+ + +

DIED

KIRSTINE—At Haileybury, Ont., on July 21st, Andrew Kirstine sr., formerly of Brant, aged 84 years, 8 months

LOWER SCHOOL EXAMS

Over Seventy-Five Per Cent of Walkerton High School Pupils Passed This Departmental Exam.

The following pupils of the Walkerton High School were successful in passing the above examination. Walkerton did well, over 75 per cent of the candidates passing:—

M. Bonnyman, Lillian Bilger, Erma Glave, Arthur Johnston, Mary Kenney, William Polfuss, Tesla Queen, Anteinette Reinhart, Emielta Stevens, Anna Weiler, Gertrude Young, (with honors), Margaret Chisholm (Geography carried over.)

In addition to these, the following passed in accordance with the Regulations as to Working on the Farm and as a result of the Easter Examinations Cecil Cargill, Victor Eidt, Nelson Pinkerton, Clayton Tovell, Vernon Tovell, Leo Yaeck.

Lost.

On Saturday, between Walkerton and Chepstow, a ladies hat. Finder will be rewarded on leaving same at Telescope.

Declined Call to Pastorate

The Lutheran congregation received word on Monday from Rev. I. Stempfer of Elmira that he had decided to remain at his present charge. His congregation at Elmira would not let him go. A meeting will be held in a few days to consider extending a call to some other minister.

New Children's Shelter

The Children's Aid Society has leased Mrs. Howie's large brick residence on Colborne St. for a Children's Shelter and will take possession on August 15th. Mrs. Howie will make her home at Welland where her daughter, Miss Mabel is teaching. The Society will appoint a matron to take charge of the new shelter but no appointment has yet been made.

Y. P. A. Visit Alsfeld

The young folk of the Y. P. A. of the Evangelical Church were driven by motors to Alsfeld on Monday evening where they were the guests of the Y. P. A. of that village, at a social evening. An excellent program was given and a social time was spent after which refreshments were served. Everybody enjoyed a pleasant and profitable time.

Cargill Soldier Wounded

Pte. James Hamilton, a well-known Cargill soldier, was reported wounded in Saturday's Casualty lists. He was formerly engineer at the Cargill Planing Mill. Pte. Hamilton went Overseas with the 160th but was rejected in England and subsequently joined a Special Service Corps for duty at the Front. Hamilton is a widower and his only son, who enlisted with the 160th along with his father, is still with the Bruce Battalion in England.

How To Make Roads

THE Department of Public Highways of Ontario has just published a report on Street Improvement in Ontario which contains information procured by a survey of twenty-two cities and eleven towns. The report has been published with a view to assisting the smaller municipalities in the Province in the improvement in their streets. A great amount of money has been misspent or wasted, due to lack of experience and proper advice and guidance in the undertaking of schemes for street improvement. It is hoped that this publication may present information which will prevent such mistakes from being repeated. The location of main thoroughfares, the selection of the type of pavement best suited to local conditions, the selection of materials for the different types of construction, the treatment of gravel and macadam roadway are some of the topics discussed. The book contains 200 pages, 100 illustrations and a colored frontispiece showing three examples of the artistic treatment of urban thoroughfares. Copies may be obtained by applying to the Department of Public Highways, Parliament Buildings, Toronto.

GRANT WAS $2,500

Editor Telescope,
Walkerton, Ont.

Dear Sir:—

My recollection is that in a few remarks on County Hospital matters made at Mr. Frank Rennie's Garden party I inadvertently gave the figures of the County Council's last grant as $2000. If so it was an error the Council having increased their grant this year to $2500. I shall be obliged if you will be so kind as to allow space for this correction.

Yours truly,
H. M. Lay.

WALKERTON TELESCOPE
Published Every Thursday
LORNE A. EEDY - PUBLISHER

Phone No. - 48
Phone No.,(Night) 146

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

Strictly in Advance............$1.50
If not paid in Advance $2.00
United states, paid in Advance. $2.00
(with the Postage)
Great Britain, paid in advance .. $1.50
50c. additional if not paid in advance

WALKERTON, JULY 19th, 1917.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

"POLITICS is a thankless game" says the Kincardine Reporter.

✠

COLD storage was devised as an agency for the preservation of food, and is degenerating into an agency for the preservation of high prices.—Toronto Telegram.

✠

COLLINGWOOD BULLETIN:—We long since lost patience with those who argue that Canada has done her share in the great war. Not until the last shot is fired, not until the German menace is so crushed that it can never rise again, not until the peace of the world is assured, will Canada have done her share.

✠

MOST of the Church Courts have decided that the minimum salary of their Ministers shall be $1200 per year. Let us see, that is equivalent to $720 a few years ago. It is plain that the salaries of Ministers are coming down, while according to the English language they are going up.—Wiarton Echo.

✠

A new decision of the Canadian Patriotic Fund that will be of interest is that in future allowance will be made for girls up to the age of seventeen and boys to the age of sixteen, provided they are attending school, and not earning wages. Up to the present the fund has been paying only up to 15 years.

✠

MR. TRUAX'S suggestion that the men in the trenches be paid $2.50 to $3 a day is very much to the point. Our boys are certainly not fighting for the money that is in it but they have their living to make, and many have mouths to feed at home. Is it fair for them to have to subsist on $1.10, while men who have stayed at home are making $5 to $7 a day in munition factories? There is nothing fair about it. The extra money could easily be raised by taxing war profits.

✠

CITIZENS could scarcely believe their eyes last week when they saw the street oiling cart out spreading the sticky fluid on the muddy streets. Instead of improving the condition of the roadways the oil made them very much worse. When the Council has to pay two prices for oil these times, it is woeful waste to throw away money in this foolish way. Nothing is as good as street-oil for keeping down the dust, but there hasn't been the first sign of dust on the streets this season. Somebody has blundered, and it is up to the Council to see that the stupid mistake is not repeated.

✠

AN effort is being made to induce the Militia Department to grant a furlough to the Canadian soldiers who went to Europe with the first and second contingents. These men have had long and severe service, and it would be a very nice thing indeed if they could be granted a vacation and a chance to come home for a time. Such a prospect, however, can hardly be looked for. War knows little humanity in its treatment of men. Everything that can be done to win must be done, and the veterans of the first and second contingents are now valuable men at the front—worth two or three who are new on the job. Besides, there is the problem of transportation. With the submarine warfare at the height of its destructive power and shipping facilities taxed to their utmost, we fear the prospect of giving the veterans a holiday and a trip home are not bright.

✠

THE Government's absolute lack of leadership in recruiting to which is largely due the slackening up of enlistment, has been well-illustrated up here in Bruce. The officers of the 160th Bruce Battalion were left entirely to their own resources and had it not been for their own pluck and initiative, together with the organized assistance of the citizens of Bruce, no Battalion would have been recruited here at all. Mr. Truax's statement in the House of Commons that the government gave no assistance is substantially correct. Not by the wildest stretch the imagination can credit be given to the Borden Government for the success of recruiting in the County of Bruce. It is this failure to perform, or even to attempt to perform, their plain duty that has caused the seeming break-down of the voluntary system, and has damned the present government in the eyes of fair-minded people throughout the Dominion.

THE Peterboro Examiner says: New motor cars are almost as generally used by farmers as reaping machines, and we had it reported in the press recently that at an agricultural gathering in York, a mile of farmers' autos was ranged adjacent to the picnic grounds, an evidence at once of the prosperity of the farmers and of the fact that a once-detested and sneered at innovation has become a necessary instrument of the farmer's convenience and pleasure.

✠

HERE is a paragraph from the soldier's paper, the Listening Post, which will interest the ladies: "Let us hope that after the war the simplicity and directness of army English may replace the cumbrous and involved wording of, say, the marriage ceremony. Instead of "Wilt thou have this woman," etc., what could be better than, "Dating from the 3rd instant, Jane Smith is attached to Thomas Jones, for rations, duty, and discipline." Particulary note the word "discipline," please.

✠

THE United States War Department is going to ask the State Department not to issue passports to wives and other female relatives of officers and other soldiers at the front. With the crossing of the sea by Pershing's expedition, the War Department was bombarded with petitions by the wives, mothers and sweethearts of the men for information how best to proceed to be near them in France. Many hoped to live in Paris, so that their men-folk could visit them while on leave from the trenches. The War Department made it plain that it disapproves of this practice and will do everything possible to prevent it. This war is no summer picnic.

✠

SOME months ago the Telescope suggested that when the time comes to provide a suitable memorial for our soldiers who have fallen in battle that it take the form of a Soldiers' Ward at the Bruce County Hospital, where every returned soldier would be provided free treatment for the rest of his life. Since we made the suggestion the Town of Orillia has undertaken a similar project on a larger scale. A campaign has just been launched there to raise $75,000 for the erection of a Soldiers' Memorial Hospital. In Orillia the affair is being handled by the Orillia Soldiers' Aid which corresponds to our Preparedness League, and the project was launched last week in connection with the first official reception to those who have returned from the firing line.

News About Town

Civic Holiday Monday Aug 6.

✠

Don Wallace returned to Paris last week.

✠

Chesley Council has passed a Milk-By-law.

✠

Pte. Alex Gross spent the week-end at his home.

✠

The Telescope wants the names of your visitors.

✠

Mr. Mac Jones of Toronto spent the week-end here.

✠

Miss Essie Krueger of Paris is visiting in town this week.

✠

Mr. Percy Jenkins left Monday afternoon for Toronto.

✠

Charlie Wallace is holidaying with friends at Durham.

✠

Miss Pryne spent the week-end with her father at Brantford.

✠

Mr. H. A Havill is spending a couple of weeks at the Sauble.

✠

Renew your daily newspaper subscription at the Telescope.

✠

Miss Edna Hyde of Whitby is holidaying with Miss Annie Sillers.

✠

Mr. and Mrs. Hank Irvin have taken a summer cottage at Port Elgin.

✠

Mrs. E. J. Glave and Miss Erma are holidaying with friends at Hanover.

✠

Mr. A. H. Stevens and daughter Leta, spent Thursday at Stratford.

✠

Mr. Con. Smith of Carrick spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Stevens

✠

Mr. Reg Porter is holidaying with his parents, Dr. and Mrs. R. T. Porter.

✠

Miss M. Ross of Clifford spent Sunday with her friend, Miss Mabel Howie.

✠

Every week you can save money by reading the Telescope's advertisements.

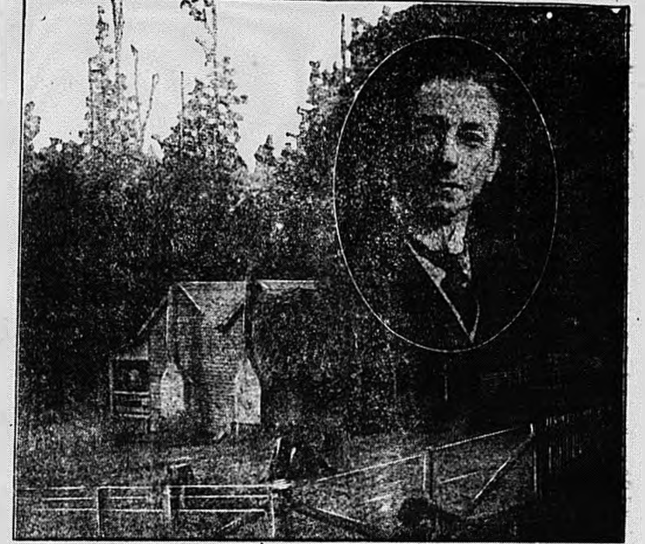
✠

Miss Belle Liddel returned on Saturday after a two week's visit in London.

✠

Mr. Harry Wells of Toronto is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Wells.

A Poet From The Railway



Mr. C. J. Dennis and his home in the bush at Toolangi, Victoria, N.S.W.

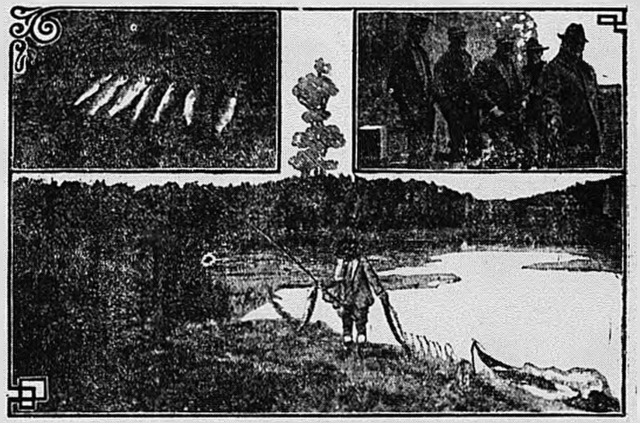
THE dangers of the Mediterranean route between Australia and England have induced a large number of Australians to pass through Canada, who otherwise might never have known this country and have brought Australia into closer sympathy with the Dominion than ever before. Canadians also have learned to appreciate the Anzacs and the increasing trade between these two junior partners of the British Empire, as shown in the record traffic of the Canadian Australasian service, is one of the bright sides of this war. There are many points of common touch—both are vast countries anxious for greater population and both are on the whole still mainly agricultural. The comparative absence of cabled news from Australia in Canadian papers is, however, a handicap against the knowledge of each other's social problems and progress, and Australian authors are as little known in Canada as Canadian writers are in the Antipodes.

One poet of Australia is, however, making headway here and deserves to be even better known—so vivid a picture does he give of the Australian larrikin in the terse vernacular of Adelaide. "Doreen and the Sentimental Bloke," which in its own country has run into the hundred thousands and has been put into a pocket edition for the soldiers in the trenches, threatens to rival even Robert Service (who like himself owes much to Kipling) in the affections of the Canadian reader, and though "The Moods of Ginger Mick," which has made a tremendous hit in Australia, has not yet been published in this country, stray copies pass from hand to hand and are greatly treasured. Ginger Mick is a peddler of rabbits who volunteers for the front and dies like a hero at Gallipoli. Dennis' "Backblock Ballads," descriptive of the people of the Australian bush and the settled country districts, are classics.

Dennis wrote "Doreen" in the bush at Toolangi, Victoria, in a log cabin which he built himself after he had grown tired of being a Government official and a newspaper editor.

Just as the early days of construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway attracted men of all classes, some of which, such as Morley Roberts and Frederick Niven, have since made their mark in literature, so the building of the Australian railways provided a job at one time of his career for C. J. Dennis, who as a man handy with the axe and saw was able afterwards to draw pay as a carpenter. His father was a retired sea captain and a hotelkeeper with small appreciation of poetry. At one of the rockiest periods of his career the poet wired the publican "Send ten pounds, going Broken Hill," to which his father replied "Sending nothing, go to Hell." In spite of this lack of sympathy, Dennis became editor of the "Adelaide Critic," which he left to establish the "Gadfly," a saucy paper on the lines of New York "Life." This paper was once accused by a correspondent of sectarian bias. Dennis replied that the paper was controlled by an Anglican, a Roman Catholic, a Wesleyan Methodist and an Atheist, and gave it as his opinion that the Atheist was "the most religious man of the lot."

PUTTING A SALMON RIVER ON THE MAP



Seven beauties from one pool. Reading from right to left: Maxmillian Foster, W. O. M'Geehan, Jack Lait, Grantland Rice. Maxmillian Foster has his hands full.

THE map referred to is a map of some importance, for salmon is the big game of the fisherman and brings in search of it sportsmen from all over the world with big two-handed rods and large noisy reels and (what Canada much desires) a deep purse for camps, guides and out-St. Harry Allen, President of the New Brunswick Guides Association, has known the Cains River as one of the best trout streams in the Province of New Brunswick, and salmon were frequently caught twenty miles up from the junction with the better known Mirimichi, but he believed that if the right kind of fishermen got there, they would find salmon all the length of at least eighty miles.

The investigation was made a short time ago by a party of sporting writers and editors from the United States. Maxmillian Foster, a salmon fisherman of twenty years standing, who knows New Brunswick and Newfoundland like a book, and writes for the "Saturday Evening Post"; Hughie Fullerton, of the Chicago "Examiner," Jack Lait, of the Chicago "Herald," Grantland Rice and W. O. M'Geehan, of the New York "Tribune," and L. O. Armstrong, of the Bureau of Commercial Economics, Washington, D.C., an old campaigner who has hunted and fished in the Canadian woods for over fifty years, and A. O. Seymour, General Tourist Agent of the Canadian Pacific Railway, an ardent fisherman.

When they arrived at Fredericton, all the local fishermen were pessimistic. "If there are salmon in the Cains," they said, "you have come at the wrong time. They went out with the ice and are now at sea. Better go home and come back in a month." It was cold and raining, the worst kind of weather for flyfishing, but nothing daunted, they set out.

With eight fishermen, one movie picture operator from the Essanay Company of Chicago, and nine guides, the fleet started out near the bend of the Cains River, fishing the pools as they went down. The first day they struck only trout, but from the second day onwards the movie man was busy. Twice he had to choose between two fishermen who had hooked their salmon at the same time. Maxmillian Foster had a basket of thirteen, ranging from seven to eighteen pounds. The largest measured forty-two-and-a-half-inches, which means that if it had been taken in the fall it would have weighed forty-two-and-a-half pounds. Every member of the party had what he came for, thanks to Silver Doctor and Parmachene Belle, the two flies that the Cains River salmon seem to like. In one pool seven beauties, weighing between them sixty-eight pounds, were taken out in two hours, and it was only dark and lack of time that closed the sport. Result, eight happy fishermen, one happy movie man, and one supremely proud Harry Allan who saw that his claims were justified and that Cains River could take its place for salmon beside the hitherto more famous waters of the Mirimichi and the Restigouche.

GET OUR PRICES ON JOB PRINTING
THE TELESCOPE, WALKERTON

Homeseekers'
Excursions
Every Monday till October 29
LOW FARES
FROM TORONTO
TO

Albreda	$64.
Athabasca	42.
Edmonton	47.0
Stettler	47.0
Canora	38.7
North Battleford	42.7
Regina	40.9
Forward	40.5
Saskatoon	42.8
Dauphin	37.7
Lucerne	51.0
Calgary	47.00
Camrose	46.7
Hanna	46.0
Rosetown	43.5
Yorkton	38.25
Moose Jaw	41.0
Prince Albert	43.50
Brandon	37.00
Winnipeg	35.0

For Tickets, Reservations, Lit ature and Information, apply W. E. Attwood, Insurance, W erton, or write R. L. Fairb G.P.A., 68 King St. E., Tor

CANADIAN NORTH

GRAND TRUNK RAIL SYST

ATTRACTIVE
TRIPS
To
Muskoka Lakes
Algonquin Park
Maganetawan River
Lake of Bays
Karwartha Lakes
Georgian Bay

Round trip tourist tickets on sale from stations in Ont at very low fares with lib stop overs.

Berth reservation and full particulars at all Gr Trunk Ticket Offices or write E. HORNING, District Passe er Agent, Toronto, Ontario.

A Trial
Subscrip tion to Telesco
From no
until New Years for 65
ORDER I
TODAY !

Summer
Styles

AS SHOWN IN OUR Superior Tailored Clothing are covered by one brief sentence "The best and cheapest to be had in town."

We'd like to measure you fo your summer suit.

Hats, Caps, Ties, Shirts Sweater Coats, all Furnishings at close prices.

WOODMAN & CO.
Next to Vogan's Hardware

nside the Lines

By EARL DERR BIGGERS
AND
ROBERT WELLS RITCHIE

opyright, 1915, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

el his tongue. "Woodhouse isn't ing alone on the Rock; you can be of that. He's got friends to help turn whatever trick he's after— ybe in this very house. They're er people, you can mark that down our slate!"

idiculous!" The keeper of the k was fighting not to believe now. ry, I tell you if they had a hun- of their spies inside the lines— knew the Rock as well as I do— uld never take it."

r rose wearily, the air of a mis- ood man on him.

aps they aren't trying to cap- I know nothing about that. 've done my duty as one Eng- to another. I hope I've told time. I'll be going now."

eral Crandall swung on him . "Where are you going?" he ded.

er shrugged his shoulders hope- Now was the minute he'd counting on—the peeling of ing notes from a fat bundle, andsome words of appreciation. General Crandall was ripe.

ll, general, frankly—I'm broke. 't a shilling to bless myself I thought perhaps"— Capper een glance at the older man's hich was partly turned from the general appeared to be pon- He turned abruptly on the spy. w drinks and you might talk," llenged.

er grinned deprecatingly. "I know, general—I might," he ured. "I've been away from rink so long that"— here do you want to go?" Gen- Crandall cut him off. "Of course on't want to stay here indefi- " ll—if I had a bit of money— tell me everybody's broke in millionaires and everybody, you . You can get any hotel room s asking. That would be heav- r me—if I had something in my et."

ou want to go to Paris, eh?" Gen- Crandall stepped closer to Cap- and his eyes narrowed in scorn.

it could be arranged, yes, gen- " Capper was spinning the brim r bowler between nervous fingers. d not dare meet the other's mit, Capper, you come here kmail me! I've met your kind I know how to deal with " lp me, general, I came here s the truth. I want to go to anywhere away from here. that. But that had nothing h my coming all the way Alexandria—spending my s on a steamer ticket—to of your danger. I'm an and—loyal!" Capper was ow. All hope of reward and the vision of a cell with investigations into his own alled him. General Cran- wn at his desk and began know—at any rate, I can't alking around here. You're aris."

ropped his hat. At the tap f Jaimihr Khan appeared at so suddenly that one might he was right behind them all General Crandall directed orderly be summoned. When ttern appeared the general him a sealed note.

rly, turn this gentleman over to ant Crosby at once," he com- d, "and give the sergeant this Then to Capper: "You will cross efras, where you will be put on for Madrid. You will have a e Paris and 20 shillings for ex- route. You will be allowed o no one alone before you leave , and under no circumstances be allowed to return, not while ernor general at least."

CHAPTER XIII.

Her Country's Example.

O you know, my dear, Cynthia Maxwell is simply going to die with envy when she sees me in this!"

plump little mistress of Government House, standing before a tall th mirror in her boudoir, surveyed elf with intense satisfaction. Her and neck burst startlingly from the clinging sheath of the incompara- ble [illegible] that was Jane Gerson's [illegible] our for official protection. In the flood of morning light pouring through the [illegible] windows Lady Crandall seemed a pink and white—and somewhat florid—lily in bloom out of time. Hildebrand's buyer, on her knees and with deft fingers busy with the soft folds of the skirt, answered through a mouthful of pins:

"Poor Cynthia! My heart goes out to her."

"Oh, it needn't!" Lady Crandall answered, with a tilting of her strictly Iowa style nose. "The Maxwell person has made me bleed more than once here on the Rock with the gowns a fond mamma sends her from Paris. But, honestly, isn't this a bit low for a staid, middle aged person like myself? I'm afraid I'll have trouble getting past the censor." Lady Crandall plumed herself with secret joy.

Jane looked up, puzzled.

"Oh, that's old Lady Porter—a perfect dragon," the general's wife rattled on. "Poor old dear, she thinks the Lord put her on the Rock for a purpose. Her own collars get higher and higher. I believe if she ever was presented at court she'd emulate the old Scotch lady who followed the law of decollete, but preserved her self respect by wearing a red flannel chest protector. You must meet her."

"I'm afraid I won't have time to get a look at your dragon," Jane returned, with a little laugh, all happiness. "Now that Sir George has promised me I can sail on the Saxonia Friday"—

"You really must"— The envious eyes of Lady Crandall fell on the pile of plans—potent Delphic mysteries to charm the heart of woman—that lay scattered about upon the floor.

Jane sat back on her heels and surveyed the melting folds of satin with an artist's eye.

"If you only knew what it means to me to get back with my baskets full of French beauties! Why, when I screwed up my courage two months ago to go to old Hildebrand and ask him to send me abroad as a buyer—I'd been studying drawing and French at nights for three years in preparation, you see—he roared like the dear old lion he is and said I was too young. But I cooed and pleaded, and at last he said I could come on trial, and so"—

"He'll purr like a pussycat when you get back," Lady Crandall put in, with a pat on the brown head at her knees.

"Maybe. If I can slip into New York with my little baskets while all the other buyers are still over here, cabling tearfully for money to get home or asking their firms to send a warship to fetch them—why, I guess the pennant's mine all right."

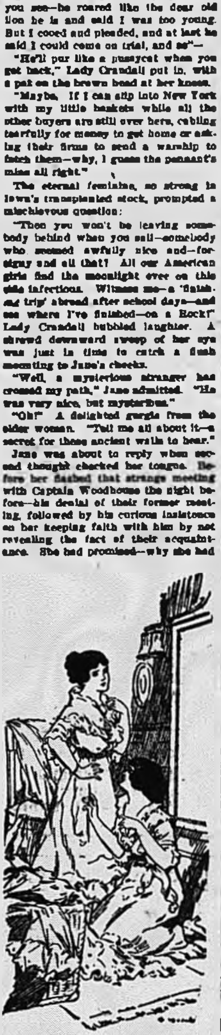
The eternal feminine, so strong in Iowa's transplanted stock, prompted a mischievous question:

"Then you won't be leaving somebody behind when you sail—somebody who seemed awfully nice and—foreigny and all that? All our American girls find the moonlight over on this side infectious. Witness me—a 'finishing trip' abroad after school days—and see where I've finished—on a Rock!" Lady Crandall bubbled laughter. A shrewd downward sweep of her eye was just in time to catch a flush mounting to Jane's cheeks.

"Well, a mysterious stranger has crossed my path," Jane admitted. "He was very nice, but mysterious."

"Oh!" A delighted gurgle from the older woman. "Tell me all about it—a secret for these ancient walls to hear."

Jane was about to reply when second thought checked her tongue. Before her flashed that strange meeting with Captain Woodhouse the night before—his denial of their former meeting, followed by his curious insistence on her keeping faith with him by not revealing the fact of their acquaintance. She had promised—why she had promised she could no more divine than the reason for his asking, but a promise it was that she would not betray his confidence. More than once since that minute in the reception room of the Hotel Splendide Jane Gerson had reviewed the whole baffling circumstances in her mind, and a growing resentment at this stranger's demand as well as at her own compliance with it was rising in her heart. Still, this Captain Woodhouse was "different," and—this Jane essayed without effort to analyze—the mystery which he threw about himself but served to set him apart from the common run of men. She evaded Lady Crandall's probing with a shrug of the shoulders.



"A mysterious stranger has crossed my path."

"It's a secret which I myself do not know, Lady Crandall, and never will."

Back to the o'erweening lure of the gown the flitting fancy of the general's lady betook itself.

"You—don't think this is a shade too young for me, Miss Gerson?" Anxiety pleaded to be quashed.

"Nonsense!" Jane laughed.

"But I'm no chicken, my dear. If you would look me up in our family Bible back in Davenport you'd find"—

Her maid knocked and entered on the lady's crisp "Come!"

"The general wishes to see you, Lady Crandall, in the library."

"Tell the general I'm in the midst of trying on"— Lady Crandall began, then thought better of her excuse. She dropped the shimmering gown from her shoulders and slipped into a kimono.

"Some stuffy plan for entertaining somebody or other, my dear"—this to Jane. "The real burden of being governor general of the Rock falls on the general's wife. Just slip into your bonnet, and when I'm back we'll take that little stroll through the Alameda I've promised you for this morning." She clutched her kimono about her and whisked out of the room.

General Crandall, just rid of the dubious pleasure of Billy Capper's company, was pacing the floor of the library office thoughtfully. He looked up with a smile at his wife's entrance.

"Helen, I want you to do something for me," he said.

"Certainly, dear!" Lady Crandall was not an unpleasing picture of ripe beauty to look on in the soft drape of her Japanese robe. Even in his worry General Crandall found himself intrigued for the minute.

"There's a new chap in the signal service—just in from Egypt—name's Woodhouse. I wish you would invite him to tea, my dear."

"Of course, any day."

"This afternoon, if you please, Helen," the general followed.

His wife looked slightly puzzled.

"This afternoon? But, George, dear, isn't that—aren't you—ah—rushing this young man to have him up to Government House so soon after his arrival?" She suddenly remembered something that caused her to reverse herself. "Besides, I've asked him to dinner—the dinner I'm to give the Americans tomorrow night before they sail."

General Crandall looked his surprise.

"You didn't tell me that. I didn't know you had met him."

"Just happened to," Lady Crandall cut in hastily. "Met him at the Hotel Splendide last night when I brought Miss Gerson home with me."

"What was Woodhouse doing at the Splendide?" the general asked suspiciously.

"Why, spending the night, you foolish boy. Just off the Princess Mary, he was. I believe he did Miss Gerson some sort of service—and I met him in that way—quite informally."

"Did Miss Gerson—a service—hum?"

"Oh, a trifling thing! It seemed she had only French money, and that cautious Almer fellow wouldn't accept it. Captain Woodhouse gave her English gold for it—to pay her bill. But why"—

"Has Miss Gerson seen him since?" General Crandall asked sharply.

"Why, George, dear, how could she? We haven't been up from the breakfast table an hour."

"Woodhouse was here less than an hour ago to pay his duty call and report," he explained. "I thought perhaps he might have met our guest somewhere in the garden as he was coming or going."

"He did send her some lovely roses." Lady Crandall brightened at this, to her, patent inception of a romance. She doted on romances. "They were in Miss Gerson's room before she was down to breakfast."

"Roses, eh! And they met informally at the Splendide only last night." Suspicion was weighing the general's words. "Isn't that a bit sudden? I say, do you think Miss Gerson and this Captain Woodhouse had met somewhere before last night?"

"I hardly think so—she on her first trip to the continent and he coming from Egypt. But"—

"No matter. I want him here to tea this afternoon." The general dismissed the subject and turned to his desk. His lady's curiosity would not be so lightly turned away.

"All these questions—aren't they rather absurd? Is anything wrong?" She ran up to him and laid her hands on his shoulders.

"Of course not, dear." He kissed her lightly on the brow. "Now run along and play with that new gown Miss Gerson gave you. I imagine that's the most important thing on the Rock today."

Lady Crandall gave her soldier husband a peck on each cheek and skipped back to her room. When he was alone again General Crandall resumed his restless pacing. Resolution suddenly crystallized, and he stepped to the desk telephone. He called a number.

"That you, Bishop? General Crandall speaking. Bishop, you were here on the Rock seven years ago? Good! Pretty good memory for names and faces, eh? Right! I want you to come to Government House for tea at 5 this afternoon. But run over for a little talk with me some time earlier—an hour from now, say. Rather important. You'll be here. Thank you."

CHAPTER XIV.

In Doubt.

GENERAL CRANDALL sat at his desk and tried to bring himself down to the routine crying from accumulated papers there. But the canker Billy Capper had implanted in his mind would not give him peace. General Crandall's tremendous responsibility would not permit him to ignore Capper's warning, coming even from so low a source. Yet the man found himself groping blindly in the dark before the dilemma presented; he had no foot rule of precept or experience to guide him.

His fruitless searching for a prop in emergency was broken by the appearance of Jane Gerson in the door opening from Lady Crandall's rooms to the right of the library. The girl was dressed for the out of doors; in her arms was a fragrant bunch of blood red roses, spraying out from the top of a bronze bowl. The girl hesitated and drew back in confusion at seeing the room occupied; she seemed eager to escape undetected. But General Crandall smilingly checked her flight.

"I—I thought you would be out," Jane stammered, "and"—

"And the posies"— the general interrupted.

"Were for you to enjoy when you should come back." She smiled easily into the man's eyes. "They'll look so much prettier here than in my room."

"Very good of you, I'm sure." General Crandall stepped up to the rich cluster of buds and sniffed critically. Without looking at the girl he continued: "It appears to me as though you had already made a conquest on the Rock. One doesn't pick these from the cliffs, you know."

"I should hardly call it a conquest," Jane answered, with a sprightly toss of her head.

"But a young man sent you these flowers. Come—confess!" The general's tone was bantering, but his eyes did not leave the piquant face under the chic summer straw hat that shaded it.

"Surely. One of your own men—Captain Woodhouse, of the signal service." Jane was rearranging the stems in the bowl, apparently ready to accept what was on the surface of the general's rallying.

"Woodhouse, eh? You've known him for a long time, I take it."

"Since last night, general. And yet some people say Englishmen are slow." She laughed gayly and turned to face him. His voice took on a subtle quality of polite insistence:

"Surely you met him somewhere before Gibraltar."

"How could I when this is the first time Captain Woodhouse has been out of Egypt for years?"

"Who told you that?" The general was quick to catch her up. The girl felt a swift stab of fear. On the instant she realized that here was somebody attempting to drive into the mystery which she herself could not understand, but which she had pledged herself to keep inviolate. Her voice fluttered in her throat as she answered:

"Why, he did himself, general."

"He did, eh? Gave you a bit of his history on first meeting? Confiding chap, what? But you, Miss Gerson—you've been to Egypt, you say?"

"No, general."

Jane was beginning to find this cross examination distinctly painful. She felt that already her pledge, so glibly given at Captain Woodhouse's insistence, was involving her in a situation the significance of which might prove menacing to herself and one other. She could sense the beginnings of a strain between herself and this genial elderly gentleman, her host.

"Do you know, Miss Gerson"—he was speaking soberly now—"I believe you and Captain Woodhouse have met before."

"You're at liberty to think anything you like, general—the truth or otherwise." Her answer, though given smilingly, had a sting behind it.

"I'm not going to think much longer. I'm going to know!" He clapped his lips shut over the last word with a smack of authority.

"Are you really, General Crandall?" The girl's eyes hardened just perceptibly. He took a turn of the room and paused, facing her. The situation pleased him no more than it did his breezy guest, but he knew his duty and doggedly pursued it.

"Come—come, Miss Gerson! I believe you're straightforward and sincere or I wouldn't be wasting my time this way. I'll be the same to you. This is a time of war. You understand all that implies, I hope. A serious question concerning Captain Woodhouse's position here has arisen. If you have met him before, as I think you have, it will be to your advantage to tell me where and when. I am in command of the Rock, you know."

He finished with an odd tenseness of tone that conveyed assurance of his authority even more than did the sense of his words. His guest, her back to the table on which the roses rested and her hands bracing her by their tense grip on the table edge, sought his eyes boldly.

"General Crandall," she began, "my training in Hildebrand's store hasn't made me much of a diplomat. All this war and intrigue make me dizzy. But I know one thing—this isn't my war or my country's, and I'm going to follow my country's example and keep out of it."

General Crandall shrugged his shoulders and smiled at the girl's defense.

"Maybe your country may not be able to do that," he declared, with a touch of solemnity. "I pray God it may. But I'm afraid your resolution will not hold, Miss Gerson."

"I'm going to try to make it anyway," she answered.

Gibraltar's commander, baffled thus by a neutral—a neutral fair to look on in the bargain—tried another tack. He assumed the fatherly air.

"Lady Crandall and I have tried to show you we were friends—tried to help you get home," he began.

"You've been very good to me," Jane broke in feelingly.

"What I say now is spoken as a friend, not as governor of the Rock. If it is true that you have met Woodhouse before—and our conversation here verifies my suspicion—that very fact makes his word worthless and releases you from any promise you may have made not to reveal this and what you may know about him; also it should put you on your guard—his motives in any attentions he may pay you cannot be above suspicion."

"I think that is a personal matter I am perfectly capable of handling." Jane's resentment sent the flags to her cheeks.

General Crandall was quick to back water. "Yes, yes! Don't misunderstand me. What I mean to say is"—

He was interrupted by his wife's voice calling for Jane from the nearby room. Anticipating her interruption, he hurried on:

"For the present, Miss Gerson, we'll drop this matter. I said a few minutes ago I intended shortly to—know. I hope I won't have to carry out that—threat."

Jane was withdrawing one of the buds from the jar. At his last word she dropped it with a little gasp.

"Threat, general?"

"I hope not. Truly, I hope not. But, young woman"—

She stooped, picked up the flower and was setting it in his buttonhole before he could remonstrate.

"This one was for you, general," she said, and the truce was sealed. That minute Lady Crandall was wafted into the room on the breeze of her own staccato interruption.

"What's this—what's this! Flirting with poor old George? Planting a rose on my revered husband when my back's turned? Brazen miss! I'm here to take you off to the gardens at once, where you can find somebody younger—and not near so dear—to captivate with your tricks. At once, now!"

She had her arm through Jane's and was marching her off. An exchange of glances between the governor and Hildebrand's young diplomat of the dollar said that what had passed between them was a confidence.

Jaimihr Khan announced Major Bishop to the general a short time later. The major, a rotund, pink faced man of forty, who had the appearance of being ever tubbed and groomed to the pink of parade perfection, saluted his superior informally, accepted a cigarette and crossed his plump legs in an easy chair near the general's desk. General Crandall folded his arms on his desk and went direct to his subject:

"Major, you were here on the Rock seven years ago, you say?"

"Here ten years, general. Regular Rock scorpion—old timer."

"Do you happen to recall this chap Woodhouse whom I sent to you to report for duty in the signal tower today? Has transfer papers from Wady Halfa."

"Haven't met him yet, though Captain Carson tells me he reported at my office a little more than an hour ago. See him after parade. Woodhouse—Woodhouse"— The major propped his chin on his fingers in thought.

"His papers—army record and all that—say he was here on the Rock for three months in the spring of 1907," General Crandall urged, to refresh the other's memory.

Major Bishop stroked his round cheeks, tugged at one ear, but found recollection difficult.

"When I see the chap—so many coming and going, you know. Three months—bless me! That's a thin slice out of ten years."

"Major, I'm going to take you into my confidence," the senior officer began; then he related the incident of Capper's visit and repeated the charge he had made. Bishop sat aghast at the word "spy."

"Woodhouse will be here to tea this afternoon," continued Crandall. "While you and I ask him a few leading questions I'll have Jaimihr, my Indian, search his room in barracks. I trust Jaimihr implicitly, and he can do the job smoothly. Now, Bishop, what do you remember about 1907—something we can lead up to in conversation, you know?"

The younger man knuckled his brow for a minute, then looked up brightly.

"I say, general, Craigen was governor then. But—um—aren't you a bit—mild—this asking of a suspected spy to tea?"

"What can I do?" the other replied, somewhat testily. "I can't clap an officer of his majesty's army into prison on the mere say-so of a drunken outcast who has no proof to offer. I must go slowly, major. Watch for a slip from this Woodhouse. One bad move on his part and he starts on his way to face a firing squad."

"He starts on his way to the firing squad."

Bishop had risen and was slowly pacing the room, his eyes on the walls, hung with many portraits in oils.

"Well, you can't help admiring the nerve of the chap," he muttered, half to himself. "Forcing his way on to the Rock—why, he might as well put his head in a cannon's mouth."

"I haven't time to admire," the general said shortly. "Thing to do is to act."

"Quite right. Nineteen-seven, eh? Um"— He paused before the portrait of a young woman in a Gainsborough hat and with a sparkling, piquant face. "By George, general, why not try him on Lady Evelyn? There's a fair test for you, now!"

"You mean Craigen's wife?" The general looked up at the portrait quizzically. "Skeleton's bones, Bishop."

"Right. But no man who ever saw her could forget. I know I never can. Poor Craigen!"

"Good idea, though," the older man acquiesced. "We'll trip him on Lady Evelyn."

CHAPTER XV.

Enter, a Cigarette.

MR. JOSEPH ALMER, proprietor of the Hotel Splendide on Waterport street, was absorbed, heart and soul, in a curious task. He was emptying the powder from two grain quinine capsules on to a sheet of white letter paper on his desk.

It was noon of Wednesday, the day following the arrival of Captain Woodhouse. Almer was alone in the hotel's reception room and office behind the dingy glass partially inclosing his desk. His alpaca covered shoulders were close to his ears, and his bald head, with its stripes of plastered hair running like thick lines of latitude on a polished globe, was held far forward so as to bring his eyes on the work in hand. Like some plump magpie he appeared, turning over bits of china in a treasure hole.

A round box of the gelatin cocoons lay at his left hand; it had just been delivered by an Arab boy, quick to pick up the street commission for a tuppence. Very methodically Almer picked the capsules from the box one by one, opened them and spilled the quinine in a little heap under his nose. He grunted peevishly when the sixth shell had been emptied. The seventh capsule brought an eager whistle to his lips. When he had jerked the concentric halves apart very little powder fell out. Instead, the thin, folded edges of a pellet of rice paper protruded from one of the containers. This Almer had extracted in an instant. He spread it against the black back of a ledger and read the very fine script written thereon. This was the message:

Danger. An informer from Alexandria has denounced our friend to Crandall. You must warn; I cannot.

The spy's heart was suddenly drained, and the wisp of paper in his hand trembled so that it scattered the quinine about in a thin cloud. Once more he read the note, then held a match to it and scuffed its feathery ash with his feet into the rug beneath his stool. The fortitude which had held Joseph Almer to the Rock in the never failing hope that some day would bring him the opportunity to do a great service for the fatherland came near crumbling that minute. He groaned.

"Our friend," he whispered, "Woodhouse—trapped!"

Almer did not attempt to go behind the note and guess who was the informer that had lodged information with the governor general. He had forgotten, in fact, the incident of the night before, when the blustering Capper called the newly arrived Woodhouse by name. The flash of suspicion that attached responsibility to the American girl named Gerson was dissipated as quickly as it came. She had arrived by motor from Paris, not on the boat from Alexandria. His was now the imperative duty to carry warning to the suspected one, not to waste time in idle speculation as to the identity of the betrayer. There was but the ray of hope in this sudden pall of gloom, and that Almer grasped eagerly. He knew the character of General Crandall—the phlegmatic conservatism of the man, which would not easily be jarred out of an accustomed line of thought and action. The general would be slow to leap at an accusation brought against one wearing the stripes of service, and, though he might reasonably attempt to test Captain Woodhouse, one such as Woodhouse, chosen by the Wilhelmstrasse to accomplish so great a mission, would surely have the wit to parry suspicion.

Yes, he must be put on his guard. The nimble mind of Herr Almer shook itself free from the incubus of dread and leaped to the exigency of the moment. Calling his head waiter to keep warm the chair behind the desk, Almer retired to his room and there was exceedingly busy for half an hour.

The hour of parade during wartime on Gibraltar was 1 o'clock. At that time, six days a week, the half of the garrison not actually in fighting position behind the great guns of the defenses marched to the parade grounds down by the race track and there went through the grilling regimen that meant perfection and the maintenance of a hair trigger state of efficiency.

Mr. Henry J. Sherman stood with his wife. Kitty and Willy Kimball—Kimball had developed a surprising interest in one of these home folks at least—under the shade of the row of plane trees fringing the parade grounds. They tried to persuade themselves that they were seeing something worth while. This pleasing fiction wore thin with Mr. Sherman before fifteen minutes had passed.

"Shucks, mother! The boys at the national guard encampment down to Galesburg fair last year made a better showing than this." He pursed out his lips and regarded a passing battalion with a critical eye.

The patriot stopped short in his review of the continent's delinquencies to wave his hat at Lady Crandall and Jane Gerson, who were trundling down under the avenue of planes in a smart dogcart. Lady Crandall answered his hail with a flourish of her whip, turned her horse off the road and brought her conveyance to a stop by the group of exiles. Hearty greetings passed around. The governor's wife showed her unaffected pleasure at the meeting.

"I thought you wouldn't miss the parade," she called down from her high seat. "Only thing that moves on the Rock—these daily reviews. Brought Miss Gerson down here so when she gets back to New York she can say she's seen the defenders of Gibraltar, if not in action at least doing their hard training for it."

"Well, I don't mind tellin' you," Sherman began defiantly, "I think the national guard of Illinoy can run circles around these Englishmen when it

(To be Continued.)

Popular King of Spain Is One European Ruler Whose People Admire Him

THERE is no more popular monarch in all Europe today than King Alfonso of Spain. Republicans and Conservatives, Clericals and anti-Clericals, hold a place of affection for him in their hearts. He is referred to fondly as Alfonsito, "dear Alfonso," because he is the King of the people. The posthumous child of Alfonso XII., he was born their king, and grew up familiarly among them. His infant portrait adorned their postage stamps. The citizens of Madrid were so accustomed to see him in his daily promenades with his admirable mother, the Queen Regent, a blond, curly-haired, smiling child, that they paid little heed to him.

On the Plaza of San Sebastian, he romped and tossed a ball and played like any other human child. Never did he show any wilfulness or ill temper. He bore a remarkable likeness to his attractive mother, who accompanied him always. In his walks, on his drives, at play, and to divine service. Now that he is king he is a republican among monarchs, a friend of the people and their popular idol. They have laughed at the pranks of his youth, and now they praise and sympathise with the serious work of humanity which he has taken upon his shoulders since the world's war has deluged the rest of Europe with blood.

KING ALFONSO

According to correspondence from Madrid, King Alfonso has under his personal direction one of the most stupendous humanitarian works created by the war. In addition to looking after the interests of those nations which have broken with the Central Empires, through his legations in the latter countries, he has organised in his own palace at Madrid a system of research for the lost, missing, or wounded on the battle front, besides interceding for those in the hands of the Huns who may [illegible] be saved.

The published cablegram of an agonised mother and father appealing to His Majesty to obtain information of their son of the British Royal Aviation Corps, who was last seen flying over the English Channel, is given as a single example of the two hundred thousand cases which have come before him. Of these, one hundred and fifty thousand are reported as disposed of, while fifty thousand are still under investigation. Many of the soldiers reported missing have been found alive in prison camps, while thirty thousand civilians in the invaded sections of Belgium and France have been located for their families. Nor is this all. A great number of seriously wounded have been returned to their respective Governments through his intercession, at least forty-four pardons have been granted at his request, of which nearly half were death sentences, mostly of women accused of being spies.

It is a vast amount of work that this monarch is doing, showing how seriously he can take a grave task to heart. It may be remembered that it was not long ago that in the exuberance of youth he rode his horse up the palace stairs. Now in that same palace it is hurry, worry, and work with him.

With such a King, revolution in Spain is a dead issue. That country is already a democracy with a democratic monarch at its head. Proof of this was given not long ago when Alfonso refused to accept the resignation of his ministry, which was a Liberal one, and now that the same cabinet has again resigned because of the division in public opinion with regard to its foreign policy, the King still favors a continuance of Spanish democracy as is shown by the new cabinet, which continues to be a Liberal one.

Quail Fad in Japan.

The latest fancy among the wealthy people of Japan is the collecting and breeding of rare species of quails. It threatens to rival the mania for tulip bulbs that once seized the Hollanders. Enormous prices are paid for rare birds. Mr. Yoshida, a millionaire, recently gave 17,000 yen ($8,500) for a white quail—king of the race in beauty and price. One of the large Tokio shops has caught on the idea as a fashion novelty and is selling kimonos embroidered with white and golden-hued quail designs. The modiste had Mr. Yoshida's king quail sketched and is reproducing the splendid bird in high-priced garments.

Marie, the Medal A French Model

IT was between Chatou and Bougival, near Grenouillere, that Marcellin, the engraver of medals, first met his model, Marie, in the year 1870. Perhaps there never were two human beings more fitted to understand one another. He with his reddish beard, his velvet clothes, his great soft felt hat and his clay pipe, seemed a dauber or collector of romantic old lithographs; she with her little sailor hat, trimmed with a two-cent ribbon, shod in low shoes and dressed in a printed calico skirt, had all the liveliness, charm, and grace of those last grisettes painted by Courbet, a little before the time when he painted them lying on the banks of streams, lying among the rushes simply dressed in cornflowers, above which fluttered dragon flies.

"A girl on the banks of the Seine," such was Marie in those days; and the trips in rowboats near Asnieres, the parties in the out-of-door restaurants, these innocent amusements Marie adored in her childish way, never dreaming of being shut up in a studio in Batignolles.

Marcellin did not only love the sunlight and gold of the grain, but also when it crowned a woman's head. He was astonished, he went up to her and spoke; and in those happy days artists were not proud, but gay and frank. Marcellin and Marie talked under a green arbor, and there before a little table with Argenteuil wine and Manterre cakes they formed a friendship.

A word, which Gustave Courbet, the gifted artist, had formerly said, then possessed him, and notwithstanding the enticing smell of the luncheon, the dancing couples under the trees, it sang in his memory: "Ah! my old one! When we shall have excavated all the world. . . . we shall then need other money than theirs. . . . Then there will no longer be an emperor crowned with laurels and pretended victories, but a beautiful young girl, a daughter of the people, with an ample brow, a straight nose, a little chin and on her hair the Phrygian cap—"!

It was in 1875—the prophesied days had come, the days foreseen by the man in his leather belt and clay pipe, the bold Jean-Comtois, Gustave Courbet, who in his beautiful dream had thought to revolutionize the world, as he had revolutionised painting. It was a trying moment, certainly, and the last groans of the enemies' cannon, the last bursting discharge of musketry silenced the insurrection, and echoed still mingling with booming bells and drums in Marcellin's brain.

He was quickly asked, as the most capable artist, during those first days, to make the designs for the money of the republic. Marcellin, fired with zeal for the work, began to work at once.

He sought, meditated, tried and tried for a long time; then suddenly in a few days with all the application, love, and inspiration of his art, he engraved that perfect medal, which bears that sweet profile, crowned with ears of corn, so pure—the living profile of Marie.

The great success was not alone for Marcellin; but Marie also had her part in the hour of glory and joy. "Marie—the medal!" That was the name given to the young girl by the last habitues of that Bohemia. The deadly winter of "Pannee terrible," worse than any she had ever experienced, aggravated that mysterious pain, which already shook the delicate chest, turned the thin arms and sometimes suddenly colored Marie's high cheek bones.

Then during the first beautiful days of the new-born summer, guided by an obscure instinct, which predicted the future, the poor little, ill Marie wished, in remembrance of years gone by, that the medalist should take her to Bougival, near Grenouillere. But returning, when both of them walked slowly, Marcellin realized that never again could Marie be dreamed as "la jeune fille au Vords de la Seine," crowned with golden grain, leaning on his arms under the shady trees. The time had come for her, who was but twenty years old, to pay for those long years of deprivation and sadness in her childhood, those luncheons for two cents, all those terrible hours, when her lovely face did not glow with the happiness brought by the engraved medal for the money of the republic.

The morning when Marie's body was taken to the cemetery was several weeks later. All her friends of Montmartre were there. All those who, like the birds, have their nests and studios on the "Butte," near the mills; those from Batignolles, accustomed to the people and their sonorous songs; those from Montparnasse hung about silently. All in that long procession wore only velvet trousers, large berets of cloth, ample cloaks, and carried natty canes. Here and there were good-natured little women, models with pale, powdered faces, children of the ball, just as Marie had been formerly, they followed the long line as it wound away to the cemetery.

Leading that melancholy procession Marcellin walked, bowed with genuine grief. And as the sun mounted in the sky and flooded the procession with its joyous light, the artist, lover, and medalist thought of the dear, silent young girl, and consoled himself with the thought that she could never entirely disappear from the world, for in the coming ages men would seek for the medal bearing her profile, respect, honor, and admire it, as the savants of his day did the wonderful medal of the Greek goddess Athena. The unchangeable bronze medal of his beloved Marie, crowned with the ears of golden corn and the blue corn flowers of France.—Translated from the French of Pilon.

News About Town

Real summer at last.

Farmers will not finish their haying until next week.

Mrs. Tanner of Mount Forest visited friends in town Friday.

Mr. B. Beingessner of Formosa, spent Wednesday at Stratford.

Mrs. D. Robertson left Saturday on a visit to her daughter, Mrs. Roy at Kenora.

Pte. J. Sloan of Camp Borden spent the week-end with his uncle, Mr. Alex Grant.

Miss May Bryce left yesterday morning on an extended visit to her uncle at Girvin, Sask.

Inspector John McCool and son, Bryan, left last evening on an auto trip to Tyre, Mich. where they will visit relatives.

Miss Clara Schumacher and a girl friend from Toronto, are visiting at the former's home here.

Mr. James Raeburn had his hand badly cut by a set screw at the Bobbin Factory one day this week.

Mr. Justus Holm was laid up for several days the past week with a severe cold along with neuralgia.

Mrs. McKinnon and daughter Euphemia, of Detroit, are visiting at the home of Mrs. Thos. Cunningham.

Pte. Charlie Bryce of the 19th Reserve Batt. England has recently been sent to France with a special draft.

Mrs. J. P. McConnell, who was the guest of Mrs. (Dr.) H. H. Sinclair, returned home to New York on Monday.

High Constable Briggs had a visit on Tuesday from Mr. Thomas Elliot of Toronto, who is his only surviving uncle.

Miss Lottie Hunsberger returned to her home in Paris, after a few week's visit with her friend, Miss Minnie McGregor.

Miss Annie McIntyre of Brampton who has been visiting her cousin, Miss Sarah Little of Brant, returned home on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Scott and family motored over from Teeswater and spent Sunday with Mrs. Scott's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Grant.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Weiler and family left last week for their new home at Waterloo. Their son, Herb. will join them in about three weeks.

Mrs. Pryne of West Michigan, and Mrs. Flath and children of Toronto, who were guests of Mrs. Pryne, East Ward, returned home on Thursday.

Aug. 4th will be the third anniversary of the declaration of war, and the Lieutant-Govenor has asked that the occasion be observed in every locality.

Mr. John Batte of Windsor arrived here Saturday and will spend a few weeks with his wife and babe, who have been visiting Mrs. Batte's mother.

Mr. and Mrs. Eli Myles and family took a motor trip to Guelph, Hespeler and Galt last week. Miss Freda remained at Guelph for a visit with friends there.

Masters Earl and John Conlin, of Detroit, the young sons of Mr. James Conlin, formerly of Walkerton, are spending their vacation with their aunt, Mrs. Griff Jones.

The many friends of Mrs. Stephen Little of Brant, who has been very poorly for some time, will be glad to learn that she is making good progress towards recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Zettel of Alexandria, Indiana, and Mr. Zettel's son, Rev. Father Florien Zettel of California, have been visiting Mr. J. J. Schumacher and other relatives in this district.

Mrs. Vail and Mrs. Nelson of Montreal are visiting their sister, Mrs. Norman Robertson. Miss Ruth Robertson and Dr. Harry Robertson also arrived this week on a visit to the old home.

Mrs. Frank Purdy of Paisley received word that her son, Pte. Norval Kyle, has been awarded the Military Medal for conspicuous bravery. He was a member of the Standard Bank Staff at Winnipeg before enlisting.

Mr. K. O. Noecker, accompanied by his son and daughter, motored up from Drayton and spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Dippel. Mr. Dippel returned with them to Drayton, to visit old friends there, for a few days.

Pte. Norman Webb, who went Overseas with the 160th Batt'n and was rejected in England as physically unfit, writes to friends in town that he had expected to sail for Canada before this, but has been sick in a hospital for several weeks.

Dr. Margaret McKellar a Presbyterian medical missionary in India and a former Bruce resident, has been granted permission by the Mission Board to enter the service of the British War Office. Dr. McKellar is the first woman doctor in Canadian Presbyterian Church to be called for this work, although, of course, several of their nurses volunteered several months ago. Dr. McKellar is a graduate of Queen's University, and has been engaged in missionary work in India for twenty-seven years past.

FELT LIKE A NEW PERSON

After Taking Only One Box Of "Fruit-a-tives"

East Ship Harbour, N. S.

"It is with great pleasure that I write to tell you of the wonderful benefits I have received from taking "Fruit-a-tives". For years, I was a dreadful sufferer from Constipation and Headaches, and I was miserable in every way. Nothing in the way of medicines seemed to help me. Then I finally tried "Fruit-a-tives" and the effect was splendid. After taking one box, I feel like a new person, to have relief from those sickening Headaches".

MRS. MARTHA DEWOLFE.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

CANADIAN NATIONAL EXHIBITION

Aug. 25 - TORONTO - Sept. 10

On a More Than Ordinarily Progressive Scale

MOBILIZATION OF NATIONAL RESOURCES

Constructive and Destructive Needs for War

CONFEDERATION SPECTACLE

1200—PERFORMERS—1200

Canada's Story from Birth to Nationhood Dramatically Told

The very Apex of Spectacular Achievement

GIANT LIVE-STOCK AND AGRICULTURAL DISPLAY

Judging Competitions for Young Farmers - - New Farm Crop Competitions - - Extended Classifications and Innovations in All Departments

IMMENSE EXHIBITS OF TRACTORS AND FARM LABOR SAVING DEVICES

ART—Italian, French, Persian, American and Canadian Masterpieces.

MUSIC—Innes' Famous Soloists and a score of other leading organizations.

ENTIRE NEW MIDWAY

NATIONAL MOTOR SHOW

FIRST SHOWING OF 1918 MODELS

Greatly enlarged Government and other Exhibits - - - War in all its phases - - Model Camp - - Artillery Drive - - Aeroplane Flights - - Scores of surprises in store for old friends and a thousand thrills for new ones.

REDUCED FARES ON ALL LINES OF TRAVEL

Why not give your boy and girl an opportunity to make their home study easy and effective? Give them the same chances to win promotion and success as the lad having the advantage of

WEBSTER'S NEW INTERNATIONAL

Dictionary in his home. This new creation answers with final authority all kinds of puzzling questions in history, geography, biography, spelling, pronunciation, sports, arts, and sciences.

400,000 Vocabulary Terms. 2700 Pages. Over 6000 Illustrations. Colored Plates.

The only dictionary with the Divided Page.

The type matter is equivalent to that of a 15-volume encyclopedia.

More Scholarly, Accurate, Convenient, and Authoritative than any other English Dictionary.

REGULAR AND INDIA-PAPER EDITIONS.

WRITE for specimen pages, illustrations, etc. FREE, a set of Pocket Maps if you name this paper.

G. & C. MERRIAM CO., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Fall Term From, Sept. 4th

CENTRAL Business College.

STRATFORD, ONT.

COMMERCIAL, SHORTHAND & TELEGRAPHY DEPARTMENTS

We have thorough courses, experienced instructors and we place our Graduates in positions. Demand upon us for trained help is many times the number graduating. Get our free catalogue.

D. A. McLACHLAN PRINCIPAL

Western Fair

LONDON, CANADA

September 7th to 15th 1917

1867—"A half Century of Success"—1917

The Great Agricultural Exhibition of Western Ontario

$32,000.00 in Prizes and Attractions

A very interesting Programme, including Military and other features—Twice Daily.

Fireworks Each Night

Two Speed Events Daily

REDUCED RAILWAY RATES

Prize Lists, Entry Forms and all information from the Secretary.

LIEUT.-COL. W. M. GARTSHORE, President

A. M. HUNT, Secretary

DENTAL

W. S. HALLADAY, L. D. S. D. D. S.

Dentist. Successor to Dr. Coram. Modern methods employed in all dental operations. Special attention to crown, bridge and inlay work. Three doors east of post office. Visits Cargill 1st and 3rd Thursday afternoon of each month.

C.L. GRANT, D.D.S.,L.D.S

Graduate of Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario.

Dr. Lount's old stand.

Wisser Block - Walkerton

MEDICAL

DR. BROWN

Diseases of the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat, Neustadt. Ont. Will be at the Queen's Hotel, Walkerton, 1st Friday in each month from 1 to 4 p.m.

W. A. HALL, B.A., M.D., C.M.

Honor Graduate in Arts and Medicine at Queen's University. Member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons. Office and residence on corner of Colborne and Cayley Streets.

INSURANCE

FIRE, LIFE, ACCIDENT, AUTOMOBILE, GUARANTEE.

MONEY to LOAN

REAL ESTATE

Town and Farm Property for sale. See my list before making a purchase

OCEAN and RAIL

TICKETS TO ANY PART OF THE WORLD.

I represent the Canadian Northern Railway and all ocean steamship companies — English, American and Italian.

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES

T. E. ATTWOOD

GENERAL AGENT

Walkerton - Ontario

INSURANCE & REAL ESTATE

Fire, Life, Accident & Health, Plate Glass, and Guarantee Insurance in the best of Companies.

Real Estate—Several desirable residential properties for sale.

Money to Loan, Conveyancing and General Agency. Splendid Mortgage Loan Company Debentures for investment yielding good interest.

GEO. D. McKAY

Office Over Bell Telephone Agency

PHONE NO. - 179

WE PHOTOGRAPH MEN AS MEN ARE

It's a business matter and there is no fuss or bother. Your family, friends and business associates want your portrait.

FRASER STUDIO

PATENTS PROMPTLY SECURED

We solicit the business of Manufacturers, Engineers and others who realize the advisability of having their Patent business transacted by Experts. Preliminary advice free. Charges moderate. Our Inventor's Adviser sent upon request. Marion & Marion, New York Life Bldg. Montreal: and Washington, D.C. U.S.A.

Fall Term From August

ELLIOTT Business College

Yonge and Charles Sts., Toro

Is unquestionably one of Canad best Commercial Schools. The mand for our graduates is far bey our supply. Write for our Catalo

W. J. Elliott, Princ

Office Stationery

For nice Stationery print ed from new type a moderate prices. Try the

TELESCOPE

GIRLS NEEDED IN OFFIC

Voluntary enlistment has ta thousands of men from office wo Conscription will take more. Of help is scarce now—will be scarc very soon. Young women must the vacant places and they need ing.

NORTHERN Business Colleg remains open all summer to he meet the demand for trained help. Students may enter any No increase in fees. Circulars f application.

C. A. FLEMING, F. C. A., Pr Department A., Owen Sound,

Here's Where You W Find the Proper

Summe Clothing

Don't be satisfied wi just an ordinary suit clothes this time, bu treat yourself to a good one. It might not be high priced one, but one that is good value for your money, whatever you pay.

T. PYE

Clothier & Furnisher.

HOMESEEKERS EXCURSIONS

MAY 8th TO OCTOBER 30th

Every

TUESDAY

"ALL RAIL" - also by

THURSDAY'S STEAMER

"Great Lakes Route"

(Season Navigation)

Your Future is in the West

The fertile prairies have put Western Canada on the map. There are still thousands of acres waiting for the man who wants a home and prosperity. Take advantage of Low Rates and travel via

Canadian Pacific

W. B. Howard, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, Ont.

HBORING VILLAGES & COUNTRYSIDE

s of the Week Collected by a Staff of Live Correspondents ervice in honor of the late r Garland, who "died of woun held in the Anglican Church o day afternoon. A large congregati listened to an excellent discourse by Rev. Mr. Homer.

NKERTON

Mrs. W. Mutrie and children of St. Louis, are visiting at Mr. John Mutrie's.

Mr. R. L. Garland of Palmerston spent Sunday at his home here.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Gregg and family have moved to their cottage at Inverhuron, for the summer.

Mrs. N. Garland visited friends in Harriston on Saturday.

Mr. Adam Foreman lost a valuable horse on Saturday night.

Another shipment was made by the ocal Red Cross Society last week consisting of soldiers comforts; 55 grey nion flannel shirts without collars, 16 ir socks. Red Cross supplies, 11 suits s, 2 pillows, 3 wash cloths.

WESTFORD

mond Redmond of St. Aug his sister, Mrs. J. Bell of berta, spent Friday at Mr. 's.

Margaret and Bessie Murray o are spending their vacation ome here.

F. H. Haldenby and friends d to Kincardine one day last

Frank Caskanett of Munising and Miss Lizzie Murray of Tor are visiting friends in Westford.

Mr. Jack Bell of Saskatchewan came ome to attend the funeral of his other, Mrs. George Bell.

Mrs. M. I. Haldenby has gone to goma to see her mother who is riously ill.

Miss Margaret Mahoney of Mildmay s spending her holidays with her uncle r. P. Linehan.

Mr. and Mrs. Irvin and family of ndon, were visiting their cousins and Mrs. A. E. Haldenby.

MILDMAY

Sarah Smith of Toronto is visit the home of her uncle, Simon ele.

Frank Oberle and two little sons ave been visiting at Tony Schnei for the past two months, started eir return journey on Tuesday g for their home at Elbow, Sask.

n. Wendt accompanied by his her motored to Hespeler last week isit friends.

At last we are having nice warm Summer weather.

The strawberry social held last Friday evening, on J. H. Schrum's lawn, was a decided success.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnston of Toronto are visiting at John Butler's, this week.

Mrs. Patton returned from a three week's visit at St. George.

HANOVER

Hanover had an nteresting visitor this week in the person of Mr. C. A. Hodgson of Havana, Cuba, who is enroute to his home in Halifax for a holiday. He was on the staff of the Bank of Nova Scotia at Havana. In a chat with The Post, Mr. Hodgson stated his pleasure to be back in Canada, "God's Country." He has been in Havana over a year but it does not appeal to him. Our present weather would be about the coldest they would experience at any time, while their summer weather is the limit. It's not the heat so much but the humidity. Living is very high in Havana, especially in the winter, (the tourist season.)

A marriage of interest to Hanoverians took place at Winnipeg recently the principals being Miss May Henning, daughter of Mr B. Henning of Hanover, and Mr. Thos. Sullivan of Ottawa. The young couple will reside at Winnipeg.

The following Hanover ladies have gone to Winona to pick fruit ands help in the greater production campaign and so help to win the war and "do theirbit": Miss Kirchner, Miss Jackson, Mrs. G. H. Witthun, Misses Witthun, Mrs Walter Meades and Miss Lillian Mead- Miss L. Miehlhausen, Miss Winifred Clarke, Miss Vera Zinn, Miss Marie Muter, Mrs. W. Ruttle, Miss Dorothy Engel, Miss X. Knechtel, Miss Wenger and Miss Martin.

Mr. William Trussler, a former well-known and highly esteemed resident of Hanover, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. John Hillgartner here last Thursday at the advanced age of 87 years and 11 months. Death was due to asthma and pleurisy.

The little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Hoerle had an exciting and distressing time on Monday evening last. She was walking along Maple Avenue when a bunch of bees that had congregated in a tree close to the sidewalk swarmed down upon her and stung her about the head and face. The little child was alone and she was terrified and she ran into Mr. Smith's residence where a number of ladies congregated and used the old fashioned remedy of rubbing dirt on her face until the doctor arrived.

Mr. A. Poole, the local manager of the W. G. & R. for the past eight years, since the branch was opened here, left Hanover on Monday for Kitchener. Mr. Poole stated to The Post that the closing down here was only temporary and his family are continuing to reside here.

GRAY HAIR

Tremain's Natural Hair Restorative. directed, is guaranteed to restore grey its natural color or money refunded. Pos not a dye and nonanjurious. Price $1 00. paid. Write Tremain Supply Co., Dept. ronto, Ontario.

On Sale in Walkerton at H. G. Han 's Drug Store.

Read the Ads.

SOLWAY

(Intended for last week)

Mr. and Mrs. Noah Stroeder from the South Line and Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Grupp from near Formosa spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Stroeder.

Miss M. Heenan from Toronto is holidaying at the home of her sister, Mrs. Jno. Hanmore.

A number from here attended the Lawn Social at Mr. D. Willoughby's on Friday evening.

Miss Lollie Lambertus from Teeswater is spending a week at the home of her brother, Mr. Wm. Lambertus.

Mrs. Harriston is visiting at the home of her sister, Mrs. J. Holm.

Mr. and Mrs. McMorran who have been visiting at the home of Mr. Walter Findlay returned to their home in the West on Saturday.

Mrs. Cornwall returned to her home n Toronto on Monday after spending a few weeks with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Tullock.

Mrs. Wm. Tullock is spending a few weeks with her daughter Mrs. Alex McGregor near Chesley, who is ill with typhoid fever

CLAMIS

Miss Margaret Campbell returned to Harriston on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. L. McIntyre of Calgary, Alberta, and Master Campbell McIntyre are visiting at John C. McIntyre's.

Conductor Coll. D. McLean of Parry Sound is home on his holidays.

Miss Pearl Kirktown spent a week with her friend, Miss Jessie McLean of Tiverton.

Miss Jessie McKeeman has been on the sick list.

Miss Ethel McEachern returned to her duties in London, after spending a couple of weeks here.

Miss Pearl Francis of Toronto, is visiting at Murdock McKay's, and Angus Campbell's.

Miss Annie McDonald of Ripley is a guest of her cousin, Miss Tena McLean.

Mr., Mrs. and Miss Kirktown and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Kennedy, motored to Markdale on Saturday, returning home on Monday.

Miss Lillico returned to her home near Chesley, on Saturday.

Mr. Albert Pickard of Wiarton Sundayed here.

The Ladies Missionary Society, St. Pauls Church, held a very successful Ice Cream Social on Thursday evening.

Rev. and Mrs. G. C. Rock of Walkerton Sundayed with the Misses Howson.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Burgess and Miss Dorothy, accompanied by his sisters, Mrs. Kaske of Underwood, and Mrs. Moulton of Kingarf, left here on Thursday on a motor trip to London, Springfield, Toronto, Hamilton and other points.

The B. Y. P. U. Society here held a social evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Woods, 9th Con. on Friday.

Mr. Chris. Young, Misses Laura Cunningham and Margaret Currie Sundayed in Walkerton.

Mr. Wesley of "The Bruce Herald and Times" was a business caller here on Monday.

On Monday evening of last week The Guild of St. Pauls Church met as a surprise party at the home of James Thompson, and took the opportunity of presenting Pte. Rhoderick Thompson (who was home from Camp Borden over the week-end) with a wrist watch and an address.

CHEPSTOW

Mr. John McNab of Guelph is on a months' visit to his daughter, Mrs. F. Clancy.

Mrs. John Golden and two little sons of Minneapolis, Min., arrived on Saturday to spend the summer months with Mrs. T. Golden.

Miss Irene McNab left on Saturday on a few weeks' visit to her brother, William, in Detroit.

Miss B. McNab, nurse-in-training at St. Joseph's Hospital, Guelph, is visiting under the parental roof.

Misses Anna and Clementine Diebolt of Buffalo, N. Y., are home for their summer vacation.

The Entrance Reports indicate that four out of the five candidates were successful in attaining their certificates.

Miss A. Dietner of Toronto is spending a few weeks' holidays at her home.

Mr. M. McNab spent Sunday with relatives in Toronto, having accompanied a carload of his choice cattle to the city market on Saturday.

BRANT AVENUE

Mr. Jos. Zettler was the firs to finish haying in this neighborhood on Tuesday.

Mr. Wm. McCarter G. T. R. brakeman, was home over Sunday on a short visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James McCarter.

Our farmers are all busy as can be trying to sneak their hay in, as a few dry days appeared after that continuous rain the last month back.

Some bunch of Sunday visitors spent the day at J. J. Ernsts, among them being Mr. J. G. Uhrich who is spending a week here on business and reports crops looking pretty good in the West in spite of the dry spell they have had since April. Just as dry as we have had it wet.

✦ ✦ ✦

BRANT COUNCIL

The Municipal Council of the Township of Brant met on the 9th day of July, members all present. Minutes of last meeting read and declared correct.

Rowand-Gregg—That the Reeve and Deputy Reeve be a Committee to examine the bridge over the Saugeen river on the South Line, known as Traynor's bridge, and have same repaired if found necessary.—Carried.

Findlay-Gregg—That the half-yearly statement of the Treasurer, Mr. Fred Jacklin, be accepted.—Carried.

Johnston-Rowand—That a grant of $30.00 be made to help gravelling the deviation road south of Hanover, grant to be supplimented by a grant of $100.00 from Bentinck Township. Grant to be spent under the supervision of the commisioners of that district.—Carried.

Johnston-Gregg—That a writing desk be bought for the clerk of this tp.

Rowand-Johnston—That the Reeve and Clerk be authorized to issue orders on the Treasurer for all accounts passed at this meeting of council.

Chris. Koehn, grant	$8 22 45
Robert Curtis, grant and grading	56 00
G. A. Klages, repairing culvert	2 00
Eph. Rody, grant	75 50
Thos. Calder, grading	7 00
Walter Threodyle, grading and repairs	112 50
Adam McCurdy, grant	42 00
Ed. Schause, grant	38 50
Mac. McIntyre, grant	61 80
William Atkinson, grant	93 80
John Engel, grant	62 00
Hugh Traynor, rep. scraper	2 00
Bruce Burnham, rep. road	3 00
W. A. Tolton, grant	58 50
Frank Geisler, grant	20 00
John Zettler, hauling tile, putting in culvert	10 00
Hugh McNeill, grant	43 00
Geo Waechter, putting in culvert	2 50
Frank Lang, statute labor 1916 Jas. Cahoon	15 75
Frank Lang, 122 yds. of gravel $12.20, rep. river bridge $2.00	14 20
Jas. Garner, grant	30 00
Arthur Johnston, grant	25 00
David Nauer, filling washout	4 25
J. L. George, 13 yds. gravel	1 30
Arthur Dougan, grant	48 00
Duncan Stewart, grant	100 00
Ed. Hopkins, grant	115 40
Henry Frook, grant	50 00
Jos. Monk, grant	75 00
Jas. A. Rae, 64 yds. of gravel	6 40
Josiah Dierstien, 253 yds. of gravel	25 30
Wm. C. Liefso, 237 yds. of gravel $23 70 and grant $31 80	57 70
Wm. Rody, 113 yds. of gravel	11 30
Fred Monk, 178 yds. of gravel $17 80; right of way $100	18 80
Fred Caster, 107 yds. of gravel	10 70
Josiah Dierstien, cement tile	31 90
Fred Frook, 106 yds of gravel	10 60
Fred Fortune, 65 yds. of gravel	6 50
Chris. Pegelo, grading	105 05
George Pfhol, 66 yds. of gravel	6 60
Mel. Goodby, 65 yds. of gravel	6 50
Herman Lorenz, 78 yds. gravel	7 80
Bob. Murray, 136 yds. of gravel	13 60
Tom Seales, 107 yds. of gravel $10 70; right of way $2 00	12 70
Fred Wilken, 90 yds. of gravel	9 00

Rowand—Johnston—That this council do now adjourn to meet on Monday August, 13th, 1917 for the purpose of levying the township rates and the transaction of general business.

M. A. McCallum, Clerk.

THE FUEL SITUATION

Present Difficulties Attributed to a Number of Causes—An Important Statement

THE following statement is sent out by Mr. A. D. MacTier, General Manager of the C. P. R.:

It is realized in most quarters, some more than others, that this country is face to face with a coal shortage of very alarming proportions, and that by next winter, if conditions under which fuel may be obtained do not alter in the meantime, a great many industrial concerns and householders will be unable to supply themselves with sufficient coal to carry them through the severe weather.

The present and prospective difficulties in the way of bringing coal into Eastern Canada may be attributed to a number of causes, principal amongst which are dearth of mining labor and shortage of coal carrying equipment at the mines. The situation in some of the mining territories at the present time, is that, even with the labor shortage, mine operators are able to turn out coal at a greater rate than they can obtain cars to carry it away. It, therefore, naturally follows, that more coal can be brought into Canada if the car supply be increased.

Unfortunately, it is out of the question to obtain any number of new cars at this time, and the situation can be met only by obtaining more service from the present rolling stock. To do this cars must be moved promptly between the mines and destination and must be unloaded as soon as they reach consignees.

Railways must have coal in order to discharge their obligations to the country, and for their own preservation, as well as for the benefit of their patrons, they are putting forth their utmost efforts to minimise delay to cars while en route to and from the mines.

All efforts in this direction, however, will be of little avail without the whole-hearted co-operation of the man who unloads the coal and releases the car after it gets to its destination. Some consignees, who thoroughly appreciate the situation, have almost a hundred per cent. record in the prompt unloading of coal cars, but there are others who are helping to create the prospective shortage of coal by keeping the equipment out of active service. To-day there are in one town of comparatively small size fifty-two coal cars awaiting unloading. The arrival of these cars was spread over a period of thirty-one days, an average of cars received per day of 1.68. They are consigned to three organizations who have the facilities for unloading a large number of cars each day. These fifty-two cars have been out of service a total of 1029 car days. Coal cars that are not held for storage purposes as these cars are, average at least fifty miles per car per day. Had the fifty-two cars been unloaded promptly they would have, by this time, travelled 51,460 miles. The distance from the point where they are now located to the coal mining territory is approximately four hundred miles. It follows, therefore, that had the fifty-two cars been in active service they would have been available to bring into the country sixty-four carloads, or about thirty-two hundred tons, of coal. The quantity is not very large, it is true, when the total demand is considered, but it would have kept over three hundred families warm for the winter or heated the boilers in an industrial plant for some little time.

Unfortunately, the case cited is not the only one of its kind. It is one of the worst at present, but there are hundreds of cars at this moment that are lying idle, waiting to be relieved of their loads, so that they may go back to the mines for more coal. The coal dealer and consignee can do the country an immense service by promptly releasing rolling stock and helping to reduce car shortage at the mines.

There is also the man who has always called for open top cars for the handling of his goods because the loading and unloading with that class of equipment is more economical than in using closed cars. When he insists on being supplied with cars that should be in the coal business he is helping to create a coal shortage by keeping cars away from the mines. No doubt he is a heavy coal consumer. As a business proposition would it not be more economical for him if he used closed cars now and enabled the railways to transport more coal into the country so that he would not be in danger of having to close down his plant altogether later on account of being unable to obtain fuel?

The Canadian Pacific Railway Company, for itself, and on behalf of other railway companies, most earnestly calls upon its patrons and employees to do their utmost to fight off the impeding shortage of fuel by keeping coal cars continuously in the proper service, which is the transporting of coal.

LONDON MISSES NEWSBILL.

Change Was Result of Wartime Paper Shortage.

London finds it hard to reconcile itself to the loss of its old newsbills. It is resigned, of course, since paper shortage is paper shortage, but it loves to talk about the matter; to stop its neighbor at the street corner and make remark as to how this loss has changed things, and to recount the ways in which it has learned of the striking things that have happened during the preceding twenty-four hours. The casual visitor to London could never fully appreciate what the loss means to a Londoner. The newsbill is one of those things which he had grown so accustomed to, and took so much for granted, that he never realised, until they went, how largely they constituted for him an ever-open door to the world's happenings. "What news on the Rialto?" was a question which, in London, until recently, found an answer at every street corner or public place in the busy parts of the great city. Newsbills, several of them, all easily distinguished from one another by the practiced eye as the advertisement of this or that well-known paper, were, indeed, part of the outfit of every newsboy. In days of stress, or on any day, he might be seen bursting out of some side street, or rushing through some swing door into Fleet street, hastily adjusting in front of him, as he ran, the latest newsbill, wet from the press, and crying out, after the manner of his kind, the great news he had to sell.

Then, his devices for displaying his bills when he had a regular "pitch" were many and wonderful. They would be impaled on railings, strapped to lampposts and the old iron corner posts, so familiar a feature of the London streets; or they would be laid flat on their backs close to the pavement, weighted down with stones and watered in order to make them more sedentary in their habits; but, whatever the device resorted to, they were always so placed that all who passed by might gather at a glance the latest new thing.

It was not only, however, that they kept one in touch with the news of the world and the rumors of the world, from hour to hour; they were a constant study in ingenuity. Every now and again, one particular newspaper would secure the services of a past master in the art of newsbill writing, and it would become a thing to look for, how this paper would announce this or that startling piece of intelligence. The bills were dependent, of course, for their wit and point upon their utter oppositeness to the thought and feeling almost of the moment. To be really effective they demanded all the immediateness of repartee. There was no time for the newsbill writer, after the manner of a certain famous "night watchman," to think out "back talk" in the darkness of the night. And so there could be no rule about it. It was a field for genius. The newsbill writer on that momentous morning of August 5th, 1914, knew his business when he sent out his bills showing the single word "War," just as surely as he will one day know his business well enough to send them out bearing the single word "Peace"; for, on that day, he will take the law into his own hands, and send out newsbills, all regulations to the contrary, notwithstanding. Of course, the newsboy has not tamely acquiesced in the deprivation. It is always possible to get a piece of chalk, and one can write on most things; and many of them resorted to this expedient. He has, moreover, as always, been notably cheerful, not to say facetious, about it. The very word "bill" opens the door to great possibilities. There was a man, for instance, for your London newsboy is often a man, who has walked down Fleet street many summers and many winters, who chalked across the board on which he was wont to display his news, the laconic legend, "Bill gone"—to the front, maybe, or to make munitions. London is getting used to it, of course, just as it, long ago, got used to darkened streets; but it will be glad when the lights are turned on again, and the newsboy girds himself, once more, with his apron of news.—Christian Science Monitor.

No Excuse.

There's something there's no excuse for—scientists can't figure up any alibi for them. It seems they were just invented along with filibusters, mosquitoes, and many other like pests just to make existence miserable. They are five of 'em on each foot, situated on the end you push into the sock first. They are very quarrelsome and there's much friction amongst them and they raise more fuss than a bushel of Mexican revolutions. They are very ungrateful creatures. Toes really owe us a lot for letting them live. They're useless, and what do they do but harvest corns, encourage ingrown nails, freeze up on us and have a mean way of sneaking under somebody else's heel to be stepped on? Can you beat it for ingratitude? Ballet dancers have the right idea, getting even with the toes. They make their toes support them physically and financially.

A Little Nervous.

Lord Charles Beresford tells a story about his stay at a country inn near Oxford. His lordship arrived over night quite alone, and told the host who he was. That worthy thus admonished the hot water boy: "Look here," said he earnestly, "we have got a lord here—a real live lord. We never had one here before, and I don't suppose we will ever again. When you take his lordship's water up in the morning knock several times, and if a voice says: 'Who is there?' mind you say: 'It's the boy, my lord!'" The unfortunate boy was so flustered, however, next morning that shivering outside the door with his hot water when Lord Charles cried: 'Who's there?' he blurted out: 'It's the lord, me boy.'"

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson V.—Third Quarter, For July 29, 1917.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Isa. lv, 1-11—Memory Verses, 1, 2—Golden Text, Isa. lv, 6—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

The last part of Isaiah, chapters xl to lxvi, may be said to begin and end with comfort for his people, Israel, in connection with His coming in glory (xl, 1, 2, 10, 11; lxvi, 13, 15, 18), and as then will be the overthrow of their enemies there is an easy connection between the last lesson and this. These last twenty-seven chapters of Isaiah are easily divided into three nines, the first and second of which end with the same words, "No peace, saith the Lord or saith my God, to the wicked" (xlviii, 22; lvii, 21). Our lesson today is in the middle nine, and the middle chapter of this nine is the fifty-third, which tells of the only way of peace for any sinner or for all sinners. The next chapter tells of God's unchanging loving kindness for Israel and of their future establishment in righteousness by their Redeemer, the God of the whole earth (liv, 5-14). Today's lesson chapter is a cry to all who thirst to come to the God of Israel, the fountain of living waters (Jer. ii, 13). All that is represented by living water, wine and milk has been provided fully at infinite cost and is offered freely to whosoever will, according to Rev. xxi, 6; xxii, 17; John iv, 14; vii, 37. Love cannot be bought, nor can any of the gifts of God, but He says, "I will heal their backsliding, I will love them freely" (Hos. xiv, 4; S. of Sol. viii, 7; Rom. iii, 24).

Spending money for that which is not bread reminds us of His words to the 5,000, "Labor not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of Man shall give unto you" (John vi, 27). The words "Hearken diligently unto Me, * * * hear and your soul shall live" (verses 2, 3), are very like John v, 24, where we learn that hearing and believing His word give everlasting life and assurance of not coming into judgment for our sins. In the study of all prophecy we must remember that His thoughts are first for Israel and then for all nations, but there is always a message for every individual believer, whether Jew or gentile, as we have already seen. The sure mercies of David take us to the covenant ordered in all things and sure which comforted David in his dying hours (II Sam. xxiii, 5; vii, 10).

There is only one Leader and Commander who can rule Israel, even the one who brought them out of Egypt and put them in the promised land and gave them judges and kings and always delivered them when they cried unto Him—He of whom the Lord said to Jeremiah, "I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth; * * * His name shall be called the Lord Our Righteousness (Jer. xxiii, 5, 6). See also Isa. ix, 6, 7; Luke i, 31-33. Nations have never yet in all the history of the world turned to the Lord as nations, but when Israel shall have become a righteous nation by receiving their Messiah at His coming again in power and glory then shall be fulfilled such words as these: "The nations shall come to Thy light and kings to the brightness of Thy rising;" "Sing and rejoice, O daughter of Zion, for, lo, I come, and I will dwell in the midst of thee, saith the Lord, and many nations shall be joined to the Lord in that day and shall be My people" (Isa. xxv, 8, 9; lx, 1-3; Zech. ii, 10, 11). Lesson verses 6, 7, seem to be a call to individuals now and at all times, and what great encouragement there is to all sinners to turn to the Lord in the offer of abundant pardon and mercy! The Lord loves to do all things abundantly, whether it be giving life or an entrance into His kingdom or supplying a present need, and if we will only deal rightly with Him He promises more blessing than we can receive (John x, 10; II Pet. i, 11; Matt. xiv, 20; Mal. iii, 10).

The seeking means earnest, persistent, whole hearted turning to Him (Jer. xxiv, 7; xxix, 13). Verses 8, 9, should teach us the folly of our thoughts and ways, inasmuch as His are as far above ours as the heavens are higher than the earth. Yet there are so many who know not the thoughts of the Lord, either concerning His great and free salvation or His purpose in this age and the ages to come (Mic. iv, 12; Eph. iii, 11). Verses 10, 11, are especially grand words for rainy or snowy days, but good at all times. When I have given the Lord's message I am continually comforted by the assurance that it always accomplishes His pleasure and never returns to Him void and that results are sure, whether we see them or not. Words that go well with these are, "I will watch over my word to perform it" and "No word from God shall be void of power" (Jer. i, 12, R. V.; Luke i, 37, R. V.).

If only we are the Lord's messengers with the Lord's message (Hag. i, 13) we can always go on our way saying, Thank God, that will work. Some look for so many souls from a service or other definite results of their own desire, but it seems to me better to give the message and leave results to Him, always expecting them and sure of them, but leaving it to Him to accomplish His pleasure and knowing that in due time He shall see of the travail of His soul and be satisfied (liii, 11).

News About Town

Mrs. Heinbecker and Miss Mildred spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. J. Ransbottom.

+

Mrs. Boetger and Miss Boetger of Hanover were Sunday visitors with Mr. and Mrs. Dan Miller.

+

Miss Olive Hueghan came up from Toronto on Saturday on a visit to her father, Mr. R. E. Hueghan.

+

Mrs. John Hunstein and son, Willis, of Mildmay, are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Dippel.

+

Misses Selena and Laura Truax, accompanied by Mrs. Williams and Mr. Smith, motored over from Durham on Sunday.

+

Dr. and Mrs. Lawrence Barrett and little daughter Margaret, motored up from Galt to spend the week-end at Mr. McCrum's.

+

Miss Freda McCrum has returned home from New York City where she went to write on the State Exams for graduate nurses.

+

Mr. and Mrs. Angus Atkinson of Wingham called on Mr. and Mrs. Wilford Richie on Monday while motoring through from Durham.

+

Mr. and Mrs. James Flett motored over from Wiarton on Saturday to spend a few days with Mr. Flett's mother, Mrs. Flett Sr.

+

The Women's Institute will meet at the home of Mrs. Wm. Earnest on August 2nd. A demonstration will be given "Fitting a waist."

+

We are representatives of the largest Counter Check Book firm in Canada. Your order will receive prompt attention at The Telescope office.

+

Warden D. J. Izzard, Port Elgin was here on Friday last, and with Reeve Wm. Hunter looked over the two county bridges that were damaged by the floods. Action will at once be taken to them repaired.—Kincardine Reporter

+

How Ted Fell

A Mildmay boy writes from the Front: "When Teddy Kidd met his death he was crossing No Man's Land. There was a slight raise in the ground and that is where it happened. There were two lads beside him and they were talking and passing jokes. He never knew he was hit and Pte. Caldwell said that Teddie had told him that if he was to die he hoped that would be the way he would go."

+

Plaintiff Wins

Judge Greig handed down judgment on Monday in favor of the plaintiff in the case of Smith vs. Currie, a horse case which was up for trial at Division Court at Underwood recently, judgment before deferred at the time. Hugh Smith of Kincardine Tp. bought a horse from Currie and the horse afterwards developed cataracts on both eyes. Currie claimed he told Smith the horse's eyes were sore at the time of the sale. The Court decided that Currie must pay Smith $86.50, besides the costs.

+

Business Men Must Decide

Some merchants lay out in their estimates to spend a stated sum in advertising yearly the same as they estimate on new goods. Any person with a little money can buy goods, but it takes a salesman to sell them. A good salesman equips himself with all the selling force at his command and advertising is the only medium that can give him a direct line on his customers. He uses as much care in selecting and using his advertising space as he does in selection of his goods. Stopping advertising to save money is equivalent to stopping a clock to save time. In Brampton and Newmarket the local merchants have now a new battle to fight, and that is branch offices of Toronto's big stores. Had these merchants been real salesmen, these big concerns would have tried out other pastures before entering a field that showed lots of life. The inroads of these departmental stores in other places will have the same fight. Would it not be better to give these big toads a run for their money before they reach us? We leave it to the business men—as business men—to decide.—Musford Express.

DATES OF FALL FAIRS

Following are the dates of a number of Fall Fairs as given by the Agricultural Societies' Branch of the Department of Agriculture:

Lucknow	Sept. 27–28
Kincardine	Sept. 20–21
Goderich	Sept. 26–28
Ripley	Sept 25–26
Dungannon	Oct. 4–5
Teeswater	Oct. 2–3
Wingham	Oct. 9–10
Mildmay	Sept. 17–18
Blythe	Oct. 2–3
Brussels	Oct. 4–5
London	Sept. 7–15
Toronto	Aug. 25–Sept. 10

Alleged Profits of The William Davies Company 1916 on Bacon, as Indicated by Department of Labor to be Five Cents per Pound, Untrue:

Actual Profits Two-Thirds of a Cent per Pound

THE statement issued by the Department of Labor concerning the business of The William Davies Company Limited has been given widespread circulation throughout the country and provoked public unrest.

Whatever the technical wording of the report was, the effect has been that the newspapers have published that "the profits on Bacon alone" of this Company "for 1916" were about "five millions of dollars." This interpretation of the official report is not surprising in view of certain statements that the Commissioner of the Cost of Living makes. The Commissioner is reported as saying that "There were two individual cases of profiteering in 1916 and that had these cases occurred since the passage of the cost of living Order-in-Council, he would consider it his duty to recommend that the facts be laid before the Attorney-General for consideration as to their criminality." The situation created by such erroneous and damaging statements is serious as emanating from a Government official, from whom one looks for not only accurate statements but correct conclusions.

The William Davies Company, being a private concern, has followed the practice of all private corporations, except when it made a bond issue in 1911, in that it has not published reports of its assets an liabilities or profit and loss. The present circumstance, however, i which a Government Official has led the public to false conclusions makes it advisable for this Company, for both the public interest and its own interest, to publish particulars of its business as well as point out the error of the statement of the Government Official.

For the last fiscal year ending March 27th, 1917, The William Davies Company bought and killed 1,043,000 head of Live Stock (Cattle, Hogs and Sheep.) This, plus purchases of outside Meats, produced 160,000,000 pounds of Meats. The Company handled 6,550,000 pounds of Butter and Cheese, 5,630,000 dozens of Eggs, and manufactured 26,500,000 tins of Canned Goods.

The net profits on these were .68 cents (or two-thirds of a cent) per pound on meats, 1.04 cents on Butter and Cheese, 1.04 cents per dozen on Eggs, and .47 cents (or slightly less than one-half a cent) per tin on Canned Goods. These profits include profits on all By-Products derived from these accounts.

During the year the Company served at its retail stores 7,500,000 customers, the average purchase of each customer was 35c., and the net profit upon each sale was 5-8 of 1 cent.

The turnover of the Company from all its operations for the last fiscal year ending March 27th, 1917, was $40,000,000. The net percentage of profit upon this turnover, after deducting war tax, was 1.09 per cent., or including war tax 3.46 per cent.

The William Davies Company has assets of $13,385,000 of which $3,865,00 is tied up in fixed investments.

To provide the necessary facilities for the increased volume of business the Company expended $750,000 in buildings and equipment during the year.

Companies of other character present no more reasonable statement of profit and loss based upon the investments made in the business.

The William Davies Company offered to the Imperial authorities, as well as to the War Office Service (which represents the Imperial authorities in Canada) to place the output of its Factory with respect to Bacon supplies, Canned Beef and Pork and Beans at the service of the authorities, on the basis of cost plus an agreed percentage. These offers were successively declined as the authorities evidently desired to purchase in the open market, and on this basis The William Davies Company has secured War Office business by open competition with the world.

Respecting the Report of the Commissioner on the Cost of Living:—

Last Winter the Commissioner, under authority of Order-in-Council, required packers to submit statements under oath for some years back and up to December 1st, 1916, of incoming stocks of Meats and the cost of such, as well as statements of outgoing product and the selling value. This Company represented in writing at the time that the information as specifically required was not in accordance with Packing House Accounting methods, and invited the Commissioner to send an Officer to the Head Office of the Company to examine the books for any information desired, and to secure a viewpoint as to the best way of collecting data which would be of use to the Government. This offer was declined, and there was nothing to do but fill in the information required as literally as we could determine it. For example, there was no recognition of the fact that a raw product may enter a factory under a specific classification and leave the factory as a finished product under some other classification.

We submitted a series of accurate figures based upon our interpretation of the official requirements which made no provision for charges of any description other than incoming freight and unloading charges to be included in the cost or to be deducted from the selling price. There was nothing in the report which could be read so as to determine a profit and loss statement. The very fact that with only a statement based upon cost of raw products and value of sales in Great Britain a Government Official has deduced "Large margins," "Profiteering" and "Criminality" if it had occurred since the passage of a recent Act, shows too dangerous a trifling and incapacity to be permitted to deal with any important situation. The statements of this Company have been treated by the author of this report as if the out-going product was identical with the incoming product, and from the series of reports he has singled out two items—the Bacon and Egg reports—and from them deduced an erroneous "margin" which the newspapers have interpreted as "profit." The author of the inquiry shows a strange lack of even a fundamental knowledge of simple bookkeeping and a dangerous inability to co-ordinate figures. The following are specific and outstanding errors in the report:

